"Go into any city, big or little, and you will find a street corner so crowded with wagons and other vehicles that it is dangerous to attempt to cross. But if you will wait awhile you will find that all the obstructions have naturally removed themselves, and the street is as clear of obstruction as a country road. Therefore, when obstructions come in the pathway of life, if you only wait, they will remove themselves. If people would only understand this simple truth, they would do less worrying when they find their desires temporarily thwarted."

SUCCESS CAME AT LAST.

Then he added: "There is a line in one of the classics which says: 'The frozen river and the leafless trees do not complain. They wait for the sunshine of spring and summer.' Wise men and women learn to labor and to wait. Many a man who has been defeated in his dearest aspirations has risen stronger, and been stronger and greater than he might otherwise have been."

By way of illustration he referred to the career of Andrew Johnson, of Tennessee, the unlettered tailor who was unable to make out a ballot until his wife educated him. He was again and again defeated in his political ambitions, but he struggled on, and finally he became a member of the United States senate, vice president and president of the republic.

In January, 1888, Adlai E. Stevenson, of Illinois, was nominated for a position on the supreme court of the District of Columbia, but the senate refused to confirm him, and he retired to private life. Four years later he was elected vice president, and came to Washington to preside over the senate which had declined to confirm him to a subordinate position.

William Jennings Bryan was defeated for congress in 1894 and had a hard time earning a living for his wife and children. But two years later he was nominated by a new political party for the highest office in the gift of the people, and ever since he has been a commanding figure in national affairs. His defeat for congress may have been a bitter blow to him, but the world must have looked dark, but he kept on working and hoping.

In 1890 William McKinley was defeated for congress, and his public career seemed to have closed. But he kept on working and striving. Four years later he was nominated for the presidency, and was elected to that high office. When he was defeated for congress the world may have looked gloomy to him, but he kept on working and striving and success came at last.

In 1888 Grover Cleveland was defeated for the presidency and badly defeated, because the state of New York, in which he had resided for many years, cast its electoral vote against him. But he kept on struggling and hoping, and four years later he was elected to the presidency, having three successive times secured the nomination of his party.

Isham G. Harris, the confederate war governor of Tennessee, at the close of the civil war secretly departed from that state, carrying with him about half a million dollars in gold, belonging to the state. He went to Mexico, and the legislature of Tennessee denounced him and set a price upon his head. Five years later, when political conditions were such that he could do so, he returned to that very state, bringing with him the money which he had taken away for safe keeping. Then the legislature of Tennessee elected him to the United States senate, and reelected him again and again, until he died while occupying that position.

In 1884 Hernando D. Money was defeated for congress in Mississippi. Ten years later he was elected to the senate and reelected to that position by the legislature of Mississippi. That was because he never wavered in his aspirations and ambitions.

In 1890 John C. Spooner was defeated for the senate by the Wisconsin legislature. In 1896 he was elected to the senate, and is now serving in that body, and occupying important positions in the leading committees. He is also regarded as one of the strongest and most influential orators of the senate. His success resulted from six years of continuous effort and fervent hope.

In 1894 Senator Gorman, of Maryland, was repudiated by his party, and his term in the senate closed. It was supposed that that was the last of Gorman. But to-day he is the recognized leader of his party in that state, and the men who repudiated him and denied his continuing humiliation are now following his leadership.

In 1895 David B. Henderson, of Iowa, desired to be appointed chairman of the committee on appropriations of the national house of representatives. Speaker Reed refused to give him that position. Four years later, in 1899, Col. Henderson was elected speaker of the house and succeeded Reed in the chair. The power was given to him to appoint a chairman of the committee on appropriations, and the chairmen of all other committees of the house.

In 1890 Thomas H. Carter, of Montana, was defeated for congress. In the following year he was made commissioner of the general land office, and in 1892 he was made chairman of the republican national committee. In 1894 he was elected to the senate, and is now an honored member of that body.

In 1879 Chester A. Arthur was removed from the position of collector of the port of New York, and was politically disgraced. In 1880 he was nominated and elected vice president, and in 1881 he became president of this republic.

These are only a few of the illustrations from real life which were given by the wise old observer of events, and as they fell from his lips they were elaborately discoursed upon to show that "in the world's bright lexicon of youth there's no such word as fail," if men and women will but keep their courage, faith and hope brightened by determination. The text was also quoted: "Whatsoever thy hand findeth to do, do it with thy might."

The pathway to success was never "a primrose path of dalliance," and it is a steeper path to-day than ever before, because of the competition in this seething world of selfishness. But they who toil will win. Bacon says that "men must know that in this theater of man's life it is reserved only to God and the angels to be lookers-on," which is a strong way of putting the statement that the genius of labor alone produces success. No man may model his life upon that of another. But every man may be sure that the universal law of success demands toil and courage. Every man who starts upon the ocean of life arches his sails to an untried and unsteady breeze. Like Coleridge's mariner, "he is the first that ever burst into that lonely sea."

The wise words which an old statesman has uttered to the writer in Washington may be of little avail, unless they reach them through the printed, suggested, that in every village, town or city there are wise men and women whose society should be sought by young men and women, because everyone who has lived long enough to have observed similar events about him, and can repeat them in an interesting and encouraging manner to those who are trimming their sails for life's voyage.

FANCIES OF FASHION.

Dainty Lingerie Is Now Engaging Feminine Attention.

Delicate Creations Designed by American and European Artists—Elegance and Luxuriousness Seem to Rule the Day.

[Special New York Letter.]

ALTHOUGH the beginning of a new year, it is not quite time yet to write of new fashions, at least with any degree of certainty; and it will be fully a month, perhaps even longer, before the spring modes shall declare themselves in anything like a decided manner. To be sure, there are rumors of many decided changes, any one of which, if carried out, would prove radical in the extreme; but as yet nothing definite is known except to those fashion-makers who are supposed to compose the secret inner circle.

But this cloud, if such it may be called, over the sky of fashion is not without its silver lining, for it is only when fashion is at a standstill that her devotees are given a chance to turn their thoughts and attention from the fascinating theme of gowns and millinery to other matters of equal interest and importance. Just now madame is giving her undivided time and attention to lingerie, and all the leading shops are entering to her wants in this direction in a most lavish and tempting manner. Too much cannot be said in praise of the season's lingerie, both as regards quantity and quality. Sweet simplicity no longer marks the elegance of undermuslins; consequently the price is far in advance of other seasons, and the woman who loves pretty underclothes—and where is there one who does not—will find herself left into all manner of extravagances unless she keeps her wits well in hand.

Many of the handsomest garments—take the new nightdresses for instance—are an intricate mass of fine stitching, and as all of this work is done by hand it naturally adds to the cost as much as it does to the looks. The short yoke nightdress seems to be the favorite style at the present moment. The yoke is made to fasten at the shoulder, exactly like the yoke of a dress bodice, and is usually fashioned of lace insertion or of swiss all-over embroidery. Some of the prettiest models are made with lace yokes, those hailing from Paris in particular being finished with a removable yoke either of colored satin or Persian lawn, the fine mesh of the lace showing to particular advantage over the colored foundation. A dainty night robe that took my fancy was made of Persian lawn, beautifully fine and sheer, and soft enough to be drawn through a ring. The short yoke was pointed instead of round and made of real lace edged all around with a tiny frill of the same. Its beauty was further enhanced by a short puffed sleeve, which was finished at the elbow by a wide ruffle of lace caught up under a full puff of delicately tinted ribbon. This bit of feminine finery was so high in price as to place it quite beyond the reach of the multitude, but as it was made in the most simple manner possible it would not be hard to copy, and by using cambric in place of the lawn and substituting imitation lace for the real a less costly and much more serviceable gown could be successfully evolved. Another exceedingly pretty night robe on exhibition at the same shop was fashioned of flimsy, almost as sheer as the finest imported lawn, cut in the ever popular square neck style and finished in front with a little bolero composed of inch wide insertions of lace and narrow strips of tucked nainsook edged with a frill of lace. The somewhat loose sleeve was made entirely of the lace insertion and tucking, while a distinctly dainty effect was procured by trimming the lower portion with many little ruffles of lace, each headed by lace beading.

For elderly women and others who are prone to feel the cold, thoughtful fashionmakers have provided loose, comfortable-looking nightdresses of French flannel, made with wide sailor colors, daintily embroidered about the edge in colored washing silk.

The newest corset cover is made entirely without seams and trimmed with much lace and fine hand stitching. It will not take any time at all for the average woman to discover the manifold charms this waist has over all that have gone before. The simple fact that it is cut entirely on the bias assures at once a perfect fit, while the utter absence of seams makes it easy to fashion and much more easy to iron; and having all these advantages I wonder it was not thought of ages ago.

The wise woman, unless she be the fortunate possessor of an absolutely perfect figure, will flee from the temptations of the pretty French corset cover, which, contrary to all precedent, is put on in front, and exposed in the back, surplice fashion. The prettiest seen thus far were made of fine nainsook and elaborately trimmed across the entire front by many rows of lace insertion, alternating with long tucks of the nainsook.

The long discarded chemise is being slowly but surely restored to something like its old-time popularity and the models brought out this season are prettier and more attractive in appearance than they yet were, and are desirable in every respect. Many are made in the old-fashioned French sacque, but the most pleasing and very latest are cut to follow quite closely the outline of the figure, the trimmings of the top taking the form of a pointed yoke, while in place of the usual sleeve a small point of lace falls over the arm in the most approved manner, while the lower portion, which is supposed to take the place of the underskirt, is trimmed with many narrow puffings and tuckings of Persian lawn and daintily edged with a full ruffle of Valenciennes lace.

A leading shop in the city which receives all the latest Paris models is showing the newest thing in knickerbockers, which, as you know, many women substitute for the petticoat when wearing a tailor gown; and very elaborate some of them are. I have seen bright shades of royal blue and coral pink, decorated with fantastic bows of lace at the knee, while others were designed of striped taffeta, green and white for instance, and trimmed with tucks and narrow ribbon. For everyday wear, however, more serviceable ones are shown, made of black satin, neatly finished at the knee with small ribbon rosettes.

But to the majority of women nothing can rival the luxurious frou-frou of the silken petticoat or the delightful daintiness of the white cambric or lawn.

Some distinctly swell-looking silk petticoats are made in the old-fashioned Watteau brocades, similar, if not like, unto those used by our great grandmothers for their best gowns. These skirts are finished with a broad flounce of the brocade, trimmed with beautiful old lace, and caught up at intervals by loops of ribbons, or held by dainty beadings of lace.

Other petticoats are fashioned of bright-colored gros-grain silk, simply made with three or four frills, finished with rows of hemstitching. These skirts, while not so pretty and dressy-looking as the lace-trimmed ones, are much more practical for rough and ready wear.

The prettiest white petticoats are made with a white French lawn and fasten at the side instead of at the back. They are cut with a deep circular flounce, spaced with tucks and lace insertion. Others are trimmed with a shaped flounce, simply hemmed, and the dress and skirts just underneath, which in turn is trimmed with five or more tiny ruffles of the lawn edged with Valenciennes lace.

The thing most talked about now in the way of fashion is the new shirt waist. And it is not to be wondered at, either, when one takes into consideration the important place the shirt occupies in the wardrobe of the woman of fashion. The one feature that marks the new shirt as being far prettier than its predecessor is the entire absence of any yoke either at the front or back. For morning wear the daintiest shirts are those made of white or colored linen, while for more dressy wear those fashioned of Persian lawn showing an intricate mass of lace edging and insertion and having a great deal of transparency and airiness about them are quite the proper caper.

Hints Regarding the Up to Date Woman's Wardrobe.

White which is not a pure white, but is tinged with yellow, beige, cream, gray, etc., is the color par excellence for the ultra fashionable evening and reception costumes. A great deal of jewelry is worn; so the effect is far from being dull. The fancy capes are supposed for theater wear and is worn by women of all ages. In contrast with this, the day hats are of the large and heavy order.

Light colored furs, white, gray and blue are wound about for animals, are the millinery feature of the moment. Tippets of fur and feathers continue to be in favor and require but little trimming, a knot of velvet or a spray of fur being sufficient. With chinchilla pink roselands is a bright purple violets are pleasing, the latter also looking well in conjunction with such brown furs as mink and sable.

Artificial flowers are now so beautifully made and perfumed as to appropriately that they almost rival nature. These masterpieces are expensive, but far more durable than real flowers, and for those being now much used to replace natural products in the decoration of the costume. Where genuine violets were once tucked in the bodice imitation ones now appear.

The cut shows a girl's costume of mode cloth. Around the foot of the skirt is a little shell ruche headed by three rows of stitching, and another ruche, higher up, simulates a tunic. The blouse bodice is trimmed in front with three bands of galoure edged with silk ruches and has a yoke of galoure, also edged with a ruche. The sleeves are tucked at the top and have a ruche at the wrist. The collar is of plaited silk. The belt is of velvet, with a fancy buckle. The stitched felt hat is trimmed with velvet and ostrich tips.

COLOR AND STYLE.

A List of Tints to Be Worn by Different Complexions.

A Parisian authority upon the subject of dress has just given a list of colors suited to different complexions. The brunettes with a creamy skin and black or brown hair the list comprises ivory white, orange, very pale pink veiled with white lace or gauze, bright red and brilliant black in combination with white or a color. Women with a warm color, brown hair and a brownish complexion are allotted bright pinks, very pale turquoise blue, pinkish lilac, cream and especially such combinations of color as mastic and red gray and pink, brown and blue and, generally speaking, striped effects. For the golden brown locks, with a fair, pale skin, there are black, pinkish gray, periwinkle blue, navy blue, dark red, milk white and very dark green. Rosy blonds should wear golden brown, beige, mastic, ruby, bright violet, all whites, creamy primrose and white, and are permitted dull black, dark red, all violets, sapphire blue, bright turquoise blue and very pale pink.

A sketch is given which illustrates a gown of olive cloth and velvet. The lower skirt is of velvet, the tunic of cloth. The bottom edge of the tunic is trimmed with bands of galloon, and is supported by ecclesiastical motive decorates the side. The cloth corselet bodice is trimmed with bands of galloon and has revers faced with velvet. The sleeves are also trimmed with galloon. The collar and chemisette are of cream muslin. The hat is of embroidered velvet, trimmed with feathers and foliage and has an end of lace falling over the hair at the back.

New Jewelry Fancies Which Are In Favor—A Fine Dinner Dress.

I think no one can form an idea of the infinite variety of fancy things made for women's special adornment unless the manufactories are visited. This would be naturally a little difficult for most women, but such a visit would be a revelation to them in more ways than one. No one retail store could show even one sample of them all.

Chains, chain purses, buckles, lockets set with steel faceted brilliants, medallion pins to hold miniatures, brooches of exquisite designs, fancy combs, hatpins, bangles and ornaments for the hair and an infinite number of stickpins and fancy umbrella handles in every conceivable variety. The medallion pins are quite an innovation, appearing as these found in the grand jewelry stores, and I think them preferable from one point of view. You don't break your heart if you lose them, as you would if they were real diamonds.

The wise woman, unless she be the fortunate possessor of an absolutely perfect figure, will flee from the temptations of the pretty French corset cover, which, contrary to all precedent, is put on in front, and exposed in the back, surplice fashion. WINTER FASHIONS.

Trimmings of Great Elaboration Now Employed.

Cuirass bodices are seen on many of the newest and most elegant gowns. The skirt of such gowns is often plain, but the cuirass is elaborately trimmed, and jeweled with great elaboration. For example, with a skirt of black velvet a black satin cuirass is worn entirely embroidered with black chenille and little pink coral beads. Guipure is used in the same manner.

Jet, crystal, spangles of gold and silver, beads of all colors, detached flowers of guipure, velvet and passementeries are the prevailing decorations for elegant gowns. The most simple gown of cashmere or cloth can be enriched by such ornamentation to an almost sublimated extent. The newest models are new rather in the ingenuity and charm of their decoration than by anything unusual in general form and style. A novelty which is simply a revival may, however, be observed—that is, where velvet forms the trimming of a costume it also may compose the entire sleeves.

The illustration shows a costume of brown chamois silk. The skirt is mounted with a large bias plait in the middle of the back and has near the foot three rows of chestnut brown silk fringe with a netted heading. The short bolero and broche silk has a collar and revers composed of the netted brown fringe framing a plaited and shirred guimpe of mauve silk. The sleeves are of the chamois silk covered with a latticework of narrow chestnut brown velvet. The belt is of brown velvet and the cravat of white crepe and lace. The toque is of velvet and puffed brown velvet, is trimmed with chamois plumes and a fringed scarf of chamois silk. A paste buckle ornaments the front.

Various Styles For Different Persons and Purposes.

Very stout women should avoid tight fitting clothing without ornament, especially in light colors. Black is more becoming to them than any other color, and open jackets fronts or boleros, showing a plastron, are the most suitable style of bodice.

For young girls inexpensive fancy fabrics, light colors, ruches, ribbons and ruffles are suitable, but no rich goods nor many trimmings.

Many light cloths are trimmed with dark fur, the two being kept, however, in tones of the same color. Pale gray cloth with chinchilla and beige with otter are some of the combinations.

Scintillating effects in spangles, gold and silver passementeries, sequins and jet, with all kinds of metal coloring, are characteristic of this winter's evening attire. The newest of the many novelties of this class are those composed of black spangled tulle over black silk. The upper part of the bodice, with the sleeves, may be left transparent, and the sleeves and sleeves of black silk being provided for wear beneath when the decolletage would be inappropriate.

The new shapes are opera gown of white peau de soie. The redingote skirt is trimmed with applications of guipure and opera length sleeves of white satin. The pointed bodice has a low decolletage and a pointed plastron of guipure bordered with tiny ruches of white satin. The long redingote skirt, of pekane, richly embroidered at the corners of the front. The round pelerine is trimmed with three ruches of narrow white satin, and the sleeves are puffed to the wrist, and the upper yoke is also edged with three mousseline ruffles. The tall, embroidered collar is lined with white satin ruches, and the lining of the mantle is of wadded satin.

Brilliant Gowns Worn at Gotham Dinner Parties

This Form of Amusement Is in Vogue Among the Swells at the *Present Time and Hand*some Costumes are Displayed

NEW YORK society, at least that portion of it that is spending the season at home and not in Europe, is getting all the enjoyment possible out of the few remaining days of the season before the long dull days and nights of Lent put a stop to the festivities of the winter. There have been but few novelties offered society this winter, and the entire season has been unusually common so far as the forms of entertainments were concerned, when we compare it with that of last year. Mrs. Gould's theatricals were a seven days' wonder, and later Mrs. Oelrich's vaudeville show gave the gossips something to talk about for a short time. But aside from those there has been but little except the ever popular theatrical party at some of the better class of theaters, dances and dinner parties.

During the engagement of Irving and Ellen Terry theatrical parties were much in vogue, and the brokers reaped a rich harvest from the wealthy members of the aristocracy for tickets of which they held a monopoly. A few of the other shows of the season have profited by this desire on the part of society to entertain at theater parties, but at the present time there is nothing on the New York boards which they consider worthy of their attention, and so they have turned to dinner parties of a rather exclusive sort.

But while these dinners have been to a certain extent even more exclusive than usual, yet the dining-rooms of the Fifth avenue mansions have echoed the mirth of gay gatherings during the past few days, and will continue to do so until the days of Lent put a stop to the frivolity.

The Vanderbilts are wearing mourning costumes in Europe, but the Goulds, the Whitneys, the Webbs and a long list of other fashionables are at home and entertaining society at dinner.

Society folks court publicity in a quiet way. The woman of fashion likes to see her name and descriptions of her favorite gowns in print, and she does not find it a hard matter to secure the recognition she desires. An intimation to a newspaper that a representative will be graciously received and accommodated with such information as his paper desires is all that is necessary, and the representative is there. It was in this way that I was permitted to witness the merriment at one of these dinner parties a few days ago, and I improved the opportunity to secure a description and sketches of some of the elaborate dinner gowns worn.

One of the gowns worn at this party was made of a peau de soie in the new bluette color, with gold paillettes. It was made a princess with a double box plait in the back that hung in long, loose, graceful folds. The gold paillettes were cut each side of the train, extending high each side bordering the train. The front was covered with ruchings of white chiffon and gold paillettes, and long loops of blue velvet ribbon. The low pointed decollete was finished with a fichu effect of chiffon drawn over the shoulders above long transparent sleeves of colorebby white lace, encircled by entwined bands of gold paillettes.

Another was of white embroidered crepe de chine. The under petticoat of this had a deep flounce of accordion plaiting, over this falling a deep pointed tunic that was handsomely embroidered around the point, and above is ribbonlike effect with a lover's knot on each corner. The low pointed bodice was gathered full in pointed girdle, with a fichu effect of the crepe de chine brought over the shoulder and fastened in front with a large rosette. A very short ruffle, cut in vandykes, for a finish falling over the upper part of the arm.

One that I was told was an imported gown was of satin brocade with a background of ivory white with a figure of pink. The under petticoat was of the ivory white with two deep accordion plaited flounces of white mousseline de soie, each having a wee ruching of the same. A pointed tunic of the satin brocade laced at each side with bands of pink mirror velvet in a lattice work fashion. This same effect was carried out at the shoulders and elbows, where the arm was left bare, except for the bands of velvet. A large butterfly bow of pink velvet with gold buckle to finish at the left side of the decollete.

Another was of black net made over a foundation of Nile green taffeta. This was outlined with an em*broidery of opalescent spangles.* The under portion of the skirt was covered with a wide lace flounce. The bodice was a simple, softly draped one of the black net, and at the left shoulder was a graceful bow of Nile green velvet.

A princess gown that was pretty was made of pasts of blue velvet, and had a low pointed neck with a rouave of rich lace coming from the point, and falling in a deep cascade under the arms. It was fastened in front with three small buckles of brilliants, and had a deep flounce of lace on the front of the skirt, the back hanging in loose, graceful folds.

Others that were equally as pretty were made of crepe chiffons, beautiful black laces covered with black paillettes, black mousseline de soie, with plaitings in great width about the skirt over a soft white taffeta. One other in particular was a princess gown of satin brocade made with a striking decollete which was daring to the extreme, as the decollete was drawn to a point in which the dress was entirely off the shoulders, and the sleeves began at a point two inches below the shoulders. There was nothing above this line to cover the figure. But such are the extremes to which some society women go.

DINING IN A CLOCK.

Sixteen London People Enjoy a Unique Experience.

Took a Meal Inside the Works of What Is Considered the Biggest Timepiece Ever Constructed in the Old World.

One of the most gigantic clocks erected in recent years has just been swung at the London terminus of the Great Eastern railway. This stupendous piece of mechanism, operated by electricity, may almost claim to rank as the world's eighth wonder. A day or two ago a party, to mark the finishing touches which had been lent to the great timepiece, took dinner in the inside of the works, and as they were stylish London folk, several of them being ladies, fashionably attired, it is obvious that it was necessary to do much squeezing in order to seat the party, wait at the table, and so forth.

The clock is second in size to Big Ben and is regarded by visitors to London almost as one of the sights of the metropolis just now, on account of its novelty.

Clockmakers say that it is London's biggest clock and that it should not be compared with Big Ben, which is simply a machine. Of course they know all about such things. The clock is a wonder, anyway, and has now become one of the institutions of the biggest city in the world.

It is a massive affair, composed of solid iron and steel, weighing two tons and measuring 21 feet in diameter.

The building of the clock occupied a period of 12 months and its makers say that it will last centuries.

The big clock, like everything big and active, has a brain, which is nothing less than an ordinary pilot clock set up on a neat shelf in the telegraph department, which is the most important part of the establishment, as it regulates everything going on with a business, not to say a mathematical, nicety. By means of telegraph wires the big clock is corrected with 20 other clocks in the terminus and the variation of a few seconds between either of them is thus promptly corrected.

QUAINT DINNER PARTY.

(Feasting in a Monster Clock Just Installed at London.)

It is cleaning day inside the big timepiece every six weeks, and the operation has to be performed by a clockmaker of experience.

The mechanism of the clock, says the Cincinnati Commercial, is simply marvelous and has engaged the best talent in London in the watchmaking line in its construction for 12 months, as I have before stated. In many respects it is the most wonderful clock in the world, but it would take an expert in clocks to expound those details.

The timepiece is swung upon heavy girders, which have been built into the roof of the depot to accommodate it. The heavy bars and rings upon which it hangs are a study in themselves and it is doubtful if anything like them were ever cast before.

Owing to the trouble which has resulted in other clocks from the reflection thrown by the hands when the electric lights are lit, and the consequent mistakes that people have made by the time, there is no glass used in front of the opal dials. The hands, however, are so massive that no hurricane will ever blow them off, although the mechanism of the works is as delicate as that of a 500-pound chronometer and the entire mechanism can be swung to by the slightest touch of its exterior.

The clock was brought into the terminus on two of the heaviest railway trucks and placed exactly beneath the place from which it was to be suspended.

Then ensued the most careful stringing of it into iron ropes that was ever given to a huge mechanical apparatus before, and after some 36 hours of tugging and hauling and puffing and blowing the titan was in its place, ticking away serenely in view of the vast multitudes who throng the terminus night and day.

An Old Adage Verified.

What is one animal's meat may be truly another's poison. Mr. J. E. Harting lately reported to the London Linnean society several cases in which parrots had been poisoned by eating parsley; and he recalled that, on the other hand, the berries of the yew and privet, said to be poisonous to man, are greedily eaten by blackbirds, thrushes and other birds. Cases are on record, however, of the poisoning of pheasants by yew leaves. The immunity of goats from yew poisoning is remarkable, in view of the fact that cases of goats have died after eating the leaves, although a suggested explanation is that the dried leaves eaten by cattle differ from the green leaves eaten by goats.

THE FINISHING TOUCH.

Chicago Dude Who Completed His Toilet on a Train Made Ridiculous by a Bright Girl.

Some wise person has said somewhere that if a woman desires to see vanity face to face let her look in her mirror. That is all very well, but now and then you run across a man who can ring in new changes on the feminine folly.

On one of the Alley "L" trains last week, along in the afternoon, a young woman got on at Thirty-ninth street. She was a quiet, lady-like girl, dressed in a well-fitting gray tailor-made suit, and settled herself back for a good read on the way to the city, when he got on at the next station and seated himself opposite. He was "gotten up regardless." One of those new, stunning suits in brown and tan checks that are all the go, white felt hat, with blue band, and a silk umbrella. As soon as the train was well under way again he drew out a penknife and worked industriously at his finger nails for several minutes. This finished, he produced a pearl toothpick and labored at his white, even teeth for awhile. After this operation was over he gazed thoughtfully out of the window at the glimmer of the lake far in the distance, and, with a sigh of contentment fumbled in his vest pocket until he found a small mirror. Having studied the effects of his new red and purple tie in this, he started in on his mustache, a pale, feathery suggestion of what might be in days to come. This latter was combed and twirled and petted until it stood out at the proper angle with a well-defined curl at either end. The felt hat was pushed further back to see if the part of the hair was O. K., and at last, with another sigh of relief, he replaced the mirror and leaned back complacently.

But the girl in gray had been watching him over the top of her book, watching each new branch of the business with increasing interest, and, finally, when she saw the mirror go back in its leather case, she laid aside her book, and, opening her chatelaine bag, drew out a chamois skin well powdered and proffered it with a smile to her traveling companion, while the people around enjoyed the little comedy.

"Wouldn't you like to put on the finishing touch?" she asked, sweetly, and he stiffly arose and went into the smoker.—Chicago Tribune.

THE STOOPING HABIT.

By a Few Minutes' Attention Every Day Round Shoulders Can Be Made Straight.

One of the greatest and most common deformities of the day is one that with care and attention can be remedied. It is the round-shouldered or stooping habit. Many of the most natural figures show this tendency to stoop, while in the narrow-chested it is marked to a painful degree. And yet, by raising oneself leisurely upon the toes in a perpendicular position several times a day this deformity can be easily rectified. To do this properly one must be in a perfectly upright position, the arms dropping at the side, the heels well together and the toes forming an angle of 45 degrees.

The rise should be made very slowly, and from the balls of both feet, and the descent should be accomplished in the same way, without swaying the body out of its perpendicular line. The exercise is not an easy one, but may be accomplished by patience. It can be modified, too, by standing first on one leg, then on the other. Inflating and raising the chest at the same time is a part of the exercise, and if persevered in will ultimately show an increased chest measurement, development of lung power and erect figure.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

Old-Time Apple Dumplings.

To make old-time apple dumplings take one quart of flour, add three teaspoonfuls of baking powder, a level teaspoonful of salt, a heaping tablespoonful of lard; mix with milk, roll out, spread lightly with butter, roll out again, and keep on doing this until a tablespoonful of butter has been worked in. Roll out half an inch thick, cut in squares large enough to cover an apple, place a cored and pared apple in each square, gather up the corners, pinch well to make the balls brown, brush with white of egg when nearly done.

Character in Woman's Walk.

An observing man insists that he can tell a woman's character by her manner of walking and the kind of shoes she wears. He says that the listless way of lifting one's feet indicates laziness or jil-health. A lengthy, flat-footed step means a good housekeeper, but an aggressive nature. A dragging, shuffling step denotes indolence of mind and body. He observes, further, that the woman who likes mannish shoes is not daintily feminine, and that the ideal woman wears well-fitting shoes in the street and dainty slippers in the house.

FAMOUS OLD COACH.

History in Its Broken-Down and Wrecked Box and Wheels.

First Vehicle That Gave to Early Black Hills Mining Camps Regular Communication with Eastern Civilization.

At the side of one of the main thoroughfares of the present Deadwood, S. D., there stands an old, broken-down, worn-out stage coach which has a history of historic. It is fitted by many an old-timer in the Black Hills, because it was the first messenger between the western line of civilization and their newly-acquired home among the rugged mountains. It was some time after the first mail entered the hills before a regular stage coach was put on between any of the cities along the border of civilization and the Black Hills mining camps.

During the year of 1876, two years after the arrival of the Russell expedition at Custer, the organization of the Cheyenne and Black Hills stage line was effected and the first stage coach was sent out from Cheyenne for Custer. The Indians were unusually troublesome at that time and the proprietors of the stage company were fearful lest their venture might come to a disastrous end because of the ravages of the redskins.

One day in the summer of 1876 the first stage coach was started out from Cheyenne with a load of passengers and baggage, and with the famous driver, "California Charlie," and four strong horses. A constant lookout was kept for Indians throughout the journey, but there was no incident worthy of mention on the long trip and the coach reached Custer City in safety. The miners of that camp went wild over the event and the old town turned out that night for a genuine celebration.

The following day "California Charlie," who had kept a level head during the festivities of the night previous, made preparations for a return trip to Cheyenne. There were enough would-be passengers to fill the coach several times and lots were drawn, there being 12 lucky numbers. About nine o'clock on a July day, "California Charlie" cracked his whip over the heads of his leaders and the start was made across the wilderness which lay between Custer and Cheyenne.

Everything went well until the stage coach reached an old creek bed a few miles out of Custer. Here, without a moment's warning, a band of Indians in war paint sprang from ambush and commenced pouring in a heavy fire upon the coach and passengers. "California Charlie" plied his whip and there was a run of a few miles, with the Indians in full pursuit. The driver suddenly dropped over in his seat and fell into the boot of the coach dead, a bullet having gone through his head. The horses came to a standstill and stood waiting for a word from the driver.

The Indians came up behind the coach on a mad run and in a moment the coach was surrounded. The 12 passengers were numb with fright. Some sat like blocks of stone. Others, with more or less coolness, stood out of the coach windows at the dodging Indians. It seemed to be the delight of the redskins to tease their prisoners. They would ride up near the coach and fire directly at the occupants, care being taken seemingly that the bullets penetrate a coat sleeve, hat or seat cushion.

Finally two of the Indians dismounted from their ponies, and, going up to the horses on the left side, cut the loose and with a wild yell drove the frightened teams, with harness on, away. That was the last seen of the Indians or the horses.

The passengers walked 12 miles back to Custer and, point by point, the coach, but that start had been too good. Next day the coach was brought back to Custer for a fresh start for Cheyenne, the trip being accomplished without any trouble.

The same coach made frequent trips to Custer during the summer of 1876, and on September 25 of the same year the first run was made into Deadwood. The distance from Deadwood to Cheyenne was about 200 miles, through territory hostile to whites. As soon as the stage route was thoroughly established traffic became heavy. For a number of years, up to 1881, all of the bullion from the Homestake company's mine was shipped out under heavy guard by this stage route. It was a perilous trip to make with the gold bricks, and heavy men went with the driver as guards.

The coming of the railroads to the Black Hills marked the decline of the stage coach and the different lines were soon devoid of traffic.

The Metropolitan Stage

Attractions That Attract the City Theater-Goers, and Gossip of the People of the Stage.

"BEN HUR" is having the full success predicted for it, and still requires two box-offices, and still shows all the signs of unusual popularity.

Those who see the play do as much advertising for it as does the advertising agent, for it is a production that is not disappointing, that does not continually write invidious comparisons with the book. It certainly stands as one of the best dramatized novels put on the stage. The scenes are beautiful, the action sustained, the cast competent. The chariot-scene is by no means all of the play, one keeps long in memory the view of Jerusalem, the groves of Daphne, the moon-lit, palm-bordered lake. Artists have set the play for us, artists interpret it, and the merit of both classes of workers is recognized by the thousands that flock to the doors of the Broadway theater in New York, where it is probable the play will continue running until warm weather is upon us, and theater-goer and actor leave the playhouse for seaside and mountain retreats.

Pretty, dainty, merry, clever Cissie Loftus has warm friends among those high up in the theatrical profession. When Ellen Terry first set foot on American soil this season, she immediately hunted up the troubled young lady and warmly espoused her cause.

Miss Loftus, you remember, withdrew from Weber & Field's burlesque company, alleging dissatisfaction with the part assigned her in the new burlesque. Next, just when she was to play Roxanne in Mansfield's company, she fell ill and was obliged to cancel that engagement. When she cancelled, if ever it existed, her engagement with Mr. Robert Stuart Stone, the aesthetic young publisher, of Chicago, deponent saveth not. One predicament after another has befallen the charming young woman this year, but we trust the tride will now turn. Mme. Modjeska has great faith in Miss Loftus' talents, and is making use of her own fame and long experience to further the progress of her protege. It will give us pleasure to say: "I told you so" when the laurels lie thick on the waves of hair that adorn the brow of winsome Cissie Loftus.

Sir Henry Irving, Miss Ellen Terry and the Lyceum company begin their three-weeks engagement in Chicago February 12. The American tour has been extended six weeks, and the company will not reopen at the Lyceum until late in April. The attractions, "Nance Oldfield," "The Amber Heart," "The Bells" and "The Merchant of Venice" will be given in Chicago.

A lily by any other name would be just as sweet, I suppose, as would be that proverbial rose, but with reference to the particular lily of whom we are thinking, there is such a thing as changing the name too often. Lily Le Breton began life at St. Helen's, Jersey, in 1853, doubtless as fair and pure a lily baby as one might wish to see. When a mere girl she became Mrs. Langtry, and that was her name till a certain personage made known it was his royal pleasure to change it to the Jersey Lily. About that period various changes came into the life of the simple flower which never should have been transplanted from its native isle. An exotic life works and havoc sometimes, and simple tastes may give place to ravishing ambitions—love of power; desire for wider praise than that obtainable in the daily round of domestic life; the glitter of the myriad lights of the playhouse and the applause of careless admirers. And so the story went on, and the unknown became widely, if not well, known.

In "The Degenerate" Mrs. Langtry plays the part of Mrs. Trevelyan so naturally characters are led to think she plays not created for her, but that Mrs. Langtry and Mrs. Trevelyan are one and the same. A gay, mischievous lady of pleasure is presented to us, either most naturally or most artistically. A good-natured, high-spirited young woman with the world before her, and with an old-timer in the Black Hills, because it was the first messenger between the western line of civilization and their newly-acquired home among the rugged mountains. It was some time after the first mail entered the hills before a regular stage coach was put on between any of the cities along the border of civilization and the Black Hills mining camps.

Democratic Leader Robert Davis yesterday declared in favor of holding in the first week in June the Democratic State convention for the election of delegates to the Democratic National convention in Kansas City. Davis said he does not believe in snap conventions, and thinks it would be well to defer the election of the delegates as long as possible. Newspapers opposed to the nomination of Col. Bryan will doubtless construe the attitude of Leader Davis to mean that at the eleventh hour he will desert the Nebraskan and throw his influence to the candidacy of some other aspirant. Though Mr. Davis has not publicly said that he is "for" Bryan, he has given as broad intimations to that effect as it is possible to convey in private conversation.

Asbury Park may well feel proud and gratified that she has such a citizen as Founder Bradley. The Founder, whose public spirit has made Asbury Park successful and famous the world over, has offered to dispose of the mile beach front, which he owns free and clear, to the municipality for $150,000. The property is easily worth $1,000,000. If Asbury Park people are wise they will accept the generous offer of the Founder.

The get up and get-there people of Kansas City propose to show the prosaic citizens of Philadelphia a thing or two in carrying out methods of modern political financiering. If the westerners raise the $100,000 offered for the convention in the time they expect to, Philadelphia may gain some worthy points to be used in time to help it out of the hole into which it fell by its liberal offer to the G. O. P.

Bag and baggage, the Tin Plate and the Steel Trusts transplanted themselves from Chicago to New York in one day by the aid of a specially charted train. Both corporations are organized under the laws of New Jersey, but they whizzed through this State without so much as a how-do-you-do. They undoubtedly recognize New Jersey as a very great convenience, but scarcely entitled to respect.

District Attorney Gardner, of New York, declares that Molineux and his friends are way off in attributing anything but honest motives in his conduct of the Rosenzweig murder case, but in the next breath he declares that he is being persecuted by the City Club reformers. Even among lawyers it makes some difference whose ox is gored.

The indignation that the good people of Elizabeth expressed over the proposition to present "Sapho" in one of their local theatres was only equalled by the disgust of those who went to see the performance and found missing all those words and scenes that are being railed at. The science of satisfying the public is a hard one.

An effort is being made to organize an industrial brotherhood which will form a great central non-competitive community, thus realizing the dream of Edward Bellamy. It has started in Maine and hopes to end in the middle west. A thing designed to be non-competitive cannot live in this world.

Senator Kean has recorded himself as opposed to the seating of Matthew Stanley Quay. Senator Sewell, on the other hand, has voted in favor of the Pennsylvanian. Each Senator is moved by his individual opinion in the matter.

Some idea of modern invention and progress can be gained by the knowledge that in 1880 there was only 71,000 tons of steel manufactured in the whole world, but in 1898 the United States alone made over 9,000,000 tons.

Kansas City people point to the building intended to house the Democratic National convention as the "finest auditorium in the country." What it will be when the convention adjourns remains to be seen.

From a moral standpoint the telephone trust cannot be decried. Telephones are discouragers of profanity, and must therefore be permitted to exist in a class by themselves.

The new township act went into effect Saturday. In accordance with the provisions of this act the annual township elections will be held this year March 12th.

Who are injured by the use of coffee. Recently there has been placed on all the grocers' shelves a pure preparation called GRAIN-O, made of pure grains, that takes the place of coffee. The most delicate stomach receives it without distress, and but few people will like it after the first cup. It is not unlike the finest grades of coffee in appearance, and costs about ¼ as much. Children may drink it with great benefit. 15 cts. and 25c. per package. Try it. Ask for GRAIN-O.

A Washington correspondent gives it as an opinion that from the present indications Senator Quay will be seated. Thirty-four Senators voted Friday to consider the case. This much was accomplished by Senator Penrose after a good deal of parliamentary sparring between the sitting Senator from Pennsylvania and Senators Hoar and Foraker. A careful canvass has been made of the Senate, and judging from the results that have been obtained Mr. Quay can count on forty-eight votes. This will be enough to seat him, and on these he can place absolute reliance.

Referring to the bill introduced by Senator Reed, in behalf of President Johnson, which gives Boards of Freeholders the right of applying to county courts for the appointment of a county board of commissioners to equalize assessments of taxes, the Passaic News doubts if it would prove as effective in securing equal taxation as the proposition of Senator Reed that the assessed valuations be published in the newspapers in the localities to which they apply. But the News says that the bill which proposes to advertise the assessments will not pass this year.

MERRY, MIRTHFUL MASQUERADERS

Dressed in Fancy and Grotesque Costumes at Ball of Turn Verein.

TWO HUNDRED DANCERS,

LED BY HENRY HAURAND AS "PRINCE CARNIVAL."

Zulu Savages Supply Plenty of Fun for the Spectators by Their War Dance and Capture of a Lone Missionary.

Nearly three hundred people attended the annual masquerade ball of the Plainfield Gesang and Turn Verein held in their hall Monday night. It was the twelfth dance given by this organization, which is one of the most popular of the German societies hereabouts. Many of the costumes were very handsome and any quantity of them highly grotesque. There were angels and devils, clowns and scrobats, dudes and Dutchmen, flower girls and flirting maids, dukes, lords and various of the nobilities, together with characters personating all nationalities.

It was 10:30 o'clock before the grand march started. In it were more than one hundred couples who were led by Director Henry Haurand dressed to represent "Prince Carnival." The Prince was accompanied by Mrs Charles Meyers. They were followed by Floor Manager Charles F. Meyer with Mrs. Charles Keller. C. Keller and P. Cullon, the assistant floor managers, escorted the Misses. Gussie Tager and Lizzie Reick. These couples were attired in handsome Mexican costumes, as were also R. Spiegel and Frank Haurand, floor committee, and L. Fahs, Henry Boumel, Aug. Wolff and Adolf Bohrea, the reception committee.

After the march, which was artistically executed and liberally applauded, the ball was formally opened. The fun for the rest of the night was fast and furious. The most amusing feature was perhaps created by twelve young men, who impersonated Zulu savages. Previous to the march John Reizer, who was dressed to represent a missionary, appeared upon the floor distributing tracts. When the Zulus caught sight of him there were cries of alarm, and something that sounded like "missionary pot-pie." The missionary was chased around the hall several times and finally up to the balcony, where he was hurled over the railing to the floor below. The savages then set upon him and with knives and clubs tore the unfortunate missionary to pieces, to the apparent horror of the masqueraders. It was found that the victim of the Zulus, after escaping to the balcony, had become evolutionized into a figure of loaves of bread and links of frankfurters.

The ball was a grand success and those who attended it were well repaid. During the intermission supper was served in the lower rooms, where also all kinds of liquid refreshments were to be bought. A number of well-known citizens attended the function as spectators.

The officers of the society are: President, Herman Klinsman; vice president, Jacob Gaub; recording secretary, Joseph Haurand; financial secretary, Henry Bergen; treasurer, Chas. Folber.

Death of Mrs. Smith.

Mrs. Marguerite Smith, wife of Charles Smith, who is employed by A. M. Griffin, died Monday morning of heart trouble, with which she had been a sufferer for sometime. However, her condition had not been unusually alarming and her death was sudden. She was sixty-seven years of age. The funeral was held from the late residence yesterday afternoon at 1 o'clock, but was private. Interment was in Hillside cemetery.

VEST WILL RETIRE.

Senior Senator from Missouri Not a Candidate for Reelection.

He Has Served the Nation Faithfully and Well, and Has Made Many Friends Among His Political Opponents.

[Special Washington (Letter.)]

IT IS better to give flowers to the living than to strew them upon the graves of the dead. It is better to build monuments of love and appreciation in the hearts of the living than to erect monuments to the dead. Therefore it is not improper, while Senator George Graham Vest of Missouri still lives, to say that contemplation of his life brings to memory the words of Longfellow:

"Lives of great men all remind us
We can make our lives sublime."

Senator Vest is now in his seventieth year, and has publicly announced that he will retire from public life at the conclusion of his present term in the senate, which will expire on March 3, 1903. His career has been wonderful, and fully warrants the use of the lines of Longfellow just quoted. He has been a great lawyer, a great orator, a great legislator, a brilliant debater, and will ever upon the congressional records the impress of genius and wonderful intellectual acquirements.

When Senator Ingalls of Kansas was regarded as the most capable debater and orator on the republican side of the senate, he said to the narrator: "I have perfect self-confidence and am ready to meet any senator in debate, believing that I can hold my own. But I do not intend to seek any controversy with Vest. There is a man who is so fully equipped upon all subjects that he would keep any antagonist busy keeping track of his interrogation points."

Senator Vest is a small man, physically, being only five feet four inches in height. His neck is short, and his head is so close to his shoulders that he always has the appearance of being slightly stoop shouldered. His health has failed during the past year, and hence he is rather slender, although formerly he was rather heavy for a man of his height. His voice is pitched in the upper register, and if he had been a singer tenor would have been his part. In uttering vehemently his views on national affairs his voice is sometimes exceedingly shrill, and yet not unpleasant.

The friendships of public men would surprise the plain people of the land who seldom have opportunity to see their distinguished representatives and senators gathered together in the national capital. Although Senator Vest has been one of the most sarcastic and drastic orators on the democratic side of the senate chamber for well-nigh a quarter of a century, some of his warmest personal friends have been republicans. Senators Conkling of New York, Blaine of Maine, Mahone of Virginia, Quay of Pennsylvania, Allison of Iowa, Spooner of Wisconsin, Davis of Minnesota, and Hanna of Ohio, have enjoyed social intimacy with Senator Vest, and all of them hold him in affectionate regard.

During the spring of 1892, just before the national conventions were held, it was the good fortune of the writer to hear an extemporaneous speech from Senator Vest on a pending pension bill, in which he attacked with great severity and ridicule individual leaders in a vehement manner. After his speech was concluded, he was in the senate restaurant with Senator Davis of Minnesota, who said: "Vest, you spoke so earnestly that I rather expected you to bring on a regiment of confederate veterans and whip all the Yankees on earth." Senator Vest smiled, and replied: "I think that all the Yankees on earth ought to have been whipped, but you were too many for us."

In the course of his speech, Senator Vest said: "Because I was a member of the confederate congress I have held my tongue during all these years while extravagant pension appropriations have been made, and I can hold my peace no longer. You are taking money out of the treasury to catch the soldier vote, and it is not right. I am ready to vote pensions to all union soldiers who were wounded or who suffer from disease because of their service for their country, but I am opposed to indiscriminate pension legislation for the purpose of politically catching the soldier vote, and I shall vote against this bill."

Senator Ingalls of Kansas, referred to above, originally came to congress with credentials which were regarded as questionable. Considerable money had been used in the Kansas legislature to promote the reelection of Senator Pomeroy, who was defeated, and Ingalls elected to his place. Senator Vest knew this, and he used the fact with telling effect one day. Senator Vest knew facts coming among his confidents, and was so ready to use them, that other debaters were chary of wrangling with him. On one occasion Senator Ingalls sarcastically alluded to the former service of Senator Vest in the confederate congress, and the little Missourian instantly retorted: "But it never happened to me to have my credentials questioned in this or any other body."

In the senate corridor one day last week the senator said to the correspondent: "I am the sole surviving member of the confederate senate. All of the others have died, one after another. There are only eight members of the United States senate who served in the body when I came here, who are now living. Death works with energy and pertinacity. The grim reaper will soon claim me also; and I am ready to meet him at any moment."

During the past 20 years numerous corporations have insistently endeavored to secure rights of way for railroads in the Yellowstone national park, and Senator Vest has been the most faithful guardian of that wonderful reservation. On one occasion, when urged to permit an electric line to run across the northeastern corner of the park, Senator Vest said:

VEST RETORTING TO INGALLS.

"While I live not a single mile of rails shall be laid in that park, because a precedent would be formed, and the park would be destroyed in a generation. People go to Europe to see the well advertised beauties of nature there. But the Yellowstone national park is the greatest and most wonderful creation on the face of this earth. It must and shall be preserved in all its beauty, just as it was placed there by the hand of God; and one day it will be a health resort where valuable lives may be prolonged. No vandal hands shall mar it for commercial purposes."

The new congressional library building had in Senator Vest one of its original and unswerving champions. Senators Voorhees, of Indiana, and Morrill, of Vermont, also championed the congressional library bill. Both of them have since left the senate, but Senator Vest gave them credit for their work in this regard in delivering eulogies upon them in the senate chamber. Senator Morrill lived to be 83 years old, and in alluding to the fact Senator Vest quoted those lines of Shakespeare:

"Let me not live
After my flame lacks oil, to be the snuff
Of younger spirits whose apprehensive senses
All but new things disdain."

He will have his wish unless his health shall mend, and when his time shall come he will pass from the political arena and from the forum of legislation one of the ablest and noblest of them all. Although gifted with superior talents, Senator Vest possesses eminently the genius of labor. During his entire career, even in youngmanhood, he was a student, a close inquirer into details of law and fact. He possessed concentration, or oneness of aim. He always believed that the talent of success consisted in doing well whatever was undertaken, without thought of fame. He never believed in good or bad luck, but said: "The lucky dog is the one that hunts for the bones; and hunts till he gets them."

Senator Vest is a Democrat. He always believed in honesty by the government in all of its dealings. He once said: "Our people take pride in the fact that the national debt was paid after the civil war. As a matter of fact the national debt has never been paid, and never will be. The rich men who loaned money to the government have received their money back again, with interest. But the poor people who have contributed to the government cannot get justice. Year after year they come to the congress begging that bills may be passed, giving them their just dues. But their bills are never passed. They hope on and hope ever until they die in poverty because the government will not be honest with them. If all of the just claims against the government were paid, it would take $500,000,000, and maybe $1,000,000,000."

Patience is a virtue possessed by few public men after they have once firmly secured exalted position. But until this day, while he is aging and somewhat feeble, Senator Vest has the patience to listen to the cause of every man who requires his attention or believes that he can give him aid. He has always claimed that a public servant should be a willing servant of the public, and that every citizen has a right to expect the best service from every senator, representative or other officer of the government.

Senator Vest has been a superior legislator, a typical senator and a typical American citizen. SMITH D. FRY.

THE MAYOR HAD MORE VISITORS MONDAY.

Two Colored Poolroom Keepers And President Of Millionaires' Club Came By Request.

TOLD THEIR LITTLE STORIES.

CHASE AND SIMMS DECLARED THEY ALLOWED NO GAMBLING.

Recent Reports of Happenings at Club Rooms Led to Mayor's Investigation —Promised that It Shouldn't Happen Again.

Mayor Rockfellow had a few more visitors last Monday by request. The colored proprietors of two poolrooms declared that their respective establishments were free from any obnoxious features. The president of the Millionaires' Club pledged the Mayor that the rooms of the club would be free to the police at any time and no gambling was allowed there.

Sergeant Kiely dropped in Monday afternoon to see Chase, a colored man who runs a combination pool room and barber shop on the third floor of the building on East Front street, occupied by a feed store. Chase went to see the Mayor for him with at the Sergeant's request.

Chase assured Mr. Rockfellow that there never had been any gambling there and that while he was running it there never would be.

Peter Simms, who has a pool room on Madison avenue, also visited the Mayor at the same time last Monday. He told the Mayor that no gambling was allowed in his place and none would be. It was a perfectly respectable establishment.

Strange stories have reached the ears of the Mayor concerning the happenings in the rooms of the Millionaires' Club, an organization of young men who all wish they had a million. The rooms are located on the second floor of the same building where Chase has his pool room. Some of the members wanted a little excitement and it was reported to the police that they had a boxing exhibition by two young women. The police investigated a few evenings ago and caught one of the entertainers en route.

Monday the president of the club was politely requested to visit the Mayor again. The Mayor explained that it was necessary that every club should be conducted with care. The president promised that the actions of the club would not hereafter be such as to incur any unfavorable criticism. It was one of the rules of the club, he said, that there should be no gambling, and the rule was carefully lived up to. The Mayor then said good evening to his visitors and went home.

PARKS HOLD TROPHY.

DEFEATED ROSEVILLE A. A. IN EXCITING WHIST MATCH.

Park Club Won Its Ninth Victory Last Monday by a Score 17 to 11—New Jersey Whist Club Next.

The whist team of the Roseville Athletic Association returned home last Monday but the State whist trophy is still in the club house of the Park Club. By defeating the Roseville team last evening, the Park team tied the Elizabeth Chess and Whist Club in scoring nine victories for the trophy. It takes fifteen to win the cup permanently.

It will be remembered that the Parks captured the trophy at Orange last week and the Rosevilles were the first of the challengers to make a bid for it. The Park Club was represented by the same old four, Peter B. Matthews, Arthur A. Freeman, Albert O. Woltman and Rudolph Wille. Messrs. Downes, Hegeman, Topple and Hoffman, represented the Roseville A. A.

The fight was hot from the start and the Parks opened in great form. The first round showed the home team well to the front, the score being 5 to 2 in favor of the Parks. The second round was decidedly close, but showed just a trifle in favor of the guests. They won it 6 to 5. Both sides played determinedly in the third and last round, but the skill of the local whisters was superior and they fairly won out in the round, 4 to 3, making a total score of 17 to 11 in favor of the Parks.

The next game will be here next Tuesday evening with the New Jersey Whist Club as the challengers.

OLD FARMER DEAD.

George F. Kline Passes Away at the Age of 86 Years.

The death of George Frederick Kline, a well-known farmer of Somerset county, occurred Sunday at his home in North Plainfield township at the age of eighty-six years. He was born in Germany but had resided in this country for nearly seventy years, most of that time being spent in this section. He leaves ten children—seven daughters and three sons, all of whom are married. Mr. Kline was an active and prominent member of the Methodist church.

SCHOOL ATHLETES UNDER NEW RULES.

Reorganization of Plainfield High School Athletic Association.

OFFICERS WERE ELECTED.

MANAGEMENT IN HANDS OF BOARD OF DIRECTORS

New Association Will Include All Boys in High School as Active Members and Girls as Honorary Members.

A prompt renewal of interest and activity is the immediate result of the radical changes made in the Plainfield High School Athletic Association. At a meeting of the High School boys held Friday afternoon, the association was practically reorganized on entirely new lines. Yesterday that organization was completed by the selection of officers.

The practical disruption of the old association last spring will perhaps be remembered. A meeting was held sometime ago when a committee was appointed to draft a new constitution and reorganize the association on different lines. At a meeting last Friday the committee reported and the results of their labors was unanimously approved.

The new association includes every male student and teacher as an active member. The girls of the High School were elected to honorary membership. As all the students are members it is impossible to have regular dues and the constitution provides that all funds shall be raised by voluntary subscription or by special entertainments. The old association had limited membership and regular dues.

The association only holds two regular meetings a year, one before October 1st and the other before June 1st. The management of the affairs rests in the hands of a board of directors, composed of five elected from the school by the association, a faculty director and a graduate director, the two latter appointed by the principal of the school. The graduate director required to have been out of school for at least three years.

The officers of the association, a president, vice-president and secretary-treasurer, are elected by the board of directors. The directors also select the various managers of the athletic teams. An advisory board, composed of the president, the faculty director and the graduate director, is required to approve all measures involving an expenditure of the association's funds before the measure can be presented to either the board of directors or the association.

The object was to make it more literally a school association and keep the two closely in touch. The meetings will be held during school hours.

At the meeting Friday the following directors were elected: Townsend Mann, Fred Mann, Walter Squires, Hervey K. Doane and Lawrence Tweedy. Principal Travell yesterday announced his appointments as follows: Faculty director, Albert B. Meredith; graduate director, Charles B. Morse.

A meeting of the board of directors was held at the High School Monday afternoon and the following officers chosen: President, Walter Squires; vice-president, Lawrence L. Tweedy; secretary-treasurer, Hervey K. Doane. Townsend Mann was chosen manager of the baseball team. Walter Squires was appointed captain of the team.

DEMOCRATS PLANNING.

County Committee will Become More Active in Practical Campaign Than Heretofore.

The Democrats of Union county are preparing to conduct a much more aggressive campaign for the Presidential election than has been the case in several years past, and the first step in that direction has been taken by a re-organization of the county committee. The organization plan which was formulated by William Courley, State chairman, has been gone over thoroughly, and adapted to the needs of Union county.

It had been proposed to double the membership of the committee, but it was finally decided to leave the membership the same as at present—one member from each ward, township or borough. Where it is possible subsidiary organizations will probably be effected to enroll the members of the party in each particular community. As soon as the National campaign is commenced headquarters will probably be established and kept open every day in Elizabeth until election.

Councilman Murray Bartis, of Fairview avenue, is in the south on business.

TRY GRAIN-O! TRY GRAIN-O!

Ask your grocer today to show you a package of GRAIN-O, the new food drink that takes the place of coffee. The children may drink it without injury as well as the adult. All who try it, like it. GRAIN-O has that rich seal brown of Mocha or Java, but it is made from pure grains, and the most delicate stomach receives it without distress. ¼ the price of coffee. 15c. and 25c. per package. Sold by all grocers.

NOW A COUNSELLOR.

Irving L. Brady Passed a Severe Examination for Higher Practice of Law.

Lawyer Irving L. Brady went to Trenton Monday and took his examination for counsellor. There were twenty-one candidates, and he was the only one from this city. He passed the examination successfully. It was considered to be one of the most severe examinations ever given by the Board of Examiners, and the supreme Court upbraided the members for making it so strict. Mr. Brady has been practicing law in this city for sometime and his friends are congratulating him on his success.

There were fifty-one candidates before the Board for attorneyship and a small majority passed. There were no candidates from this city in this class.

WOULD BREAK THE WILL

RELATIVES START A CONTEST OVER SUMMIT PROPERTY.

It is Claimed That James Morrissey Was Not of Age When He Died.

Papers have been served on Mrs Catherine Morrissey, of Summit, in a suit that will involve at least $20 000, and which will probably lead to some interesting revelations when finally tried before the Chancery Court. Mrs. Morrissey still conducts the Morrissey Hotel, a popular headquarters for all the Democratic politicians of Union county for many years when it was established by her husband, David Morrissey, more than thirty years ago.

In the plain, unpretentious building that still answers for a hotel, Mr. and Mrs. Morrissey amassed a fortune of about $150 000 prior to his death about ten years ago. Most of this fortune was invested in real estate, but it was all placed in the name of the wife, with the exception of a few tracts valued at about $30 000. This was in the name of David Morrissey, and on his death was inherited by his son, James Morrissey. The latter survived his father only about two years, and after his death a will with his signature was filed, bequeathing all of that property to his mother.

The suit in which papers were served is entered by Mrs. Bridget Hickey and Thomas Morrissey, of Madison, sister and cousin of David Morrissey, who claim the real estate left by David Morrissey, alleging that James Morrissey was not twenty-one years of age when he died, and, therefore, his will is void, and the property reverts to the next of kin of David Morrissey. Mrs. Morrissey has always maintained that her son was twenty-two years of age when he died, but the plaintiffs claim to have positive evidence in the birth register of the city of Brooklyn to prove that he was only two months past his twentieth year.

WOULDN'T TAKE WHISKEY.

Hotel Proprietor Claimed It Was No Good—Suit Resulted in No Cause for Action Verdict.

A verdict of no cause of action was brought Monday afternoon by the jury in the case of Russell V. Bishop, trading as the Central Kentucky Company, against Charles Jensen, proprietor of the Arlington Hotel. It was in Justice Mattison's court, and the suit was for $141 80.

The trouble was over an order for some whiskey given a year ago to Bishop's agent. The agent was so confident, it is claimed, that the whiskey was desirable that he suggested that Jensen should buy one barrel, and if that suited take four others. Jensen gave five notes for $35 45 each for the five barrels and took the one. He wasn't satisfied and refused to take and pay for the others.

So suit was brought on the four remaining notes by W. S. Angleman for Bishop. Francis J. Blatz, of the law firm of Murphy & Blatz, represented the defendant.

Whist Was Played.

The Tuesday Evening Whist Club was entertained last Tuesday by Mr. and Mrs. Horace Hoff, of Coddington avenue, and a very pleasant time was had by all present. The first and second prizes for the women were won by Mrs. Walter Apgar and Mrs. Wm. Angleman, while Horace Huff and Robert Crosson won the prizes for the men. After the game dancing was indulged in, and at a late hour supper was served. The club will meet again in two weeks, when Mr. and Mrs. R. E. Rogers, of Westervelt avenue, will entertain.

Exhibition of Pictures.

The members of the Plainfield Camera Club will probably give an exhibition of their work this spring. Some fine pictures have been taken during the past few months by members and a most creditable show could be given.

An Informal Entertainment.

An informal and pleasant entertainment was held at the Y. M. C. A. "gym" Saturday evening. The members to the number of 34 enjoyed the evening by playing games and partaking of a light lunch.

PROGRESS OF THE NEGRO

PORTRAYED BY ONE OF THE RACE WHO KNOWS THEM.

Rev. James Ed. Mason, D. D., of Livingstone College, Made Address at Grace Parish House Tuesday Night.

Rev. Dr. James Ed. Mason, financial agent of the Livingston College and Industrial School, of Salisbury, N. C., addressed a small audience at the Parish house of Grace Episcopal church Tuesday night on "The New Negro." Previous to the lecture Dr. Bodman spoke of the Negro as the wards of the nation and said that he believed the Government at Washington and the church had neglected their duty toward these people. If the Government would co-operate with the church in trying to elevate the Negro their efforts would in a few years be crowned with a success far beyond the fondest hopes of all who are interested in the elevation of the colored race.

He then introduced Dr. Mason, who began an eloquent address replete with passages of oratory that electrified the few who had the pleasure of listening to him, by giving a pictorial representation of the Negro as depicted by Jefferson Davis.

Since the emancipation of the Negro striking changes have taken place that show him to be advancing towards a higher plane. In reference to the religious life of the Negro, Dr. Mason said there were fully 3 000 000 of professed Christians while there were but about 2 000 preachers.

He referred eloquently to the position the Negro had secured from a monetary standpoint, and said that the colored race in the south paid taxes on more than $200 000 000 worth of property. As regards to the education of the Negro Dr. Mason said the colored man's education and elevation lay in that direction. In this connection he took occasion to state that 1 500,000 scholars were attending the Negro schools that are taught by 43 000 teachers. The Negro can boast of 500 lawyers and an equal number of doctors, while the colored man controls $10 000 000 worth of property. There are 400 newspapers edited by Negroes and about 400 authors and three Negro banks. To give an idea of the liberality and frugality of the Negro Dr. Mason said that last week $18 000 had been deposited in one bank in Richmond, Va.

The speaker expressed the opinion that before the Negro could be recognized socially it would be necessary for him to remove the prejudice that existed in that direction in the south and also to eliminate the industrial prejudice against the Negro in the north. It is the condition and not the theory that confronts the Negro. He emphasized the importance of the Negro putting forth his best efforts to help himself by securing an education. Money, character and education, he said, were factors the Negro must possess if he would succeed. In closing Dr. Mason made an urgent appeal for aid in support of the Livingston College and Industrial School.

STOVE STARTED FLAMES

FIERCE BLAZE IN GROLLMISCH'S UPHOLSTERY SHOP.

Chemical Engine Put Out the Fire After Damage Reaching $100 Was Done—Alarm Sent in From Box 14.

An overheated stove made trouble last Monday for George R. Grollmisch, whose shop is located at 202 East Front street, corner of Watchung avenue. When the firemen arrived, the interior of his shop had assumed the appearance of a fiery furnace. The total loss will amount up to $700 or more.

Exactly how the fire started, it is not possible to say. There seems no doubt, however, that it started from the stove in the upholstering establishment. Constable John Gjettleson heard a shout of fire at 10 o'clock when the flames were first noticed. An alarm was sent in from box 14.

When the firemen arrived the interior of the room was a mass of flames. The stream from the chemical engine did excellent service and the fire was extinguished before it had an opportunity to spread to the floors above.

The building belongs to the Anderson estate. The loss to the house will amount to $350, which is covered by insurance. The exact amount of the loss to the contents has not yet been estimated, but it is believed that it is covered by $600. This is also covered by insurance, held by Liefke & Laing.

Raising Money for Missionary Purposes.

A very successful cake sale was held a few days ago at the home of Mrs. L. M. French, Craig place, under the auspices of the Sunday-school class at the First M. E. church taught by Mr. Tugwell. The patronesses were Mrs. L. M. French, Mrs. Harry Gee, Mrs. A. B. Meredith, Mrs. J. W. Jackson, Mrs. H. A. Miller and Mrs. John Lewis. The object for which the sale was held was to raise money for foreign and home missionary work.

Action of Otto Reber Against Ross Frisbie Dismissed on Technical Grounds.

The case of Otto Reber against Ross Frisbie was tried Tuesday before Justice Moffett. The plaintiff was represented by Wm. G. DeMeza and the defendant by S. S Swackhamer, of the firm of Codington & Swackhamer. The plaintiff swore that he had been employed to work for the defendant for one year at $12 a week during the summer months and $10 a week during the rest of the year, and that after having worked about eight months he was wrongfully discharged. The defendant did not put in any defense, as her counsel moved non suit on technical grounds, and the non suit was granted. It is understood that the plaintiff means to bring another action.

TO MARK HISTORIC SPOT.

DAUGHTERS OF AMERICAN REVOLUTION ARE INTERESTED.

Washington Rock to Receive Attention at Hands of the Patriotic Women.

The Continental Chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution, have undertaken the task of doing something to perpetuate the memory of Washington in this vicinity, and the members have decided to centre their efforts on Washington Rock, where they hope to do something that shall mark the place truly a historic spot. Just what will be done has not definitely been decided, but there are plans being formed at present. It has been proposed to place a suitable tablet on the stone or to have an inscription placed in the stone that will tell the history of it to all who happen to see it. There are other plans more elaborate, but these have not assumed any definite form as yet.

Already a "Washington Memorial Fund" has been established for this purpose, and March 15th, at the Casino, W. W. Ellsworth, of New York, will deliver a lecture on the subject of "Arnold and Andre—The Story of the Treason," under the auspices of the Continental Chapter, and the profits will be devoted to the above named object. The Sons of the American Revolution have also signified a desire to assist in this worthy object, and no doubt at the proper time they will do something substantial towards assisting the daughters.

CHAMBER MUSIC.

Excellent Concert Given at Westfield Last Tuesday by Kaltenborn String Quartette.

Westfield, Feb. 28.—The music lovers of Westfield were given a chance to enjoy a delightful musical programme Tuesday at the hands of the Kaltenborn string quartette of New York, assisted by Miss Carrie Harding Beebe, pianist, and Miss Mary H. Mansfield, soprano. It was a chamber music concert, arranged under the auspices of the choir of the Congregational church.

The concert opened with Schumann's E Flat Op. 44, by the quartette, with Miss Beebe at the piano; An Aria from "Samson and Delilah" (Saint Saens,) then followed by Miss Mansfield.

Mr. Kaltenborn charmed the audience by his fine rendering of Chopin's most popular Nocturne and the "Csardas" of Hubay. He was of course recalled, and gave as an encore Handel's "Largo," with an organ accompaniment by Louis Dresseler.

The quartette then gave an Andante by Tschaikowsky and a Sherzo by Kiengel.

Miss Beebe's three piano solos were all marked by fine expression and superb technique.

PROVED AN ALIBI.

Colored Man Having Sentence in Jail Worn Coat He Was Wearing Was Stolen.

The tailor shop of Randolph Dunham on Fourth street was broken into about a month ago and an overcoat stolen. Mr. Dunham recently saw Watson Rundolph, a young Negro, wearing the coat. Tuesday Sergeant Kiely and Roundsman Frederickson went in search of Watson with a view of arresting him. To the surprise of the officers the accused established a complete alibi by proving that at the time the tailor shop was burglarized he was serving a sentence in the county jail at Elizabeth. He explained his possession of the coat by stating that his mother had found the garment hanging on the picket fence in front of their residence several days after the burglary. When Watson returned from his enforced visit to Elizabeth his mother suggested to Watson that he had better wear the coat as his old one was becoming shabby. Mr. Dunham said he did not care to take further action and the case was dropped. Mr. Dunham told the police he cared more for the depredations the burglars committed in his shop than he did for the loss of the coat.

Miss Drake, of Princeton, has been visiting friends in the borough for several days.

RUMMAGE SALE FOR HOSPITAL'S BENEFIT.

Novel Kind Of Affair Approved By Governors Of Muhlenberg Hospital.

WITH RELIEF ASSOCIATION.

WILL DISPOSE OF GIFTS OF SECOND-HAND ARTICLES.

Large Contributions of Any Old Things Expected From Friends of Hospital and Relief Association—Will Last a Week or Two.

A "rummage sale" will be held this spring for the joint benefit of the Muhlenberg Hospital and the Plainfield Relief Association. For sometime the members of the Ladies' Auxiliary of the Hospital and the Relief Association have watched with interest the success of similar affairs in Orange and Newark for the benefit of various charitable institutions. Monday night the Board of Governors of the Hospital received a communication asking their permission to hold such a sale for the benefit of the hospital and the Relief Association. The Governors were glad to grant the request.

That was really the only action of importance taken at the monthly meeting of the Board held in the Library last evening. President E. B. Clark was absent on account of illness as were several other members of the Board. There was the usual discussion of the plans for the new hospital but no action was taken. The monthly report of the medical director was also received.

The "rummage sale," which if being planned for this joint benefit, is something new to Plainfield although it has been found to be remarkably successful in Orange and Newark. A great stock of second hand articles, clothing, furniture, kitchen utensils or anything else, is gathered from the friends of those in charge of the sale. A store will then be hired for a week or two and this collection sorted and a price put on the articles.

Of course the prices will be low, and there will undoubtedly be some great bargains in second-hand clothing and the like. There are many people in moderate circumstances who will be glad of the opportunity of adding something to the charitable cause and at the same time get a proper return for their money. In the many Plainfield households there are many things of value that are now of no use to their present owners, but would be gladly purchased by others if the opportunity was offered. The "rummage sale" is intended to offer just this opportunity.

No definite arrangements have yet been made for the sale, but it will probably be held sometime during April or May, and will last a week or two.

BARBER SHOP BLACKED UP.

Caused by a Defective Oil Stove Smoking Fiercely During the Night.

When William Classen left his barber shop on Park avenue, at the head of North avenue last Monday, it was bright and clean. Tuesday morning a layer of black soot covered everything. Classen's property was damaged to the extent of $100 as a result. During the cold weather Classen has been in the habit of leaving a little oil stove burning in the shop just under the water pipes and bowl to prevent them from freezing. Last night he left the stove as usual. In some way the stove began to smoke and kept it up until Classen arrived this morning. The shop was only papered last week. The walls and ceiling will have to be redecorated. The covers to the chairs are ruined and other damage was done.

Proving Popular as Travelers.

The recent superior service of the Jersey Central Railroad between Jersey City and Atlantic City, by the way of Lakewood, is becoming very popular. Saturday forty-five through passengers were carried to the popular winter resorts. The company has completed all arrangements to shorten this line materially and when this is completed the run will be made from Jersey City to Atlantic City in two hours. The line is to be shortened near Lakewood, and it will be one of the most popular routes in this part of the country. The work will be started this spring and it will take thirty days to complete it.

Mr. and Mrs. John Goodman have moved from Central avenue and West Third street, to Liberty street, opposite Orchard place.

TRIMMED HATS.

Men of Unitarian Church Found New Occupation at Sociable Last Evening.

The men of the Unitarian church had an opportunity last Tuesday to exhibit their skill in the art of millinery. One of the chief features of the church sociable, held in the church parlors last evening was a period devoted to the trimming of hats by the men of the congregation.

The women brought the hats and the necessary trimmings and the men were called upon to show their skill in combining them. The sociable was largely attended and the plan proved a popular one. The guests were then called upon to select the best and worst trimmed of the hats. Alex. VanOss received the prize for the best and Henry V. Ryder for the worst.

There was also an informal musical programme which included vocal duets by Miss Julia J. Kendrick and Alexander VanOss, and vocal solos by Miss Ketcham. Miss Emily Hall gave a recitation from Eugene Field. The affair was arranged by the social committee of the church of which Mrs. Stephen Hall was the chairman.

Grand Lodge Decides Not to Act in the Case.

SANITY EXPERT ADVISED IT.

PERSEVERANCE LODGE ABIDES BY THE DECISION.

Dr. Hinckley, of Newark, Examined the Former Judge and Gave It as His Opinion That He Should Not Be Liberated—Lodge Last Night Agreed to Abandon Efforts Already Made.

The efforts which have been made towards securing the release of John Ulrich, Past Grand Chancellor of the Knights of Pythias of the State of New Jersey, from the State Insane Asylum at Morris Plains, have been abandoned by Perseverance lodge, of this city, of which Mr. Ulrich is a member.

Several weeks a special committee, of which Charles McGinley was chairman, was appointed by the lodge to investigate the case of the Past Grand Chancellor, who, it was claimed, had been committed and was being detained illegally as an insane person.

Mr. Ulrich was visited several times by local Pythians, and they became convinced in their own minds that he was entirely rational. Recently, however, Dr. Hinckley, of Newark, a well known expert, was called on to examine Mr. Ulrich and his services was against securing the liberty of the patient.

The report of the special committee from Perseverance lodge, as well as that of Dr. Hinckley, was presented to the session of the Grand lodge in Trenton last week, and it was decided that it would be best to let the matter drop.

At a meeting of Perseverance lodge Friday the ultimatum of the Grand lodge was accepted and no further effort will be made to release Mr. Ulrich.

For several years Mr. Ulrich was a well-known Republican politician in Northern New Jersey. He was once a member of the State Assembly, and later was elected city judge of Plainfield. At the conclusion of the term for the latter office he was a candidate for re-election, but was defeated after a bitter political fight. During the time he taxed his mind and energies too much, and soon after election he broke down. He was committed to the Trenton asylum, from which he was released in about a year. Later on he was an inmate of a private sanitarium, and while there he was committed to the Morris Plains institution, which he and some of his friends claim was done in an illegal and unjust manner.

READY FOR BUSINESS.

NEW CARS AND ENGINES FOR THE CENTRAL RAILROAD.

Annual Report of President Haxwell Shows That Great Improvements Have Been and are Being Made on the Road.

The annual report of the Central Railroad of New Jersey for the fiscal year ending December 31, 1899, shows a surplus of $2,082,348, equal to 7.6 per cent. on the capital stock. President Maxwell, in his report, says that the operating expenses, as heretofore, cover all expenditures for repairs, and also include expenditures for renewals of bridges, buildings and wharves, substitution of heavier rails and other construction.

The necessity for heavier locomotives and rolling stock of greater capacity and more durable character, required for the economical handling and movement of traffic, resulted in orders for the destruction and disposal of 14,904 (four-wheel) coal cars, 53 locomotives and other property of limited capacity, to the value of $2,367,149.76, which has been deducted from equipment account of which $1,826,630.68 was charged to profit and loss.

In place of the property so disposed of, there have been added to equipment during the year 35 freight locomotives, 6 passenger locomotives, 10 passenger coaches, 8 combination cars, 3,800 (one hundred pounds capacity) coal cars, 600 freight cars, 2 coal barges, together with miscellaneous machinery and tools, etc., costing in the aggregate $2,458,080.05. The company has also purchased for delivery early this year 1,000 box cars, 500 gondola cars, 35 locomotives, 1 coal barge and 2 large car floats. These changes and additions to equipment represent greatly increased motive power and carrying capacity.

Again Promoted in the Navy.

Mrs. Johnson, of LaGrande avenue, has just received a letter from her brother, Adolphus Giles, who is on the U. S. S. New York. The battleship is now in South American waters, and all hands are in the best of health and spirits. The temperature is in the neighborhood of the nineties, but the sailor boys do not mind it. Mr. Giles has again been promoted and is now in charge of one of the gun crews.

G. O. P. PREPARING.

LOCAL MACHINE GETTING READY FOR NATIONAL CAMPAIGN.

It Is Intended to Form Ward Organizations to Whoop up Things, and to Look After Smaller Detail of Campaign.

The Republicans of this city are already beginning to lay out the plans for the coming National campaign and are arranging for a special form of organization to care for the increased duties that will necessarily follow. At the last meeting of the Republican City Executive Committee, the first steps were taken toward that end.

In 1896 a campaign committee was organized early in the season. It consisted of the twelve members of the city executive committee and thirteen others who were appointed, making twenty-five in all. This committee directed the campaign, arranged the mass meetings, looked after the distribution of campaign literature and were in charge of the other details of the campaign.

This year it is proposed to organize ward associations for the campaign. The three members of the city committee from each ward, with four other members of their choice, will form a ward association which will look after the work in that ward. The city committee will arrange the mass meetings, parades and the like but the lesser details will be divided among the ward associations. It is thought that a better canvass will be secured by the new method.

No appointments have yet been made. The ward associations will, however, be put in running order in the spring and from that time until election day, there will be no cessation in their activity.

AID FOR THE HOME.

PROFIT MAKING AFFAIR OF THE DAUGHTERS OF THE CROSS.

Reception, Cake Sale and Musicale Given at the Home of Mrs. Charles A. Reed —Entertaining Programme Rendered.

One of the most delightful affairs of the season was that of Friday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Charles A. Reed, 27 Myrtle avenue, when the Daughters of the Cross gave a reception, cake sale and musicale for the benefit of the Children's Home, one of Plainfield's most worthy institutions. There were about one hundred and fifty people in attendance from 3 to 6 o'clock. The home will receive about $85 as a result of the affair.

Sometime ago the Daughters of the Cross became a member as a body of the Children's Home Association, and agreed to give annually $10 to this institution. To this way the organization became acquainted with the needs of the Home and the members were led to assist in a substantial way in meeting the many expenses attendant upon the management of it.

Mrs. Reed received the guests, assisted by Mrs. Horace Kimball, president of the Children's Home Association; Mrs. F. H. Ball, Mrs. W. W. Howland and Mrs. John Gray Foster. In the dining room Mrs. J. P. North up and Mrs. Reuben Knox poured tea and chocolate, respectively. They were assisted by Mrs. Joseph H Howell and Mrs. George D. Hallock, who in turn were assisted by Miss Daisy Fisburg, Miss Marie Honeycutt, Miss Elizabeth Curtis, Miss Howell and Miss Kathryn Dwight. The prevailing colors were pink and green, which were introduced through an arrangement of smilax and pink carnations.

There was another choice assortment of cakes on sale in charge of Mrs. Mackey, assisted by Mrs. Charles Lyman.

One of the pleasing features of the afternoon was the informal programme presented in which Miss Howell rendered several selections on the piano and Miss Grace Cooley gave selections from "Bob, Son of Battle." Additional pleasure was enjoyed by the recitations given by Miss Kathryn Dwight. Those who took part in the programme were enthusiastically received.

Suing the Railroad.

Drake & Mundy, through their attorneys, Messrs. Codington & Newman, have brought suit in Justice McGill's court against the Central Railroad of New Jersey to recover $160 for damages alleged to be due because the Central Railroad neglected to deliver a quantity of poultry shipped to them from New York in which came too late to be of any use to them. J. L. Conover, of New York, represents the railroad company. The papers are returnable March 6 p. m.

One Couple Ready to Wait.

The dance of the P. O'Keefe Association at the Crescent Rink Wednesday night was attended by a large number of people, many of whom were from out of town. The feature of the affair was a cake walk, which was intended to decide the championship of Union, Somerset and Middlesex counties. At the last moment there was only one couple ready to enter. They were Michael Higgins and Annie Hart, both of this city, who were awarded the prize of $10 without dispute. Prof. O'Reilly furnished the music.

HENRY CABOT LODGE.

Junior United States Senator from Old Massachusetts.

He Is Intensely American and Always Has an Eye to the Future — A Scholar in Politics, But Not a Visionary.

A man who is pointed out a score of times a day to visitors in the senate press gallery at Washington is Henry Cabot Lodge, of Massachusetts. He is one of the most interesting figures in congress, and one of the few whose personal appearance does not belie description. Both the Massachusetts senators are men whose reputations are not confined to politics, and whose names stand for something besides prominence in legislation.

Both Hoar and Lodge are men of affairs, of scholastic attainments, of family, and of varied interests. Either would have a national reputation, even though he did not hold a seat in the senate. There are few senators of whom this could be said, and fewer states of which it can be said of both senators. They represent the old and the new. One approaches the end of his career, crowned with honor and respect; the other, though he has been a good many years in congress, may be said to be upon the threshold of a career the end of which is not yet in sight.

Mr. Lodge has been called a scholar in politics. That is an easy phrase, that is usually applied without overmuch discrimination. It is true that he is a scholar, and that he is in politics; but, says the Washington Star, he doesn't confound the two. In the popular fancy the scholar in politics is a visionary person, with high ideals, which are usually quite impractical when it comes to carrying them into effect. Lodge is practical. He has his ideals, as every man in public life ought to have; but he appreciates the limitations of human nature, and knows instinctively when those ideals are immediately capable of realization and when they are not. He understands the political wisdom of biding his time and making use of instruments at his hand for the accomplishment of that which he knows can be done.

HENRY CABOT LODGE.
(Junior United States Senator from the State of Massachusetts.)

His name has been known nationally for nearly a quarter of a century, and yet he is a young man. He comes from a long-lived race, and some of his ancestors acted important parts in the early history of the republic (his grandfather, George Cabot, was the first secretary of the navy), and there is no reason why he should not hold a place in public life for at least a quarter of a century more. Physically and intellectually he is a thoroughbred. Straight as an arrow, trim of figure, graceful in bearing, his outward presence attracts the eye and is quite in keeping with his habit of mind. His brain is muscular, like his body, and is as finely trained. His mind works with the certainty of a machine.

Lodge is a born fighter. If he had come from another walk of life, and had entered the prize ring, he would have been the champion. In whatever circumstances he might have been placed he would have risen above the surface. He knows what it is to be beaten, but he does not know what it means to stay beat. A blow aimed at him is always the prelude to another blow aimed in return. Everything he has won in public life, in literature, or in any way, has been won at the expense of hard knocks, which have helped to strengthen his power of endurance.

Before a Massachusetts audience, especially before a Boston audience, he is an effective orator. He catches the atmosphere in a way which would be impossible for one of another heritage. On the stump, in conventions in times of great excitement, his speech is kindling and uplifting to a degree which may seem strange to those who know him only in the not altogether sympathetic atmosphere of the senate. He understands the temper of his fellow countrymen and in the capacity of the American people to cope with any problem that may come along. He believes that the United States is the greatest country on earth, and that there is nothing in the way of this great people to aspire to. He has theories, but he is not a theorist when he finds his theories clashing hopelessly with facts. He has virility tempered by sentiment. No man is public life has a more familiar acquaintance with books, and no man in public life is less under the influence of merely bookish ideas.

He is ambitious. So is every man who ever did anything worth the while.

High Price for a Pearl.

Five hundred and fifty thousand dollars was the price paid for the great Tarerarier pearl. It was originally owned at Cutifa, in Arabia.

BAZAAR AT GRACE M. E.

ARRANGED AND HELD BY THE LADIES' AID SOCIETY.

Tables and Booths Made Attractive to Visitors and Profitable for the Promoters—Names of Those in Charge.

The Martha Washington bazaar that was opened at Grace M. E. church Thursday evening, was brought to a close last Friday, and the members of the Ladies' Aid Society, under whose auspices it was held, are gratified with the success attending their efforts. The pretty little church was a scene of beauty in its pleasing decorations of many colors. There was a fancy table where a choice assortment of useful and pretty articles were for sale. Mrs. H. K. Carroll was in charge, assisted by Mrs. L. A. Hummer, Mrs. Andrew Letkins, Mrs. George Fairchild and Mrs. Hunt.

The candy table was in charge of Mrs. Moot, chairman, assisted by Miss Margaret Schuck, Miss Alice Carroll, Miss Grace Carroll, Miss Della Voehl, Miss Clara Steiner, Miss Agnes Tingley, Miss Clara Tingley, Miss Belle Loomer, Mrs. Greer and Mrs. Elmer E. Winckler.

There was a grocery department of which Mrs. Edward Sebring was chairman. She was assisted by Mrs. J. W. A. Bonnewebs, Mrs. F. A. Long, Mrs. Mundy, Mrs. Jones and Mrs. Conre Ryno. The lemonade well and the sale of pop-corn was in charge of the King's Daughters, including Miss Mary Steiner, chairman, assisted by Miss Ada Woolston, Miss Lizzie Hoagland, Mrs. G. W. Gardner, Miss Ida Fountain and Miss Clara Van-Fleet.

An amusing feature was the fish pond. Miss Della Voehl and Miss Margaret Schuck were in charge, assisted by the members of Queen Esther Band. The ice cream was in charge of Mrs. John H. Carney assisted by Mrs. Higgins, Mrs. Andrew Vandesteek, Mrs. VanNest and Mrs. Stevens.

During the evening there was a vocal trio by Mrs. G. W. Gardner and the Misses Grace and Alice Carroll, and several banjo selections by John Valiant, Jr., all of which was enjoyed greatly. Mrs. Moot was the chairman of the whole affair, and to her as well as all who took part, much credit is due. The society will realize a goodly sum as profit to assist in the church work. The decorations were arranged by George H. Fairchild. Ben. Schuck assisted by taking tickets at the door.

MARRIED 47 YEARS.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Walker Have Been Married Almost a Half Century.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Walker, of New street, celebrated the forty-seventh anniversary of their marriage last Friday at their home in a quiet manner. During the evening the celebrants received a number of callers and a social time was enjoyed. Hearty congratulations were extended and the best wishes for many returns of the day were offered.

Mr. and Mrs. Walker were married in this city forty-seven years ago by Rev. Daniel T. Hill, who was pastor of the Baptist church. The bride was Miss Lydia A. Spencer, daughter of Alex Spencer, of this city. Both Mrs. Walker and her husband are natives of this place and have always lived here.

FORCED TO PAY THEIR TAXES.

Bernards Township's Wealthy Residents Had to Come to Time.

The annual report of the financial condition of Bernards Township for the year ended February 5th, 1900, has been made by Township Clerk E. P. Carmichael. The report shows the township to be in a better financial condition than for many years.

The report of Collector Thomas Day shows the amount of delinquent taxes to be less than usual. The principal cause of this is that for several years back a number of wealthy residents of Bernards' Mountain refused to pay the high rate of tax to cancel the bonds of the township, which they held to be illegal. Frank B. Allen, of Newark, who owns a handsome residence on the mountain, refused to pay his tax, and the case was tried before the Supreme Court at Trenton. A decision upholding the legality of the bonds was given. Allen and the other residents of Bankers' Mountain have since paid their taxes.

The report of J. Halsted, Overseer of the Poor, shows that $1,257 08 has been expended on the poor during the past year, and $3,876 63 has been used for repairing and building bridges and making repairs on the roads.

To Build a $25,000 House.

Wyman & Roberts, the contractors have been awarded the contract to build Otto Arens' handsome new house near Woodland Park. The house will cost in the neighborhood of $25,000, and will be one of Plainfield's most palatial residences. The work is to be started as soon as the weather will permit, and it is expected that the house will be completed for occupancy in nine months. William Pangborn, of Chatham street, has the contract for the mason work.

BEAT THE GOVERNMENT.

Employees for a Former Who Met a Transcontinental Are Discovering Perfidy.

"Of course you have heard of the Transcontinental Air which this government has been establishing from ocean to ocean?" said one of the men who has been engaged in the work for several years. "You can't understand the work unless you have had an extra mathematical course in a college, and then you are apt to find problems you never dreamed of. We had some funny experiences, nevertheless. The law gave us right of way in establishing our lines. That is, we had the privilege of going over anybody's land.

"On one occasion it became necessary to cross a very high point of ground which was studded with trees. At first we thought of building an elevated platform from which we could get our distances, but we discovered that would take too much time. We concluded it would be easier to blaze our way through the forest with axes. As we were preparing to do this the owner of the property came up and asked our business. I explained to him, as well as you can explain things to a layman, but I don't think he ever understood what we were driving at. Anyway, he notified us that if we skinned even the bark from one of his trees he would make the government think the Philippine war was only a picnic compared with what he would do. Efforts to persuade only made him the more obdurate.

"We had to go through the forest. There was no way round it. We then offered to buy the trees, but he would not have that. He said the land without the trees would have no value. Then we told him we would buy as much of the land as was necessary, as near on the summit. After he had thought over our proposition he said he consented. When asked how much he wanted he replied $5. We would have paid him $3 a tree if he had asked it. We closed the bargain quickly, for we were afraid he would change his mind.

"After the deal was made and the money paid, I asked him if he didn't think he had made quite a sacrifice in selling the acre for $5. He replied that he was satisfied, and added by way of explanation: 'I bought it a few years ago for 80 cents; reckon I ain't lost much.' And of course there was no occasion for pursuing the subject. I suppose he thought he had beat the government and that made him happy."—N. Y. Sun.

Many Articles Overlooked by Hastily Departing Passengers Are Found and Returned.

The sleeping car is one of the conveniences of modern life. It permits commercial travelers and others who have to go from city to city to do their business by day and their traveling by night. Thus no time is lost, and to save time seems to be the great American idea.

But the sleeping car has some disadvantages, besides being for most people very uncomfortable. It is a great place to leave things behind. Every time the porter rouses the occupant of a berth who wants to get out at a way station in the early morning, the passenger, in his hurry and sleepiness, often leaves some article behind. This is the testimony that the railroads have adopted a system for the collection and return of such property. The porters, the conductors and the strippers and the cleaners each in turn search the cars, and any articles left by the occupants of berths under seats or carpets, or behind steam pipes, are taken to the nearest terminal station. If not called for promptly they are forwarded to headquarters.

Near the Grand Central station in New York is a lost article bureau, into which things come from all points—from Seattle to Bangor. The list of articles on hand awaiting owners usually includes purses, jewelry, railroad tickets, watches, umbrellas and sleeping gowns. Sets of false teeth are said to be quite commonly left in the cars, while on one occasion the porter found a wooden leg. An excited nursemaid called to tell that a baby sleeping in the little fellow was well taken care of by the trainmen until restored to his parents.

Many things lost in the cars can never be found. Sometimes an absent-minded man will even leave his wedding overcoat, but will be so well satisfied with the exchange that he will say nothing about it, while the other man may be clamoring loudly, but in vain, for his own coat.—Youth's Companion.

Power of the Roman Church.

Beyond a doubt the present war is, considered purely as a political economist's scheme, "to-day nearer to being a successful effort to inaugurate the brotherhood of man than anything ever tried." Here, then, is a social and political force to be reckoned with, obnoxious in its power over the individual. It is rapidly becoming an actual menace to the nation. Already it numbers a million adherents. It owns Utah. It holds the balance of power in Idaho. In Wyoming, in Colorado, in California and in Nevada. When Arizona and New Mexico are admitted to the union it will control them also.—H. L. Hartt, in Atlantic.

Early Church Music.

Barrel organs were formerly quite frequent in English churches, but one has recently been unearthed in a church near Rochester, England. It has six stops and six barrels, and is capable of grinding out 60 tunes in all. Among these are such archaic specimens as "Joh," "Old 11th." The organ was operated by the sexton.—N. Y. Sun.

NEEDS OF THE NATION.

PATRIOTIC ADDRESS OF DR. A. H. LEWIS AT BOUND BROOK.

No Warmer Patriotism Should Move a People in the Colonial Governments —Need of Intimate Coast Guard On.

Rev. Dr. A. H. Lewis, editor of The Sabbath Recorder, delivered the principal address at the celebration of the Washington Camp Ground Association at Bound Brook Thursday. His subject was "The Birth and Evolution of a Great Nation." The Bound Brook Chronicle says that "his eloquence and ready flow of choice language charmed his hearers, who followed him with the closest attention."

He traced the history of this country through three periods of expansion, the first following the Revolution, the second after the Civil War, and the third that upon which we have just entered.

He declared that the United States had taken her place as one of the great powers of the world, whether we will or not.

A look forward revealed the necessity of carrying to our new possessions the highest type of our civilization. No warmest politicians should be allowed places in the colonial government, and it is a matter for congratulation that such men as Taft, Wood and Henry are selected to represent this nation in our new possessions, which should be taught the art of self-government as soon as it can be brought about.

He urged the necessity of the speedy completion of the canal across the Isthmus of Darien, the purification of life in our great cities, the breaking of the power of the liquor traffic and the placing of the ballot in the hands of women.

TICKLED THE PALATES.

MARTHA WASHINGTON SUPPER GIVEN AT HOPE CHAPEL.

It Was the Second Annual Event of Its Kind and Was a Great Success—Mrs. Robert Haughtier Was Martha.

The Sunday-school room of Hope chapel was filled last Friday evening on the occasion of the Martha Washington supper and sociable, held under the auspices of the Ladies' Aid Society. This was the second annual supper and if anything it eclipsed the ladies' previous efforts in this direction. All the ladies were dressed to represent the good wife of the "Father of His Country." Mrs. Robert Haughter received the guests and personated Martha Washington in a most gracious manner.

The tables were very handsomely decorated and contained a bountiful supply of the good things to eat. They were presided over by the following ladies.

Table No. 1—Mrs. Henry, Mrs. Wallace, Mrs. Firstbrook and the Misses Haughter and Siefan.

No. 2—Mrs. Radford, Mrs. Johnson, Mrs. Higgins, and the Misses Cose and Porter.

No. 3—Mrs. Gray, Mrs. Bowden, Mrs. Corliss and Miss Firstbrook.

No. 4—Mrs. Bradford, Mrs. Webber, Mrs. Farley and the Misses Ayres and Kirch.

Mrs. Gow and Mrs. Scott had charge of the meats and salads and Mrs. Randolph and Magee the cake and pies, while the coffee and tea was served by Mrs. Bushley and Mrs. Gray. Mrs. Sweeney looked after the tickets and saw that no one passed the door without paying the necessary admission.

After supper had been served an informal musical entertainment was provided the visiting public which Miss Rockman rendered several selections on the piano and Elmer Cutting sang a ballad.

The affair was a splendid success and thoroughly enjoyed by all. The proceeds are to be devoted toward paying for the new carpet recently laid in the remodeled chapel.

TROLLEY ACROSS JERSEY.

May Ride From Jersey City to Philadelphia for 70.

It may soon be possible to ride from Philadelphia to Jersey City on a trolley car for 70 cents. The efforts to supply the missing links have long been delayed by litigation. The Pennsylvania Supreme Court has now ordered the dispute between the Pennsylvania Railroad and the Philadelphia and Bristol Railroad Company over a right of way at Croydon back to the Bucks County Court for a re-hearing.

The question to be decided has been the chief hitch to the scheme to cross the State on electric cars. The trolley promoters think they will win ultimately, but no one knows when the case will be decided, especially if it is taken to the highest Federal court.

Trolley cars will soon be running from Camden to Trenton. The New Brunswick combine is rapidly erecting connections that will carry the line through to Newark. The combination known as the New York and Philadelphia Traction Company has a capital of $10 000 000.

SIXTY PLAYED AT PROGRESSIVE EUCHRE.

Notable Society Affair in the Casino Friday Night.

DANCING ALSO A FEATURE.

MRS. EDWARD M. VANBUREN HOSTESS OF THE PARTY.

She Was Assisted by Mrs. L. M. Simpson and Miss Maude VanBoskerck—Casino Prettily Trimmed for the Occasion—First, Second and Third Honors Were Awarded—Dancing Followed Cards.

A delightful progressive euchre party and dance was given Friday evening at the Casino by Mrs. Edward VanBuren, assisted by Mrs. Maude VanBoskerck and Mrs. Lewis G. Timpson. The affair was an informal one and was attended by about seventy of Plainfield's society folks, sixty of whom played. The auditorium was prettily decorated for the occasion in many colors and through the use of colored paper the electric lights cast their soft mellow rays about the hall.

Those who assisted in receiving with Mrs. Edward VanBuren, in addition to those mentioned, included Mrs. D. T. VanBuren, Mrs. T. VanBuren, Mrs. D. T. VanBuren, Mrs. J. W. Reinhart, Mrs. Mason W. Tyler and Mrs. Samuel Huntington. There was a delightful sociability evidenced throughout the evening and the affair was one of the most pleasant of the evening.

At the conclusion of play the prize-winners were announced by those in charge. The first, second and third honors for the women were awarded to Miss Mary Anderson Reinhart, Miss Bowen and Miss Maude VanBoskerck, while D. A. Twaddle, O. G. Waring and C. W. Fiske were the winners for the gentlemen.

The balance of the evening was then devoted to dancing. Music was furnished by Benjamin LaVere's orchestra. At a late hour refreshments were served under the direction of those in charge, and after a few more dances the event came to a close. The guests were unanimous in praising the hostess for the very pleasant time afforded them.

FATALLY ILL AT A DANCE

M. J. COX DIED SOON AFTER LEAVING CRESCENT RINK.

Was Assisting at the Ball of the P. O'Keefe Association When He First Began to Feel Sick—Was Born in This City.

Michael J. Cox, aged about 29 years, died suddenly Thursday morning at 6:45 o'clock at his home on East Fourth street. He was engaged by the P. O'Keefe Association to assist in tending the bar at their dance Wednesday night at the Crescent Rink. About 2 o'clock Thursday morning he complained of feeling ill and said that he would have to give up his job. He grew worse and finally his wife, who was with him, decided it would be better for him to go home, which he did. From that time he became worse until his suffering ended in death, which was due to a congestive chill. Dr. Browning was the attending physician.

Mr. Cox was born in this city and has always lived here. He was well-known and had a host of friends. He was engaged in various kinds of work, principally that of driving. He leaves a brother, Charles Cox, who is employed at Hedden's livery stable on Fourth street. A step-father also survives him. The funeral services were held Saturday morning at 9 o'clock from St. Mary's church and interment took place in St. Mary's cemetery.

PRIZE FOR AN ESSAY.

Miss Curtis' "Battle of Trenton" Competition Was Considered Best Among the Competitors.

Miss Elizabeth Curtis, a pupil at the North Plainfield High School, won the prize, a five dollar gold piece, for the best essay on the "Battle of Trenton." The prize was offered by the local Society of the Daughters of the American Revolution and was open for competition to all pupils at the borough High School.

Many excellent compositions were the result of the efforts of the pupils and it was with difficulty that the committee made a selection. The award was made Wednesday morning during the exercises held in honor of Washington's Birthday.

The presentation of the prize was made by Mrs. Smith, a member of the society which had offered the prize.

Miss Catherine Dwight received honorable mention. Miss Curtis, who had the honor of defeating all competitors, has been under the tutelage of Miss Myrtle M. Montague, teacher of composition and instructress in the North Plainfield High School. Miss Dwight, who received honorable mention, was a teacher of Miss Marion Bush, also a teacher in the borough High school.

SEVEN CONFRONTED CITY JUDGE FRIDAY.

The Mayor Had Opened Court When Mr. Runyon Arrived.

$3 FOR ATTRACTING CROWD.

W. H. CORIELL SENT TO JAIL FOR EIGHT DAYS.

Two Men and One Woman Arrested Early Friday Morning on the Charge of Trespassing on Central Railroad Tracks—Judge Runyon Advises That Such Cases be Taken Before a Justice.

The city court bench was given added dignity Friday morning by the presence of His Honor the Mayor. City Judge Runyon was out of town yesterday and Mr. Rockefellow was not sure that he would be home in time to pass judgment on the unfortunates gathered in by the police, and so the chief magistrate of this city was on hand to deal with the cases on the docket. The Mayor had just commenced to perform the duties of the office when Judge Runyon put in an appearance, and then the former made way for the latter. But the Mayor remained to observe the disposition of the prisoners.

Patrick Loughlin and John Brennan were arraigned on the charge of creating a disturbance at the corner of Park and North avenues Friday afternoon. Both admitted having indulged in a sup too much and being a little boisterous, perhaps, but the insinuation that they wanted to whip each other they wiped away by the joint and emphatic statement that they were "the best of friends." When the Judge was told that the prisoners had attracted a crowd of 300 people around the corner he concluded that a fine of $3 or eight days in the county jail would about fit their case. Thomas Brennan was also arrested with the other two holiday celebrants, but he failed to keep his promise and be on hand in court Friday. He will interview the Judge at a later date.

Looking somewhat like Rip Van-Winkle when he awoke from his twenty years' slumber, W. H. Coriell was ushered to the bar of justice. It was the prisoner's third appearance before Judge Runyon. It was the same old story—drunk. Trembling and faltering in his speech, he pleaded piteously for lenience. He promised to sign the pledge for a year, but the Judge was obdurate in his purpose to mete out a sentence that would serve as a proper warning. "Ten days in jail," said the Judge, and the old fellow was walked back to his cell, and later in the day he was taken to the county jail.

Detective Pickle, of the Central Railroad of New Jersey, appeared in court as a complainant against Daniel Donald, Thomas Owens and Susan Smith. Two bags and one pail of black diamonds told the tale of why they were haled to court. The railroad detective said that he had caught them picking coal from the tracks of the company early Friday morning, and he was convinced that they had thrown it from a coal train that had passed a short time before. He could produce no evidence to this effect, however, and the judge decided that he was not warranted in acting on the charge. He therefore dismissed the case.

At the same time he took the opportunity to advise the railroad detective that it would be much more effective if such charges were made in the court of a justice of the peace, as the city ordinances gave him very limited powers in that direction.

BROTHER AND SISTER SURPRISED.

Harry and Grace Knight Received a Visit From Young Friends.

A complete surprise was given to Harry and Grace Knight, of Richmond street, Thursday, when a number of their companions called to spend the evening. Games, recitations and selections on the piano were played by the young people. During the evening a repast was served and at 11 o'clock they bade their host and hostess good night. Those present were Allen McAllen, Nellie Callahan, Anna Barry, Katie Ryan, Anna Callahan, Helen Wilbee, Grace Knight, Anabella McAllen, Alice Sharkey, Marge DeCourcy, Jessie Gunn, May Carney, Melesia Bird, May McAllee, Nora Callahan, Laura Knight; Messrs. Walter Sharkey, Chesney Allen, Eddie Montross, Charles Montross, Harry Knight, John Ryan, Daniel McAllee, Willie Barry, Frank Barry, Leo DeCourcy, Willie Bird, Fred Wilbee.

THE KNIGHTS RECEPTION

ANNUAL EVENT OF THE COLORED KNIGHTS TEMPLAR.

Members Appeared in Full Uniform and Gave an Exhibition Drill—Delegations Present from Out-of-Town Lodges.

The twelfth annual reception of Cyprus Commandery, No. 6, K. T., was held Thursday in the Crescent Rooms and was one of the most successful affairs of the kind ever given by the commandery. There was a very large attendance of Knights Templar and friends from this and many places throughout this part of the State.

About 10:30 o'clock the members of Cyprus Commandery appeared in a body in full uniform and gave an exhibition drill. This was the feature of the affair and the members received a great ovation from the large crowd present. Among those present were delegations from Mt. Calvary, No. 1, and Ivanhoe, No. 5, of New York; Demolay, No. 1, of Camden, and Damascus, No. 5, of Trenton.

The reception committee was composed of James E. Connett, P. C.; Nathan J. Williams, P. C.; Benjamin E Johnson, P. C.; James H. Walker, P. C.; A. W. Brown, R. E. G. C.; Nathan J. Pollard, Eugene Coles, Joseph Brickley, Samuel Fields. To this committee is due much credit for the great success attending the reception. The members were assisted by the following, who composed the floor committee: Wm. J. Douglass, P. R. E. G. C.; Hosie Hewlet, Albert White, Chas. Thompson, Thos. Bowser, John Dennis, Austin Carey, George Anderson. Others assisting were Wm Randolph, Lewis Peterson and William Jones.

OLD TEACHER LAID AT REST.

Funeral of Late M. F. Marcley Held From First Baptist Church Wednesday Afternoon.

The funeral services of the late M. F. Marcley were held Wednesday afternoon last at the First Baptist church. Rev. Dr. D. J. Yerkes, pastor of the church, officiated, and spoke highly of the life of the departed. He referred to the exemplary Christian life he lived, and likened him unto some of the grand old characters of Bible times. During the service "Saved by Grace" and "Safe in the Arms of Jesus" were rendered effectively by a quartette composed of Mrs. H. E. Rider, Miss Charlotte Messersmith, Elmer E. Runyon and Wm. Holmes. Howard Case presided at the organ.

Among those who attended the services were the members of the Reform Club, who were there in a body. The club also gave a handsome floral piece in the shape of an anchor, on which were the letters "P. R. C." There was several other handsome floral offerings from relatives and friends. Interment took place in Hillside cemetery, and those who acted as pallbearers were Sylvester F. Randolph, L. W. Randolph, L. E. Barkalew, U. B. Crane, Irving L. Brady and Charles Wilson.

"Kind Lady and No Dog."

The surveyors who were employed in laying out the line of the proposed Ogden avenue extension left behind them at certain intervals certain peculiar marks to indicate points which they had fixed. One elderly housekeeper who lives along the line has, through and experience with strangers, become quite wary. She had read a newspaper article not long since telling of the marks which tramps and beggars put on the premises of what they term "easy touches." So when she came to her front door and saw the surveyor's mysterious signs, she studied them intently, and, saying softly to herself: "Kind lady and no dog, hey?" went back into the house with a smile. When she reappeared she was armed with a scrubbing brush and some cleaning brick. She at once proceeded to remove every mark left by the surveyors.—Chicago Evening News.

Many Knew.

A few days ago a boy was missing from a schoolroom in one of the uptown public school buildings. The teacher looked around and failed to see one of their companions called to spend the evening. Games, recitations and selections on the piano were played by the young people. During the evening a repast was served and at 11 o'clock they bade their host and hostess good night. Those present were Allen McAllee, Nellie Callahan, Anna Barry, Katie Ryan, Anna Callahan, Helen Wilbee, Grace Knight, Anabella McAllen, Alice Sharkey, Marge DeCourcy, Jessie Gunn, May Carney, Melesia Bird, May McAllee, Nora Callahan, Laura Knight; Messrs. Walter Sharkey, Chesney Allen, Eddie Montross, Charles Montross, Harry Knight, John Ryan, Daniel McAllee, Willie Barry, Frank Barry, Leo DeCourcy, Willie Bird, Fred Wilbee.

What Joseph Was.

The Sabbath school teacher had been telling the class about Joseph, particularly with reference to his coat of many colors, and how his father rewarded him for being a good boy, for Joseph, she said, told his father wherever he caught any of his brothers in the act of doing wrong.

"Can any little boy or girl tell me what Joseph was?" the teacher asked, hoping that some of them had caught the idea that he was Jacob's favorite.

"I know," one of the little girls said, holding up her hand.

"What was he?"

"A tattle-tale!" was the reply.—Baltimore News.

HOW SOME MEN PROPOSE.

Odd-Hand Way of Popping the Question That Leaves Something to Be Desired.

"No," said the sweet thing in the Valenciennes - lace - trimmed dimity dress, "I really wouldn't care to have him fall to his knees," and vacuum in a tone of passionate entreaty: "Give me but a single ray of hope!' I think that would be absurd beyond all things. I am sure I should feel like laughing in a young man's face if he did any of these ridiculous things. Yet I think even the old-fashioned, high-falutin', my-life-would-be-a-blank-without - you way of proposing mentioned in Miss Austen's bread - and - treacle stories would be better than the dreadfully slangy, matter-of-fact way young men have of proposing nowadays, according to what a lot of married girls tell me. Only yesterday one of them told me how her husband asked her. They had been going together for six months. One afternoon last October they were walking on F street together. She bowed to a young man she knew.

"'Awfully nice looking, isn't he?' she asked Jack, who is now her husband.

"'Fair-looking duck,' said Jack. 'But what's a double-tee, it, anyhow? Don't I cut in at all?'

"She really didn't know what he meant.

"'Well,' went on Jack, 'you're always telling me what a good looker that fellow is. He is the whole thing, and am I an "also ran," or do I win? I just pass it up to you, you know.'

"She didn't understand him this time, either, and I don't wonder.

"'Now, look here, old sport, and don't want to understand,' went on Jack. 'All right. Can you fix it for about three months from date? That's plain enough, isn't it?'

"'It wasn't, though.

"'Then I'll,' she asked him.

"'The day and the hour,' said Jack. 'To get doubled up, you know.'

"Well, of course he makes her a good husband, but just fancy being proposed to in that dreadful sort of fashion!

"You know my married cousin up on the Hill? Well, Jim just worked a bluff—that's the horrid way he puts it—when he proposed to her. He'd been calling pretty regularly and one night he showed up looking as chipper as a lark.

"'Well, I'm off in a few days,' he said to her. 'Nothing in the government service, anyhow. Going to resign my job and strike out for Oklahoma to grow up with the country.'

"She couldn't help but show that she was sorry, of course.

"'I'm sorry you're going,' she said. She's a remarkably serious-minded girl, you know.

"'Yes, you are,' he said, satirically.

"'Really, I am,' she said.

"'Say, he said, then, 'if I thought you were on the level—I mean really sorry, you know, why—er—I wouldn't go, you know.'

"'Why do you wish to leave so beautiful a city as Washington?' she asked him. 'Surely, you don't expect to find a prettier place to live in?'

"Well, of course that gave him a chance to say that he was only staying in Washington on her account, but that as long as she didn't seem to care, etc., etc.

"Another girl told me that the sheer impudence with which her husband proposed to her was simply captivating. It was just about this time last spring, and they were walking along Lafayette square.

"'Trees and flowers look nice, don't they?' he said to her, in an off-hand sort of way. 'Swell season in Washington, spring, isn't it. We won't be a thing but married when the lilacs show up next spring, will we?'

"Did you ever hear of such assurance?

"I heard of another bit of brazen impudence just like that. She told me about it herself. He came up in the evening and sat on the front steps with her.

"'Got promoted to $1,400 to-day,' he said, and then he deliberately pulled out a piece of paper with a lot of figures on it.

"'Did a little figuring on a pad this afternoon,' he said. 'The thing ought to go through easy. Listen: House rent, about $25 or $40 a month; servant $15 a month; gas and fuel—'

"Mind you, he hadn't ever said a word to her about getting married. But you ought to see what a pretty home they have got now!

"The diffident young men are just as matter of fact as the independent ones, too, I hear. You know little Mrs. Finally, up on Columbia Heights, and what a quiet little wife she is. When she reappeared she was armed with a scrubbing brush and some cleaning brick. She at once proceeded to remove every mark left by the surveyors.—Chicago Evening News.

CROSSED THE GREAT DIVIDE AS SHE SLEPT.

Mrs. Anna L. Spencer Found Dead In Bed Thursday.

RETIRED IN GOOD HEALTH

SHE WAS A DEVOTED MEMBER OF HOLY CROSS CHUACH.

County Physician Wagoner Declared That Death was Due to Apoplexy—She was Fifty-Nine Years Old and a Native of This State—Leaves Three Sons, Her Husband Having Died Some Time Ago.

The sudden death of Mrs. Anna L. Spencer, of New York, which occurred early Thursday morning at the home of her father, Alfred Bonnell, of Manning avenue, will be a severe shock to her many Plainfield friends and acquaintances. Mrs. Spencer came to Plainfield about two weeks ago to visit her father and she had been in her usual excellent health. She retired Wednesday evening in the best of health, but as she failed to get up yesterday morning at the customary time, members of the family went to her room to awaken her. It was then discovered that she had died during the night. Coroner DeMott was summoned, who in turn notified County Physician Wagoner, of Somerville. The latter decided that death was due to apoplexy and he gave a burial permit.

She was a woman of rare Christian qualities, and a devoted member of the Episcopal church. For many years she resided on Duer street in the house afterwards occupied by Thomas B. Crosley. She and the other members of the family attended Holy Cross church and all were prominently identified with its interest. During their residence here Mrs. Spencer's husband, who was a New York business man, died. Three sons were born to them, Howard and Tiffany, who have been living with their mother in New York, and William, who resides in California. Mrs. Spencer also leaves a father, Alfred Bonnell, who is in his nineties; a sister, Miss Henrietta Bonnell, and a brother, George Bonnell, all of whom reside on Manning avenue.

Mrs. Spencer was a native of this State, and was in the fifty-ninth year of her age. A number of years she resided in New York, but frequently visited in this city, where she had a host of friends. She was a woman possessing a lovable disposition and endeared herself to all with whom she came in contact. The loss to the family is a severe one, and among her many friends her death will leave a vacant place hard to fill. Announcement of the funeral services will be made later.

HEAT TURNED ON WATER

LUCKY ESCAPE OF PLAINING MILL FROM DESTRUCTION BY FIRE

Flames Started in Old Coat in Spicer and Hubbard's Mill—Supposed to Have Been Caused by Mice Nibbling Matches.

A lucky escape from a serious conflagration occurred sometime during Wednesday night at Spicer & Hubbard's mill on Madison avenue. The thing that prevented the probable total destruction of the mill was the automatic sprinkler with which the interior of the mill is equipped. The fire started in an old coat in one corner of the mill, and the presumption is that there was matches in the coat and the nibbling of mice ignited them.

At all events the heat of the fire was of sufficient intensity to break the plug in the automatic sprinkler over head, and thus a volume of water rushed down and thoroughly extinguished the flames. The first intimation of the fire was when one of the firm called at the mill Thursday morning and found the place flooded. The damage was very small.

There is a large bell which is supposed to ring when the sprinkler works, but an investigation Thursday showed that the electric wire which rings the bell had been cut. If the bell had worked no doubt neighbors would have discovered the fire.

Realty Changes.

The following real estate transfers have been recorded in the Somerset County Clerk's office during the last week: Selah Schoonmaker, sheriff, to Chas. B. Underwood, North Plainfield, $3,026; Michael Powers et ux., to Chas. B. Underwood, North Plainfield, $1; Alfred University to E. A. Titus, North Plainfield, $800; Rebecca Steelart et al., to George Conover, North Plainfield, $784.

More Locomotives For the Central.

The Jersey Central Railroad still continues to build new locomotives and rolling stock. Twenty new engines, fifteen of the new large freight type and five for passenger work, are now in process of construction. Many new box cars and small gondola coal cars are being built.

SOLD BY HER FATHER.

These Times Chief Cornedropper Has Disposed of His Daughter in Willing Bidders.

Mary Cornedropper has been sold by auction for a third time. Her father, former Chief Cornedropper, of the Osage tribe, stole a march on his watchers and the sale was made before any outsider could learn what was going forward. The price paid for Miss Cornedropper was 300 ponies.

old, but she has been married twice before, and each time she was sold by her father to the highest bidder among the full-blooded bucks of the tribe. Mary ran away from her two former husbands and returned to her father, only to be sold from the block for the third time.

Ex-Chief Cornedropper is one of the richest of the Osage Indians. He has a ranch of 2,800 acres of fertile land, all well stocked, and his home is one of the finest in the reservation. His daughter is the princess of the tribe. She was first sold into marriage at the age of 17 to Tall Chief for 400 ponies. Her mother caused a separation after one year of wedded life. Tall Chief and his mother-in-law could not live under the same roof. An Indian mother-in-law, he says, is just as big a nuisance as a paleface mother-in-law. Not many months later she was again sold to John Logan, a prominent young man of the Osage council in 1898. He lived with her at the home of her parents until six months ago, when he left on account of the domineering mother-in-law. The young wife, who had become a mother a few months before, was grief-stricken. She loved John and insisted that he loved her. For a number of days she refused to eat and for a long time she mourned his departure. She suffered a severe spell as a result. Her child is a boy. —Wichita (Kan.) Letter.

OLDEST POSTMASTER.

In Point of Service Uncle Joel Newsom, of Azalia, Ind., Is Without a Rival.

Down at the village of Azalia, Ind., lives an old man, popularly known as Uncle Joel Newsom, who proudly claims the record as the oldest postmaster in the country in point of service. He took charge of the office of the Azalia office back in 1859, afterwards receiving his commission from Postmaster General Blair. Since 1859 he has been distributing the mail without a break. Once, when Cleveland was elected president the first time, an attempt was made to oust him, but it failed miserably, and since then no one has even ventured to dispute his right to the office. It is generally considered that the only power which will ever succeed in dispossessing Joel is the old gentleman with the scythe and hourglass. Not once during the 41 years of his occupancy has any correction been made in his accounts with the department, and he is extremely popular with all the people of Azalia.

When Joel first began settled to write P. M. after his name only one mill a week came to Azalia. Now that enterprising village proudly boasts two mails a day. When he started to stamp letters it cost five cents to mail a letter, while the postage on weekly papers was 20 cents a year. Soldiers' letters could be franked, but were charged for at their destination.

The most exciting event in Mr. Newsom's career as postmaster occurred in 1865, when Frank Reno, a noted Indiana bandit of the old days, cracked the post office safe and disappeared with $6,000 in government bonds. The bonds were afterward recovered, and Frank was hanged by a mob at New Albany, Ind., so "Uncle" Joel came out of that affair without loss.

Mr. Newsom is a republican, but, as befits a postmaster for life, never befrafs any "pernicious activity."

Natural Color of Water.

Prof. Spring recently made experiments of many years to explain the color of water. He has come to the conclusion that a pure blue is the natural color of water, for when we look through a long tube filled with distilled water against a brilliant white surface a pure blue is seen, such as shown by the Lake of Geneva in quiet weather, a color which is not influenced by superficial or interior reflection.

CATHOLIC CLUB DANCE.

PLEASANT AFFAIR ARRANGED BY THE LADIES.

Second Reception Given Under the Auspices of the Fair Ones, Who Have Claimed a Reputation as Entertainers.

The reception and dance given last Thursday at the handsome quarters of the Catholic Club at Sixth and Liberty streets by the Ladies' Auxiliate Organization proved to be one of the delightful affairs for which this society is noted.

It was the second reception the ladies have given at the clubhouse and like the first attempt proved a complete success beyond the young ladies' fondest hopes. This being the last social function before the Lenten season, the society folk to the number of nearly 200 availed themselves of the opportunity of participating in the festivities.

There was a brilliant assemblage and many of the ladies' toilets were rich and elegant. Prof. O'Reilly's orchestra supplied the music and the large ballroom was used for dancing, while the parlors of the club were placed at the disposal of the ladies to entertain their gentlemen friends and to serve refreshments, which was done in the individual style.

The success of the affair is due to the efforts of the following ladies composing the committee of arrangements: Miss Margaret Byrnie, chairman; Mrs. Thomas Cumerford, Mrs. William Shaffer, and the Misses Nellie Quer, Catherine Carty and Margaret Day.

Messrs Edward Flynn and C. A. Shannon filled the important post of floor managers.

MR. BRISTOL MADE A HIT

Young Plainfielder Pleased a Large Audience With His Humor and Reading.

The fifth entertainment in the Y. M. C. A. Star course of the local association, given Thursday, proved to be one of the best. The entertainment was furnished by the Imperial Quartette, assisted by Frank O. Bristol, reader and humorist, of this city. The musical portion of the program was supplied by William A. Cole, Sig. Carlo Barcelotto, P. H. Foley and Walter Vreeland. This quartette delighted the audience, which filled the cosy hall to its limit, with choice selections on the guitar, mandolin, banjo and xylophone.

Mr. Foley's humorous songs and Mr. Cole's artistic manipulation of the French musical discs were features of the concert that were particularly pleasing. Mr. Bristol kept his audience in good humor by the clever readings and humorous selection. As a story teller Mr. Bristol maintained the excellent reputation he has gained and was repeatedly complimented with encores, to which he kindly responded.

TROLLEY COMPANY SET LED

Paid $300 to Fanwood for Expenses Incurred in Reference to Franchise Application.

W. B. Codington, counsel for Fanwood township, has just succeeded in securing a settlement between the township and the New York and Philadelphia Traction Company, which is now known as the Brunswick Traction Company. This company made attempts in 1894 and 1895 to construct and operate a trolley line in the township and owing to their failure the town officials obtained by the township as damages. The trouble has been hanging fire ever since and a settlement seemed a great way off. Mr. Codington has been persistent, however, and finally succeeded in getting the company to pay the $300 to the township.

Funeral of Harry Mattox.

The funeral services of the late Harry Mattox, Webster place, were held Wednesday afternoon from Warren chapel. The services were conducted by the pastor, Rev. J. O McKelvey. The floral tributes were numerous and very handsome, including a triangle from the Sons of Temperance, a set-piece from the city police, and another set-piece from the employes at Chapot & Son's factory, where the deceased was employed. Interment took place in Hillside cemetery, and those who acted as pallbearers were Thos. and Jas. Nichols, of Newark; Christopher and Morris Sorenson, Mr. Stewart and Mr. Ayers, of this city.

Westfield's Loss, Plainfield's Gain.

Fred M. VanEmburgh, of Westfield, has leased the Curry house, corner Brook and Westervelt avenues, and will remove to Plainfield soon. Mr. and Mrs. N. W. Rappleyea and Miss Rappleyea will accompany Mr. and Mrs. VanEmburgh and also become residents of the borough.

Material for Overhead Bridge.

The timber for the crossing for the Westfield and Elizabeth Street Railway over the Lehigh Valley tracks at Aldene, is on the ground, and as soon as the crossing is in place the people of Roselle will have the trolley facilities so long delayed.

SPRING POLITICS IN THE TOWNSHIPS.

Prospects of Lively Campaign in North Plainfield Township.

BEFORE MARCH ELECTION.

BOTH PARTIES WILL PROBABLY NOMINATE TICKETS.

Present State Law Makes It Necessary to Elect All Three Members of Township Committee—Fight Will be Between Sebring and Dely Both Republicans From Greenbrook.

With the spring election only a few weeks away, the politicians of North Plainfield township are beginning to bestir themselves. Unless the Legislature speedily enacts a new law allowing the Township Committee to finish their unexpired terms of office, it will, under the law of last year's Legislature, be necessary to elect an entire new Committee. Then a Freeholder and a Collector are also to be chosen.

Last spring saw the political parties of the township in hopeless confusion as far as party lines were concerned. Neither party had a ticket in the field but local issues combined to form a Citizens' ticket and an Independent ticket.

This year both parties are planning for tickets in which, however, the lines will not be closely observed. Unless the change is made in the law, Thomas Taylor will be nominated by the Democrats to succeed himself on the Committee for one year. He is from Washingtonville. Benjamin Clark, another Democrat, from Scotch Plains, will be nominated by the same party to membership in the Committee for two years.

The fight will be for the third place in the Committee for a successor for Charles F. Sebring, to hold office for three years. Sebring is a Republican from the Greenbrook, but he is likely to be a candidate for the Democratic ticket, as no resident of that section of that political persuasion is willing to run against him.

The Republicans will probably indorse the nominations of Taylor and Clark or at least refuse to place any candidate against them. James Doty, of Greenbrook, will, however, probably be the nominee for the Committee to run against Sebring.

The Democrats intend to renominate Augustus Nichols, of Washingtonville, to the Board of Freeholders while Poole Voorhees, of Greenbrook, is prominently mentioned for the Republican nomination for the same office. J. W. Coddington, the present Collector, a Republican, refuses to accept the nomination for that office again and half a dozen names have been mentioned for the place. None of the candidates have, however, shown any remarkable strength.

The party caucuses will be held shortly. The calls have not yet been issued and the place of meeting is not yet decided. There is quite a little interest shown in the campaign already and some lively times are expected. It is barely possible that the rival forces may change their plans and fight it out in the caucus instead of waiting to settle the question of supremacy at the polls.

Mrs. Eugene A. Moore's Euchre Party

A most charming euchre party was given Friday afternoon by Mrs. Eugene A. Moore, of College place. Thirty people enjoyed Mrs. Moore's hospitality and the successful young ladies carried off prizes. The first prize was won by Miss Emily Gilbert, the second prize by Miss May Rodman and the consolation prize by Miss Schroeder. After the games, refreshments were served at the tables.

Building Up Again.

The First Church of Christ is renewing its youth. On the good work of the middle nineties promises to be repeated. Services are held Sunday morning and evening, conducted by the Disciples' Mission. The faithful few are having their numbers augmented by those who withdrew a year or two ago, and the welcome to outsiders is hearty.

A Successful Surprise.

A very pleasant surprise was tendered Miss Florence Boylan at her home at Mt. Pleasant, last Friday. The affair, which was in honor of her birthday, was complete in every way. The evening was spent in dancing and playing games, after which refreshments were served. There were about forty friends present, and all enjoyed a good time.

Where Democracy Rule.

James E. Martine went to Jersey City Thursday evening and was the guest of the Robert Davis Association, where he made a speech. A banquet followed and there was no end to the flow of eloquence from those closely allied to the Democratic party. Mr. Martine spoke on the subject "In Union There is Strength."

VENABLE SAW MAYOR AND THEN CLOSED UP.

Reported to Police That Crap Game Was Going on in His Room.

HE PROMISES TO BEHAVE.

CALLERS FOUND THE PLACE CLOSED UP LAST NIGHT.

Sergeant Kiely Intercepted Venable and Latter Afterwards Had a Heart to Talk With His Honor.

John Venable has been entertaining a number of friends of the colored race in his rooms in a building on Park avenue of late. John Venable paid a visit to Mayor Rockfellow Saturday evening. But it was by request. Sunday night when Venable's friends assemble, they found the door locked and Venable absent. So the little gathering was not held as usual.

It has recently been reported to the police that a crap game was in progress every evening on the third floor of a building on Park avenue. It was alleged that Venable was the proprietor of the establishment, but conclusive proof was lacking.

When Venable went down to the front door Saturday evening to open up, Sergeant Kiely was waiting there. The Sergeant suggested a walk around to the Mayor's office and Venable went. The Mayor didn't make any charges. He simply gave Venable to understand that the place would have to be closed up. Venable declared that he was a "law-abiding citizen" and that the establishment would be closed forthwith and remain closed as far as he was concerned.

Venable was warned that he would be under the eye of the police and he promised to be very circumspect in his behavior. He then departed to his rooms, locked them up and when the friends that have been haunting the place, casually tried to drop in Sunday they found the door locked and Venable gone.

CAKE AND CANDY SALE.

Conducted by Sunshine Mission Band of Crescent Avenue Church.

The Sunshine Mission Band of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church had a cake and candy sale Saturday afternoon in the Sunday-school room. The sale was highly successful and was patronized by a large number of the congregation. After the sale the little folks entertained the audience with some interesting tableaux, the scenes being taken from the well-known "Peterkin Papers." The tableaux were given under the direction of Mrs. H. A. Schuyler and Miss Margaret Tracey. The little folks acquitted themselves in a manner that reflected to the credit of their mentors. The affair was delightfully arranged and particularly pleasing to all concerned.

SEWING SCHOOL PRIZES.

A HAPPY TIME FOR ONE HUNDRED CHILDREN.

Pupils in Sewing School Started by Rev. W. M. Downey at Holy Cross Church Awarded Prizes.

Early last November a girls' sewing school was organized by Rev. Wm. Montgomery Downey, rector of the Holy Cross church, to which children of the borough were freely and unconditionally admitted. The sessions have been held in the parish house every Saturday afternoon from 1 to 4 o'clock, under the superintendence of Mrs. J. O. Stevens, and with a corps of twelve or fourteen teachers, all members of the Holy Cross congregation. Shortly after opening the school it was decided to offer prizes for the greatest improvement made in three months, and the close of this period was joyously celebrated Saturday afternoon.

Rev. Mr. Downey opened the school with prayers and then in a friendly talk expressed his hearty approval of the interest and diligence shown by the scholars, and explained to them the advantage of becoming skilful needlewomen.

Then came the prizes, six beautiful silver thimbles, which were awarded to Lizzie Farch, Pauline Smith, Edith Krietzfield, Francis Newman and Boeis Duffy, for the greatest improvement in plain sewing, and to Margaret Wyckoff for bringing into the school the greatest number of new scholars. Honorable mention was also given to Clara Schmidt who had brought eight new scholars and to three other girls who had helped to increase the attendance.

Following the distribution of prizes the honor roll was read and rosettes of red ribbon were given to ten girls who had been present at every session since the school was opened. White rosettes were given to twelve scholars who had been absent only once, and blue rosettes to nine who had missed but two sessions.

When all had been decorated there were songs and games, and after an hour of amusement the scholars were called to their seats to enjoy another surprise in the form of cake and lemonade, as much as anyone wanted. After another half hour of games the children were dismissed declaring as they went that they had had "a perfectly lovely time."

The school began with fifty six scholars but has since doubled that number. Only plain sewing has been taught but it is proposed to add classes in mending, knitting and embroidery as soon as practicable. Visitors are always welcome.

STRICKEN DEAD AS SHE WAS TALKING

Sudden and Startling End of Mrs. Edward J. Hillman Saturday Afternoon.

IN HER EIGHTIETH YEAR.

WAS CONVERSING WITH RELATIVE WHEN DEATH STROKE CAME.

One of the Oldest Residents in This City—A Member of the First Baptist Church—Funeral Tomorrow Afternoon.

Mrs. Edward J. Hillman, of Sherman avenue, while conversing with her daughter-in-law last Saturday suddenly fell upon her face. When picked up she was dead. In the fall Mrs. Hillman received severe cuts on her face, but as blood did not flow from her wounds, it is the impression of the members of the family that death must have been instantaneous, and came upon her before she fell forward.

Mrs. Hillman was in her 80th year. She was the mother of William H. Hillman, of Sherman avenue, and Mrs. Clarence Woodcock, of West Seventh street.

Mrs. Hillman's death removes another of the older residents of Plainfield. Fifty years ago Edward J. Hillman owned a farm where the borough of Dunellen is located. The trees marking the old road in front of the house are still standing and are to be seen near the roundhouse. The old well used by the Hillman family half a century ago is directly beneath the sidewalk on West Front street not 100 yards west of the trolley terminus. Some years ago the farm house was moved back on a side street in Dunellen and still doing duty as a dwelling.

Mrs. Hillman was a member of the Baptist church and up to recent years was a regular attendant. The funeral services were held Tuesday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock from the residence of her son 826 Sherman avenue.

BOROUGH BOWLERS BEAT.

Contest Held at the Park Club Alleys —North Plainfield Victorious by Thirty-Two Pins.

The bowlers from this city and borough, five on a side, gathered at the Park Club alleys Saturday evening and rolled the second game of a series of three. The Plainfield contingent won the first game several weeks ago. North Plainfield was victorious Saturday evening by a majority of 32 pins. The game was quite exciting and a number of spectators watched it from the side lines.

The individual scores were as follows:

LENTEN TALKS.

Interesting Subjects to be Discussed by Miss Wilberforce.

Miss Dorothy Wilberforce Lyon, Ph. D. (B. M.) announces a course of Lenten talks on Europe in Africa in the XIX century. The talks given in All Souls' Unitarian church on six successive Monday mornings, beginning March 5th, from 11 to 12 o'clock. The first talk will be a discussion of the entire course of events in South Africa from the earliest Dutch settlement antecedding and leading up to the present war. The other subjects are:

March 19th—The work of the great explorers throughout Africa.

March 26th—Egypt under the Khedives and the English.

April 2d—The establishment of French power in Africa and the "Hinterland" question.

April 9th—Italy in Africa; Abyssinia, and Madagascar.

The price for a course ticket is $3; single tickets, seventy-five cents. The tickets are transferable.

Will those desiring to attend kindly send their subscription as soon as possible to Miss Mary H. Miller, 309 LaGrande avenue.

To Tell of a Worthy Cause.

His Grace, Travers Leives, Archbishop of Ontario, Can., will preach in Grace Episcopal church Sunday, March 4th, at 10:30 o'clock, in behalf of the Faris Homes for English and American Girls, founded by Mrs. Leives, formerly Miss Ada M. Leigh. The Arch-bishop and Mrs. Leives are the guests of Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Patton, 122 West Fifth street, who represents this work in Plainfield.

Miss Drake's Latest Enterprise.

S. D. Drake is determined that Plainfield shall have a soldiers' monument and he is taking steps to secure the erection of one in the city. This morning he received a number of designs from which he selected one that he thinks will be suitable. Mr. Drake says that if the people of Plainfield have not enough enthusiasm to contribute toward this enterprise he will erect it without it costing Plainfield one cent.

LARGE THEFTS OF WIRE.

BRUNSWICK TRACTION COMPANY EXTENSIVELY VICTIMIZED.

Handled in Depletion of Power and Caused Much Trouble in Running Trolley Cars.

Wholesale thefts of bond wire have been discovered on the branch of the Brunswick Traction Company from New Brunswick to Bound Brook. For some time past the company's engineers have noticed that the power was growing weak in that direction. There is a storage plant at Bound Brook, but the loss of power was so great that this plant was of no avail. The power house at Milltown had two Curtiss engines of 250 horsepower each to operate the entire system, and it was at first thought that the difficulty was with the engines. A Ball and Wood vertical engine of 750 horsepower was then installed, giving a total capacity of 1,250 horsepower. Still the leakage continued.

Thursday night a number of men with instruments went over the Bound Brook branch in search of the cause of the trouble and found that nearly 100 of the bond wires which connect the rails had been stolen. The object of the bond wire is to economize the current.

It is supposed that thieves have been quietly engaged at the work of removing the bond wires and selling them, the copper being quite valuable.

GROANING ON SIDEWALK.

Well Dressed Man Lying Apparently Unconscious at Madison Avenue and West Front.

James Carter, the colored janitor of the Babcock building, while on his way home from church Sunday night about about 10 o'clock found a well dressed man lying on the sidewalk at Madison avenue and West Fifth street. The man appeared to be in distress. Carter asked the man if he was ill and where he lived. He could not elicit an intelligent answer to his questions. Realising that if the unfortunate man was left to himself he would perish from the cold, with commendable foresight Carter went in search of help, intending to assist the man to his home or to the hospital. Later when Carter returned after securing help the man had disappeared. The name of the man is not known or whether he was intoxicated or had met with an accident.

TELLS A PITIFUL TALE.

Woman Soliciting Alms About the City Who is Said to be an Impostor.

The public is warned against a woman, believed to be an impostor, who is soliciting alms about the city. The woman claims to be suffering with a diseased leg and tells a pitiful tale about trying to obtain enough money to secure an entrance to a Home for Invalids. The woman has different stories to suit her convenience. One of her stories is in effect that she left the Home to attend the funeral of an aunt at Scotch Plains, and desires money to pay her fare back. The same woman told the same stories in this city about a year ago. Information regarding the woman's residence will be gladly received at the office of the Organized Aid Society, 544 West Front street.

TOLD OF MISSIONARY WORK.

Rev. Harmon Peeke Recently Returned From Japan—Spoke in an Interesting Way.

Rev. Harmon Peeke, a missionary recently returned from Japan, occupied the pulpit at Trinity Reformed church Sunday morning and delivered a highly interesting address on the process of missionary work. Mr. Peeke has been engaged in this work for many years and has become thoroughly conversant with every phase of it. He told many things that were not only interesting but instructive, and the congregation enjoyed his remarks very much. In the afternoon Mr Peeke made an address to the Sunday-school, which was also enjoyed, and last evening he spoke at the German Reformed church, North Plainfield.

LARRY WALLACE IN JAIL.

Arrested in Cranford Friday for Acting in a Disorderly Manner About the Town.

Lawrence Wallace, of Fanwood, who has been arrested more than once on suspicion of being a firebug, is once more a prisoner in the Union county jail.

Wallace was arrested Friday at Cranford. His offence was that of being drunk and acting in a disorderly manner. The complaint was entered against him, and on each Justice Condert sentenced him to twenty days in jail. Wallace was then turned over to Jail Warden Dodd.

New York Banker to Reside Here.

David H. Rowland, vice-president of the Lincoln National Bank, New York, has purchased of the Pittis estate a lot corner of Stelle and Field avenues, where he will erect a handsome country residence.

CRUELTY IN RUSSIA.

Czar Rules His Big Realm with a Red-Hot Iron.

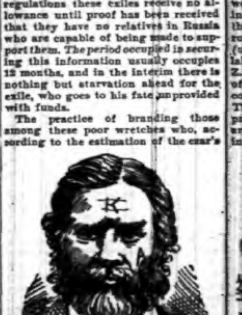
Demoniacal Punishment Inflicted Upon Men and Women—Savagery That Has Been Tabooed Even by Cannibal Tribes.

From the reports which are constantly brought by travelers and others from Siberia and other parts of the Russian empire there is no attempt being made by the czar to live up to his promise to prevent the sending of further political exiles to his Asiatic empire.

On the contrary, the treatment of these prisoners has become even more rigorous than at any period lately, and they are being shipped in increased numbers to that inferno, which is a curse to modern civilization.

To add to the horrors of the situation, the government grant of 300,000 roubles per year set aside for the maintenance of the political prisoners has been cut down to 100,000 roubles, while the number of these unfortunates grows bigger and bigger, and this means, of course, that many of them literally starve to death in the pitiless deserts of the north. Particularly is this the case in the provinces of Verkhoyansk and Kolimsk, where there is no possible means of earning a penny by any means whatever. Under the regulations these exiles receive no allowances until proof has been received that they have no relatives in Russia who are capable of being made to support them. The period occupied in securing this information usually occupies 12 months, and in the interim there is nothing but starvation ahead for the exile, who goes to his fate unprovided with funds.

The practice of branding those among these poor wretches who, according to the estimation of the czar's



BRANDED BY THE CZAR.
(Demoniacal Punishment Inflicted on Criminals in Russia)

officials, are the most dangerous is one of the most brutal and revolting that the mind can devise.

Men and women alike, says the Cincinnati Commercial Tribune, are subjected to this demoniacal punishment, which is accomplished by means of hot irons, the work being executed with an amount of savagery not even met with to-day among the fiercest cannibal tribes.

In the presence of his fellow criminals, who have the same horrible ordeal awaiting them, the shrinking victim is dragged forward and pinioned securely by brutal keepers and held tightly while the manipulator of the burning iron proceeds to mark the degrading brand upon his forehead. This is often done in the presence of other members of the family, and the distorted features of the unfortunate victim, the smell of burning flesh and the heart-rending shrieks of himself and others combine to produce a scene which is so nauseating as to defy description. A traveler who has been present at one of these scenes is sure says that he never saw a more frightful instance of barbarity even at the orgies of the devil worshipers of the East Indies. Civilization is disgraced and discredited by such inhuman practices, but his fellow czar's name, and one shrinks with horror at the thought of the sway of such a government being extended among civilized peoples.

It has been given out that the use of the knout as a form of punishment has been forbidden by the authorities, but that is one of the many specious pretenses with which the Russian government seeks to impose upon the credulity of outraged humanity. The knout is as much in use to-day as it ever was. Only a few years ago a peasant at Vitebsk who had been driven from the district because of being suspected of belonging to a heterodox religious sect, was arrested by the police, who applied the knout so severely to him that he expired from the effects of his beating.

It was reported by the police that the man had composed his own destruction in prison, but his fellow-prisoners learned the truth and set fire to the barracks in which the police were lodged. In consequence of this act some 80 men and women were at once hanged to the trees.

The slightest suspicion or accusation against a person is sufficient to secure his immediate transportation to Siberia without even the pretense of a trial.

A student accused of propagating revolutionary views was arrested in Moscow last September, and as there was no evidence against him he was subsequently discharged. Then he was rearrested and thrown into a dungeon, where he went stark mad, ending his miserable existence by igniting his clothes and burning himself alive.

Age of British Soldiers.

The average age of the British soldier now at the front is nearly two years higher than that of the soldier who fought at Waterloo.

HAS LARGE FAMILY

Heber Z. Ricks Is the Father of Sixty-Six Children.

Married Five Times on His Journey to the Promised Land of the Mormons and Seven Times After Having Reached It.

In the valley of the Snake river, near where that stream forms the boundary line between Wyoming and Idaho, lives the father of the largest family on the American continent, and probably in the world. The name of this unique distinction is Heber Z. Ricks, one of the faithful followers in religion and practices of the late Brigham Young. Reliable persons who have known Ricks for many years say he has 12 wives and 66 children. Many of his sons and daughters have long since taken unto themselves helpmates for life, and to these have been born 218 children, thereby bringing the number of souls in the Ricks family, exclusive of the venerable father himself, up to 296.

The members of the Ricks family are scattered over a stretch of country 14 miles long by two miles wide. Heber Ricks has an even dozen ranches, which, with those of the sons and daughters, make quite a good-sized settlement. In the center of this settlement a town called Rickaville has been established. Here are located a general store and a church, the latter being the largest as well as the most substantial building in the Ricks empire. During week days the church is transformed into a schoolroom, and a regularly employed teacher (usually one of the Ricks daughters) labors with the descendants of Heber Z. On Sundays, and not infrequently of an evening, services, which are, of course, strictly Mormon, are held. These religious meetings are usually presided over by the elder Ricks, and are very interesting, being conducted in that manner peculiar to the Mormon faith. In case of the absence of the "bishop," as the head of the family is known in the settlement, as is frequently the case when he makes a visit to one of his wives living in the extreme upper or lower ends of the colony, one of the wives will fill the pulpit and preach the doctrine of his father.

Heber Z. Ricks is a giant in form and strength, although he is 77 years old. Little or nothing is known of his boyhood, except that he was reared on a farm in western New York. He has never been known to say much about his early life, other than that he landed in St. Louis in 1842. From that city he went to a small settlement in the vicinity of where Independence, Mo., now stands, where he joined the Mormon church. A little band of Mormons, with Ricks at their head, left the place early in the spring of 1848 and turned their faces toward Utah. Brigham Young's party of 221 persons had gone on the previous year and left a faint trail, which Ricks and his party followed with great difficulty. This trail led them across the state of Nebraska along the Platte river, up the Big Laramie river and across the state of Wyoming by way of Fort Laramie, and on into the valley of the great Salt Lake via Echo canyon.

When Ricks left Missouri, it is said, he was single, but when he and his party reached Salt Lake Valley he was the possessor of five better halves. Settling near Salt Lake, Ricks continued to take unto himself additional wives until he had ten. Early in the year 1860, with the number of his wives increased to 12, Ricks pulled up stakes and moved across the mountains through eastern Idaho to the valley of Snake river. There, upon one of the most fertile spots to be found on the continent, he established himself. The first few years were years of great activity for Ricks and his already large family. For a time all lived in one large house, which was hastily erected, but later 12 houses, composed of roughly hewn logs, were erected for each different points along the river. To these were added, in due time, barns, corrals and other outbuildings, and in a few years Ricksville was something more than a name.

While the population in the vicinity of this settlement is distinctly Ricks, there are a large number of families of other names, says the Chicago Inter Ocean. The settlement does not differ from many others of the sort from any Mormon settlement in Utah, Wyoming or Idaho, and a visitor, were he not familiar with the history of the Ricks family, would never suspect that Heber Z. Ricks is the father of so many children.

German Juvenile Criminals.

The alarming increase of juvenile criminals in Germany is puzzling the legislators. In 1885 the juvenile offenders numbered 33,704, the total rising to 45,304 in 1894 and to 47,973 in 1895. The increase of all criminals in 1895 over the preceding year was three per cent., an increase disproportionate to the growth of population.

THE SCHOOL BUDGET

WILL BE A TRIFLE HIGHER THIS YEAR THAN LAST.

Borough Board of Education Discusses the Matter at the Meeting Last Night.

The Borough Board of Education held a regular meeting last Monday and transacted very little business. The members devoted most of their time to fixing up the budget for next year, which will be advertised within a few days. This promises to be a trifle higher than last year for the fact that there are now two schools to look after, where before there was only one. The finance committee presented its report and this will be published in a few days. All of this work is in preparation for the special meeting which will be held March 20th, when the reports will be presented and three school commissioners will be elected to fill the vacancies that will be left by Paul Loftesnix, George D Hallock and H. A. McGee, whose terms expire. As yet there has been little or no talk as to who will be selected for the positions.

The members devoted a little time to discussing the need of repairs at the school on Somerset street. These repairs will have to be made and provision for them will be made in the budget for the year's expense.

FIRE DID SMALL DAMAGE

DEPARTMENT WAS CALLED OUT TWICE SUNDAY.

Defective Flue Caused $100 Worth of Damage—Chimney Fire Later in the Day.

A defective flue from an open fire place set fire to a mantel in the residence of George Brainard, 320 Central avenue, Sunday morning. The house is owned by Mrs. J. Trued, who lives next door. The butler at her home sent in alarm from box 41, at 11:25 o'clock.

The fire was put out by the firemen with the assistance of three hand extinguishers. The damage to the house will reach $25, and to the furniture $75. Both house and contents were covered with insurance.

Chief Doane was notified Sunday afternoon, shortly before 6 o'clock, that the grocery of Westphal & Son, corner of Liberty and West Fourth streets, was on fire. He summoned the chemical engine and No. 2 hose wagon by telephone. The fire proved to be in the chimney of that building, which is owned by Frederick Westphal, who occupies the second floor of the building.

Two extinguishers and a pail of sand were used to end the fire which caused but slight damage.

MISS CAIRN'S MUSICALE.

The Host is a Fine Musician Herself, and With the Aid of Friends She Provided a Fine Programme.

Miss Cairns, of West Fifth street, entertained her friends most delightfully at a musicale given Saturday afternoon at her home. Miss Cairns is a fine musician herself, and, with the assistance of some musical friends, the following programme was rendered with taste and skill:

Piano	a. Prelude, D flat major	Chopin
	b. "Hark, Hark the Lark," Schubert-Liszt
	Miss Edith Cairns.
Songs	a. "Chanson"	Macdowell
	b. Greeting	Hawley
	Mr. Franklin Smith.
Violin	a. Introduction et Polonaise	Allen
	b. Aria on G string	Bach
	Miss Edna M. Edwards.
Songs	a. The Snake of the Past	Batte
	b. Deadman's Stream	Carey
	Mr. Smith.
Piano	Lullaby	Liszt
	Miss Cairns.

Miss M. I. Edwards, Miss M. A. Smith, Accompanists.

The performances were very kind in responding to the encores, and the pleased audience called them out several times. The music was followed by the serving of refreshments and the enjoyment of a social time.

Assigned To U. S. S. Kentucky.

Past Assistant Engineer Fred Bennett, formerly of the U. S. S. S. New York, but now of the torpedo boat "Dupont," spent Sunday in North Plainfield with his parents. Mr. Bennett has been assigned to the U. S. S. Kentucky, one of the new ships, and is waiting for her to be placed in commission.

Population Grows in Jersey.

Political leaders of both parties in Bergen county say the new census will show New Jersey's population to have reached such numbers as to entitle the State to increased representation in the Electoral College as well as additional members in the State Legislature.

Trouble in Getting Telephones.

Manager Chas. W. Runyon, of the local telephone company, is not able to secure telephones quick enough for his subscribers. The company is away behind in this respect, and arrangements are being made to increase the capacity of the factories that are making the instruments.

MRS. EYLER PICTURED IN A VERY BAD WAY

Dr Laura Satterthwait Declares the Matron Inflicted Cruelties in Fits of Passion.

KILLED HOME INFLUENCE

THE LEGISLATIVE COMMITTEE HEARS SOME DAMAGING TESTIMONY.

It is Expressed That the Matron of the State Industrial School is Not Fit to Run Anything—School Like a Prison.

Trenton, March 7—The investigation into the affairs of the State Industrial School for Girls was resumed yesterday afternoon in the Assembly Chamber, which was well-filled with spectators. Rev. Clarence Eyler, husband of the matron of the school, occupied his usual place near the committee. He constantly wrote questions on paper and handed them to the secretary of the committee to be asked the witnesses.

Lewis Parker, grand secretary of the Odd Fellows and president of the Trenton Savings Fund, was the first witness. He was for years secretary and treasurer of the old board of trustees. He said he had no criticism to make on the method of punishment inflicted at the school, and in a measure showed himself favorably disposed toward Mrs. Eyler. There existed no rule, he said, permitting corporal punishment, and the rules were broken when such punishment was inflicted. He had resigned because of lack of harmony in the board of trustees, but he did not know what had caused the friction.

Mr. Parker said he approved of all cases where girls were kept in cells for several days on bread and water. As for the case of Sadie Wiseman, who died in Paterson, he believed the punishment she had received was just, as did also the executive board of managers at that time. He thought Mrs. Eyler's control of the school was good. He said he did not favor corporal punishment, but thought it was necessary to call in men to control some of the girls, because the women could not handle them. He thought it necessary to keep a girl in solitude until she became penitent, no matter how long it might take.

Dr. Laura H. Satterthwait, the former physician of the school, who was recently dropped from the list of officers, was next called. She said she had been the attending physician at the school, and had been called to attend Kate Barlow for inflammation of the stomach. She had attended her several times, and during her absence the girl had been removed to the City Hospital without the witness' knowledge or consent. The doctor declared that she had never been given a history of the girl's case. She had seen evidence on the girl's neck that she had been choked, and from her general appearance and condition she considered the girl had been severely and cruelly punished.

She had reported several cases of cruel and inhuman treatment to the Board of Managers, but had never heard anything from them. When asked about Mrs. Eyler's temperament, the witness gave several illustrations of cruel and inhuman treatment which he'l been inflicted during a fit of passion on the part of Mrs. Eyler. Dr. Satterthwait said Mrs. Eyler was not in sympathy with the girls, but aggravated them more than anything else. The home-like influence which had prevailed in the school disappeared entirely upon Mrs. Eyler's arrival.

The witness stated that if Mrs. Eyler were a true woman the affairs at that school would at present be very different. Assemblyman Walklee quickly asked: "What do you mean by a true woman?" and was informed that a true woman was one who had a character and a reputation for truth and veracity.

Dr. Satterthwait declared that many cases of sickness in the institution had been caused by cruel treatment, in addition to being fed on bread and water for several weeks. The witness laid all the blame on the principal, and said there was a possibility of harmony existing at the school now because all the teachers were friends of Mrs. Eyler and would approve of the kind of treatment the girls would receive. When asked about Nettie Malone, who died in a Philadelphia hospital, the doctor said one ought to place the blame where it belonged, and that was on Mrs. Eyler.

"Why, Mrs. Eyler is not fit to run anything," said Dr. Satterthwait with PARENTS INSANE OR IN JAIL.

Mrs. Murr Will be Sent to Morris Plains and Murr Released to Support His Children.

Rev. Dr. Henry Hale Sleeper, rector of Grace Episcopal church, Elizabeth, accompanied by Miss Kremm, president of the Children's Aid Society, yesterday afternoon visited the home of Ernest Murr, at No. 53 Butler street, Elizabeth, who is in jail for thirty days for ill treating his wife.

Dr. Sleeper found that the woman was undoubtedly deranged and not fit to take care of herself. Steps will be taken at once to remove her to the Morris Plains Asylum. The eighteen-year old blind daughter will be placed in a charitable institution, and the other child will be taken into the Children's Home. Murr himself will be released from jail, in order that he may not lose his position, and he will be forced to provide for the support of his children.

DATE FOR CONVENTION

REPUBLICANS TO ELECT DELEGATES APRIL 19TH.

Silver Service, Costing $1,000, Presented to the Wife of Senator Sewell.

Trenton, March 7—The State Republican committee met here yesterday and set April 19th as the date for the convention to elect delegates to the Republican National convention. Gov. Voorhees sent a letter to the committee nominating Wm. Riker, Jr., as committeeman at-large to succeed the late Vice-President Hobart. United States Senators Sewell and Kean and State Chairman Franklin Murphy were present. The committee by a vote of 6 to 6 indorsed the Anti-Spring Election bill.

A $1,200 silver service of twenty-four pieces was presented to Senator Sewell. Congressman Loudenslager made the presentation. He paid a high tribute to Senator Sewell as a leader of his party. Senator Sewell was taken by surprise. In replying to Congressman Loudenslager's speech he said that in politics he had always tried to be fair. He was proud to say that he had two boys in the fight in Cuba and in the Philippines. He expressed thanks on behalf of Mrs. Sewell.

BIRTHDAY SOCIABLE.

Pleasant and Profitable Affair Given by Methodist Ladies' Aid Society.

Under the auspices of the Ladies' Aid Society of the First M. E. church a birthday sociable was given Tuesday in Vincent chapel. Despite the stormy weather there was a good attendance and the society received quite a sum for their treasury to help them in their work in the church. The forepart of the evening was devoted to an entertainment of much merit. It consisted of recitations by Miss Bertha Whitney, instrumental selections by Miss May Whitney, vocal solos by William Holmes, accompanied by Miss May Whitney, graphophone selections by Donald McGee, violin selections by Miss Wyatt and flute solos by Nabataro Tamaloki, of Tokio, who appeared in Japanese dress.

J. W. Jackson was in charge of the programme and announced the several numbers. After the entertainment refreshments were served and a social time was enjoyed. The affair was in charge of a committee composed of the following women: Mrs. J. M. McNaughton, chairman; Mrs. Whitney, Mrs. W. C. Snodgrass, Mrs. I. L. McVoy, Mrs. Templin, Mrs. C. H. Rugg, Miss Sharp, Mrs. Winters, Mrs. Pike, Mrs. Peck, Mrs. Nelson Miller, Mrs. Henry A. McGee, Mrs. Benjamin Mills, Mrs. Joseph Yerkes. To these women the credit for the success of the social is due.

SHUMWAY MUST LEAVE RUTGERS.

Trustees Sustain President Scott and Criticise Professor.

New Brunswick, March 7.—The trustees of Rutgers College yesterday accepted the resignation of Professor Shumway. It is to take effect June 1st, but his salary is to continue until October 1st. The committee of the faculty recommended the action.

The committee's report accused Professor Shumway of aiding in the preparation and circulation of the petition to members of the alumni. It was declared that this was indiscreet.

This action sustains President Scott, but hardly closes the incident, as the alumni declare that the strictures the report contains are unfair and will be resented.

Every one in this city looks for some startling demonstration on the part of the undergraduates within the next twenty-four hours.

Miss Carty, of Orchard place, has returned from a visit with out-of-town friends.

BOUND BROOK BLOCKS BIG HELLO COMPANY

Borough Council Fails to Advance Ordinance for Public Privileges.

COMMITTEE WON'T REPORT.

COUNCILMAN M'NABB SUCCEEDS IN HOLDING UP ORDINANCE.

Mayor and Majority of Council Looked Surprised Over Result, But They Could Not Prevent the Action.

Bound Brook, March 7.—Councilman McNabb took an active hand in the telephone war at the March meeting of the Borough Council last evening. It was expected that the ordinance granting the New York and New Jersey Telephone Company the right to establish an exchange here and erect poles in the streets would come up and there was a fair show that the ordinance would be passed. Councilman McNabb, who has been one of the bitterest enemies of the invading company, succeeded in temporarily blocking action. Meanwhile the big company is rapidly getting new subscribers and stringing its lines over private property.

For nearly a year the New York and New Jersey Telephone Company has been fighting a local concern. At first the greater company had but few advocates, but its advantages have been persistently put before the public until there is a decided feeling in favor of admitting the New Jersey company.

Three months ago an ordinance granting the company the right to erect poles in the borough was introduced. According to the State law the company has the right to put up poles on private property and string its wire across the highways. That is what has been done and an exchange established here in the Ross building. There are now twenty-three subscribers with the prospect of many more.

The ordinance was referred to the ordinance committee, of which McNabb is chairman. It was understood that the ordinance would be called up at the meeting of the Council last night. Mayor Richard Brokaw called upon the chairman of the ordinance committee to report the ordinance to the Council. Mr. McNabb refused. The rest of the Council looked surprised but that ended the subject for the meeting.

There may be a change before the next meeting, however, as the terms of Councilmen McNabb and Hastings expire this month and new Councilmen will be elected. It is understood that they will not be renominated. Both are strong opponents of the big company and their successors may be otherwise inclined. Action will therefore be deferred until the new Councilmen are elected.

LOW EBB OF BUILDING TRADE

Only Ten Permits Granted by Building Inspector Stone During Month of February.

The building trade was at its lowest ebb in February. There were a number of buildings to be completed but only two new houses were started during the month. Building Inspector T. O. Doane granted ten permits in February, eight of them for additions, repairs and small structures.

One of the new houses is a comfortable cottage that David Arthur, Jr., is building on West Fifth street, near Monroe avenue. W. H. Olum is the architect. The house will cost $1,800. The other is the new lodge at the Methodist cemetery on Plainfield avenue. It will cost $1,000, and is being built by Munday Brothers.

E. H. Holmes has had a new brick stable built by his coal yard on Madison avenue, and iron coal sheds erected. The other permits were for small structures and extensions.

"Old Nelse" Offers Peace.

Elizabeth, March 7.—Efforts are being made to secure the release of "Old Nelse" Davis, the man from Cranford who is accused of shooting at the trainmen of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad at Cranford. He says he will not shoot at the men any more if they will stop playing pranks on him by blowing whistles when they pass his house.

Played Quoits.

The game of quoits at the Hephosophs Tuesday between Weber and Nash, and Rose and Laing, resulted in favor of the first team by a score of 6 to 3. Charles Hepburn also defeated John P. D. Kirch five games out of nine.

BICYCLES RECOVERED; TWO LADS CAPTURED

Youthful Prisoners Are Charged With Stealing Two Wheels Monday Afternoon.

OTHER FOR STEALING FLOUR

POLICE FOUND THE BICYCLES, ONE OF WHICH WAS WRECKED.

Two of Youngsters Before Justice Nash Yesterday — Alfred Talbert and George VanNest Held For Stealing Wheels.

The two bicycles stolen in this city Monday afternoon have been recovered by the police. Two little lads, Alfred Talbert, aged fourteen years, and George VanNest, aged ten years, are held responsible for the theft. Justice Nash sent the boys to Elizabeth yesterday to await the action of the Grand Jury.

It will be remembered that the two wheels were stolen Monday afternoon, one from the piazza of the home of Miss Ada Marsh, of Franklin place, and the other from the rear of the residence of John F. Harman, of West Seventh street. They belonged to Miss Booth, of Central avenue and the young son of Mr. and Mrs. Townsend Bushmore, of West Seventh street.

A neighbor saw two small boys lead away the wheel stolen from the Marsh residence. The police were informed and traced the two lads to Mountain avenue. All Monday night the police searched the eastern end of the city to find the wheels. At last the police were informed that young George VanNest had been seen with a strange wheel.

Tuesday the police went after Alfred Talbert and VanNest. Chief Grant and Boundsman Frederickson hunted through the West End and captured Talbert at his home. VanNest escaped. One of the wheels was found in a yard at the corner of Central avenue and West Second street. It was alleged that VanNest and Talbert had taken a small amount of money away from a lad there and that his mother had taken possession of the wheel until the money should be returned.

This wheel proved to be the one owned by the Bushmores and was taken home by the police. The other one, the boys said, they had thrown under the Sycamore avenue bridge. Another boy had found it there and taken it to his home in the West End. Roundsman Frederickson recovered that one. The front forks were dropped. It was returned to Miss Booth.

Roundsman Flynn and Patrolman Totten captured young VanNest at midnight. He did not return home after he learned that the police wanted him, but went to sleep in a barn in that neighborhood. There the police found him and brought him down to the station house.

The youthful culprits were arraigned before Justice Nash yesterday and were committed to the county jail to await the action of the Grand Jury. It is expected that an attempt will be made to have them sent to the Reform School.

Joseph Wisniewski, a 14-year-old boy was arrested yesterday in a barn with the VanNest boy. The police say that Joseph is a bad boy. He was charged with stealing five bags of flour from the mill of A. J. Cadmus on South Second street, and also with helping himself to a quantity of bread tickets belonging to Paul Reusch, a Dunellen baker. The tickets were taken from a coat in Mr. Reusch's cart. The flour was taken in the daytime. Each sack contained twenty-five pounds of flour. Mr. Cadmus thought the flour had been stolen at night, and was surprised when the accused boy admitted that he had taken the flour from the mill in the daytime when the employes were in another part of the mill.

Justice Nash committed them to the Elizabeth jail to await the action of the Grand Jury.

Captain Grant took the trio of thieves to the county seat yesterday morning.

Death of an Old Farmer.

William Harrison Stiles, aged 76 years, one of the oldest residents of Oceantown, died at his home there last Tuesday after a short illness with the grip. He was born at Mt. Bethel. He was the father of Alex. and Morgan Stiles, of the borough. He followed the pursuit of farming most of his life. Four sons survive him. The funeral services will be held Friday afternoon next from the Mt. Bethel church at 2 o'clock.

Mrs. A. B. Meredith, of Madison avenue, is confined to her home with illness.

REED'S BILL FOR TAX REFORM PASSED

Senate Adopts Senator Reed's Measure, Which Seeks to Equalize Assessments.

THE CO-INSURANCE CLAUSE

SOMERSET SENATOR GETS THIS MEASURE THROUGH THE SENATE.

Slight Trouble in Passing Amendments to State Sewerage Bill—Hearing Held on the General School Bill.

Trenton, March 7—There was a long discussion yesterday in the Senate over Senator Reed's bill to equalize tax assessments. The measure gives Boards of Freeholders the privilege of applying to the county court for the appointment of a county board of commissioners, who shall have power to equalize assessments. Senator Reed explained that the present method of having the assessors come together annually in each county and equalize the assessment was cumbersome and unsatisfactory. The bill was not mandatory, and no county need accept it.

Senator McDermott, of Hudson, said he favored the bill. Senator Francis thought it should be mandatory that the public might quickly get the benefit of the reform. Senator Johnson, the President of the Senate, left the chair, and explained that he was the author of the bill. He said it had been prepared to relieve the situation in Bergen county, where there are sixty-six assessors, and where many abuses had crept into the present system.

Senator Martin, of Sussex, opposed the act on the ground that in the smaller counties the present system was working well. He thought three men would be unable to do such work. The measure passed by a vote of 14 to 2.

Senator Reed's co-insurance bill also passed the Senate. This measure is designed to prevent false pretenses of fire insurance companies, and provides that when a policy is issued on the co-insurance plan a clause shall be inserted to that effect, naming a reduction in rate.

There was some slight trouble experienced in having amendments passed to the State sewerage bill. The amendments were mainly of technical character and in no way altered the main purpose of the bill. The proposed law does not apply to inter-State streams unless used for potable water. It ex-empts the Hudson River and the Mill Pon Kill, but includes the Delaware River, which will be inspected by the commission as soon as the act is passed. The bill making it unlawful for any one to practice law without having been regularly admitted was subsequently passed.

Senator Johnson's bill to prevent any one who is not legally admitted to the Bar of this State from declaring himself to be a lawyer passed the Senate this morning. This bill is a copy of the Pennsylvania law, and was introduced at the request of two prominent Camden lawyers.

There was a hearing yesterday afternoon before the Senate committee on education on the general school bill fathered by Senator Stokes. Several speakers favored the bill's general outlines. Considerable opposition developed to the section providing for elective instead of appointive Boards of Education. The committee was urged to amend the bill by adding a referendum clause, so that the respective municipalities affected might suit themselves in the matter. There will be another hearing on this bill next Wednesday.

DIED SEATED IN A CHAIR.

William Hume Was a Leader in the Old Greenback Party.

Elizabeth, March 7—William Hume, aged sixty-six, one of the prominent leaders of the old Greenback party in New Jersey, died suddenly shortly before noon yesterday while sitting in a chair at the residence of his daughter, Mrs. Robert N. Earl, 230 Murray street, Elizabeth.

Mr. Hume ran for State Senator and also for Mayor of Elizabeth on the Greenback ticket. He was originally a Republican, and was a native of Canada. He was a widower and leaves one daughter.

Ex-Senator Chase Sues for Divorce.

New Brunswick, March 7.—A suit was filed at Trenton yesterday by ex-Senator Daniel C. Chase, of South Amboy, for a divorce from his wife, Emma E. Case. Leonard Furman, now serving his second term as Surrogate of Middlesex county, is named as correspondent.

Col. Julian Scott, of West Front street, has been visiting Newark friends.

PIANO RECITAL.

Pupils of Prof. Janke Played for an Audience of Friends Last Tuesday.

The pupils of E. Arthur Janke, pianist, gave a very successful recital at Mr. Janke's studio, 321 West Sixth street, last evening. An audience composed of the parents and friends of the pupils listened to an excellent programme with much interest. Those who took part were the Misses Florence Beebe, Florence Cahoone, Mary Graves, Maisy Day and Rose Woltmann. Miss Clyde Burnet was to have taken part as well but illness prevented her attendance. She is one of Mr. Janke's most accomplished pupils.

The various selections, which included the works of many of the great masters, were rendered in a way to respect much credit on both instructor and pupil.

DEMOCRATS ORGANIZING

SOMERVILLE PARTISANS WILL FORM A BIG CLUB.

Meeting Addressed by Jas. E. Martine —Delivered Characteristic Democratic Speech.

Somerville, March 7.—The Democrats of Somerville met at Somerset Hall last night to organize a club. Geo. P. Norton called the meeting to order, Walter Durling was elected chairman and Peter VanCleef secretary. The chairman was authorized to appoint committees, which he will do in a few days.

Hon. James J. Bergen made a brief address. He scored the Republicans for allowing corporate control of judgeships, saying that Judge Childs was turned down at the behest of corporations.

James E. Martine, of Plainfield, was then called upon, and for fifty minutes filled the hall with his eloquence. He opened with an apt illustration of the power of organization. He then scored the trusts and said trusts-ridden as the State is. He frequently referred to William J. Bryan, and pictured the Nebraskan in glowing colors. He said that Bryan would be nominated at Kansas City by acclamation before the roll-call of States. He referred to McKinley as a good man, but said he was controlled by Mark Hanna. He touched up the Porto Rico tariff business and promised the workingmen prosperity and happiness if Bryan was elected. He was frequently greeted with applause.

A vote of thanks was extended to him and the meeting adjourned, subject to the call of the chairman.

Y. M. C. A. WORK.

Largely Attended and Interesting Conference of Officers and Committees.

Forty-one persons, representing the various city churches, were present at the Y. M. C. A. last Tuesday on the occasion of the annual conference of directors and committeemen of the local association. President Cahoone presided. Reports were received from the different departments of the work and many excellent suggestions were made along the lines of religion, educational, library, foreign missions, boys' work, entertainment, membership, etc. Among the interesting subjects discussed was that in relation to the work in smaller towns and its bearing upon the efforts of the city. The local committee, of which H. Andrews, chairman of the State committee, led in this discussion, and told briefly how much assistance had been given in this direction.

The conference is believed to have been of much benefit to those interested in the work of the Y. M. C. A.

Active Members of Hillside Club.

The Hillside Tennis and Golf Club trustees have elected the following active members: Miss Josephine H. Lapsley, Messrs. Walter Gaston, Charles S. Foote, Martin E. Hebert, Jose A. Machado, William D. W. Miller and Lucius C. Ryce; also the following associate members: Mrs. Charles S. Foote, Mrs. Walter Gaston, Mrs. Jose A. Machado, Mrs. Lucius C. Ryce, Miss Jennie P. Hebert, Miss Elizabeth C. Hebert and Howard G. Lapsley.

Dr. Richards to Lecture.

The members of the Primary Teachers' Union have succeeded in securing Dr. W. R. Richards, of the Crescent Avenue church, to give his lecture on his recent trip to Palestine. It will be given Monday evening, March 19th, and probably in the First Baptist church.

Rode Without a Light.

Westley Brokaw was stopped Monday evening for riding his wheel at night without a light by Patrolman McCarty and ordered to appear before the City Judge. He has not shown up as yet.

Rev. G. W. Gardner, of Park place, is greatly improved from an attack of the grip.

WANT MR. MARTINE AS ONE OF THE "BIG FOUR"

"Farmer Orator's" Name Will Be Urged for Selection as Delegate-at-Large.

HIS RECORD IS CONSISTENT.

HAS BEEN A LOYAL AND DEVOTED "REGULAR" THROUGHOUT.

His Selection Would Give Satisfaction to the Rank and File of the Party—Friends Will Push His Name.

The question of what Democrats in New Jersey shall be selected to represent the State in the National Democratic convention, which will convene in Kansas City July 4th, is regarded as a knotty one to solve to the satisfaction of all elements of the party. It is a matter of political history of the State that the delegation representing New Jersey in the Chicago convention in 1896 walked out of the convention when the free silver plank was put into the platform. To the minds of the almost pure Democrats who respect the decision of the recognized organizations above all things else, this unusual conduct on the part of the delegates was an action that has rankled their political souls ever since.

While there is a desire for party harmony and unanimity of action among all who have played the part of big or little leaders, there is a growing sentiment among the devoted followers of Col. William J. Bryan and the principles he advocates that when the time comes for choosing the delegates who will represent the party in New Jersey at the Kansas City convention, that there should be men chosen who can be depended upon to represent what appears to be the dominant sentiment among the rank and file of the party.

There has been considerable talk among the out-spoken Bryan men that the New Jersey delegation should be made of men who are consistent believers and advocates of the principles of the Chicago convention, and not of men who violently opposed those tenets of the party four years ago, but since then, for the sake of political expediency and prestige, have changed their opinions and are now presumably "regular."

In the talk about men of whose regularity and loyalty there can be no question, there is one name that is almost unconsciously suggested at the first thought. That is the name of James E. Martine, familiarly known as "The Farmer Orator" throughout the State of New Jersey. Mr. Martine's Democracy has never been of a faltering or swerving kind. In the campaign of 1896 Mr. Martine was about the only Democrat of any prominence in this section of New Jersey that came out boldly for Bryan the moment he was nominated, and throughout that campaign he worked persistently and against great odds to win votes for the Nebraskan. As no time has there ever been any doubt about his opinions or devotion in the political world. He has been consistent and aggressive throughout.

Thus it is that the friends of Mr. Martine are beginning to mention the name of Mr. Martine as one of those who should go to Kansas City as a member of the New Jersey delegation. Not as a district delegate, however, but as one of the "Big Four" representing the State at-large. Mr. Martine's friends believe that when it comes to the distribution of honors in the Democratic party there are none who are more entitled to them than he is, and especially in relation to a leading place in the New Jersey delegation to what will be one of the most notable political conventions in the history of the country.

The sequence of political events in this State, it is argued, are such that the "Farmer Orator" is bound to be one of the leading spirits in the Presidential campaign, and it will be but fitting to have him elected as one of the delegates-at-large when the State convention for that purpose is held.

Between now and the time of holding the convention for the selection of delegates to go the National convention, the friends of Mr. Martine in several sections of the State will do their utmost to secure for him the honor to represent New Jersey as one of the "Big Four."

The Population of Hawaii a Badly Mixed Multitude

Thousands of the Orientals in the Islands Know Nothing of Sanitary Laws

FRACTIONS and hyphens are necessary to describe nationalities in Hawaii. For instance, here is a real case: John Symonds, an American, married Palo Tana, part Hawaiian and part Tahitian. Their daughter, Eunice Nahenahi Symonds, married Ah Wing, a Chinaman. Their daughter, Ellen Keonano, married Manuel Silva, a Portuguese. They now have a child. What is it?

It makes the brain whirl to try to work it out, and it will take steadier ones than ours to reach the last step, and there are dozens of such cases.

People in Hawaii are characterized as haoles (whites), hapa-haoles (half whites), white Portuguese and black Portuguese, some being from the Madeira isles, some from Africa, where there is a mixture with the negroes; as Japs, as Pakes (Hindoos) and as South Sea Islanders. All these help constitute the classification. Besides the above there are a few negroes and other strays, who do not count much in number or importance to the country.

STREET CORNER IN CHINATOWN, HONOLULU.

The whites, generally speaking, are of good class and make creditable citizens, as they desire and abide by laws that will be for the good of their children. The half whites adopt the customs and fashions of the whites, and form a large and intelligent part of the community. Out there we speak of the white man and the Portuguese as though the latter were not of the Caucasian race. I think there are two reasons for it; one I have spoken of, a number of African Portuguese who are much like the negroes in appearance; and the fact that all the Portuguese are manual laborers. The Hawaiians do not associate the white man with the hoe—think grubbing belongs to the colored races. The Portuguese is a good citizen, is thrifty, hard-working and comparatively peaceable. He and his family live in a picturesque cottage, surrounded by a bit of land cultivated to the last degree, every inch made to yield fruit, flower or vegetable. He and his wife and chicks are not fond of water, do not often bathe, but still, as American has a soft snap, as easy job, that he spends his time in counting his money and wheedling the natives, would better live in Hawaii awhile and find out.

And yet it is a certain class of white men on whose lies much of the blame for the spread of the plague that lately has worked such ruin in the beautiful city of Honolulu. The orientals rented their shacks of landlords who pocketed their gains with little heed to the welfare of their ignorant tenants, who were allowed to swarm in buildings whose living-rooms were directly over cess pools. Dr. Wood, president of the board of health in Honolulu, recently said it was localities rather than persons that were infected with the bubonic bacilli; that he would rather sleep in the bed of a plague patient than walk barefoot in the soil of Chinatown.

In the country the Chinaman lives near, or on, his damp rice fields or banana patches, and wherever there is most likelihood of malaria or miasma he builds his hut. He courts foulness, wallows in mire. In the city, crowded huts or tenements are built as close as possible, and as many Celestials as can infest these warrens. They live, sleep, eat and die in rooms where the atmosphere is visible, audible and odoriferous. The Chinaman is a dense utilitarian, and thinks space valuable only when it brings him returns in money. What ground there is under and about his house is piled high with years' accumulations of trash. The wonder is not that pest John is ever visited by filth diseases, but that his quarter is ever exempt. In 1895 cholera worked havoc in these slums, which had long been a disgrace to the otherwise progressive town, and then town went registered that in the future the district should be kept clean. But the lesson was soon forgotten, and before long the conditions were as bad as ever.

When the Chinatown had often been spoken of in Honolulu, the question of how to improve and purify the place had often been discussed, but as a whole it continued a breeding place for disease and misery, and the only thing that could purify it seemed to be a wholesale conflagration, a wiping out of the entire place. And at last that has come to pass.

We have been watching for weeks the progress of the dread plague in Honolulu, from the time the first case, that of a Chinaman, was discovered, up to the time when deaths numbered almost half a hundred, when the whole country was harassed and ships were allowed neither to enter nor depart from the port of Honolulu. When the danger became very grave, then it was the government decided that safety lay in the purification by fire. The torch was applied and the entire block of squalid dens was swallowed up in flames. May this dream of a Honolulu editor be realized: "After the whole evil surface has been soaked with kerosene and fired, let the place receive the air and rain and sunshine for a year and then, through the extension of the fire limits and an improvement in the building laws, let them compel the recreation of a Chinatown that will be a credit to it as sanitary as a section of Boston Common."

Eye Pictures.

A good deal has recently been written about "eye pictures," and lovers of novelty have been making collections of photographs of the drawings in single eye of some friend. But nothing is done under the sun, not even the latest of late fads. Long ago, the duke of Sussex developed a fancy for eye pictures. The camera wasn't in ubiquitous then as now, and, even if it had been, the dandy eyebrow would have been elevated in scorn at the idea of anything so common as a collection of photographs. The duke employed the most noted miniature painter of his day to paint the eyes for his collection. Each one was painted on ivory and set in a circle of pearls. A number of the miniatures now belong to Queen Victoria, and the rest are in private collections throughout England.—N. Y. Sun.

BRIGHT YOUNG MAN.

J. C. W. Beckham, Democratic Governor of Kentucky, Comes of Distinguished Stock.

J. C. W. Beckham, who was declared governor of Kentucky by the democracy of his state immediately after the demise of William E. Goebel, is a young man, having been born August 5, 1869, at Bardstown, Ky. His father was William N. Beckham, and his mother Julia T. Wickliffe, daughter of Gov. Charles A. Wickliffe, former chief executive of the state. His earliest education was received in a private school in Bardstown. In the legislative session of 1881 and 1882 he acted as a page in the house of representatives. In January, 1884, he entered Central Union college, of Richmond, Va., graduating in 1888.

Immediately after leaving college Mr. Beckham began the study of law, and while pursuing his work in this direction acted as principal of the Bardstown high school for three years. In 1893 he began the practice of law on his own account in Bardstown. He was elected a member of the Kentucky house of representatives in 1893. He declined to be a candidate at the next term, but the representative who succeeded him having dropped out, Mr. Beckham accepted the position and served the unexpired term. He was reelected in 1897 and made speaker of the house in 1898.

In 1899 he was nominated for lieutenant governor on the same ticket with William Goebel at the Louisville convention.

In person, Gov. Beckham is of slight physique and of a somewhat boyish appearance. He is gifted with exceedingly pleasant manners and is very popular personally with all who know him.

MAKES TRAINING PAY.

How John H. Lake Keeps in Racing Form and Makes a Living Grinding Skates.

A queer contrivance for the training of bicyclists is that invented by John H. Lake, of Richmond terrace, Port Richmond, S. I. The machine was constructed so that he might be in position to train during the winter months, thereby enabling him to keep in condition for bicycle races in which he participates, entering at the Philadelphia within a few weeks. To obviate loss of energy in his training he has erected a stationary stand in the window of his store, to which is fastened his bicycle. From the rear wheel he has connected a belt with an old bicycle hub, on one end of which is so cured a four-inch pulley and at the other end an emery wheel about six inches in diameter.

From seven o'clock to nine o'clock every evening Mr. Lake may be seen pedaling on his peculiar invention, while his partner is busily engaged in grinding skates, scissors and knives, much to the amusement of the merry villagers who congregate in front of his window.

Mr. Lake is required to pedal a distance of about one and a half miles in order to sharpen one pair of skates. His bicycle is geared at 132 and has a 26-inch rear wheel. When pedaling moderately the emery wheel is driven at a speed of about 3,500 revolutions to the minute, but when pedaling at a racing speed the revolutions of the wheel are increased to 5,000 a minute.

Mr. Lake, says the New York Herald, is one of the crack riders of the Harlem Wheelmen and has captured a great many trophies for the club, which, if he had been, the Quad cyebrow would have been elevated in scorn at the idea of anything so common as a collection of photographs. The duke employed the most noted miniature painter of his day to paint the eyes for his collection. Each one was painted on ivory and set in a circle of pearls. A number of the miniatures now belong to Queen Victoria, and the rest are in private collections throughout England.—N. Y. Sun.

BICYCLES and MOTORS

THIS YEAR'S BICYCLES.

Commendable Features Noticed in the Exhibits at the Recent New York Show.

Some of the striking features in the new styles of wheels that will be on the streets and roads with the opening of the coming cycle season are thus noted by the writer in selling of the annual cycle exhibition at Madison square, New York:

One thing that the show seems to demonstrate is that the low crank hanger craze and the short head fad have had their day, and are beginning to recast. There is, in fact, a commendable absence of the faddism that confused seekers after the truly best by introducing features of no proven value simply for the sake of exciting interest. There are no specimens of "curlycue" tubing and a task of the "hexagonal," "spiral" and "ovoid" oddities in this line which have made big pretensions at previous exhibitions. There is something of what might be called freakishness in enameling, such as the idea of giving the headpost and the diagonal strut one color and another color to the rest of the wheel, but this, when it is done, has been handled in a way that finds favor in many eyes. There are no wheels striped like barber poles, however. The striping idea has been transferred to the rims, which in many cases have been made to look handsome by thin stripes in the middle and along the outer edges. Options in color are given by practically all the makers, but the array of wheels is free from a considerable of the grandiosos that has been seen. The long cranks and the moderately high gears prevail, but the inclination toward overdoing these features seems to have been checked. The general length of the crank on the "stock models" of road wheels is seven inches, with options in smaller figures. It is noteworthy, though, that a paris maker who supplies many makers catalogues 7½ and 8-inch cranks as regular stock, so that the experimental riders who wish to follow the fad that was started in England can be supplied.

The changed conditions of manufacture that have tended toward making wheels look alike and yet have been truly improving quality are noticeable in the number of concerns that are using such parts as cranks and sprockets made by the same specialists in these branches. The progress of the parts makers is well emphasized. The fact that factories in which all responses are devoted to making a few things with special machinery can often produce a better and cheaper article than a factory that makes only one for its own wheels has apparently been impressed upon many makers of the highest reputation. In respect to hubs and spokes and the fastenings of the latter, there is much that is original and distinctive. One bright idea is found in the wheel of a western maker, who has a flange on the inside of the large sprocket from the rear hub in order to put in a new spoke by making the hub flange on the sprocket side with button-hole slots, so that the spokes can be hitched in and drawn up taut easily.

VERY LATEST TIRE.

It Differs Widely from Those Now in Use Both in Construction and Materials Used.

The newest and most radical departure in improvements connected with bicycles and automobiles is a tire constructed of rubber disks 3-16 inch thick and 7-16 inch apart, held in place by three ribs at the tread and securely vulcanized to the case. The 3-8 inch hole at the bottom of the disks near the rim receive the weights, giving the necessary spring and taking the spread of the tire away from the tread, giving only the 1¾-inch running surface at the tread. This tire is made in all sizes, and carries all weights by adjusting itself instantly by using only the number of disks necessary to carry the weight. Using the best quality of rubber and only a single piece of fabric, this tire must have all the life and resiliency possible to obtain from rubber. Having no valve, there is no use for pumps and tools to repair. The tire needs no attention, and is as durable as any other part of a bicycle.—Cincinnati Commercial Tribune.

The Latest Cycling Disease.

Bicycling-knee is the latest cycling disease to which doctors are turning their attention. According to the medical papers, a number are afflicted. It is a pain something like gout, that attacks the knee joint above the patella and comes on gradually. It is usually felt after a ride is finished. The cause is, naturally, excessive cycling, probably by people who have not taken to the pastime till they were well on in years and have muscles fairly set. One of the most distressing things is to see small boys and girls struggling along on bicycles that are much too large for them. Their muscles are overstrained and the youngsters, prizing themselves by their powers, think nothing of exerting themselves much beyond their physical strength. Indeed, even with a bicycle of proper size, children should be allowed to ride only occasionally, for wheeling undoubtedly gives great exercise to one set of muscles and in no way helps the others.

A CLEVER DIPLOMAT.

Dr. Leyds, General Agent of the Transvaal in Europe.

Gifted with a Persuasive Tongue and Quite Capable of Proving a Match for the Most Experienced of Old World Statesmen.

Dr. W. J. Leyds, the general agent of the Transvaal in Europe, is one of the shrewdest—and, his enemies say, the most corrupt—of the coterie of politicians thrown to the surface in the stirring history of the South African republic. Leyds, although of Dutch descent, is not, properly speaking, a Boer. He is a lawyer of learning and of European education, and in all respects capable of conserving his own interests and those of his country in the peculiar position he now occupies.

Intrusted with the delicate mission of visiting the German emperor and securing from him recognition of the independence of the South African republic, he succeeded admirably in this work. Emperor William gave him a decoration and otherwise honored him. Whatever friendly feeling there may be at the Berlin court for President Kruger is due directly to the excellent and judicious representation of Dr. Leyds.

It is surprising and interesting to find that early in his career a politician this astute diplomat and schemer was guilty of an error which, had it not been for Oom Paul's prevision and sagacity, might have cut short the prosperity of the future statesman.

Kruger appointed the young lawyer attorney general of the republic. While he was in office he wrote to a friend in Holland describing the personalities of the members of the executive. President Kruger he characterized as an ignorant, narrow-minded, pig-headed and irascible old Boer, whom Leyds said he could play with and twist round his fingers as he liked. Genu, Joubert and Smit were handled with even less courtesy. Leyds quarreled with his correspondent in Holland, and the latter made his letter public.

The two generals were furious. They openly demanded the instant dismissal of the "conceited young fool." President Kruger was deaf—literally and metaphorically—to their importunities. He said Leyds was a very capable young man who would learn more as he grew older. He not only retained him in office, but personally explained to him that he would be kept near the throne so long as it suited the president's convenience so to do. In the ten years that have passed since the incident Leyds has been closer to Kruger than any other man in Transvaal politics.

Dr. Leyds' position as agent extraordinary covers a multiplicity of functions. Vast sums of money are intrusted to him to carry on the work of the republic in Europe, and he is the sole responsible accounter for these funds. He is described as a man of peculiarly strong personal power, gifted with a persuasive tongue and quite capable of proving a match for the oldest diplomats of Europe. Much of this ability has been doubtless cultivated by President Kruger, who saw in the rash young lawyer the promise of a powerful and very useful future.

Railroads Distributed Seeds.

It has been noticed that many plants, not natives of the locality, are to be found growing in the neighborhood of great railroad yards. Sometimes the seeds of these plants have been brought thousands of miles from their natural habitat. Often they flourish amid their new surroundings, and gradually spread over the surrounding country. Thus the railroads carry unsuspected emigrants, which travel to and from every point of the compass. In the Mississippi valley are to be found plants which, within a few months, have been brought together, some from the Atlantic seaboard, some from the gulf region, and some from the other side of the Rocky mountains.

How Prunes Are "Sized."

Prunes are sold in three sizes. The largest size is called the thirty to forties. This means that thirty to forty of the largest prunes weigh a pound. The medium size is forty to fifty, and the small size fifty to sixty. The largest prunes are of course the most valuable. The average price the growers get for their prunes is 3½ cents a pound. An orchard of 200 trees will yield a grower an average profit of $400 a year. An acre will grow about 100 trees, planted with the proper distances between them. The trees bear the third year after planting, and live from ten to twenty years. French prunes pay the best.

England as a Market for American Products

More Than One Half of All Our Agricultural Exports Are Sold to the United Kingdom

WHERE do we sell our agricultural products that we ship abroad? The question might be well answered by saying: "To the United Kingdom."

While we glory in the extension of markets for American products, and point with pride to every shipload that is shipped to new fields, yet England continues to be our staple market, and pays to us more money for agricultural products bought than all the rest of the world together. Nor is this statement the result of an exceptional year, but a statement that can be proven by any year since 1896. During the years from 1894 to 1898 the United Kingdom purchased 54.62 per cent. of all our agricultural exports, while Germany, which comes second in the percentage list, purchased but 13.01 per cent. of our exports in these lines, and France, in third place, took but 6.62 per cent. of our agricultural exports.

The total value of the United States agricultural exports amounted to $813,307,942, and of this the United Kingdom purchased $483,858,302, Germany, $119,629,729; France, $78,327,096; the Netherlands, $41,808,324; Belgium, $38,856,535; Canada, $32,363,807; Italy, $18,432,524, and so on down through a long list of smaller figures.

In the total value of agricultural exports during the years 1896 to 1898 an increase in value from $656,633,767 in 1896 to $858,307,942 in 1898, a gain of $201,674,195, is shown by recent reports of the agricultural department.

The countries of destination that contributed most to this increase were the United Kingdom, Germany, France, Belgium, Canada, the Netherlands, Japan, Italy, Denmark and British Africa.

Our exports of farm produce to the United Kingdom increased $97,288,451 during the five years, advancing from $356,056,251 in 1894 to $453,555,105 in 1898. This was decidedly the largest gain recorded, although the shipments both to Germany and France showed an important growth. In the case of Germany there was an advance from $78,994,994 in 1894 to $119,629,729 in 1898, and of France from $41,911,269 to $78,327,096. The gain for the former country was $40,441,338, and that for the latter, $36,415,826.

After these three leading nations, Belgium was credited with the largest increase. Our shipments to Belgium ports rose from $21,808,491 in 1894 to $38,856,353 in 1898, a gain of $14,955,464. The next largest growth, amounting to $11,276,823, occurred in our exports to Canada, which advanced from $21,086,983 to $32,363,992. The Netherlands followed with a gain of $9,943,449, our shipments to that country amounting to $41,808,324 in 1898, as compared with only $31,864,875 four years before. Our agricultural exports to Japan, although much smaller than those to the Netherlands, grew so rapidly that the total gains made were nearly as great. From only $655,251 in 1894 the shipments to Japan rose to $9,909,816 in 1898, showing an increase of $9,154,565. In the case of Italy there was a gain of $6,903,629, our consignments to that country advancing from $10,824,895 to $17,728,524. An exceptionally rapid growth was recorded in the exports to Denmark, which rose from $4,215,159 to $10,276,915, the increase being $6,061,756. There was also an important gain, amounting to $4,750,023, in the case of British Africa, the shipments to that destination increasing from $1,501,534 to $6,297,857.

Among the countries to which American farm products were sent in diminished amounts were Spain and Cuba. In years, Spain was the most noticeable. Our agricultural exports to Spain, which were valued at $11,785,497 in 1894, fell to less than $10,000,000 in the years 1895, 1896 and 1897, and in 1898 amounted only to $5,621,196, a decline of $6,164,301 for the five years. During the last two months of the fiscal year 1898 the trade was interrupted by the war.

Our shipments of agricultural products to Cuba also suffered a marked falling off, more particularly during 1895 and 1896. In 1894 they were valued at $9,313,394, but in 1897 they declined to $6,168,738, and in 1898 fell as low as $3,974,875. The following year they rose to $4,678,482, and in 1898 to $6,762,712. The exports for 1899, however, were less by $2,749,592 than those for 1894.

Exports of farm produce from the United States to European Russia showed a steady decline from 1894 to 1898, the value amounting to only $3,302,933 in the latter year as compared with $8,694,896 in the former. This was a falling off of $5,391,963.

There was also a considerable decline in our shipments to Portugal, the record for 1898, which was only $2,840,167, being $1,904,736 less than that for 1894, which amounted to $4,544,842.

The only other instance of a falling off in excess of $1,000,000 was furnished by Hayti. Our agricultural exports to that island during the five years showed a decrease of $1,275,329, dropping from $2,839,214 in 1894 to $1,563,885 in 1898.

ENGLAND AS A MARKET FOR AMERICAN BACON.

Not only does England buy more than one-half of the total of our agricultural products, but she leads in almost every line. The few exceptions are in the products of minor importance or in lines which forbid of ocean transportation. As, for instance, Mexico buys more live hogs than does England, Cuba buys more fresh eggs, mules and fowls, Germany buys more beeswax and crude feathers, Canada buys more hides and skins, the British West Indies buys more oleomargarine and the Netherlands more oleo-oil. Germany buys more sausage skins, Canada buys more raw wool, the British West Indies buys more bread and cake, Cuba more lard, the Netherlands the Netherlands buy more buckwheat, Germany buys more rye and the British West Indies more rye flour and Canada buys more grass seeds. But in the other, and more important lines, England maintains so great a lead that a comparison with any one nation would be of but little value.

Of American cattle the United Kingdom took in 1898 378,956, while Cuba, her nearest competitor, took but 6,196; of sheep the United Kingdom took 22,129, and Canada, her nearest competitor, took but 9,413; of sheep the United Kingdom took 143,178, while Canada, her nearest competitor again, took but 46,376; of fresh beef the United Kingdom took 20,763,121 pounds—the smallest amount in the four years—while Germany, her nearest competitor, took but 5,669,603 pounds; of fresh beef the United Kingdom took 274,124,536 pounds, while Belgium, her nearest competitor, took but 437,646 pounds; of bacon the United Kingdom took 473,251,652 pounds, while Belgium, her nearest competitor, took but 47,326,441 pounds; of what the United Kingdom took 36,041,289 bushels, while France, her nearest competitor, took but 36,041,289 bushels. These items but serve to illustrate the extent of our agricultural exports to the United Kingdom in comparison with our exports to other nations of the world, and prove that England offers the greatest market for our rapidly increasing surplus of agricultural products.

Elaborate Shirt Waists

Will Be a Feature of Coming Seasons

A Description of a Few of Those That Are Being Shown in the New York Wholesale Houses at This Early Day

FASHION designers have for several seasons attempted to decry the shirt waist and have it discarded as a feature of the spring and summer wardrobe, but without success, for to-day the shirt waist promises to be a more important feature than ever of these two coming seasons.

"If one could judge from the buying, even at this early date," said a wholesale merchant to me the other day, "one would say that shirt waists are to be the greatest feature of the coming seasons. But they will not be entirely the shirt waists that we have known in past seasons. Previously we have made a distinction between the elaborate affairs of silks, satins, chiffons and mousseline de soies and the cheaper materials of the summer waists, but this year the summer waists are being called for with all the elaborateness that it is possible to put on them. They embrace the most elaborate arrangements of laces, silks, braidings, insertions, velvets and the new mousselines and &c. Gall embroideries designed in all manner of artistic and attractive forms.

"There are, however, just as stunning styles to be found in the imported and finer domestic cottons. The sleeves are being finished in several new forms, in many cases similar to the styles worn by men and cut perpendicular when the patterns are striped. These shirt waists are made to wear with coats and the new Eton jackets. They are also seen in every variety and pattern of percale and French cambrics, and some of the linen styles are being made with link cuffs, and sometimes with collar attached."

The same merchant took great pains in displaying for me some of the pattern waists he is using as samples for the buyers throughout the country who are just now visiting New York in large numbers.

Among them was one made of all-over renaissance lace and net. This is made perfectly plain to display the superb lace pattern, and is fastened down the back with small gold buttons. It is worn over a slip of turquoise blue silk, and has a high pointed collar and tight-fitting sleeves that finish at the wrist in deep scallops.

Another has a white summer shirt waist made of French lawn with a deep pointed yoke of French embroidery, the lower portion being of the French lawn in fine tucks and made with a finish at the top in deep scallops, with a lovely French insertion to finish. The sleeves are tucked crosswise, and have three rows of the French insertion, with a deep pointed flaring cuff of French embroidery, and a high collar. It is fastened down the back with crochet buttons.

Another white one is of French lawn made with clusters of three tucks, then a lovely hemstitched piece. The sleeves have clusters of tucks and the hemstitching, with a hemstitched turnover cuff and a high turn-over collar.

One of white linen had six rows of hemstitched tucks, and real valenciennes insertion on each side, then six more of the tucks. This waist fastens down the front with a narrow ruffle of the linen lawn on a double box plait edged with narrow valenciennes lace. The sleeves are entirely covered with small tucks, and fall long over the hand in a V.

One of white silk is made with a double box plait down the front and handsomely appliqued in white silk and gold. On each side are clusters of three tucks, and a short bolero of the white silk with a handsome applique of the white and gold. The sleeves are perfectly plain with a small applique design of the white and gold falling over the hand in a deep ripple. It has a high pointed collar entirely covered with the white and gold applique.

Another of the more elaborate ones is of turquoise blue silk and chiffon. Of this the entire yoke and pointed vest are of tucked chiffon, with the turquoise blue at each side, and with small pointed revers of the blue with an accordion plaiting edging of the chiffon. A crushed girdle of turquoise blue velvet, and tight fitting sleeves with deep vandykes at the wrists where underneath falls a deep ruching of the chiffon. A high collar of the velvet, with a wee ruching of the chiffon on each side.

Another elaborate one is of yellow silk with pipings of old rose velvet. It is made with a double box plait with the velvet piping down the front, a crushed girdle of the velvet and a high tucked collar of the same. The sleeves are tight fitting and fall over the hand in a V with three pipings of the velvet and a narrow tucked velvet band just below the elbow.

Apropos of the new fashions, the plaited skirts have gained the day—that is a fact there is no gainsaying. The peasant skirts, which will in all probability be our future fate, be we stout or be we lean. The flat, untrimmed skirts of yesterday may still remain, and, indeed, both are still to be seen. But the skirt of the moment is the plaited skirt. In most instances the plaits, which are about two inches in width, are stitched down very flat at the top, giving about the hips the flat impression of yesterday's gowns, then below the knees the plaits are unstitched and the loosened material falls fan like about the feet. Variety is obtained by making the plaits larger or smaller, and by trimming or not trimming them.

WHAT WOMEN ARE DOING.

Some of the Unusual Activities of the Unquiet Sex.

Miss Maude Gonne, the "Irish Joan of Arc," will speak in Chicago on March 3 about the feeling in Ireland toward the war in the Transvaal. The effect of her speech is looked to with eagerness by her many friends. Her striking oratorical gifts, her clear thinking and her personal charms have on several occasions done much to win friends for the country to whose welfare she has devoted her life.

Mrs. Jack Williams of Philadelphia rode 3,562 miles on a tandem before her husband had said she could do it. There was a $1,000 stake that they would cross the continent in 90 days, exclusive of Sundays, starting penniless and earning their way as they went. They won their money, but it was at the cost of many inconveniences and much suffering and the experiencing of many thrilling adventures on the trip.

The novel means adopted in a New Jersey town to pay for a church organ might be tried in long suffering districts with good results. The Women's Missionary guild invented the scheme by which every young man calling upon them must pay a fine of 10 cents a visit.

Miss Mary Weber of Edina, Mo., won a beautiful gold medal in a spelling contest. She passed unscathed through the 2,000 word fusillade.

After a severe struggle in which Miss Clara Bert Harris enlisted the sympathies of the International Council of Women, Miss Martin finally succeeded in gaining admission to the Canadian bar. Her recent success in winning an important cases opposed by two of the ablest lawyers in Canada is another proof of the ability of women in that profession.

Comparatively few of us can claim the distinction of being direct descendants of the Mayflower heroes. Miss Ethel May Hebard of Chicago not only claims that distinction, but traces her descent in a direct line back through ten generations to the stripling said to have been the first to leap ashore on Plymouth Rock, the handsome matrimonial emissary of Captain Miles Standish, John Alden and Priscilla Mullins.

Drawing room entertainments are on the highroad to popularity. Mrs. Henry Gardner has been making a hit in Philadelphia by her clever sketches in "mammy" dialect. Some of her sketches she does from the memories of the tales told her by her own "mammy." Her delightful people have received with much favor, and they made great demands on Mrs. Gardner's time during the past season, which was spent in England.

Mrs. May Wright Sewall of Indianapolis has made a wonderful record for herself as clubwoman, educator and housewife. Her name is almost as widely known as that of Miss Frances Willard, who said that "every public woman needs a wife." It may seem remarkable that a woman who in the midst of important social functions of the International Council of Women at London could take time to choose tints for repainting her kitchen. Mrs. Sewall is one people of many who have not permitted their club duties to take them from their homes.

One of the many precautions a woman should bear in mind, if she proposes to visit Paris during the coming exposition, is to local in capacious medicine case before she leaves her native shore. While many things are much less expensive in Paris than at home here, drugs are difficult to find and expensive, as compared to our prices, and, moreover, it is not possible in that gay French city, as in our little towns and villages, to shop for powders and potions all night long, if necessary. It is only by the aid of a policeman that a clerk can be roused and the purchase of a precious commodity made after 8 o'clock in the evening.

Miss Laurence Alma-Tadema is achieving success as an author. Her works in fiction show talent and promise of great fame. Recently she has won new laurels as a dramatist. Her latest effort, "The Silent Voice," was presented by amateurs in London, at Albert Hall. It was pronounced a charming production both by the distinguished audience and the critics that were present.

Mrs. Cynthia Westover Alden in an address before the convention of the State Federation of Women's Clubs at Rochester made the sweeping assertion that women lack conscience and bases her statement upon her belief that women are not able to share the responsibilities of men. Her words have aroused a storm of comment throughout the state.

The conspicuous woman who was thrown upon her own resources very early in life found remunerative employment in dusting libraries in private households. This new library woman has been well received. Her work is very remunerative, $15 and $20 being the price for one or two days' labor.

ORNAMENTATIONS.

Stitching and Stitching—Effective Model of Cutting Contrasts.

Stitching by machine has become quite an elaborate art. It was always a favorite finish for tailor made gowns, and even the simple stitch might be demanded much skill if they were correctly made. Now, however, all sorts of complicated designs are formed by stitching, and the utmost regularity is required. They are first carefully drawn upon the goods, after the garment has been tried on, fitted and fixed, if necessary, and are then stitched very carefully, a second thickness of woolen material being placed at the back that the stitching may be firmer. The silk used for the outside stitching should be heavier than that used inside and should not be tightly drawn, as the stitches ought to appear separate.

Exactitude is necessary in all fine work. Most of the shirring and puffing now used on elegant gowns is done by hand. A thread is drawn to insure a straight line, or, if this is not practicable, the sheer material is basted flat and straight on a square piece of strong paper and the two are cut together where an even edge is wanted. In parallel lines of gathering the thread of the goods is followed carefully.

The bicycle costume illustrated is of navy blue cloth and is trimmed with straps of the same material stitched with white silk. The short skirt is laid in a double box plait at the back. The bolero has a collar and revers of navy blue velvet stitched with white. A white linen collar and shirt bosom are worn, with a black satin scarf. The alpine hat of gray felt has a band and bow of navy blue. Navy blue gaiters and black shoes accompany the costume.

NEW CLOTHS.

They Are Marvelous In Make and Finish.

Cloths were never so various nor as beautiful as now. There are many kinds, and the methods of producing them have been so improved that the possibilities of beauty seem to be unlimited. Some weaves have a smooth, skidlike finish, while others have a decided twill, but a gloss which rivals that of satin. In addition to the perfection of the goods themselves, there are very wonderful decorations, shaped to the different parts of the costume. One robe pattern, for example, of the twilled cloth mentioned is of a soft, dull rose and there is a panel decoration formed by a design which is first printed in green upon the material itself and then embroidered in outline with cream silk, certain portions of the leaves and flowers being covered with a network of fine stitches of the embroidery silk. The same idea appears in turquoise blue. These elaborate additions, however, although very beautiful, are no more so than are the plain goods without them, as nothing can surpass the gloss and richness of the surface.

The walking gown here shown is of deep blue cloth. The skirt has rows of stitching about the edge and three waved bands of blue velvet above. The full waist has a gorgeous woman who was thrown upon her own resources very early in life found remunerative employment in dusting libraries in private households. This new library woman has been well received. Her work is very remunerative, $15 and $20 being the price for one or two days' labor.

The crown prince of Austria is about to take a morganatic wife. Countess Sophie Chotek is the bride elect.

ACCESSORIES.

Plans, Chains and Other Pretty Decorative Trifles.

The fan is the inevitable accompaniment of the ball costume. It is extremely small, but is not the less costly and elaborate for that. Tortoise fans of amber, shell or ivory, delicately painted; antique fans of the Louis Quinze and Louis Seize periods, with Watteau scenes painted on parchment, and spangled fans, embroidered with metals and jewels, divide the honors of fashion. The most striking examples, however, are of black tulle, sewed with tiny rhinestones or even with real diamonds.

The love of glittering jewel effects is going to extremes. Not only are belts, collars, bonnets, evening gowns and fans thus lavishly adorned, but all dowsers must have crystal dewdrops scattered over them, and even evening wraps are coming under the spell and are glittering masses of rhinestone and crystal embroidery.

The vogue of long chains still continues. They are often draped over the front of an evening corsage in many loops of varying length. Strings of pearls or of beads composed of opals, amethysts or rock crystal are favorites.

The picture shows a costume of periwinkle blue angaline. The skirt is trimmed with four bands of blue velvet, which pass around the foot and mount vertically in front. The bolero, which is pointed in front, is covered with blue velvet bands, as are the tight sleeves. The revers are of white bengaline, embroidered and spangled, the collar and plastron of white satin. The hat is covered with blue velvet and has a trimming of chous of white satin and a long white plume.

GLOVES.

Fashionable and Appropriate Coverings for the Shapely Hand.

It is a great mistake to suppose that a tight glove makes the hand appear smaller. On the contrary, it tends to give the impression that the hand is larger than it really is and is being compressed unduly to make up for it. A comparatively loose glove, which does not squeeze the hand out of shape, gives it an aspect of greater delicacy and is always in better taste.

Gloves are worn only in the street, in church and for calling, as it is now the correct thing to remove the gloves at the theater and at dinners, receptions and balls. This is doubtless the result of the excessive use of jewelry, for the fashionable hand is covered with valuable rings, and gloves are therefore a great inconvenience.

Gloves are again much wrinkled upon the arm in mousquetaire style—a style always artistic and very becoming to slender arms. Some of the new evening shades are very beautiful. There is a soft pink, delicate and yet not glaring; a reddened pale yellow and a beautiful dull, greenish blue.

The cut shows a house gown of pink poplin. It is in the princess form and has a plaited front in the horizontal style, the folds falling straight. At the sides of the front are flat box plaits, over which are arranged stoles of white guipure. There is also a short guipure bolero with epaulets. The neck is cut down in a point and there is a medium collar of guipure. A fan bow of mousseline de soie is fastened on the corsage by jeweled ornament. The tight sleeves have guipure revers and frills at the wrists.

MANY GOWNS FOR MANY OCCASIONS

And Some Women Who Make a Few Costumes Answer for all the Varied Purposes

NEW YORK society women, that is those whose purses will permit it—and what really swell society woman is there who has not the necessary long purse—have a gown or several of them, for every conceivable occasion and for every purpose. Does she desire to go walking, she must wear her walking gown; does she go driving, she must wear her driving gown; does she go calling, she must of necessity be gowned in a suitable calling gown; if a reception is to be attended, it would never do to appear in anything which could not be classed as a reception gown, and on Sundays all these are laid aside and she attends church in her church gown.

It is quite possible that to the lay mind all of these gowns might look very much alike. There is a slight difference in cut and trimming, but the variety offered in each is so great that nothing but the name can determine to which class the various gowns belong.

The chic tailor-made for walking might well answer for the trite more elaborate calling costume did not fashion and custom decree otherwise. Either of these might answer well the purpose of a church gown, but again fashion interferes quite as much as she thought was necessary to the entertainment gowned a la decollete toilette of the ballroom. But all this may be as it should be, for it affords a way in which the money of the rich may be kept in circulation and bring comfort to the working classes.

But there is another class of fashionable women to whom this variety of gowns is quite impossible. They may not belong to the very sweet set in New York society, but they occupy a niche in the social world that is an important one, nevertheless. They must of necessity make one gown answer serveral purposes. She must wear it when she goes calling, when she takes her daily constitutional on the avenue, when she attends receptions, and it must even answer for her when she makes her call on Sabbath day. In fact it must be a sort of general utility gown, appropriate to all occasions, and combining many of the features of the several gowns of her more fortunate sister in the swell set. This same class of women is to be found in every city and town in the land where women pay the least attention to the fashions of the day, and doscription of a few of these I have recently seen cannot be out of place.

With these gowns, as in fact with all gowns of the present, the skirts are the features par excellence on which everything is lavished. The day of the bodice is over for the present at least, and the opposite and other trimmings that are piled upon the plaited skirts are a marvel to even the dressmakers themselves. Especially is this true of the new street and reception gowns on which appliques are used without limit, and as these utility gowns must necessarily pattern after these more or less they are equally rich in this form of trimming. Where appliques are not used silk must take its place, and this chinty trimming may be found on many of the new skirts laid over the plaits in such a way as to reveal the contrasting silk.

One of these utility gowns which I saw on the street a few days ago and stopped to admire was made of a tan serge and consisted of a skirt made a princess with box plaits all around from a yoke trimmed with guipure lace. Each box plait, just above the hem of the skirt, had an applique of green velvet; this same applique was on the top of the yoke, and of light henrietta cloth. This had four side plaits with a box plait at the back. Each side plait was held down with an embroidered design until within a foot of the bottom where they were flying loosely. The box plait at the back had the embroidered applique on in the same manner.

Another seen on the same Sunday, but after the services were concluded, was a unique affair of light gray cloth trimmed with royal blue velvet. The skirt of this gown was finished plaited, with a wide band of royal blue velvet in a deep tunic effect. This was finished at each side with a strapping of the gray cloth and narrow strappings of royal blue velvet running in and out through the strappings around the skirt and extending to the bottom of the skirt. The bodice of this gown was tight fitting and of blue velvet shot with gray silk. Four strappings of blue velvet, with pipings of the gray cloth from the waist line to just above the bust forming a square yoke. The sleeves were of the gray cloth finished at the wrist in deep Vs.

A black gown that I saw recently was of satin and made with side plaits on the skirt. Each plait had a design of sequins and beadwork in within a foot of the bottom of the skirt where the plaits fell loose. A short bolero with the sequins and beadwork to almost cover the front of the bodice, and the upper part of the sleeves, and finished with a high rolling collar.

A pretty and more elaborate gown was made of blue foulard silk. The skirt was in small side plaits, and a double box plait at the back. On each plait was laid a band of velvet, running up and down to hold the plaits in place until within the customary foot or so of the bottom, where they fell loose. There was a deep flounce of black lace that extended around the skirt, being eight or ten inches under each plait. This had a heading of jet applique. The bodice had a tucked front of the foulard silk with a bolero of wide black lace caught in a rounded effect. A deep girdle of blue velvet and a high stock of the same.

The Commuter Vote.

An approximate estimate of the number of commuters carried on all the railroads having a terminus at Jersey City and Hoboken is given by the Jersey City Journal. The commuters are those who pass over the roads and ferries daily between their residences in this section of New Jersey and their places of business or occupation in New York. It is found that the roads carry a total of 94,290 commuters daily, while the ferries carry 59,750 people from the towns on the shore front.

In commenting on these figures, the Newark Advertiser says:

"These commuters live mostly in Hudson, Essex, Passaic, Morris, Union, Middlesex, Somerset, Monmouth and Bergen counties. Many of them are women and minors. Probably 50,000 are men of voting age, and of these say 80 per cent. are legal voters or take the trouble to vote in National elections.

"In the last Presidential election the counties named cast a total vote of 347,126. Reckoning the commuters' vote at this end of the State at 40,000, we find it is a little over 17 per cent. of the whole.

"As a matter of course, the entire vote is not kept away from the polls in local elections. At least one-half of it is polled in all elections, so that the actual loss is about 20,000, a proportion certainly not much greater than that of the non-commuter vote that stays away from the polls in municipal elections.

"When we come to test the claims of the machine politicians who want to abolish spring elections and destroy local sentiment in municipal affairs, we find that they are based upon nothing but impudent assertion."

Collecting Taxes.

The collector of Harrison township, Gloucester county, has collected all but $25 of the tax-a-due on his books, and he doesn't believe anything short of a financial panic can prevent the payment of that amount before next meeting day. Wherefore several North Jersey tax collectors are thinking of borrowing the rabbit's foot of the Gloucester county man.—New York Tribune.

Here is a paragraph that forms a good topic for discussion in many municipalities of the State. It would be interesting to know just what process this Gloucester county official used in making his collections so nearly equal the amount standing against the taxable property in the municipality he serves. Such knowledge might, perhaps, be applied to Plainfield with good results.

We presume, however, that one of the essential features of this South Jersey official's good record is that he did considerable personal hustling among those who seemed probable to become delinquent with the claims which the municipality held against their property. Doubtless in the performance of his official duties he brought into play the same amount of energy and interest that he would in his own private business. This is what every tax collector should do but, sad to say, they do not. The average tax collector receives a liberal salary for the duties the law imposes upon him, but they usually regard their work completed when they have received the taxes of those who have voluntarily paid the bill formally rendered to them.

This is not entirely as it should be. A tax collector should not only receive taxes, but whenever possible—and occasion presents itself frequently—he should be a collector in the sense of going among the delinquents and using his persuasive powers to prevail upon those who are slow-pay to "walk up to the captain's office" and settle. At certain seasons of the year this is possible, and it is then that the average collector should strive to avoid becoming a "statute collector."

There are few towns in New Jersey but what have large sums of delinquent taxes outstanding, but if the men who fill the office of collector performed the functions of their positions for the municipality with the same amount of activity that a private business would require and demand, the condition of the public exchequer would be found to be much better at the end of each year.

If New Jersey abolishes capital punishment the sheriffs will have an easy time of it. Now it is frequently necessary for the sheriff to get the hang of things at once.

GRAIN-O! GRAIN-O!

Remember that name when you want a delicious, appetizing, nourishing food drink to take the place of coffee. Made of pure grain and liked by all who have used it. Grain-O is made of pure grain, it aids digestion and strengthens the whole system. It is not a stimulant but a health builder and the children as well as the adults can drink it with great benefit. Costs about ¼ as much as coffee. 15c. and 25c. per package. Ask your grocer for Grain-O.

Road Improvement.

For several years it has been a matter of pardonable pride on the part of New Jersey to consider the great strides that have been made in road improvement, and no part of the State more than our own, for here in Union county one of the earliest and most successful efforts in the expenditure of a large sum of money for such a purpose was made. It is gratifying to read in the annual report of Commissioner of Public Roads Henry I. Budd that there is a steadily increasing desire on the part of Jerseymen to improve their highways. This sentiment is in no danger of dying out, and within a few years the whole State will be gridironed with permanent macadam roads.

According to the report of Supervisor Budd, through State aid there have been built about 430 miles of hard roads already. Municipalities, counties, townships and other municipalities have constructed as many more. Each year since 1895, when the State began to aid in this matter, the miles of road improved have increased.

In 1895 the construction was 46 miles, in 1896 80 miles, in 1897 70, in 1898 85, and in 1899 about 116, while the total additional mileage petitioned for is 308. For the year ended in October last the cost per mile was somewhat larger than in the previous year, because of the higher cost of labor and stone, and delays in transportation due to the shortage in cars. The increase in the State appropriation from $100,000 to $150,000 enabled some of the more enterprising of the counties to build as many miles as the limit of law—one-fourth of one per cent. tax on their ratables—would allow; and this in many cases has brought construction to the point where continuous hard roads over comparatively long distances are available. Among the recommendations made by the Commissioner, an important one is for legislation to regulate the width of tires. It passes his comprehension that the State, after expending at least $4,000,000 in improved roads, should not guard them against destruction by indifferent owners of freight-vehicles. Assembly bill No. 215 at Trenton proposes a rebate in taxes to users of wide tires.

The Newark News is ambitious that the Jersey metropolis should hold an exposition at which may be exhibited the achievements of local industry and enterprise during the past three decades. Newark is one of the great beehives of industry in the United States—her manufactories being the most diversified of any American city —and there is no reason why such an exposition could not be made a grand success. It would encourage Newarkers to greater skill in the manufacturing line, and prove a world-wide advertisement for her products. Such an event would reflect credit not only to the city which would promote and carry it out, but it would be a distinct gain and benefit to the whole of New Jersey. The idea of the News should be taken up and pushed to a successful issue.

Whether it is feasible to acquire the entire Palisades for a State park and deprive owners of abutting lands of their rights under water is a serious question and deserves careful consideration. But to preserve these majestic monuments of nature's handiwork in all their sublime grandeur should awaken the interest of every citizen of both New Jersey and New York. It is a matter that concerns the representatives of both commonwealths and should have the hearty co operation of a joint commission from the Legislatures of New York and New Jersey. The Palisades must be saved.

The annual report of the State Bureau of Statistics has just been issued. It gives more complete statistics of manufacture in New Jersey for the year just closed than ever before collected. The capital invested in all the establishments reporting is $196,-723,843; persons employed, 161,749; the value of materials used, $121,480,197, and the selling price of goods made, $204,274,214. Of all establishments reporting in the United States census of 1890 for New Jersey, the total capital invested was $220,808,700, and hands employed, 134 292.

But little interest was manifested in the political primaries held in North Plainfield Saturday night for the nomination of candidates to fill the borough offices that will soon be vacant. The campaign itself, which will last but a week, promises to be very quiet. However, if the Democrats should succeed in electing both of their Councilmanic candidates, it would make the Council stand divided, politically; but with the Mayor in the chair the G. O. P. policy would be safe-guarded.

In relation to the printing of the borough report in such a botch-like manner, the News proprietor doubtless regards a poor excuse better than none at all.

More than $6,000 worth of Kansas mules have been shipped from Grenola to South Africa. No wonder that we hear no more kicks coming from Kansas.

NEW ALCOHOL CURE.

Serum Which Is Said to Destroy the Craving for Liquor.

Discovered by a Famous French Investigator—Direct Treatment of Bronchitis—Other Delicate Oddities.

[Special New York Letter.]

FROM the subjects of Bacchus in the earliest days to the worst whisky fiend of the present time there has probably been no inebriate who, at some period of his career, had not a wish to reform his habits and throw off the invisible but most powerful bonds which held him so forcibly and dominated his will. Although many leading scientists of to-day advocate the daily use of a small amount of alcohol, whisky for instance, claiming it possesses great food value, their numbers are greatly overbalanced by those who are honestly striving to give the world the benefit of their actual knowledge of the evil effects of this greatest of "enemies of the race. If the use of alcoholic stimulants were entirely abolished, the exciting cause of most organic diseases would have ceased and a large number of physicians would be free to seek other callings.

M. BROCA'S CURE.

For years many have been working out theories tending towards the cure of drunkenness, but this widespread habit seems to obtain the greatest hold of its victim and proves the most baffling of any with which the medical fraternity has to contend. The most successful and best known remedies up to the present have produced some results, but they have not completely fulfilled the hopes of the public. Most of these treatments are considered to be a tearing up of the system until the craving for stimulants ceases. Just now, however, comes news from that most progressive of cities, Paris, that M. Broca, one of its prominent surgeons, who has long been working upon a cure for inebriety, has obtained most successful results.

He has secured a serum called antiethyline, which is said to be sufficiently powerful to change a man's blood, at the same time producing no injurious effects. This cure is no patent compound and is likely to attract attention everywhere. It is claimed that it will prove as effective as the diphtheritic serum for diphtheria; that after it has been administered the patient's stomach revolts against alcohol in any form and that this condition is permanent. Obtaining this serum and working out its effectiveness was done on the lines followed in the case of diphtheritic serum, except that less suffering is entailed on the horses in the later experiments. In procuring anti-toxin for diphtheria, the disease germs were injected into the animal, necessitating this understanding all the tortures of an illness of that kind, while, to manufacture antiethyline, the horse was simply fed with wheat-bran mixed with whisky. After a few weeks of this treatment the animal's eye became bleary and his legs shaky. Finally he fell to the floor in a state of complete intoxication. On partial recovery he was fed with more of the intoxicating mixture, a repetition of former symptoms. Nature now came to the rescue and enabled the animal to become accustomed to his stimulating food, just as, in time, a man becomes so inured that he can drink large amounts of liquors and not manifest any immediate effect, although at this period the vital organs are often attacked. M. Broca's horse after a few weeks was able to stand up under two or three quarts of whisky per day, although his disposition suffered seriously.

DIRECT TREATMENT OF BRONCHITIS.

These animals were selected because they are very sensitive and may be relied upon to die or show bad symptoms if the serum is dangerous. They had been fed for several days on bread soaked in whisky, and had become confirmed little inebriates, preferring this food to any other. As soon as the serum mingled with their blood it was impossible to induce them to take the alcoholized crackers. Two were placed in a cage without food and starved rather than touch them. The other two, who were fed with natural food, thrived and seemed no worse for the treatment. Having first obtained their permission, five inveterate topers of the degenerate class, who had entirely any desire to reform, were now chosen in the Paris prisons for experiment. From the first injection of the serum these men all showed an unconquerable aversion to all strictly alcoholic liquors, although all could drink a small amount of light wines.

Scientists account for the changed condition of the serum in the horse after prolonged use of alcohol to the presence of antitoxic substances which the blood develops to protect itself from the ravages of liquor. Injected into the veins of a man, it is thought to produce the same effect as new blood from a long line of temperate ancestors, if such were obtainable. Mr. Broca has a world-wide reputation as a writer on advanced medical subjects, and his discovery is indorsed by Dr. Sapelier, Dr. Thebault and other eminent French scientists.

From the same city come reports of the interesting discovery of a new method for treating bronchitis and similar diseases. These troubles are so widespread that very few are without personal knowledge of the irritating and wearing effects of an inflammatory condition of the chest and bronchial tubes. Up to the present time, all efforts to apply direct treatment to the organs affected have been impracticable, because the lining membranes are so sensitive that contact with any foreign substance would immediately induce a fit of violent coughing. But a Parisian physician, M. Mendel, has found a means of overcoming this difficulty. He introduces the point of a curved tube of a syringe into the patient's trachea. Through this is forced a preparation which diffuses a mild warmth through the chest, without producing any disagreeable sensation, enabling the patient to breathe freely for hours. The oil introduced contains in solution vegetable essences. It immediately evaporates and saturates the air breathed into the lungs, at the same time killing disease germs. It will readily be seen how much more effective this treatment is than breathing medicated air from the outside, because the center of evaporation is inside the chest, attacking the microbes at once with great intensity. As a few hours the medicine is absorbed. In bad cases the injections are continued daily for a month, the dose being ten cubic centimeters. In a record of 50 cases thus treated, 45 of whom were tuberculosis, 36 ended in complete permanent successes in cessation of coughing, restoration, return of appetite, sleep and strength and increased weight. The injections have never brought on coughing. The superiority of this treatment over that of inhaling medicines into the system through the stomach is at once apparent. Nearly all remedies which could, by the latter means, reach the seat of disease, interfere seriously with digestion, while, by Dr. Mendel's method, the working of the digestive organs is not impaired.

It is interesting to watch the movements of a spider weaving its web. The weaving fingers, usually six, are at the lower end of the abdomen. They may be folded one on another, reaching the source of the silk which is drawn forth through small conduits. Through other tubes comes a liquid secretion utilized in the formation of the web. The central space in the net-work is shown is as large across as the legs of the spider reach and has no viscous bulbs. Here the insect can move freely without danger of becoming entangled. A thread usually attaches the center of the web to the web, where any jar of her abode enables her to recognize the approach of victim or enemy.

Spiders often utilize currents of air in building their webs, enabled to throw a bridge over a space they would otherwise be unable to cross. These insects are very wise, but are certainly not of the sort who "take no thought of the morrow."

Neither are the people who seem to be worrying about what is to become of their descendants when the fuel of the earth is exhausted. This problem, however, will appear to solution, as Dr. William Calver, of Washington, has nearly perfected an apparatus at which he has been working for 20 years for utilizing the sun's rays for producing heat and power. Herschel, Ericsson, Dr. Cass and many others have gave much careful thought to this subject, and if Dr. Calver attains the success for which he is striving his name will take its place beside those of the greatest inventors.

DR. ENDICOTT WINS FAMOUS DIVORCE CASE

Court of Errors and Appeals Approves of the Decision of Court of Chancery.

THE DECISION IS FINAL.

LEGAL BATTLE LASTED FOR THREE AND A-HALF YEARS.

Craig A. Marsh the Winning Lawyer —Testimony Very Voluminous and a Small Fortune Spent by Plaintiff and Defendant.

The Court of Errors and Appeals Monday decided in favor of Dr. Geo. W. Endicott, the suit for divorce brought against him by his wife, Lillie C. Endicott. The doctor's vindication, won first in the Court of Chancery, and again in the highest court in the State, is now final and complete. There is no further appeal to any other court.

The suit, which was begun three and one-half years ago, has been prosecuted all these years with relentless purpose by the complainant and her counsel, and apparently without regard to expense. The country was scoured for witnesses and some were brought from remote States, and one from Ireland, and kept here throughout the long trial. Detectives were employed, some to find witnesses for the complainant and others to watch the witnesses of the defendant. Voyages of congressmen were employed to supply counsel with type-written reports of the testimony a few hours after it was produced in court. Fifteen entire days were consumed in court in the examination and cross-examination of witnesses, and the greater part of the nights during the trial were devoted by the parties and their lawyers to the work of preparation. Counsel were given a day and a-half on each side to argue the case, and the Vice-Chancellor took months to review the evidence and the arguments.

Mrs. Endicott's counsel were McCarter, Williamson & McCarter, of Newark, and Doctor Endicott's counsel was Craig A. Marsh, of this city. The same counsel tried the case in both courts.

Because of the high character and the social prominence of the women whose names were brought into the case, society people in this community, and indeed in several other cities, watched the trial with interest and excitement and the court room at New Ark was filled every day of the week. Full reports of the evidence and arguments of counsel were given from day to day in many of the daily newspapers of Newark, New York, Philadelphia and other cities.

The trial was replete with sensational incidents. For example, Mr. Marsh in cross-examining Agnes McDonald, a witness produced against the defendant, caught the witness in several deliberate falsehoods, and the effect was such that the other side abandoned the particular charge which she was called to prove, and the Vice-Chancellor declared in his opinion that the witness had manifestly perjured herself.

The evidence made a book nearly as large as Webster's unabridged dictionary.

The manner in which Doctor Endicott held his large practice in the face of such serious charges furnishes convincing evidence of the confidence and esteem in which he was held by the best families of Plainfield. Few physicians, however innocent, could have breasted such a storm all these years while awaiting the decision of the Court of last resort. Doctor Endicott knew that he was entitled to a favorable decision, and stuck to his work and his patients stuck to him.

Time and again it has been observed that no man who was not conscious of innocence could have borne up throughout this long struggle as he has done. He is receiving and is entitled to the warmest congratulations.

Found a Nest of Snakes.

Charles Satterlein, who is employed by Contractor C. M. Meeker, was loading stone at Wilson's quarry a few days ago and in digging about among the rocks he came across a bunch of snakes. They consisted of three black racers, one copper-head and one adder. He brought them to Plainfield and placed them in a bottle of alcohol. The snakes were five feet under ground.

Money Raised for Schools.

The Board of Education of the borough has decided that the necessary amount of money needed for next year will be $14,190, divided as follows: Teachers' salaries and current expenses, $12,400; text books, supplies, etc., $1,700. This will be asked for at the annual meeting to be held March 20th.

ROSELLE TO GET DOUBLE HONORS.

Mulford Sure of the Highest Average Score in Daily Press League.

TOWNLEY'S CHANCES GONE.

FELL DOWN TO FOURTH AFTER LAST WEEK'S GAMES.

Chauncey D. Smith, of Westfield, Leads in Contest for Highest Average Score—Captain Smith, of Roselle, is Second.

With only three more games to be rolled in The Daily Press Bowling League, the result is assured. Roselle will win the trophy this year while there is not the slightest doubt but that the prize for the best individual average score will go to Roselle's crack young bowler, Mulford. Three games were rolled in the league last week. W. M. Townley, of Westfield, who was Mulford's closest rival, fell way down and even the poorest kind of rolling on Mulford's part in the remaining games cannot prevent the latter from winning now.

In the individual contest for the best average scores Mulford stands way in the lead with a remarkable average of 189.4 in fifteen games. Townley was next until last week when his very poor showing gave him a tumble from second place to fourth. Sharp, Cranford's veteran roller, is second with 171.7, while Charles A. Smith, captain of the Roselle team, is a close third with 171.2. If Smith makes some high scores when Roselle rolls on the Park Club alleys this evening, Smith is likely to overcome that small advantage and step into second place.

Another result of last week's games was the advancement of Chauncey D Smith, captain of the Westfield team, from sixth to fifth place. He bettered his average by an even point, passing Bates.

Hibbard has heretofore been leading the Park Club delegation but he was way off form last week and fell back from seventh to ninth place while Dr. Thiers by good bowling advanced from ninth to eighth place and now leads the local van. Dr. Thiers raised his average two points, F. O. Ball dropped while Johnson showed an improvement.

According to the rules, it will be necessary to roll fourteen out of the eighteen games to qualify for the individual prizes. Cranford and Westfield have completed their schedules while the Parks and Roselle meet this evening to end theirs. The following list includes only those eligible in the individual contest:

	Games Rolled.	Average.
Mulford, Roselle	15	189.4
Sharp, Cranford	15	171.7
C. A. Smith, Roselle	15	171.2
W. T. Bates, Westfield	15	170.5
C. D. Smith, Westfield	15	164.6
Hagen, Cranford	15	164.4
Cheeks, Cranford	15	161.7
Thiers, Park Club	15	161.0
Williams, Roselle	15	160.3
Brewer, Westfield	15	159.9
Black, Park Club	15	157.0
F. O. Ball, Park Club	15	156.5
W. Smith, Roselle	15	156.2
Johnson, Park Club	12	153.2
Dumont, Cranford	15	151.9
Smith, Roselle	15	151.7
Barry, Cranford	15	147.6

In the individual contest for the highest average number of spares per game, Captain Chauncey D. Smith still stands well on top and can hardly be beaten now. He bettered his hold on first place by his rolling last week and now has an average of 5.11 spares per game. Charles A. Smith, captain of Roselle, is second with 4.80. Forster, of Westfield, took a stronger grip on third place, while Patterson and Mulford, both of Roselle, follow in the order named.

Dr. Thiers, as a result of last week's bowling, made a sensational jump from fourteenth place to ninth and now leads the Park Club contingent, Hibbard, who was thirteenth and the best of the Parkites, has fallen back one place while Johnson, of this city, advanced from the tail of the list to thirteenth. W. M. Townley, who was eleventh, dropped back to next to last.

The standing in this competition with the scores is as follows:

	Games Rolled.	Average Spares.
C. D. Smith, Westfield	15	5.11
C. A. Smith, Roselle	15	4.80
Forster, Westfield	15	4.61
Patterson, Roselle	15	4.53
Mulford, Roselle	15	4.44
Thiers, Park Club	15	4.40
W. T. Bates, Westfield	15	4.27
Smith, We ·field	17	4.20
Hagen, Cranford	15	4.20
Cheeks, Cranford	15	4.20
Sharp, Cranford	15	4.11
Mangels, Roselle	15	4.07
Williams, Park Club	15	3.91
Brewer, Park Club	15	3.75
F. O. Ball, Park Club	15	3.73
Barry, Cranford	15	3.66
Bates, Cranford	15	3.66

WHAT DO THE CHILDREN DRINK?

Don't give them tea or coffee. Have you tried the new food drink called GRAIN-O? It is delicious and nourishing and takes the place of coffee. The more Grain-O you give the children the more health you distribute through their systems. Grain-O is made of pure grains, and when properly prepared tastes like the choice grades of coffee but costs about ¼ as much. All grocers sell it. 15c. and 25c.

CONTESTS AT Y. M. C. A.

ATHLETIC AND GYMNASTIC COMPETITIONS ARE PLANNED.

First of the Series Will Be Held Saturday Evening—Others to Follow on Successive Saturdays.

After a lengthy period of inactivity as far as the public is concerned, there will be much happening during the next month in the way of athletic and gymnastic work at the Y. M. C. A. A recent conference between Physical Director C. E. A. Heywood and the members of the physical work committee of the association resulted in the arrangement of a schedule of contests that will occupy the Saturday evenings for five weeks next to come.

The first will be a novice athletic contest, which will continue two evenings. The first night to be devoted to the contest will be next Saturday evening. The contest will close the Saturday evening following. There will be six events that will be included. The contest will be open to those who have not won any medals at the Y. M. C. A. gymnasium.

Then will come a novice gymnastic contest on the third Saturday evening which, as the other, will be open only to those who have won no medals.

The next two Saturday evenings will be devoted to an open athletic contest and an open gymnastic contest. They will be open to all members of the association and are likely to bring out some lively fights in the various events.

The physical work committee also authorized Mr. Heywood to make quite extensive plans for the formal closing of the gymnasium for the summer. The event will practically end active class work in the gymnasium. It is planned to have the various classes show something of what they are doing and also to provide an entertainment to be followed by a little supper for the members participating in the gymnastic work.

some feeling.

"When she was one of the lady board of managers of the Florence mission," the witness added, "eight lady managers resigned in six months on her account."

Mrs. Catherine Facilamb, a former teacher at the school, who had resigned because of Mrs. Eyler's treatment of her, said that before Mrs. Eyler came to the school it had been a home for the girls, but after her arrival at the place it had become a penal institution.

CHANGES OF RESIDENCE

People Who Have Rented Rooms Through the Mulford Agency.

Through the real estate agency of E. C. Mulford & son, North avenue, several changes in property are noted. Charles E. Steiner has purchased the property at 24 Jackson avenue. M. H. Ewart, of Brooklyn, has rented 44 Fairview avenue. C. B. Williams has rented the property 336 East Sixth street, and takes possession at once. Mr Williams is connected with the Jersey Central Railroad. W. W. Pearson has rented 940 West Sixth street. C. H. Collins, of Kensington avenue, has rented a new house on West Sixth street. A. H. Mumby, of Brooklyn, has rented 1112 Putnam avenue, and takes possession May 1st. Fred VanEmburgh, of Westfield, has rented the house corner of Watervelt and Brook avenues. Mrs. Chandor, of East Fifth street, has rented J. E. Martine's house, 302 East Ninth street. L. E. Caldwell, of Westfield, has rented 73 Sandford avenue. With the exception of those otherwise mentioned, all of the above take possession April 1st.

MAY STAY IN JAIL FOR LIFE.

Unable to Give a Bond to Pay His Wife $2 a Week Alimony.

J. Spencer Middleton has been in the Burlington county jail at Mt. Holly a year because he could not give $200 bond to pay his wife $2 a week alimony. He may stay in jail the remainder of his life so far as his prospect for release depends on paying the stipulated sum per week.

Mrs. Middleton is said to be living in fair circumstances in Camden. She refuses to withdraw her complaint. Middleton is 54 and his wife is about 40. He says his wife left him several times, and does dressmaking. Mrs. Middleton says her husband did not support her and their two children, and that she has not communicated with him since he went to jail to live.

NOTHING NEW ABOUT THE HIGH SCHOOL.

Committees of Board of Education Have Done Nothing Important as Yet.

EASTER VACATION ALLOWED

MEDICAL INSPECTOR EXAMINED 54 PUPILS DURING FEBRUARY.

Board Was in Session Only Eighteen Minutes After the Executive Meeting—Bills Were Audited.

Previous to Monday's meeting of the Board of Education those members who were in attendance—Messrs. Lovell, Richards and Lounsbury—held a conference behind closed doors and the reporters were excluded. At 8:30 o'clock the reporters were requested by Clerk Clark to come in and re-present the public at the routine business that was transacted. The business before the Board in open session lasted exactly eighteen minutes. It consisted of the reading, auditing and ordering paid a large batch of bills and the announcement that the medical inspector had examined 54 pupils during February. Also that $1 602 04 had been received from taxes for February.

The only interesting subject discussed was a petition from the High School pupils praying for a vacation at Easter. Mr. Richards favored granting a vacation to all schools at Easter, as did also Mr. Lovell and Supt. Maxson. Mr. Lounsbury said he was opposed to the vacation and did not think the school schedule as arranged by the Board should be changed. Upon motion of Mr. Richards it was decided to close the schools from April 13th to April 23d. Mr. Lounsbury voted against the motion.

Mr. Abbott, chairman of the committee on purchasing a site for the new High School building, not being present, no report was made. Mr Lounsbury, a member of that committee, said there was nothing to report.

Mr. Lovell, from the committee on architects, said that his committee had not yet held a meeting and therefore had nothing to report.

No further business being before the Board a motion to adjourn was being entertained by chairman Lovell when President Peshall entered the room and took his seat. Mr Probasco said he had nothing to offer. The Board then adjourned, the reporters returning and leaving the members seated around the long table.

SLORE DECIDED AGAINST.

Court of Errors and Appeals Decides That Former Jail Warden is Not Entitled to Salary Claims.

The case of Warden Slore against the Freeholders of Union county for salary during the time Mr. Slore held to the county jail before Warden Dodd succeeded in ousting him from office, was decided on appeal Monday in the Court of Errors and Appeals Mr. Slore had won in the Union Circuit Court, and the Freeholders took the case up. The appeal was won by the Freeholders. The decision reverses the judgment below and gives judgment against Mr. Slore with costs. The successful counsel in this case were W. R. Codington and Craig A. Marsh. Mr. Slore was represented by Lindabury, Depue and Faulks.

The Railway Mail Service.

The expansion of mail service by rail is illustrated by the facts that, in the year 1874, there were 75 miles of railroad in the United States on which mails were carried, and now there are 174,777. Of mail of all classes distributed by railway postal clerks, there were in 1898 12 235,706,220 pieces of second class mail (newspapers). There were in 1898, not including free in county, 336,126 238 pounds. Each of the pieces is, of course, handled several times; nevertheless, the vast number represents actual work. But the functions of the railway mail service are not confined to the control of its own employes, for all postoffices receive their instructions from the officers of this service in regard to the making up and despatch of mail, and as to the time it should be sent and by what routes. The railway mail service is the medium of practically all business with the railway companies except financial.—R. C. Jackson, in Frank Leslie's Popular Monthly for February.

Bought a Valuable Lot.

A very important sale of property was recorded Monday when Richard Henry Depew, of Ninth street, purchased a strip of land in Woodland Park 150x250 through the S. D. Drake Realty Company. This is one of the most valuable strips in that park and Mr. Depew intends to erect thereon a handsome dwelling. The price stipulated in the deed is $4 500.

WORK FOR THE WOMEN

SILK PETTICOATS TO BE MANUFACTURED IN THIS CITY.

Crescent Rink Building Rented to New York Firm, Which Will Employ 150 Hands.

Last Saturday afternoon Charles H. Hand, owner of the Crescent Rink building, leased that building to Hertig, Klpp & Co., of 566 Broadway, New York, manufacturers of fine silk petticoats. The members of the firm were in Plainfield last week conferring with Mr. Hand regarding the building. They finally decided to take it and on March 15th will take possession. The firm will employ about one hundred and fifty people, mostly women, and they intend to increase the number of help as soon as possible.

Some changes will be necessary in the building to meet the requirements of the business and these will be made at once. This will bring to a close the dances that have heretofore been held in the rink, and other places will have to be used for these social events. The new firm is a hustling one and their establishment will be first-class in every respect.

NEW TRIAL FOR MRS. MEYER

Prosecutor Erred in Admitting as Evidence Deathbed Statement of Midwife's Victim.

Sophia Meyer, a Newark midwife, who is at present in the New Jersey State Prison, having been sentenced in May, 1899, to twelve years' imprisonment for malpractice, will now have a new trial, through a mistake on the part of Prosecutor English, who allowed the deathbed statement of her victim, Mrs. Annie Krause, of Elizabeth, to be admitted as evidence.

Mrs. Meyer's counsel, J. E. Kiernan, carried the matter to the Supreme Court, and on this point won his contention. He says he is confident Mrs. Meyer can never be again convicted so long as the dying declaration of Mrs. Krause is barred.

Since Mrs Meyer's conviction her male accomplice, who was an important witness, has disappeared from Newark, and the authorities believe he has gone to Germany.

NEW HARDWARE FIRM.

H. E. Gayle at Head of a Company That Has Bought the Business of J. P. Laire.

H. E. Gayle, the carpenter and builder, Monday formed a company, of which he is at the head, to purchase the old established business of the J. P. Laire Hardware Company, who are located on West Front street, near Park avenue. Mr Gayle will give up the carpenter business as soon as he can finish his present contracts. Mr. Laire will remain with the new company until about June 1st, when he will become secretary of a new corporation just formed in Elizabeth. He will continue to reside in Plainfield, however.

The present clerks and cashier will be retained by Mr. Gayle.

INSTITUTED NEW TRIBE.

Great Sachem Newcorn Performed His First Official Duties Thursday Evening.

The first institution of a new tribe of Red Men in the term of Great Sachem William Newcorn took place at Waldick, near Paterson, Thursday evening, when the Hohokus Tribe was formed. The charter list included sixty-five names. The initiatory work was done by teams from the Paterson tribes. An entertainment and banquet was held at the Town Hall that lasted until 5 o'clock next morning. Those guests were expecting to leave on a western train at midnight, but the train was five hours late and they had to adjust their plans to fit the circumstances.

SPECIAL LENTEN SERVICE.

Musical Service Was Exceptionally Fine—Sermon by Father Miller.

The first of the Sunday evening Lenten services were held in St. Joseph's church Sunday, a large congregation being present. The musical part of the service consisted of Millard's vespers in D flat, with Magnificat by Et. Father Miller preached an eloquent sermon on the history of the Catholic church viewed from a human standpoint, which was listened to with close attention. After the sermon "Pro peccatis," from Rossini's Stabat Mater was sung. This was followed by the Benediction, the congregation uniting in singing the hymns. These services will be held every Sunday evening during the Lenten season.

Decided Not to Have Dinner.

The friends of the Twilight Social Club will regret to learn that they have decided not to hold their annual Easter Monday night dance this year. Owing to the leasing of the Crescent Rink for manufacturing purposes they feel as though it would hardly be right to crowd their always large attendance into a smaller hall. They will discontinue their dances until such time in the future when there is a suitable place in Plainfield for hosting them.

WIFE AND THREE TOTS ALONE AND DESTITUTE

Peter Reuter Has Disappeared and Left Family Without Support.

THE CASE FULL OF PATHOS.

HUSBAND SEEN TO BOARD TRAIN AT BOUND BROOK.

It Is Alleged That He Has Not Cared for His Family as He Could and Should Have for Sometime Past.

Husband gone and wife and three little children left to starve. That is the present situation in the household of Peter Reuter, in the rear of the upper floor of 313 East Fourth street. Mrs. Reuter and her children are still there, but Mr. Reuter left the house Sunday morning and has not returned since. From his previous actions the wife believes that he has deserted her.

The domestic relations have not, according to the story of his wife, been of a happy character. While husband and wife have not violently quarrelled, it is alleged that Reuter was cruel and ugly to his family and only allowed them the barest allowance for their support. It is alleged that they were even compelled at times to do without the very necessities of life.

There were three children, Robert, six years old; Marie, two years old, and Dorotha, one year old. They came into public notice last week when one of their number set fire to the room in the absence of the mother and threatened the house with destruction.

Reuter was a carpet weaver and had employment at the VanDeventer Carpet Company's factory. He was making fair wages, but spent much of the money himself, while Mrs. Louis Wilson, of 420 West Fourth street, mother of Mrs. Reuter, did much to keep his family from actual want.

Saturday afternoon Reuter drew $22 at the factory for his last two weeks work. That night he purchased just enough groceries to give the family their breakfast next day. He started off early Sunday morning. A friend saw him at Bound Brook later that day when he boarded a Philadelphia train. That was the last seen of him.

Unless Reuter returns shortly, Mrs. Reuter will probably start an action for desertion against her husband and have him arrested if he ever appears in this neighborhood again.

YOUTHFUL THIEVES.

Three Children Not Yet in Their Teens Broke Into the Store of Henry Pugh.

Henry Pugh and his family, of West Fourth street, went out for a drive Sunday afternoon about 2 o'clock and did not return until 4 o'clock. In the meantime someone broke into the cellar at their home and entered Mr. Pugh's store, where a quantity of toys, candy, penknives, cigars and cigarettes was stolen. When the family returned home they discovered that burglars had been about. Their suspicion was aroused as to whom had entered their home. When they left early in the afternoon two or three children were loitering about the store, and Mr. Pugh was convinced that they knew something about the robbery.

The matter was reported to Captain Grant, and Monday a. m. he went to the Irving School nearby and saw the children. Through them the Captain learned that Gertrude Tabbett and Lizzie Tabbett, aged eight and ten years, respectively, and George Van Note, aged nine years, were the guilty ones. They admitted having effected an entrance into the cellar through a window and to having taken the articles from the store. Most of the articles were recovered and turned over to Mr. Pugh. Captain Grant has not yet ascertained just what can be done with the youthful burglars, but some action will be taken to teach them a lesson. The girls live on Eighth street above Grand avenue, and the boy lives on Monroe avenue.

Mr. Martine to Speak.

James E. Martine, of "Cedar Brook Farm," will make an address the evening of St. Patrick's Day before the Friendly Sons of St. Patrick at Elizabeth. Among the other speakers will be Congressman Sulzer, of New York.

Half-Holiday to the Lone Fence.

Commencing with this week the summer schedule goes into effect at the Pond Tool Works, and the employes will have the Saturday half-holiday from now on during the spring and summer.

TAKEN SICK ON THE STREET.

M. Selbert Compelled to Go to Hudson Street Hospital While in New York on Business.

M. Selbert, the Somerset street jeweler, went to New York on business Friday of last week, and also for the purpose of having a slight operation performed at a hospital. His wife expected him to return home the same evening. He failed to appear and Mrs. Selbert became worried. Before he went away he told his wife that he intended to stop off at Elizabeth and call on Louie Gallman, and her first thought was to telephone the latter to learn whether he had been there. She was informed that he did stop at Elizabeth, but had gone to New York. On Saturday no word had been received from Mr. Selbert and a search was made for him.

Mrs. Selbert and Flynn telephoned to New York police headquarters. He learned that Selbert while walking along a street in the city he had a hemorrhage and was taken to a drug store for treatment. He left there apparently all right and after walking a short distance he had another spell. This time he was taken to the Hudson Street Hospital, where he was detained.

Saturday afternoon Mrs. Selbert went into New York and brought her husband home. He is now much better except that he feels very weak from loss of blood. Mrs. Selbert's cause for alarm was over the fact that her husband had a large amount of money in his pocket and she feared that he had been waylaid and robbed.

MAYOR ANXIOUS TO SEE STREET WIDENED

Mr. Smalley Brings Up the Matter in the Borough Council Meeting Friday.

A FEW OBJECTORS STILL.

COLLECTOR BROWN WANTS SURETY BOND PAID FOR.

President of the Council Swackhamer Shows Little Interest in Borough Affairs—Pay for Work of Ex-port Accountant.

Mayor Smalley and Councilmen Coddington, Clark, Burtis and Valiant were present at the regular meeting of the Borough Council held Friday evening. Councilmen Swackhamer and Rogers were absent. However, there was not a great amount of important business to transact, although the session continued until nearly 10 o'clock

Clerk Bowley read a petition from the trustees of the Crescent Avenue church, asking for a crosswalk at the corner of Warren and Chatham streets. A communication was received from Collector Brown, in which he stated that in order to get a proper final of work to do in the double-entry system of bookkeeping, and that the borough was being saved at least $150 a year in not having any rent to pay for him, he wanted to know if it would not be fair for the borough to pay for his surety bond each year. The communication was referred to the finance committee.

The report of the collector and treasurer is as follows: Taxes and interest collected during February, $83 34; Board of Health, $7 75; special school, $413 38; Watchung avenue, $228.15; total $1,672 42; bills payable by note, $2,000; fines received, $5; rent property sold for taxes, $36; balance February, $4,238 04; total receipts, $7,852.47; disbursements, $6 098 82; cash on hand, $1,736 95; borough fund, $1,230 01; Watchung avenue, $515 94.

E. J. McCoan presented a bill for $10 for services rendered by himself and horses during a recent severe snow storm when his horses stood on the fire-house floor for twenty-four hours. This bill was laid over and will be looked into by the fire, water and lamps committee.

Chairman Clark, of the street committee, reported the disbursements during February to be $66 39. Chairman Burtis, of the marshal committee, reported that no arrests had been made during the past month.

It was stated by the Mayor that Mr. Swackhamer, as chairman of the committee on laws, ordinances and election, had not presented his report, and had not even attended the meetings. He thought that a person representing the Democrats of the borough, and holding the position of president of the Council, should be more prompt in his attendance.

Mr. Valiant presented a bill from Harvey B. Thorn, as expert accountant, for $83 50, representing 110 hours work at 75 cents per hour. He explained that he felt as though it was a wise expenditure, and would like to see the work done every year. He paid a compliment to E. L. Suffern, who, together with Mr. Thorn, had examined the borough books and accounts. Mr. Suffern's services were gratuitous. Messrs. Clark, Burtis, Coddington, as well as the Mayor, all agreed that the expenditure was a wise one, and they concurred heartily with the remarks made by Mr. Valiant. It will be remembered that the Council voted early in the year to expend a sum not to exceed $100 for this work.

Mr. Valiant offered a resolution which provided for the erasure of several names from the tax list, where the tax is not collectable. In some cases the persons have moved away. In others the tax is for dogs, poll and personal which cannot be collected. The matter was referred to the laws, ordinance and election committee.

Another resolution by Mr. Valiant provided that a sum not to exceed $40 be appropriated for repairing the house at 61 Watchung avenue, and charged against the property. This is one of the properties bought in by the borough. Still another resolution of the same number provided for the borrowing of $1,000 for six months with which to pay bills.

Mayor Smalley introduced the Somerset street widening question and he asked the street committee to do a little extra work during the next thirty days and see if all of the property-owners interested cannot be induced to sign the map declaring the necessary amount of property for the widening. He said that during the past few days he had received letters from people telling him that they would sign for the improvement. Among these were Mr. O'Reilly, who owns the property corner of Jackson avenue and Somerset street, the executors for the Peter Wooden estate, and P. M. French.

The Mayor stated further that there were less than a half dozen properties to secure, and if these owners will only sign the work will be much easier and less expensive. He said that those who are practically holding up the improvement are Alex. Thorn, A. B. Thorn, J. F. Homan and Chas. Bock.

He felt sure that the obstacles would be overcome and that the improvement would soon be a reality. On this ground he urged the street committee to put forth a little extra effort.

The Mayor also spoke about the Duer street opening and urged that the necessary amount of $500 be subscribed. The scheme would then be assured. He thought that it is a chance that should not be lost to secure a grand improvement, and he felt as though all directly interested should raise the $500 in a very short time, and he spoke hopefully of the scheme being a success. This brought to an end the actual business of the evening.

CHILDREN TIED TO BED.

BUT THAT DID NOT PREVENT ONE OF THEM STARTING A FIRE.

Department Called Out by the Blaze —Children Rescued by a Neighbor.

When Mrs. Peter Reuter left her rooms on the second floor of 313 East Fourth street, Friday morning at 11 o'clock, to go to the grocers, she left her two small children tied to the bedstead, and the kitchen door shut. When she returned the kitchen was ablaze, but the children were safe out of harm's way. Mrs. William Albert, who lives near by, saw the flames and rescued the children.

Exactly how the fire originated only the children can tell and the fright they received has so far prevented any rational explanation. Mrs. Reuter was called upon early to the grocery and left her children tied fast to the bedstead in the bedroom. She carefully shut the kitchen door. It is supposed that one of the children gained liberty and began to investigate the stove in the kitchen.

Mrs. Albert heard the children's screams and saw the flames through the window. She hurried upstairs and carried the children to a place of safety. Then she started for Joseph Blimm's grocery. On the way she met Mrs. Reuter returning and told her that her children were safe, but the house was on fire. Then she hurried to the store and Joseph Blimm sent in an alarm from box 14. It was then 11:15 o'clock.

When the firemen arrived they found that the interior of the kitchen had been on fire. The neighbors had gathered and an impromptu bucket brigade had gained the mastery over the flames. A stream from the chemical engine speedily extinguished what remained.

The house is owned by Christian Bocker, who occupies the first floor. The damage to the house will possibly reach $35. It is covered by insurance. The loss to the Reuters will be nearly the same. Mrs. Reuter was unable in the excitement to tell whether or not the place was insured.

PUBLIC OPINION.

Gov. Voorhees Shows His Fond Regard For It in Question of Saving the Palisades.

Governor Voorhees, in discussing the question of protecting the Palisades, is quoted as saying:

"The estimates of those who are pushing the movement are entirely too low, so far as the lands in New Jersey are concerned. The value of the lands under water alone in New Jersey is estimated by the Riparian Commission to be fully $1,250,000. I don't know as yet what the sentiment of the Legislature is on the matter. When the Legislators come to understand all the facts, their scope and full import, they will doubtless hesitate to adopt the proposed law. I will say, however, strongly favor the abandonment of the assets of the State amounting to this great value for the purpose of maintaining a public park, the Legislature will no doubt respond thereto.

"Now that public attention has been directed by it to the subject, undoubtedly some expression of views on the part of the people of the State will be forthcoming. I will gladly be advised, however, of what this sentiment may be, I hesitate to express an opinion as to the probable outcome of legislative action.

"To permit the entire water front to be designated by the Commission for park purposes would also deprive the owners of abutting lands of their rights to acquire and improve lands under water, and would properly entitle them to compensation."

Death of Mrs. Ann Whitman.

Last Friday occurred the death of Mrs. Ann Whitman, widow of the late William Barlow Lee, of Washington, D. C., aged 77 years. Mrs. Lee had been living for the past three years with her daughter, Mrs. Charles Aiton, son Mann, 1368 Watchung avenue. She formerly resided in Washington, where she was well known. Death was due to bronchial-pneumonia and was very sudden. The funeral services were held from the residence, 1368 Watchung avenue, last Monday afternoon at 3 o'clock. Interment was in Rock Creek cemetery, Washington.

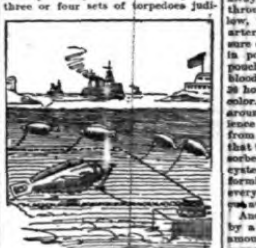
WORLD OF SCIENCE.

New System of Harbor Protection Invented in France.

Automobile Gun Carriages for Use in South Africa—Some Notable Triumphs in the Field of Surgery.

[Special New York Letter.]

A METHOD of protecting harbors recently introduced in France is so complete and effective that it must appeal to those who have the preservation of the coast cities of the United States in charge. It is particularly suitable for use in New York harbor, which has several narrow entrances. It would thus be impossible for a hostile ship to pass after this system has been put in operation. It may be repeated indefinitely, but three or four sets of torpedoes judiciously arranged would protect the largest seaport. Four blocks of stone are set in the harbor bottom, upon which are mounted four wheels. An endless chain is stretched around these wheels, forming a large square. Along this chain, at regular intervals, about 16 cables are attached, which at their other end are joined to large fish torpedoes. These float below the surface at just the height required for striking an enemy's vessel, but are so arranged as to be harmless and leave the harbor open when the chain is not in motion. But when protection is desired machinery on shore moves the chain continuously and the apparatus is ready for deadly work. If a ship escape one torpedo in the field of a chain, the progressive movement brings another immediately into its place.



ENDLESS CHAIN OF TORPEDOES.

The Boer war has stimulated the brains of inventors of war machinery to unwonted exertion. Machine guns behind almost any kind of fortification have been found effectual for mowing down the largest attacking forces both of cavalry and infantry, and a great deal has been devised of some means of protecting gunners within range of the fire of an enemy whom they wish to dislodge.

The armored train used by the British has given very satisfactory results but, running along a narrow track, are at best only useful for defense. Experts have long been giving their attention towards perfecting an engine which would serve the same purpose on land that a warship does upon the sea, and which could be easily transported over rough roads or up steep grades. The first to succeed, however, seems to be Frederick R. Simms, of London, England, and he is said to have already secured patents in this country. His engine has two revolving turrets, protected with strong steel plates, as are those on all warships. A man sits inside each turret and operates a Gatling gun. Below are the men who keep him supplied with ammunition. The car is shaped much like a cigar. No bullet could penetrate its thick sides, which are better protected if they are rounded so as to deflect all striking missiles. A solid shot from a cannon, if not turned aside, might penetrate the armor. The only real danger to the gunners, however, is from the shock of a shell bursting above or below which might disable or overturn the car.

Science seems not to be very consistent. While some of its devotees are giving all their efforts towards destroying as many as possible of their fellow-beings, others are devoting assiduously to prolong the lives of individuals. A recent death in Russia furnished opportunity for a post-mortem, a sequel to an operation performed two years ago which was of special interest. It was done by Dr. Krantsky, one of the greatest of surgeons. A wealthy reindeer farmer named Puttinkoch, living north of St. Petersburg, was thrown violently from his sleigh. His right thigh, striking a snag, received a jagged wound about four inches long, in line with the femoral artery, which supplies the leg with blood. This artery was severed, and badly bruised. In a short time a bluish tint became visible at the end of the great toe, a symptom of gangrene. The injured man was at once removed to an operating room. Dr. Krantsky had been watching the case closely and was prepared with an appliance for a novel experiment.

After an anesthetic had been administered the wound was cleansed and the tissue dissected away from the bruised portion of the artery, which was almost in a condition of disintegration. A clamp was placed upon it about an inch above where actual tissue began and the healthy portion severed from the diseased part. Dr. Krantsky then took a small, elastic, colorless tube about five inches long, and of his own construction. He cut a longitudinal slit and slipped the end of the severed artery into it to the distance of an inch, keeping the hollow tube collapsed to prevent air from entering. The same process was repeated at the lower end of the artery, and the clamp then removed. The clamp above was now taken away, allowing the blood to stream through. The tube was laid in the hollow, whence the injured part of the artery had been removed. It was covered over with the muscles and tissues held it in position and kept the walls from pouching from the pressure of the blood. The wound was closed, and in 20 hours the toe had regained its usual color. In two months the patient was around as usual, showing no inconvenience from the wound. After his death from pneumonia, examination showed that the composition tube had been absorbed by the blood after having imparted with sound tissue, the latter forming walls for the artery equal in every respect to those which had been two away five years before.

Another surgical triumph, this time by a dentist, has created quite an amount of attention, both because the operation has always been considered impossible, and from the local prominence of the patient, Rev. A. B. Livermore, rector of the leading Episcopal church in Delhi, N. Y., and graduate of Princeton, '77. About 18 months ago a swelling, accompanied by severe pain, appeared on the right side of the clergyman's face. It forced him to resign his charge. He was advised to go to the Massachusetts homeopathic hospital, where a small piece of the jawbone was taken out for bacteriological examination. He was informed by the surgeons that he was suffering from that rare disease, endothelioma, which attacks the bones of the head in a manner resembling cancer. It causes the bones to decay and disintegrate until the brain is attacked, when death supervenes. It has long been considered fatal. In the case of Mr. Livermore it was believed that he might live six months. He was told, however, that he had one chance for recovery in one hundred if the whole right side of his lower jaw were removed. It was thickened to about four times its normal size. If he survived the operation, he would not be able to articulate plainly or masticate solid food, as there had not been any means found for successfully applying a substitute for a lower jaw. The operation would result in stopping the progress of the disease, but Mr. Livermore was unable to speak and compelled to live upon liquids, as the remaining portion of his jaw refused to heal. Indeed, his mental condition was terrible. The surgeon who had removed his jaw consulted a young dentist, Dr. Frederick Freeman, of Boston, in regard to the case. Dr. Freeman promptly executed some most excellent work in the surgery.

After examining the patient, the dentist made the necessary plaster casts of the parts of the mouth remaining and worked day and night for over a month, getting to make an artificial lower jaw that would perform the work of a natural one. A horizontal rotary movement was demanded as well as the up and down motion. All of the patient's teeth were filed to uniform regularity and those in the lower jaw crowned. Those in the new gutta percha jaw were placed in such a manner as to obtain the best results by contact with the natural ones. The vertical motion was obtained by a ball and socket joint riveted at the rear of the artificial jaw and the rotary movement by a small bar sliding in a tube attached to this. In November the work was complete, and after a little practice Mr. Livermore was able to speak freely and to masticate the hardest of foods. It had taken four models and a large part of two months spent in a dental chair, unrelieved by any anesthetic, to complete the triumph. Within a week after the new jaw was finally in place the clergyman preached a sermon of thanksgiving in St. John's Episcopal church in Boston. He is now master of a preparatory school for boys in Nashotah, Wis.

EDWARD JULIAN.

One Grateful Son.

"This," said the guide, "is the grave of Adam!"

Illustrious spot! With reverential awe, say, with a feeling of deep thankfulness, the wealthy merchant tailor on his first trip to the orient drew near and cast a flower on the tomb.

"Dying ancestor," he murmured, "I should be the last one to grudge earth to reptile your memory! To your sin I owe my prosperity!"—Chicago Tribune.

IS A WOMAN'S CHURCH.

First Baptist Sanctuary at Columbus, O., Is as Comfortable as Any Playhouse.

The people of Columbus cannot complain that they have no church as comfortable as the theater. It has for years been a stock complaint among the males of any family that church seats were uncomfortable, and for that reason they did not care to attend Sunday services. They have also said that the air was bad and they were not allowed the same liberty as in a theater. If they were uncomfortable they could not get up and go out a few minutes, for there was no place to go except into the street.

Women have also complained of this matter and for years the theaters of the different cities have been a standing research as to the churches. The comfortable lounging rooms, the convenient dressing rooms, the easy chairs, and the resting spots have all been conspicuous by their absence.

But a church has just been finished in Columbus which is a triumph to those who designed it; they are said to be the women of the church. It is the First Baptist church, and it is unique in its arrangements for the comforts of both the men and women of the congregation, though it must be admitted that the plans are more for the women than for the men.

Looking in the church you would be reminded a little of a theater, for there is a lobby and there are "boxes," fire escapes and a check-room for wraps. There is also that which no theater has—a kitchen and a dining-room; besides these there is a bicycle parlor.

The temple stands on Broad street, three-quarters of a mile from the state capitol. It is placed 60 feet back from the street drive and has a 12-foot driveway on the west and 32 feet of lawn on the east.

The temple is built of a light bluish sandstone and has a red tile roof.

All the social rooms are very completely furnished. The halls and corridors also are finished in colored marbles and valuable hard wood.

Looking through the arched openings by which the foyer is connected with the auditorium, one sees first circular rows of quarter-sawed oak pews, divided by aisles, in which a new and striking color has been introduced, and then the minister's platform, immediately back of which the great organ and the space occupied by the choir of 40 voices, which leads in the singing that is so much a feature in the temple services.

PLANNED BY WOMEN.

(Interior of Sitting-Room in New Columbus Baptist Church.)

The platform, which is bare of everything resembling the old-fashioned pulpit, its furniture being a comfortable tete-a-tete, a small ebony table and an easy stand of flowers, is surmounted by an unmistakable proscenium arch and has boxes at the right and left.

These are really retiring rooms, furnished to correspond with the foyer, but the heavy plush curtains that hang in the arched openings permit the spaces to be utilized for seating purposes whenever necessary. The floor of the auditorium has a decided slope to it, as has also the spacious gallery that circles around it, and the further ends of which gracefully swell to correspond with the box effect below.—Chicago Democrat.

The Onion as a Medicine.

Onions are a kind of all-round good medicine. A whole onion eaten at bedtime will, by the next morning, break the most obstinate cold. Onion is a good plaster to remove inflammation and hoarseness. If an onion is mashed so as to secure all the juice in it it will make a most remarkable smelling substance that will quiet the most nervous person. The strength of the plaster for a few moments will dull the sense of smell and weaken the nerves until sleep is produced from sheer exhaustion. It all comes from one property possessed by the onion, and that is a form of opium.

Excellent Cough Mixture.

Take two ounces of honey, four ounces of treacle, seven ounces of best vinegar, mix them in an enameled saucepan and simmer over the fire for a quarter of an hour. When cool add two drachms of ipecacuanha wine. Take one tablespoonful every three hours. This mixture is particularly good for children.

Chinese Women Are Barred.

Maiwatchin, on the borders of Russia, is the only town in the world exclusively inhabited by men. The Chinese women are not allowed to live in this town, and they are even forbidden to pass the great wall of Kalkan, used to enter Mongolia. All the Chinese of this border town are traders.

Elephants Used as Nurses.

Siamese women entrust their children to the care of elephants, who are careful never to hurt the little creatures. If danger threatens, the gigantic animal will put the child gently up in his trunk, and swing it up and out of harm's way upon its own broad back.

FATHER SMYTH MAY GO

MENTIONED FOR APPOINTMENT TO THE JERSEY CITY PARISH.

Death of Father Deane Left Important Pulpit Vacant—Bishop Wigger Will Decide Who Is to Fill It.

The rumor that Rev. Father Smyth, rector of St. Mary's R. C. church in this city, may be transferred to one of the largest parishes in Jersey City has been received with universal regret by the members of the local parish and Rev. Father Smyth's many other friends in this city. Whether such an event will come to pass it is now impossible to say.

Rev. Father Sennes, rector of St. Mary's church in Jersey City, died a few weeks ago and made it necessary that a successor should be appointed. It was but natural that Rev. Father Smyth, of this city, should be mentioned as one of the leading priests of this section. The decision lays with Bishop Wigger, of Newark, who is now in Palestine, and will return next month.

Rev. Father Smyth has shown himself perfectly capable of handling a large parish and has made himself greatly beloved by his parishioners. By others outside of his denomination he has been recognized as a man of great ability and intelligence, and his broadminded views have resulted in very satisfactory relations with the other churches of the city. It may be that the bishop will decide that such a valuable man should be given a greater charge. Meanwhile nothing will be done until the bishop announces his decision in the matter.

PLAN FOR A SOCIABLE.

Park Avenue Christian Endeavor Society Met Thursday Night.

One of the most interesting of the monthly meetings of the Christian Endeavor Society of the Park Avenue Baptist church was that held at the home of Joseph Hawkins Thursday. Though the weather was disagreeable, the attendance was quite satisfactory. The meeting proved to be of much interest to the members of the society. The monthly reports which were submitted were of interest and showed the society to be in a flourishing condition. It was decided to hold a sociable Thursday, March 15th, the place to be selected at a future date. After the meeting the young folks passed the evening playing games and with music.

ENTERTAINED EUCHRE CLUB.

Thursday Evening Club Members Were the Guests of Miss Lillian A. Force.

The Thursday Evening Euchre Club was entertained last Thursday by Miss Lillian A. Force at her home, 62 Duer street, and the members had a delightful time. The play resulted in Miss Ella Howell making the highest score for the ladies, and she received a picture, "Lost in the Snow." Leonard G. Smith made the highest score for the gentlemen, and he received a handsome thermometer.

During the evening the members greatly enjoyed the piano selections by Miss Maxson and the violin playing of Arthur Mosher. A feature was the genuine sociability on the part of all. Before the guests dispersed they were served with refreshments by the hostess.

The Best of All.

Of the many pretty calendars for 1900, the "Little Housewife" art calendar is the best for the home. The six sections of bright, pretty children's faces will cheer and gladden any household. There are six beautiful groups, in water-color designs, by Frances Brundage, the famous painter of children; each group in 12 colors and size 10x12½ inches, on fine Whitman paper; bound together at top with silk ribbon, making the prettiest and most artistic collection of water-color reproduction ever issued. Each of the six sheets contains two months' dates, being a complete calendar of the year 1900. This calendar is sent free to all subscribers to Frank Leslie's Popular monthly for 1900, the giant of the one dollar magazines, together with the November and December numbers, 1899, of the January and February issues, 1900. Frank Leslie Publishing House, 141-143 Fifth avenue, New York.

New Real Estate Firm.

One of the strongest real estate firms that has ever been organized in this city has come through the partnership formed by F. Ford MacDonald and S. B. Struthers. Both members of the firm are men of well-known business capacity and responsibility, and will undoubtedly do much towards building up Plainfield. Their office is located at 153 North avenue, where Mr. Struthers is in charge. They are also agents for a number of first-class insurance companies.

Brokaw Firm Sold.

The Isaac N. Brokaw farm, consisting of 120 acres, said located at New Market, was sold last week to Lewis D. Walker. Just what Mr. Walker will do with the place has not yet been decided.

Harry Pennoyer, of Orchard place, has returned from a visit with Newark friends.

HEALTH BOARD ORGANIZE

DR. MURRAY CHOSEN PRESIDENT FOR THE ENSUING YEAR.

Campaign to be Made Against the Unsanitary Method of Collecting Kitchen Garbage.

The new Plainfield Board of Health has opened its campaign. Its movements will be watched with interest. Some of the acts of the old Board were, to put it mildly, not popular. When the Mayor appointed three members of the Board at the beginning of the year, he made an entire change in the personnel. Since then there has been some wonderment as to whether the new Board would conduct its campaign in behalf of the good health of the city on different lines from those of the old.

The new Board held it first meeting Friday afternoon. The members present were Dr. W. H. Murray, Dr. B. Van D. Hodges, Herman Weber and Fred W. Dunn. Former Mayor Charles J. Fisk, the other member of the Board, is in Lakewood for his health, and so was unable to attend the meeting.

The organization of the Board was effected as follows: President Dr. William H. Murray; secretary, Dr. B. Van D. Hodges; engineer, Fred W. Dunn; inspector, William Addis, jr.

The principal discussion was regarding the present unsanitary methods of collecting the kitchen garbage. The Board of Health ordinance provides that all garbage collectors shall have a permit before they can collect and dispose of garbage. It also provides for proper sanitary arrangements in collecting the garbage.

Evidence was brought before the Board to show that the needful precautions were not taken by many of the present collectors and that only eight out of the score who are now collecting the garbage have secured permits. One man was particularly recommended to the Board as having complied with all the rules on the subject and having well-equipped wagons.

Since the departure of the Plainfield Sanitary Company, there have been many collectors who have sprung up and are now doing more or less business. Some have wagons equipped in the correct manner, while others merely use an ordinary wagon and cover up the garbage with burlaps. It is the latter who will receive the attention of the Board.

WANT TO GO OVERHEAD.

CRANFORD ASKED FOR ANOTHER PRIVILEGE BY TROLLEY.

Necessary to Construct a New Loop in Tracks to Approach B. and O. Crossing.

Colonel Edwin W. Hine, secretary of the Westfield and Elizabeth Street Railway Company, visited Cranford Thursday and was before a special meeting of the Township Committee, at which time he presented a map, showing a proposed loop for an overhead crossing for the trolley line over the tracks of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad at South avenue.

The map showed that the tracks of the trolley line would leave South avenue at grade crossing through private property on the south side of the avenue, making an ellipse, returning again to South avenue at grade. Where the bridge would be built a cut of 12 feet exists, and it would only be necessary to raise the trolley tracks a few feet in order to effect the crossing, which would complete the line from Plainfield to Elizabeth.

Chairman Cromwell, of the Township Committee, stated that the Committee could not grant the desired privilege until the next regular meeting. Colonel Hine requested that the Committee express themselves as satisfied with the plan in order that the contracts might be let and the work proceeded with. Chairman Cromwell contended that the company should macadamize the intervening roadway between the points of departure and return on the trolley tracks, which Colonel Hine agreed the company would do. Chairman Cromwell then asked the Committeemen present to signify their assent to the proposed plan, which was given unanimously. Colonel Hine was assured that the resolution would be granted at the next meeting.

SPRING ELECTION.

Much Interest in Union County Knot on Account of Election of Freeholders.

Much interest is being evinced in the approaching spring elections in Union county, as a member of the Board of Freeholders is to be elected in each of eight townships of the county in addition to the other township officials. Most of the present Freeholders will be candidates for re-election, and some of them will meet, it is said, with strong opposition. The Republican supremacy in the Board, however, will not be changed by the outcome of the contests, as there are now six holdover Republicans for the next Board of eighteen members, and they are sure of electing four more on the results.

THE LIQUOR LICENSES GRANTED BY COUNCIL.

Appropriation of $200 Made to Aid in Establishment of Public Fountain.

EQUAL SUM TO BE RAISED.

FOUNTAIN WILL BE LOCATED OPPOSITE NORTH AVENUE STATION.

Michael Watson Granted a License in His Own Name—Scheuer and Galbraith Licenses Withdrawn at Last Moment.

The questions of liquor licenses and a public drinking fountain occupied the attention of the Common Council at its adjourned meeting Feb. 28th, and after considerable discussion both came out even. By this action both the supporters of licenses and the devotees of pure water ought to feel satisfied. The Council did its best for each side and the consciences feels relieved to some extent at least.

Fifteen applications for liquor licenses were granted by the Council, all being renewals with the exception of one—Michael F. Watson. The latter has applied for a license a great many times but last night he was successful for the first time. His place on Grant avenue was conducted last year by Michael Welsh, and Mr. Watson felt encouraged to try this year and secure a license for himself. His determination was rewarded, and this shows a long fight between the city and Mr. Watson, which has not been altogether advantageous for the city from a financial standpoint.

The licenses granted are as follows: John H. Staats, Henry Haurand, J. H. McVey, J. E. Beerbower, Jacob Bimm, Bernard Clark, Michael F. Watson, Henry F. Windham, Joseph A. Bietz, John Rafferty, A. D. Findley, Daniel Galbraith, Chas. Schantz, Eastern Bottling Association and Frank Linke. The last two named are for wholesale licenses. H. Scheuer & Co., for a wholesale license, and Patrick Galbraith, for a saloon license, were withdrawn.

Councilman James Craig voted against every application presented both for the privilege of selling liquor and for running an inn and tavern. Those who voted for the licenses were Messrs. Dumont, Corlell, Clifton, Meldrum Tolles, Buckle, Smith, Gloak, Lee and vanHerwerden. The latter did not arrive until 8:30 o'clock, and therefore did not have the chance of voting for the first nine applications. He voted for the remaining six and would probably have voted for the others had he been present. The applications were presented by Mr. Gloak, chairman of the license committee, and voted upon separately. The only remonstrance received against the granting of the licenses was from the Society of Friends, and that was referred to the license committee.

The question of licenses having been settled, the next important matter was introduced by Mr. Corlell. On behalf of the Loyal Temperance Legion, he presented a communication from this organization in which an appropriation was asked for the public drinking fountain which it is proposed to erect on North avenue in front of the office of E. C. Mulford & Son. This communication was presented to last year's Council and was referred to the present body. Mr. Corlell stated that he presented it at this time at the urgent request of Mrs. Julia Case, who had stated that if the Council would appropriate the sum of $200 the plan would be feasible, as the balance, about $300, was practically assured. On this ground Mr. Corlell offered a resolution that the Council appropriate the sum of $200 from the general fund for that purpose.

Mr. Dumont thought a good fountain could be purchased for $200 and he expressed the opinion that $500 was too much to pay. He doubted whether the Council had the right to vote the sum at all.

Mr. Buckle stated that as the Council had just granted licenses to sell liquor it only looked graceful to petition to furnish water. He said that the city last year received the sum of $2,100 from new licenses and he thought the Council should grant the request.

Mr. Corlell explained that the fountain is to be an extra fine one, and is to be provided with an arrangement for the use of ice in summer time so that any one can get a drink of ice water. It is to be illuminated by electricity, and the lighting and water is to be furnished free of cost. It is also to be provided with an arrangement whereby horses can drink from it. He urged the granting of the request.

Mr. Meilick favored a fountain, but thought that $200 was too much to give toward it. He offered a resolution substituting the sum of $100 instead of $200. This amendment was lost. Messrs. Buckle, Craig, Corlell, Gloak, Tolles and Smith voted against it, while Messrs. Clifton, Dumont, Lee, Meilick and vanHeerwerden voted for it. Mr. Dumont then moved that the sum of $200 be appropriated for the fountain, provided that the Loyal Temperance Legion raises a like sum. This motion was adopted, all voting for it with the exception of Mr. Craig, who voted no.

President Smith stated for the benefit of the Council that a communication was received Tuesday evening by the police board from the officials of the Potter & Campbell Printing Press Works complaining about the number of boys who are becoming a nuisance about the works. He said that the Board would attend to the matter.

Mr. Tolles offered a resolution giving the street and sewer committee authority to advertise for bids for crushed stone, culverts and crosswalks. After the Council voted to grant the usual batch of hackmen's licenses after the fees are paid, Council adjourned.

BAPTIST SUNDAY-SCHOOL

ANNUAL MEETING OF FIRST CHURCH SOCIETY THURSDAY.

Reports of Various Officers Showed Condition of School to be in Excellent Shape.

The annual meeting of the Sunday-school of the First Baptist church was held Thursday in the lecture room of the church. Owing to the stormy night the attendance was not large. Superintendent G. H. Batchelor presided over the meeting.

Treasurer F. W. Jones reported the school to be in a good financial condition. There is a balance of $250 in the missionary fund and $200 in the school treasury. George P. Brown, chairman of the finance committee, reported that the income now is sufficient to conduct the school in a very satisfactory manner. The report of W. O. Chapman, of the Christmas committee, presented an unusual report. It showed a surplus of $5 after all expenses had been met. Frank W. Jones, chairman of the executive committee, reported that every bill had been paid and there is no deficit, which is also an unusual result. Generally there is always a small deficit in this department of work.

Miss Laura J. Runyon, superintendent of the home department, presented an encouraging report, showing an increase in membership and collections. Miss Ida Ferree, chairman of the benevolent committee, reported a balance of $15 on hand. During the year $35 was expended for the poor of the church. L. H. Biglow, Jr., from the committee having in charge the work of re arranging the Sunday-school room and making some improvements, reported that the work had been done satisfactorily.

The missionary committee, of which O. W. McCutchen is the chairman, reported that $300 was expended during the year for missionary purposes, and there is a balance on hand of $250. A report was received from Charles Conover, secretary of the Mt. Olive Sunday-school, showing an increase in attendance and collections. This school is now practically self-supporting.

The excursion committee for this year informed the members present that July 7th is the date set for the excursion to Asbury Park. This date has been reserved by the railroad company for this school.

At this time the election of officers took place. George H. Batchelor was re-elected superintendent, and he appoints his two assistants, who will probably be the present incumbents, Geo. F. Brown and L. H. Biglow, Jr. W. O. Chapman was elected secretary, but afterward resigned, as he is soon to leave the city. The office was left vacant for the present. Douglass Drake was chosen assistant secretary; F. W. Jones treasurer and B. J. Shreve librarian. M. C. Dobbins was re-elected superintendent of the Mt. Olive Sunday-school and Charles Conover was re-elected secretary of this school. The latter resigned and this office was left vacant. This concluded the business of the evening.

His Aunt Leaves Him $40,000.

Antonia Serlance, an employe of a New Brunswick tire factory, found out last August that he had an aunt living in Marburg, Austria, where he was born. She was glad to hear from her nephew, and sent him money to pay his passage across to pay her a visit. She became fond of him, and urged him to remain with her, but after a two months' visit he returned to his wife and family in New Brunswick. He received official notification from Dr. Lorber, of Marburg, Thursday that Mrs. Schram, his aunt, had died, leaving him $40,000. Dr. Lorber is the executor.

Dover Street Opening.

Mayor Smalley, of the borough, is meeting with good success in his efforts to raise the sum of $500 toward the opening up of Dover street into this city, and he believes that in a short time the amount will be realized. The balance of the expense has been provided for and there is every reason to believe that the project will be successful and that before the coming summer passes it will be a reality.

CAPITOL ELEVATORS.

Their Introduction Brought About After a Long Struggle.

Fat Men Even Could Not Agree as to Their Value—Ten Years Senate and House Wrangled Over the Matter.

[Special Washington Letter.]

THE pictures of the capitol building which show the east front are published broadcast so that everybody in the land has a good idea of the appearance of the palatial structure. There are three entrances to the capitol, by broad staircases, but they are seldom used.

The senate and house entrances have beautiful white marble steps, but the rotunda entrance is approached by old red sandstone steps. Beneath these stairways are wide driveways, and there are basement doors and entrances because there are basement entrances which lead to elevators. Therefore the beautiful stairways are seldom used. Without them, however, the symmetry of the building would be destroyed.

Strangers in Washington usually mount the stairs from the outside, for they would never think of going through the dark driveways beneath. Some of this paper, when they come to the national capital, will learn that it is better and easier to go in beneath the stairs where they will find broad doors entering wide halls. At each door a capitol policeman will be found, and also authorized guides, who will show the way to the elevators, so that they may go to the main floor without the toil and fatigue of stair climbing; for it is tiresome, particularly to ladies, to go upstairs, even at home. If it had been left to women to invent stairs they would never have been invented.

There are six elevators in the capitol; two in the house wing, one in the rotunda and three in the senate wing. Three of the elevators are set aside for the exclusive use of dignitaries, and three are for all people to use. The two elevators in the house wing are open to all comers. This is because the house is composed of direct representatives of the people, and it would not be wise for them to be exclusive. Some of their people might come on here and be annoyed or angry if they should find anything aristocratic at that end of the capitol.

One of the house elevators leads to the house floor entrance by the speaker's room, and the other one goes to the entrance of the press gallery. Both of them go up to the public galleries. The former is used by a majority of the members of congress, not nobody is ever excluded who wants to ride in either one of them.

The elevator in the rotunda is reserved for members of the supreme court and for attorneys practicing before that court. It is also used by employes of the court. This elevator was burned out last summer, when a fire broke out in the rotunda basement, but a new one is now in operation, and it is probably the handsomest and the best one in the capitol building.

Very near the basement entrance of the senate wing is the public elevator. Everybody is entitled to the privilege of riding in this elevator, but the other elevators are for the use of senators exclusively from the general public. One of them bears a sign: "Exclusively for congress and supreme court." The supreme court is mentioned on this sign because members of the court have the same entrance instead of driving to the central part of the capitol, where their exclusive elevator is running. Senators use this elevator because it is near the senate restaurant, and those dignified statesmen do not like to be crowded and jostled by the plain people.

The other exclusive elevator is on the west side of the senate wing, and is used exclusively by senators and newspaper men. It leads to the senate reception room, as well as to the floor of the senate and the senate galleries. Not only is this elevator exclusive, but the corridor approaching it is kept from public use. A watchman is stationed there, and he will not admit anyone to even enter the corridor. Of course, if you are accompanied by a senator the watchman says nothing, because senators can do as they please, and take with them whosoever they desire. But no citizen is allowed to use that corridor or elevator who comes there alone. No exception to this rule is ever made.

Two of these elevators have steam power, and four of them are run by electricity. The two platforms in the house wing are of old style and they move very slowly. The supreme court elevator and the three in the senate wing have electric power, and they move very swiftly. Many people individually use the elevators a number of times each day. Consequently the aggregate number carried amounts to several thousand daily. They are almost always crowded when the senate and house of representatives are in session.

It may seem singular now to state that the congress debated the subject of elevators for ten years before making appropriations for them, although elevators were used in all large buildings in the principal cities. In 1870, when your correspondent first visited this city, there was no elevator in the marble building, but the subject of making appropriations for that purpose was under consideration. Year after year efforts were made to secure appropriations for this purpose, but they were thwarted by the alleged "economists," the principal objector being William S. Holman, of Indiana, who was called "the watchdog of the treasury." At that time Mr. Holman was chairman of the house committee on appropriations, and he possessed power sufficient to block all appropriations which did not meet with his approval. He declared that "representatives who were too lazy to walk upstairs ought not to be in congress," and he would "not consent to have the people's money wasted in that manner."

However, just about 20 years ago, when another man had the chairmanship of the committee on appropriations, an agreement was reached whereby appropriations were made for two elevators; one for the senate and one for the house of representatives. That was the beginning. Four others have since been added, and it is expected that two more will be added during the present session for the senate and one for the house of representatives. Nobody now objects, because everybody concedes that elevators are a public necessity, and that two more will be required for the accommodation of the general public.

In the Forty-sixth congress when the first appropriations were made, and in several preceding congresses, there were two fat men in congress who took opposite sides of the question of appropriations for elevators. Gustave Schleicher, of Texas, was a tall man and very large. He advocated elevators because it was so hard for him to climb the long stairways. Philetus Sawyer was a senator from Wisconsin. He was not very tall, but he was so fat that he fairly waddled when he walked. He said that he would rather climb the stairs for exercise than to vote an appropriation for his own convenience. Both of the gentlemen were very popular, and both of them had adherents, and the debate about elevators went on as though the fate of the nation depended upon the settlement of the question. After elevators were placed in the capitol, however, Senator Sawyer admitted that they were fine modern conveniences, and he gave up the exercise of climbing the stairs.

Gustave Schleicher, of Texas, was born in Germany, and spoke with a pronounced foreign accent. One of his strongest supporters was Robert Klotz, a Pennsylvania Dutchman, who spoke excellent English. Schleicher did most of his work by moving about among the members, getting them to vote in favor of elevators, but Klotz made a number of telling speeches in favor of the project.

Speaking of elevators in the capitol for the comfort and convenience of statesmen and of visitors, it is appropriate to say in this connection that, although the stairs on the east front of the capitol are long and cause weariness to those who use them, the stairs on the west front are much longer and harder to climb. The greater part of Washington is built west of the capitol, and all of the best hotels are west of the building. Therefore visitors usually approach the capitol from that direction, and the only means of getting to the street cars at the foot of Capitol hill and climb those stairs. They should not do so. They should remain in the cars, for they go around the capitol grounds and up the hill. There, when you come to Washington, by remaining in the cars you can be carried up the hill, and alight on the level plain of the east front. Then, by walking to the senate or house wing, entering the driveways beneath the marble staircases, you can easily find one of the elevators already described and reach your destination, the main floor of the building, without exertion or loss of breath.

It is also particularly remember that when you enter the house wing of the capitol you are at liberty to take either one of the elevators there. But when you enter the senate wing you should ask the doorman or guide to direct you to the public elevator, and thus avoid the embarrassment of going to one of the exclusive elevators and being told that you cannot use it. Some American citizens don't like to be told anything, but the writer merely sets forth the existing facts, without comment.

SHE RODE 3,562 MILES.

And by This Feat Won a Big Bet for Her Husband.

Traveled Across the Continent on a Wheel, Accompanied by Her Lecturer Maid—Her Many Thrilling Adventures on the Trip.

Mrs. Jack Williams, of Philadelphia, has two possessions which she values beyond price. One is her husband, the other is his word of honor.

To enable him to keep his word it was that she has just completed a journey which no other woman in America has ever taken—a journey that involved nearly four months of hardship and danger that few men would care to face.

She traveled 3,562 miles on a tandem wheel because her husband had said that she could do it.

She crossed the continent from Philadelphia to San Francisco, to make good her husband's signed statement that he could manufacture a wheel which would carry himself and wife the distance designated.

Naturally was his word at stake. There was a wager of a thousand dollars each—all the money saved by the young couple since their wedding day—that they would cross the continent in 90 days, exclusive of Sundays, starting penniless and earning their way as they went.

The start from Philadelphia was made at 7.30 in the morning of August 6. These are some of the things this little woman did, that Philadelphia might not say her husband was a bragger:

She starved and was ragged; she slept in sheds, stables, in a wheat bin, by barbed wire fences, in prairie dugouts, station houses, on the edge of a water tank, in sheepherders' wagons and under shelter made of railroad ties. She dodged engines in dark; slimy tunnels and on high bridges. Here is her own story of her most thrilling adventure on her trip, as told to a New York Journal reporter:

"My first real scare was up in the Ozark mountains, about five miles out of Jefferson City, which is midway between Kansas City and St. Louis. Finding the mountain roads impracticable for riding or walking, I had gone 15 miles out of our way to reach the railroad track. This brought us to the Gasconade bridge, and it was on this dizzy elevation that a freight train disputed the right of way with us.

MRS. JACK WILLIAMS.
(Wheeled Across the Continent to Please Her Husband.)

"It was getting dusk rapidly, and we could not see through the gloom far enough to discern an engine, nor could we hear one for the noise of the rushing waters below. We decided to take chances Gasconade bridge is a third of a mile long, 10 feet of it is a new bridge. As the middle span a freight train thundered down upon us. One has to think and act pretty quickly when in a crisis like that.

"'Crawl under!' shouted my husband.

"I made a dash for the open space and swung over, bracing myself against an abutment of the bridge. Jack held the wheel over and swung beneath the bridge, resting the wheel against the timbers of the bridge between the freight train and the river.

"It seemed hours rather than minutes while the bridge shook with the terrific weight that was tearing over it. All I remember thinking was: 'What a muddy river to drown in!' How we ever crawled up again, I scarcely know. I was nearly dead with nervousness, and sat down on the bridge in the rain to shed some very damp, discouraged tears."

Quaint Servian Customs.

A quaint custom obtains in Servia, where, in some towns, it is usual for the inhabitants to hang a dressed doll, and sometimes two or even three of them, in the principal window of the house. This indicates that there is living there a marriageable woman, sometimes more than one, who is willing and anxious to become a bride. Another Servian custom is that of hanging a small sheaf of grain outside the house. The supposition is that if the grain is stolen there will soon be a wedding in the house; if the lady dwelling within is anxious to wed, the sheaf is hung low, quite within the reach of the suitor, who may possibly be as anxious to steal it as she is to have it stolen.

Not Every Bullet Kills.

In the Cuban war about 90 out of every 118 American soldiers had made complete recoveries. The employment of the modern high-power rifles, with their small bullets, tends to put more soldiers out of the fight temporarily, but actually decreases the mortality. A quarter of the investigation was that a majority of the bullets found lodgment, not in the trunk of the body, but in the arms, legs and head. The proportion in the Spanish-American war was 60 in the legs, 30 in the arms, 20 in the body and two in the head and neck, out of every hundred bullets that hit a human target.

CHRISTIANS CO-OPERATE.

FEDERATION OF CHURCHES TO UNITE ALL CHRISTENDOM.

Dr. Laidlaw Tells of the Christian Advance Made in the Good Work Accomplished in New York City.

A mere handful of people, including Rev. Dr. Main, Rev. J. G. McKeown and Rev. Dr. Terhune, were present in the lecture room of the Crescent Avenue church last Thursday to listen to the talk of Dr. Laidlaw, of New York city, who spoke in relation to "Christian Co-operation."

The speaker told of the work accomplished in New York in building up the Federation in the various assembly districts throughout the city. All churches of whatever denomination are represented in the Central Federation by sub-organizations. The work was begun in 1896 by a house to house canvass made by committees appointed for this purpose. The result of the canvass at first was a surprise, from the fact that a large number of people were found who did not attend any church. In one block north of Fifty-ninth street, between Tenth and Eleventh avenues, great numbers of Episcopalians were discovered who did not attend any church. This block was found to be the most densely populated of any in the city. As a result of the canvass an Episcopal church was established there after five months' work.

In reference to the libraries, Dr. Laidlaw said that much good had resulted from their establishment in the tenement house localities. Next to the Bible he thought good books were of the most importance. Some of these libraries had been established by the Young Women's Christian Association and the Anti Basement Club. The establishment of the "Hartley Home" was an industrial institution which had been made possible by the work of the Federation.

The speaker outlined briefly the methods employed in making the canvass in the various wards and how 100 churches were officially interested, having nineteen branches. He said much good had also been accomplished in the way of civic moral reform. In the Twenty first Assembly district the Federation, he claimed, had been the means of preventing the granting of certain licenses. In closing Dr. Laidlaw expressed the opinion that better success would be obtained if the teaching of religion was not cut out of the curriculum of the schools. He thought the churches should show their gratitude toward the State, which had exempted their churches and schools from taxation, by doing what it could to transform every voter into a type of voter who would be useful to the State. This could the better be accomplished by exerting a higher influence through religious instruction.

A MODERN REFRIGERATOR.

Excellent Service That Smalley Bros. here Now Afford to Meet Line.

Smalley Bros., the North avenue butchers, have just placed in their shop one of the finest refrigerators in the State. It occupies considerable space in a prominent position and is constantly attracting the attention of passersby and patrons. The firm is now able to furnish their many patrons with capons, roasting chickens, broilers, turkeys, squabs, sweet breads, etc. Delicacies in and out of season will be kept. This is made possible through the very perfect arrangement of the refrigerator, a place being reserved for the perfect keeping of game, etc.

This refrigerator is finished in hard wood. The front is especially attractive, being of handsome tiling and large mirrors. One can stand outside and see the choice cuts of meat, game, etc., hanging up inside, and it presents a tempting sight. The firm are pleased to have anyone call and see the refrigerator and show them the latest improvements.

MAY BE COSTLY DOG BITE.

Young Man Sues A. E. Knopf in the Union County Court.

Having been badly lacerated by a savage dog belonging to August E. Knopf, a rich New York importer, living in Linden township, Anton Walter, a young man, also of the township, Thursday brought a suit for $1,000 damages in the Union County Court.

Anton Walter was so badly bitten on the leg by the vicious brute that he was confined to his home for some weeks, and says he is still suffering from his injuries. The suit will be tried at the May term of the court.

WOMEN FAVOR THE NEW SCHOOL BILL.

Mrs. Florence Howe Hall Spoke Before Legislative School Committee.

GOOD POINTS BROUGHT OUT.

KINDERGARTEN AGE REDUCED FROM FIVE TO FOUR YEARS.

Compulsory Education Idea and Appointment of Medical Inspectors Thought to Be Excellent Features of the Measure.

In connection with the movement to revise the school laws of this State one of the most important meetings was held at Trenton last week when Mrs. Emily G. Williamson, president of the State Federation of Women's Clubs; Mrs. Florence Howe Hall, chairman of the department of education of the federation; Miss Belle Snyder, of Montclair, and Mrs. David Miller, of Elizabeth, members of the Legislative committee of the federation, were given a hearing in the Senate chamber before the Senate committee to whom the new school law referred by the special committee appointed to revise the school laws.

The committee of women before the Senate committee were unanimous in their support of the bill. Mrs. Williamson spoke strongly in favor of it, saying that she had read a number of school bills in force in other states, but she thought this new bill was the most complete she had ever seen, and had the interest of every child in the State at heart.

Mrs. Hall spoke more in detail concerning certain features of the bill. She was favorably impressed with the section which provides that which provides compulsory education and deals equitably with the disorderly scholar. She spoke in favor of the appointment of medical inspectors as being a good thing. She cited the good accomplished in Plainfield through the medical inspectors there. The women thanked the committee for their consideration in allowing women to vote at school elections and to serve as school trustees. The section providing for transportation of scholars by trolley and allowing Boards of Education to make contract with trolley companies to carry them was spoken of favorably. This provision is considered a very good one and makes educational facilities comparatively easy to those who are obliged to come a distance.

The additional power given to the State superintendent and the manner of taking school census and its effect on the division of the State school money, were spoken of in a favorable light by the women.

The women were appreciative of the courtesy extended them by the Senate committee in allowing them to appear before them and to be heard regarding the new bill. It is the opinion of the women that the bill is a most excellent one and should meet with general approval throughout the State.

$1,400 FOR MISSIONS.

Excellent Financial Report of Women's Home Missionary Society of Crescent Avenue Church.

The annual meeting of the Woman's Home Missionary Society of the Crescent Avenue church was held Friday afternoon in the chapel. Mrs. I. C. Pierson, president of the society, presided. The report of the secretary, Miss Mary Ketcham, was then read, and showed that a great deal of work had been accomplished during the year among the mountain whites of North Carolina, and in Utah and Alaska. Mrs. Wm. Myers, treasurer, reported the financial condition of the society to be good. During the year the sum of about $1,400 was received. Mrs. Halloway, superintendent of literature on home mission work, gave an interesting report.

The following officers were then elected: President, Mrs. I. C. Pierson; vice-president, Mrs. Oliver King; secretary, Miss Mary Ketcham; treasurer, Mrs. William Myers. After the election those present had the pleasure of listening to an address by Mrs. F. H. Pierson, of Elizabeth, who is secretary of the Presbyterial Home Mission Board of the Elizabeth Presbytery.

A feature of the meeting was the vocal selection by a trio, Mrs. Ann Collier, Miss Zella Jackson and Miss Jessie Stewart. Following the meeting a social and tea was given.

Settled Out of Court.

The contract case of Duffy against Krauser, in Justice Mattison's court, was settled Saturday out of court. The plaintiff was represented by Francis J. Bietz, of the legal partnership of Murphy & Bietz, and the defendant by S. S. Swackhamer, of Coddington & Swackhamer.

REPUBLICANS SERENE; DEMOCRATS CONTRARY

Political Primaries for Nomination of Candidates for Borough Offices.

G. O. P. SLATE WAS FIXED.

DEMOCRATS DENOUNCE REPORTS OF BOROUGH OFFICERS.

Full Ticket Named by Republicans — Contest for Office of Constable in the Ranks of the Democrats.

It required about ten minutes for the Republicans of the borough to complete the business at their primary held in the basement of the Somerset street public school Saturday evening. The Republicans and Democrats had arranged to meet at the same hour and place, but the latter gave way to the Republicans who met first. Mayor Smalley called the meeting to order and Former Mayor Charles Place was made chairman. Borough Clerk Frank Rowley was chosen secretary.

The attendance of Republicans was not large in fact they were not needed, as everything was "fixed." After the call was read the nominations were made. Councilman Harrison Coddington was renominated for Council, and Charles A. Lee was nominated for the position in the Council left vacant by Murray Burtis, whose term has expired.

Joseph Lanzer was nominated for Justice of the Peace for the full term, five years, which position has been held by Justice Mattison. Someone nominated the latter to succeed himself, but it was soon learned that Mr. Mattison is a Democrat and his name was dropped. Charles W. Taylor was nominated to fill the unexpired term of Justice Crosley, who has forfeited his office by removal from the borough. Alex. Thorn was renominated for Commissioner of Appeal.

E. B. Smalley, Thomas Doud and Andrew Lutkins were appointed a committee to fill vacancies, if there are any. This concluded the business and the primary adjourned.

In the meantime the Democrats began to gather, and by 8:30 o'clock a goodly number were present. Andrew E. Kenney called this primary to order and was made chairman. David J. Carney was made secretary, and Levi Kline and John Breemer were selected as tellers. Before the business was taken up the chairman requested the Republicans to withdraw, which they did very gracefully.

Frank Krewson and Charles Dressell were nominated for Councilmen without any opposition. When the nominations for Justice of the Peace was taken up there was trouble. Wm. N. Pangborn and Justice Mattison were nominated, but there was doubt as to who should be nominated for the full term. To settle the question a ballot was taken and each nominee received twelve votes. This required another ballot and Justice Mattison received fourteen votes, while his opponent received ten. Mr. Pangborn refused to accept the nomination for the unexpired term, saying that he would not play second fiddle for anyone. This nomination was left open, as was also the nomination for commissioner of appeal. A. J. Winckler was nominated, but he refused to serve.

While the primary was being held Theodore Buttan attempted to vote, but Levi Kline objected on the ground that he is a Republican. Some to Mr. Buttan's friends took offense and insisted on his voting, but the officers would not allow him to. Finally, the chairman asked him if he was a Republican. Mr. Buttan replied that he was. He did not vote.

The following resolution was introduced:

Whereas, During the entire history of the borough government of North Plainfield law and precedent permitted taxpayers to see for themselves for what purposes the public moneys were expended and to whom paid in annual itemized published statements. The action of the present authorities in suppressing the itemized statement for the past year is unwarranted and creates a fear of uncertainty and distrust in the public mind;

Resolved, That we, the Democratic voters of the borough of North Plainfield, in convention assembled, hereby denounce the present borough authorities for their neglect to perform this simple lawful duty to the taxpayers as unjust, illegal and inexcusable, and one that has a tendency to do irreparable harm.

Resolved, That we demand, as a right, a reform in the system of official patronage and insist that salaried borough officials hereafter appointed be residents of Somerset county, and residents and taxpayers of the borough, where chances are equal, be favored with public patronage.

DRESSELT WON'T RUN.

Declines Nomination to Fill Out Democratic Councilmanic Ticket.

When the North Plainfield Democratic primary was held and Charles Dresselt was named as a candidate for one of the Councilmanic offices, the nomination was made without the knowledge or the consent of the nominee. Monday Mr. Dresselt told the committee appointed to fill vacancies that he would not make the run for the office. Dennis Gavin, a member of the Somerset county Democratic Executive Committee, was selected to fill the vacancy, and has accepted the nomination.

Funeral of Mrs. Duffy.

The funeral services of the late Mrs. Mary Duffy were held Saturday morning at 9 o'clock from St. Mary's church. Rev Father Westman, curate, officiating. There was a large attendance of relatives and friends. Interment took place in St. Mary's Cemetery. Those who served as pall bearers were John Flynn, John Kane, Thomas Callahan, John Brick, Patrick Duffy and Patrick McGrath.

BEAUTIFUL ROCKS MUST BE SAVED.

Federation of Women Will Lend Their Valuable Aid Toward This End.

A PUBLIC PARK PROPOSED.

MEMBERS OF NEW YORK AND NEW JERSEY LEGISLATURE

Will be Appealed to and Asked to Co-operate With the Women—If the States Will Not Jointly Acquire the Land the Women Will Buy.

With a view of preserving the Palisades on the Hudson, the Woman's Federations now purpose taking a hand. Although a bill has been introduced in both the Legislatures of New York and New Jersey for the purpose of acquiring, by purchase or condemnation, the land upon which the Palisades are located, for the purpose of constructing a public park there, the women do not intend to leave this important question entirely to the slow grind of the law-makers at Albany or Trenton.

The women composing these federations are already active in the matter. The efforts of these women must not be lightly considered, either. It must not be forgotten with what degree of success the women fought the seating of Congressman Brigham Roberts, the polygamist. If the women set their minds upon assisting in saving to the public the beautiful Palisades, they will come mighty near accomplishing their object.

Already the women have set the ball rolling. The various clubs forming the federations of New York and New Jersey are wide awake. They are determined that the members of the Legislature shall not forget them nor rest until they have listened to their appeals. Both Senators and Assemblymen are constantly in receipt of letters and circulars setting forth the request of the clubs. If the women of these States do not prevail upon these representatives in the Legislature to take action this year, they do not abandon hope. Members of future Legislatures will also be seen and the persuasive eloquence of the fair sex will be brought to bear upon the member from their particular Assembly district.

If the women are not successful in enlisting the interest and sentiment of the members of the Legislatures, it is understood that the women are considering the advisability of raising by various ways the necessary cash to purchase the much coveted Palisades. But, my! what a prodigious undertaking. While the intentions of the good women are of the best, can it be possible that they seriously comprehend what such an undertaking involves?

When it is known that the value of the lands under water in New Jersey alone has been estimated by the Riparian Commission at more than two millions of dollars, and that the land is held at about $20,000 an acre from Fort Lee to a point about fourteen miles up the Hudson, some idea can be gained of the enormous amount of money it will take to accomplish their desire. Besides, the efforts of the women, though highly laudable, will take years to produce satisfactory results. In the meantime the destruction of the Palisades would continue and before the land could be purchased their beauty would have become demarred as to make them worthless.

The preservation of the Palisades is a matter that interests every resident of New York State as well as New Jersey. With the destruction of the Palisades the beauty and grandeur of the Hudson river, the Rhine of America, will fade into history. This magnificent water-way would simply be known as a highway for traffic and its picturesque features sink to oblivion.

A Convenience to Ocean Travelers.

The Lehigh Valley Railroad has made it a custom for some years of having passenger representatives at New York meet incoming passenger steamers from European ports, and also passengers arriving by its trains, who are going abroad; and, in fact, attend to all business in connection with the arranging for hotel accommodations, sleeping or parlor car tickets and the checking of baggage, etc. Chas. A. Fourniss, who is the steamship passenger agent representing the Lehigh Valley Railroad, is always on hand to meet incoming steamers, and will also meet parties on arrival of Lehigh Valley trains, to see to their comfortable transfer to the steamship.

ARCHBISHOP'S APPEAL.

IN BEHALF OF UNFORTUNATE BRITISH AND AMERICAN WOMEN IN PARIS.

Rev. Dr. Travers Lewis Tells of the Efforts to Establish and Maintain a Home in the French Capital.

The Rev. Dr. Travers Lewis, Archbishop of the Province of Ontario, spoke at Grace Episcopal church Sunday morning a brief outline, or skeleton as he expressed it, of the great work that has been accomplished in Paris, France, for the welfare of English-speaking British and American girls.

The Archbishop said the work of establishing homes had been founded about fifteen years by Miss Ada Lee, (now his wife). The young women who had gone to Paris from England and America were many of them, he said, daughters of respectable parents, who, through adversity by death of parents or otherwise, had been compelled to earn their living and they preferred to do so where they were not known. Some of them had been lured to the French capital by means of advertisements in the English or American papers which offered them positions with flattering possibilities of success. These in many instances had turned out to be myths or a fraud. In consequence, the unfortunate girl was thrown upon her own resources in a strange country, and became in time stranded.

Bishop Lewis then told how Miss Lee, while in Paris, conceived the idea of establishing a home for these unfortunates. It was brought about in a measure through the suicide of a girl, whose body had been found in the Seine. Miss Lee then began an investigation, and from a shop girl learned that many of the girls did not attend church, as they did not know where to go. She determined to see if something could not be done to better their physical and spiritual condition. From many of the girls she learned the story of their life. At first she assisted them to procure suitable rooms. Her efforts, however, became so successful that when she returned home to England she had her plans formed to establish a home for English speaking British and American young women. A suitable house was purchased in Paris at a cost of $80,000, the money to pay for the same being raised by drawing room entertainments. This home has now more than $1,000 deserving young women. From this home girls have sprung up until there are several, and the first efforts of Miss Lee have been crowned with success.

While establishing and getting in working order the home, Miss Lee made the discovery that there was another Christian work that also deserved her attention and that of the charitably inclined—that of establishing an orphanage.

Bishop Lewis briefly referred to the laws of France with reference to marriage. Many English and American girls married to Frenchmen had been deserted and their offspring left destitute in consequence of the laws of France not recognizing marriages outside of that country. It was for the purpose of caring for these orphans that Miss Lee decided to establish a home for them. He said the largest contributors to this home had been a Roman Catholic, the editor of a Parisian newspaper and a Jew, Baron Rothschild. The last home to be established in Paris was known as the Washington Home, named in honor of the "Father of His Country," because an American was the first to donate a large sum of money toward building it. The home, the corner stone of which had been laid by the Prince of Wales, was in debt to an amount of about $80,000. In this connection Bishop Lewis took occasion to say that one of the peculiarities of the institution was that there were no fancy salaries paid the managers. They women worked without any pay and in some cases others paid for the privilege of assisting about the institution. Besides having temperance societies and kindergarten features in the home there is also a prison work attached to it and much good had been accomplished.

In closing his address Bishop Lewis made an appeal to the women of Grace parish that they interest themselves in the work of helping this home financially by holding drawing room entertainments, etc. He invited all who might visit Paris this summer to avail themselves of the opportunity of inspecting the Home and see for themselves how much good is being accomplished.

In response to an urgent appeal from Dr. Rodman, the rector of the parish, the offertory was liberal and quite satisfactory to the Arch-Bishop.

HARD ON CRIMINALS.

National Bureau of Identification Keeps Track of Them.

Photography and the Improved Bertillon System Have Driven Robbers and Thieves from the Cities to the Country.

[Special Chicago Letter.]

THE superintendent held in his hand a telegram from the chief of police of St. Louis. It contained a description of a man arrested there for working the "short change" game. The St. Louis police did not know him and so they sent to all the branches of the national bureau of identification to see if he had a criminal record.

Superintendent Porteous, of the Chicago office, read off these items to his assistant:

"Height, 5 feet 10½ inches; outstretched arms, 80.01 m.; trunk, 93.01

m.," and so on through the entire measurements.

The assistant went directly to a certain cabinet. He took out a cardboard, on the front of which was a full-face view and the profile of a modest, sober-looking man. Then turning to his chief the assistant said:

"Why, that's Pat Crowe."

Pat Crowe is to-day locked up behind strong bars on the charge of being the principal participant in the $1000 robbery of the fast mail on the Northwestern road at tower W, 47 miles west of Chicago. His arrest was brought about by this clever system of identification that is now used by the police of nearly all the large cities. It was the same system that identified Frank Spencer, the "hold-up" man killed in a Chicago saloon the other night, as a murderer for whom the Pennsylvania detectives have been looking for 15 years. And so many another criminal has been brought to book by the unerring measurements so carefully filed away in the alides of the cabinets.

With 25,000 criminals in the penitentiaries in the United States, and 25,000 of them being discharged each year, to say nothing of the thousands on the outside of whom no statistics can be obtained, it keeps the officers of the law very busy in their efforts to protect society.

The chief catcher of to-day is not only a good police officer, but he is also a close and careful student of criminology. While, as a general rule, he has little sympathy with the reform idea, steadfastly holding to the old tenet

PHOTOGRAPHING A FEMALE THIEF.

"Once a thief, always a thief," he is a firm believer in all preventive systems. He would prevent the perpetration of crime in much the same way that the officers of the health department provide against the spread of epidemics. He knows that in cities where the vagrant laws are the most stringent the tramp and fewer thieves in the places where the law is lax. So he also knows that if the detective force of a city is able and alert, and well officered, the chances of success of the criminals are lessened.

Detective work to-day and detective work of sun- years ago are carried on on entirely different plans. In the old days it was a very easy matter for a criminal, who, for instance, had committed a crime in Chicago, to lose his identity in New York. And it would frequently happen that he would be sentenced for some fresh crime committed in the eastern city without the officers there knowing that he was wanted in the west for another and sometimes graver offense. Then frequently some man or woman would be arrested on suspicion. It would be impossible to communicate with the chiefs of police of every large city in the United States, and oftentimes the person would be released when he might be badly wanted in another place. The old way of offering a reward for the apprehension of a criminal was to send his picture and a description of him to all the large cities. This, of course, involved a great amount of work, and was never entirely satisfactory.

For the purpose, therefore, of facilitating the work of capturing criminals and preventing crime the national bureau of identification was formed. There are nearly 50 cities in the United States in the association. In Chicago, George M. Porteous is the superintendent. The offices are on the top floor of the city hall, where a most perfect system of filing has been arranged. When a criminal has been classed as "professional," which he is as soon as he has committed and been arrested for a penal offense, his picture is taken for the rogues' gallery. This is a far different gallery from the miscellaneous collection of photographs which have been, individually, thrown by them and, when a criminal has been placed in any odd corner in the police stations. The Chicago bureau has on file 20,000 photographs of active criminals, and its files are simply duplicates of the files of the other cities that belong to the association. Two photographs are taken of each criminal—a full-face view and a profile. These two pictures are pasted side by side across the center of a cardboard about six inches square. Above and below the space of the pictures and on the reverse side are printed instructions with blank spaces for the measurements. Each prisoner when arrested is carefully measured according to the Bertillon system.

The efficacy of this identification system has reduced the capturing and the control of criminals to a science, and it makes it an exceedingly difficult matter for an outlaw to conceal himself in the large cities. The result of all this is that the tactics of the criminals have changed. In former years the criminal in his hours of ease, just after some successful raid or when he was working up some new job, might be seen dressed out in the loudest style, frequenting the city flash saloons and gambling houses. Now he knows he will be instantly spotted, and avoids the cities. The detectives have long been cognizant of the fact that the great criminal classes are turning their attention to the country and the smaller towns much more frequently than formerly. The recent record of bank robberies in small places shows that.

It is not long ago that a little town not far from Chicago was visited by safe robbers, and only a few weeks have elapsed since Charlie Prince, one of the kings of the highway robbers, was shot dead at Quincy, Ill. Every paper contains some account of a train robbery or the robbery of a country bank. The expert criminals are avoiding the cities more and more for their big jobs. They are going as hoboes on the country crossroads and planning mischief where the chances of detection and capture are not so great.

The result of this will be that the smaller cities will for self-protection find it necessary to join the national bureau of identification. With every city and town in the United States that is, every town that boasts a police force at all—in the association, the criminal would find his lot a very hard one. This is the ultimate dream of the promoters of the league. It can never be realized in full, but enough cities may join it so as to make things from the strong arm of the law almost impossible.

The measurements and the photographs for this system are nearly all taken at the Harrison street station by experts employed for that purpose. The men and women are photographed and measured alike. The beauty of the system as an effort would sometimes be made to distort the countenances so as to destroy the effects of the pictures, but the "professional" criminal never attempts it. Long experience has taught him the futility of opposing the law when he is once within its grip. So the system has grown until it has become a most effective method of identification. It has enabled every member of the association in distant parts of the country to become familiar at a moment's notice with the most dangerous criminals in the world.

BRIGHT WOMAN IS DEAD.

MISS LENA TOMLINSON, A TEACHER IN THE PUBLIC SCHOOLS.

Was an Instructor in the Whittier School—Wrote and Interesting and Popular Story a Year Ago.

The many friends, especially the teachers in the Plainfield public schools, will be pained to learn of the death of one of their number, Miss Lena Tomlinson, aged 37 years, who passed away Saturday afternoon at her home, 121 West Fifth street, after a long patient struggle with physical pain caused by a cancer. Until November last she was a teacher in the Whittier School, having come to Plainfield at the request of Miss Buckley, formerly principal of the public schools. Her home was in Westerly, R. I. She was the daughter of Rev. George Tomlinson, pastor of the Seventh Day Baptist church at that place. He died there a few years ago.

Miss Tomlinson was a person of high educational attainment, but physically she was not strong. She was what is termed an original teacher, and while actively engaged in her school work found time last May to write a story for girls, called "The Triangle," which has since become very popular. Her ambition and individuality were strong characteristics of her short life.

She was a member of the Seventh-Day Baptist church and for sometime past sang in the choir at that church. She was a sister of Rev. Everitt Tomlinson, a Baptist clergyman, formerly of Elizabeth. She leaves a bereaved mother, a sister and three brothers, one of whom, Harold Tomlinson, resides in the borough.

Funeral services were held from the house Tuesday afternoon at 3 o'clock. Interment at Westerly, R. I.

BOROUGH STREET REPORT.

Councilman Clark's Statement of Work Done in Improving Roads in the Latest Quarter.

One of the most complete reports ever submitted to the Borough Council, was that presented by Robert Clark, Jr., chairman of the street committee, for the fiscal year just closed. From it some interesting statistics are gathered.

The amount of crushed stone used during the year was 1,909 tons and 100 pounds.

The following amounts were expended for top dressing, re-macadamizing, rolling crushed stone, etc.: For March, when the greatest amount of work was done, $1,349 73; June, $95.64; July, $167 01; August, $49 15; September, $285 97; October, $22 35; November, $295 60; December, $75 65; January, $23 35, making a grand total of $2,594.65.

The receipts for the road account were: Macadamizing Summit avenue, $21; macadamizing Bowlby avenue, $29 05; macadamizing Orchard avenue, $115; Plainfield street railway, $64 73; sale of dirt, $9 15; sale of stone and labor, $111.74; sale of top of fire well 50 cents, making a total of $367 17. This, together with $2 000 appropriated for road purposes, makes the total receipts from all sources, $2 367 17.

The disbursements from all sources were $2 594 65 divided as follows: Pay roll, $1,734 99; crushed stone, $1,432 81; crosswalks, $27 75; culverts, $36 87; supplies, $34 45; branding and repairing tools, $17.33; painting water wagon, $4.50; gravel, $7 80; services borough engineer, $100.50.

A comptroller's report gives the total receipts as $2,367.17, with disbursements of $2,594.65, leaving a balance expended of $242.81.

SUPERVISING STREET WORK.

Civil Engineer Dunham Has a Big Job at Watterville, N. Y.

Civil Engineer F. A. Dunham is in Watterville, N. Y., where he has charge of improving the main business street of the city, the same being 2,650 feet in length. Bids were received from ten contracting firms February 26th, and the bids ranged from $13 500 to $26,000. The street is to be paved with vitrified brick on a concrete foundation, and will be begun about May 1st, or as soon as the weather is suitable. Mr. Dunham says that the sentiment throughout the country is for vitrified brick in small cities instead of street asphalt.

Additional Rooms Secured.

The Sisters of Mercy of St. Joseph's church, in the borough, who conduct a home for girls in the Lansing block, have, on sometime past been in need of additional room to successfully carry on their work, and they have just purchased from Michael Connolly his property at 35 Manning avenue, which will be remodeled and used in connection with the present home. This will give them just what they need and the work of arranging the property for their convenience will be commenced as soon as practical. The sale of the property was made through John P. Emmons.

DEMOCRATS FAVORED.

Spring Election In This Vicinity Show Surprises.

G. O P. WIN IN BOROUGH.

CONTEST LIKELY OVER JUSTICE OF PEACESHIP.

Dispute as to Whether Justice Mattison is Elected — Fanwood, Somerville, Westfield and Other Towns Go Democratic.

The annual spring election was held in the borough Tuesday and in most respects it was noticeable for the absence of anything of an exciting nature. There was really only one close contest and that was for Justice of the Peace between James Lunger, Republican, and W. E. Mattison, Democrat. In this contest much pressure was brought to bear to elect Justice Mattison. He was defeated, however, but only by one vote, and there is still a question in the minds of many as to whether he was defeated. It appears that among the tickets printed at the office of the News some read "James S. Lunger, (5 years)" and others read "James S. Lunger, (3 years)." In the Second district three of the latter were voted, but not many supposed they would be credited to Mr. Lunger for the five year term, in fact the mistake was not noticed until after the vote was counted.

The officers in the First district discovered the mistake in the ballot before they were voted and they were thrown out so that they were not voted. As soon as the votes were counted in the Second district and it was discovered that the two candidates were running so close the question was at once raised about the three votes cast for Mr. Lunger for three years. Heated arguments followed, some claiming one thing and some another. After a lengthy discussion the majority were satisfied that Mr. Lunger had won. There were a number that would not listen to it and they said they would contest the election.

Aside from the above contest there was not much interest. The Republicans won with good majorities, as is usual, so there was no surprise. In the First district the total Republican vote was 215 and the Democrat 108. In the Second district the Republican ticket was 204 and the Democrat 112 The Republicans polled a total vote of 419, and the Democrats polled 220. This makes 639 out of a possible 1,100 votes that is claimed to be in the borough.

The Second district received eleven Republican tickets bearing the incorrect name of Charles S. Lee, and there was one rejected. There were none of the faulty Republican tickets voted in the First district and none were rejected. As a result of the election the Borough Council for the coming year will be composed of Messrs. Harrison Coddington, Robert Clark, Jr., Charles A. Lee, John Valiant, George T. Rogers and S. S. Swackhamer, with Mayor N. B. Smalley in the chair.

Board of Health—Appropriation $17 316 633

The number of Republican tickets cast for the Board of Health appropriation of $580 were 413 and 220 Democratic tickets were cast for the same object.

Justice of the Peace W. E Mattison was sworn by a local representative yesterday and he declares that he is elected Justice by two majority. He says that the Republicans are to blame for any errors and that if any contest is made they will have to make it. He will retain his position until ousted by those legally empowered to do so.

DEMOCRATIC LANDSLIDE.

Fanwood Township Elects Nearly All the Democratic Ticket was a Surprise.

The election held in Fanwood township Tuesday was nearly a landslide for the Democratic ticket. John Robison, the Republican nominee for Freeholder, and William Terry, Republican nominee for Town Committeeman for two years, were the only two heading the Republican ticket who were fortunate enough to escape the Democratic slide. Robison's majority for Freeholder over Lambert was only 30. The regular Republican ticket polled was 155 against 115 for the Democratic ticket. The cuts which were so numerous and plentiful on the Republican side helped the Democratic nominees greatly. Nichol beating Buckley for the three-year term for Town Committeeman by 39 majority, Bruckman, Democratic nominee for Committeeman, won over Johnston, the Republican nominee, by 39 majority. Charles French, Democratic nominee for Assessor, won over James E. Goodman by 31 majority. John L. Darby, Democratic nominee for Collector, beat L. W. Miller, his Republican opponent, by 39 majority. The minor offices went to the Republican ticket. All the appropriations, including the police or jail appropriation of $50, was carried with but very little scratching.

In the early morning hours a new ticket, called the Citizens' Independent, was launched into the political field. The nominations were a combination of Republicans and Democrats. All claimed that their names were being used without their authority, and soon ordered their names stricken from the ballot. No one seemed to want to stand sponsor for the new ticket and it died an early death, not one of them being voted.

The Democratic victory was unexpected, as the Republican ranks were harmonious and no trouble showed upon the surface.

The Citizens' ticket in Fanwood borough went through successfully Tuesday. Eighty-nine votes were cast and resulted in electing for Councilmen, H. L. Hall and L. J. Ellis; Assessor, W. R. Stanbery, and Collector, Charles Scheelen.

RESULT IN DUNELLEN.

Only Contest was Over Assessor — William S. Larkin Beat Charles A. Coriell.

The municipal election of the borough of Dunellen Tuesday was very quiet. There were two tickets in the field, though there was no partisanship displayed. One ticket was called the Citizens' and the other the People's. The only change in the tickets was on assessor, the candidates being Former Postmaster Charles A. Coriell on the Citizens' ticket and William S. Larkin on the People's. The friends of both parties worked industriously for their candidates. Mr. Larkin had many friends. They rallied to his support and he succeeded in defeating Mr. Coriell by six majority. Below is the vote in detail:

For Councilmen, Henry C. Gaskill, 238; Lewis T. Titsworth, 252; for Assessor, W. S. Larkin, 121; Charles A. Coriell, 125; for Collector, George W. Day, 244; for Commissioner of Appeal, Henry V. Dunham, 259; for Constable, John H. Bisehart, 251.

The appropriations, borough purposes, $2,500, and $150 for support of the poor, were carried.

TRUE TO DEMOCRACY.

Warren Township Elected all the Democratic Candidates by Good Majorities.

Warren Township has a large normal Democratic majority but the Republicans of that township put up a strong fight at the Spring election Tuesday. The result was a complete victory for the Democratic ticket, however, by a majority of 65. The following officers were elected by the majorities noted:—Assessor, Peter Meumiller, 26; Collector, George Terrill, 37; Freeholder, Joel Coddington, 73; Overseer of the Poor, George Bowers, 144; Township Committee, William H. Rogers, 3 years, 73; Thomas C. Bird, 3 years, 73; Henry P. Williams, 1 year, 26; Justice of the Peace, Dietrich Ehlen, 82; Commissioner of Appeal, I. V. Adams, 74.

It was also voted to spend $1,000 for the repair of the roads, $1,000 for crushed stone to be used in the five leading districts including carting and leveling, and $600 for the support of the poor.

SOMERVILLE DEMOCRATIC.

Straightout Republican Candidates Were Defeated by 200 Majority for Local Offices.

Somerville, March 14—The election passed off quietly in Somerville, a fair vote being polled for a spring election. The chief contest was over Justice of the Peace and Town Committeemen. Two of the Republican nominees for Town Committee, John D. Rockby and John S. Long, refused to run, and J. Albert Snyder and John Joerges were substituted. Hornby was mad because he was not nominated for his unexpired term of two years, the understanding previous to the primary being that the old Committee would be renominated by both parties. Hornby was the only Republican member of the Committee, and the Democrats thought that if they could get two for one it would be a good deal. But neither primary lived up to the agreement.

Squire A. P. Sutphen ran for Justice on an independent ticket, and while he received more votes than H. A. Green, the Republican candidate, he was defeated by E. W. Farley, the Democratic nominee.

The whole Democratic ticket was elected by over 200 majority. Following is the ticket elected:

Assessor, Charles E. Voorhees; Collector, Ferdinand Vanderveer; Town Committee, John H. Bartle, three years; Oscar Dow, two years; James Q. TenEyck, one year; Justice of the Peace, Edgar W. Farley; Constables, Peter Conboy, Denais Wyckoff; Commissioner of Appeal, James J. Quick; Surveyor of the Highways, Daniel B. Disborough.

SCUDDER RE-ELECTED.

Almost a Democratic Landslide in Westfield—Likely to be One Contest.

Westfield, March 14.—What came near being a Democratic landslide took place at the election here yesterday. That party elected Mulford M. Scudder to the Board of Freeholders despite the fact that the Republican machine made a big effort to elect George H. Embree. The Democrats also elected John M. C. Marsh, Assessor; Addison H. Clark, Collector, and J. Alston Dennis, Committeeman. Martin Wellde was elected to the Township Committee on the Republican ticket by one vote over Henry C. Sergeant, the Democratic nominee. Mr. Sergeant and the Democrats claim that ballots, which should have been counted for him, were thrown out. He will contest the election. W. W. Connolly was elected to the committee over W. E. Tuttle, Jr., by a very small majority. The contest between Mr. Sergeant and Mr. Wells will decide the political complexion of the committee.

A TIE VOTE.

Charles Schring and Giddeon Smalley Strike Even in North Plainfield Township Committee.

There was a lively election in North Plainfield township Tuesday. There were two tickets in the field. One a straight Citizens' ticket and the other claimed to be a Republican ticket, the only difference was that for Town Committeeman. Charles P. Sebring was on the Citizens' ticket and Gideon Smalley ran for the same office on the Republican ticket. Otherwise the the two tickets were identical. Mr. Sebring and Mr. Smalley each received sixty votes for Town Committeeman, and it is now a question whether a new election will have to be held. There were 120 votes cast. The rest of the ticket was elected as follows:

Collector, J. W. Coddington; Freeholder, Augustus Mebus; Town Committeemen, Thomas H. Taylor, Benjamin Clark; Overseer of the Poor, Thomas McGean; Constable, Francis Bartels; Justice of the Peace, George A. Schmidt; commissioner of appeal, Phillip Acker, Stephen Benning, A. P. Voorhees; Surveyors of Highways, Harry Acker, Theodore Leersen; Poundkeepers, Charles Willis, Conrad Kramer. The appropriations for roads, poor fund and salary of Town Committeemen were unanimously voted for.

IN PISCATAWAY.

The Democrats Succeeded in Electing Nearly All Their Candidates.

One of the most exciting elections ever held in Piscataway township was that of Tuesday. The Republican and Democratic parties each placed tickets in the field and the contest was bitterly fought, although not as large a vote was got out as had been expected. The Democrats claim a victory, as they succeeded in electing a majority of the more important offices on the ticket. Al. Manning for Freeholder defeated William Fitz Randolph by a majority of 26, while for Assessor Charles E. Kelly defeated Dr. Myron J. Whitford by 16. The Democrats also elected William J. Nelson for Collector over Silas P. Osmun by a majority of 28. R. DeWitt Giles for town committee (3 year term) defeated Arthur E. Tappen by seven majority. The Democrats won two commissioner of appeal, Bethune Dunham defeating Cornelius S. Bolen by 30 majority. The Republicans will have to be satisfied with two town committeemen, the surveyor of highways, a constable and justice of the peace. The appropriations of $1,000 for support of poor and $5,000 for roads were carried, the few votes being cast against them.

The voting is the vote in detail:

Democratic ticket—Chosen Freeholder, Alexander Manning, 286; Assessor, Charles E. Kelly, 281; Collector, William J. Nelson, 315; Town Committee, Albert S. Manning, 3 years, 171; R. DeWitt Giles, 3 years, 233; George R. Conover, 1 year, 200; Surveyors of Highways, Lewis Harris, 204; Samuel Johnson, 190; Commissioner of Appeal, Bethune Dunham, 212; Constable, Charles A. Mosher, 206.

Republican ticket—Chosen Freeholder, William Fitz Randolph, 286; Assessor, Myron J. Whitford, 255; Collector, Silas P. Osmun, 317; Town Committee, Thomas E. Wrangham, 3 years, 290; Arthur E. Tappen, 3 years, 236; Nelson M. Giles, 1 year, 266; Surveyors of Highways, Albert L. Boice, 256; Luther Bolen, 288; Commissioner of Appeal, Cornelius S. Bolen, 262; Constable, Luther Mundy, 3 years, 284; Justice of the Peace, Harry E Weaver, 269.

Result at Mountainside.

Mountainside, March 14 — This borough, which generally gives a Republican majority of about 50 fell in line with the Democrats yesterday and elected a Mulford candidate by a majority over George H. Embree for the Freeholdership and elected one Councilman, John B. Boll, over the Republican nominee, H. H. MacMurray. These Democrats were elected on a Citizen's ticket. Louis S. Robbins, the Republican candidate for Councilman, was elected over Charles M. Badgley, Democrat, by only one vote.

Only One Contest in New Providence.

The only contest in Tuesday's election in New Providence township was for Freeholder. Wilson Day, the Republican, was elected on the Citizens' ticket, defeating his cousin, George D. Wahl, who ran on the Independent ticket. Peter S. Debby, Victor Mercier and Frank Sohle were elected to the township committee. They are all Democrats. D. M. Parker was elected township clerk.

Citizens Win in Cranford.

Cranford, March 14—The election held here yesterday was one of the hardest fought that has taken place in many years. The Republican candidate for Freeholder was defeated by the present Freeholder, R. E. Adams, by a majority of 37. The Citizens' party elected its Assessor and two of the Township Committeemen and most of the other officers.

DEATH OF E. A. GROSS.

A LONG AND HONORABLE CAREER ENDED YESTERDAY.

Devoted Member of St. Mary's Church, of Which He Was a Liberal Supporter

A long and honorable career was ended yesterday when Eugene A. Gross passed away at his residence, 712 West Seventh street. Mr. Gross was taken ill a week ago with pneumonia. A recent sickness left his heart so weak that it could not withstand the last illness. He died this morning at 9:15 o'clock.

Mr. Gross was born at Cincinnati, O., about two years ago. He was brought up and received a college education there. He then began a mercantile career that took him west until finally business called him to New York. He moved to Plainfield twenty-two years ago and made his home here until his death. He has been a member of the firm of A. Gross & Co., candle manufacturers, New York, with a factory located in Jersey City.

Mr. Gross was married twenty-eight years years ago to Miss Fanny M. Tennent, of San Francisco. She survives him. There were no children. He has one brother and five sisters living. FRANK BERGEN IS OUT FOR CONGRESS.

The Elizabeth Lawyer Enters the Lists Against Representative Fowler.

WHAT HIS REASONS ARE.

SAYS THAT FOWLER HAS FARED WELL IN POLITICS.

In Case the Nomination is Conceded to Union County Mr. Bergen Will Try to Capture It.

Elizabeth, March 14th—A political surprise was sprung here yesterday by Frank Bergen, who announced himself as a candidate for Congress on the Republican ticket to succeed Congressman Charles N. Fowler.

The news quickly spread in political circles in Elizabeth, and Mr. Bergen's office was visited by numerous politicians. A reporter called on Mr. Bergen and asked him if the story was true.

"I frankly admit," said Mr. Bergen, "that if I can get the Republican nomination I will be pleased to accept the honor. You can say, as coming from me, that I am in the field if the nomination is coming to Union county.

"I have nothing against Congressman Fowler, but I think he has been very fairly dealt with by the Republican party, which has given him three terms—one more than the party usage. He has made a good representative, but the financial question, on which he was elected, has been practically settled, and now new issues will come to the front—our government of the Philippines, for example—and I don't see why a new Congressman, if he has ability, should not be able to grapple with these problems.

"If Essex county wants the nomination then I will not stand in the way of an Essex county man, but if it is coming over to Union, then I think that I have as much right to aspire to it as any one else. That, in a nutshell, is my attitude on the subject.

"It has afforded me much gratification to see how my prospective candidacy has been received by my friends in Union county, and this, of itself, has encouraged me in the stand I have decided to take in the matter."

STATE BAR ASSOCIATION.

Annual Meeting to Be Held at Atlantic City, June 15th.

At a meeting of the State Bar Association at the State House, Trenton, Tuesday of last week, it was decided to hold the annual meeting of the association at Atlantic City, Friday, June 15th. A special committee was appointed to report at that time on the subject of reorganizing the judiciary system of the State.

Such a reorganization has been desired by the Bar for some time, but a constitutional amendment is necessary to bring it about, and this has complicated matters. A number of new members were received and routine business transacted.

Funeral of Mrs. Atkinson.

The funeral services of the late Mrs. Lydia Atkinson were held Tuesday afternoon at 2 o'clock from the home of Mrs. Robinson, Cleveland avenue. There was a very large attendance of relatives and friends. Rev. Dr. D. J. Yerkes, of the First Baptist church, officiated, and after reading appropriate scripture selections, delivered an impressive discourse. He was followed by Rev. Walter Pastelle, colored, who is in charge of the 54th Street Mission in New York. Mrs. Atkinson was very much interested in the work at this mission and contributed largely to its support. The display of floral tributes was many and very beautiful. The interment took place in Evergreen Cemetery on Plainfield avenue.

Trolley Cross Sprouts in Jersey.

It is proposed to build a trolley line, with electric lighting plant, from Lebanon, Hunterdon county, to Washington, Warren county, a distance of fourteen miles, passing through Annandale, Clinton, High Bridge, Glen Gardner and Hampton, to connect with the Phillipsburg line through Washington, Hackettstown and Lake Hopatcong to Newark. The power house will be at Clinton. It is proposed to extend to Somerville.

Factory for New Orange.

In four weeks from now ground will be broken at New Orange for a large chandelier works, which is now located at Brooklyn. The plant when finished will furnish employment to one persons. A branch of the New Orange Railway will be run to the Rahway river for the accommodation of the works, which are to be located on the bank of that stream.

DELINQUENT POLL TAX ON INCREASE

Many Thousand Dollars Are Now Owing to the City in This Respect.

PILING UP EVERY YEAR.

SOMETHING MUST BE DONE TO MAKE BETTER COLLECTIONS.

Some Justice Such Was Deputed of the Job to Attend to This Work There Has Been a Perceptible Increase in the Delinquent Sums.

Councilman J. B. Dumont has brought to light certain rather remarkable facts concerning the collection of the poll taxes in this city. During the last two years nearly $10,000 due the city from poll taxes remains uncollected. In the year 1899 nearly half of the voters in the city of Plainfield failed to pay their poll tax. To be exact $1,737 in poll taxes is still due for last year. Of the last city election there were 2,419 ballots cast. The number registered is, of course, somewhat larger, but it will not reach over 4,000.

Councilman Dumont believes that a more vigorous campaign in the collection of the poll taxes will be to be added benefit to the city. It is often necessary now to borrow funds to meet the current expenses of the city in anticipation of the collection of taxes. Then when there is a failure to secure the taxes, a difficulty occurs in the appropriations which must be made up out of the next year's collections.

The difficulty in some cases of collecting taxes on real and personal property is well known. But the poll tax amounts to only $1 a year; a sum which very few, indeed, are not able to pay. It should be the easiest tax of all to collect. The returns of the Tax Collector do not show it to be so, however.

At a previous meeting of the Council Councilman Dumont introduced a resolution asking that the Tax Collector furnish the Council with a list of the amounts of the delinquent poll taxes for the past ten years. That resolution was passed without comment. At the meeting of the Council Monday night the Collector, Martin Farrabee, read the report desired.

The report showed the following delinquent poll taxes distributed among the ten years as follows: 1890, $367 97; 1894, $617 70; 1895, $823.15; 1893, $646.39; 1894, $676 55; 1895, $1 047; 1896, $1,300; 1897, $1,504; 1898, $1,543; 1899, $4,737.

For a better understanding of the situation, it might be well to state that previous to 1895, there was a delinquent tax collector, separate from the regular Tax Collector. For the first five years mentioned in the list, Y. W. Nash was delinquent tax collector. After that time the office was united with that of regular collector.

According to this report, there were 1,737 legal citizens of Plainfield who failed to pay their poll tax last year. A list of those same 1,737 men might contain some surprises. It is really remarkable the men who will forget to perform that duty, the payment of their poll tax. The question that is the logical outcome of the investigation started by Mr. Dumont is why these taxes were not paid. It is hard to believe that over a thousand of the men of Plainfield cannot afford to contribute a dollar a year to the support of the city.

Mr. Dumont has made no statement concerning his future course in the matter. He has been heard, however, to express a hope that more attention be shown to the collection of poll taxes in the future than has been during the past five years, else will the city lose a considerable part of its legitimate revenue. The fact as shown by this report of the Collector is one too important to be ignored entirely by the Council. It may be that the mere agitation of the question will have the desired effect.

Change in Raritan Valley Company.

New Brunswick, March 14.—Additional articles of incorporation of the Raritan Trolley Company, which is capitalized at $1,000,000, were filed recently in the Middlesex County Clerk's office. Papers filed two weeks ago set forth that James C. McCoy was the largest stockholder. In the papers filed recently the name of Adolph Lewisohn, of New York, is substituted for that of Mr. McCoy and the latter is made the agent of the company, with an office in Rue Street, Perth Amboy. The company intends to build a trolley line through Raritan and Woodbridge townships, connecting Perth Amboy and Rahway.

COMMUTERS CRITICISE CITY STREET RAILWAY

Trolley Cars Never Wait for Passengers on Approaching Trains.

NEW CARS COMING IN JUNE.

ARLINGTON AVENUE EXTENSION TO BE STARTED THIS MONTH.

Are Soon as Rails Arrive the Work Will Be Started—Must Be Completed by July 1st—Troublesome Switch Repaired.

As soon as the rails and other materials arrive the work of building the Arlington avenue extension of the Plainfield Street Railway will commence. That will probably happen before the end of the month and, according to the ordinance, it will have to be completed before July 1st. Meanwhile the patrons of the company are wondering if the methods now in vogue are going to be continued this summer. The cars continue to run on fifteen minutes' headway and nothing particular happens to interrupt.

All the good cars that were in the service of the Plainfield Company before the line was opened to Cranford are now in use on the through line, while Plainfield has to be content with the repainted second-hand cars from Brooklyn and each of the old cars are not good enough for the long run. A number of the latter are afflicted with that most unpleasant of trolley car troubles, a hot wheel. They can be heard several blocks away, while the smoke in the passenger in the car isn't enjoyable, to put it mildly.

The information has just been made public that the new cars, of which so much has been heard, will not be here until June—instead of April. They are to be closed double trunk cars after the pattern of those used on the Brunswick Company's lines. Whether there are to be any new open cars it is impossible to say. If they do come it will probably be well along towards fall.

The trouble at the switch at the corner of Watchung avenue and East Fourth street seem to have been pretty well obviated. Occasionally a car gets off the track but it is no longer an every day occurrence as before. The switch has been repaired.

There is one class of residents who view the present methods of the company with undisguised disgust. They are the commuters. They claim that the street railway is supposedly run with an eye to the accommodation of the public. They point out the fact, however, that the case of the local system leave the switch near the station without any regard for trains. A train may be just approaching the station and then may be on board a number of passengers who would be glad to take advantage of the car and ride home. But the trolley car never waits. It leaves in the very sight of the passengers who are compelled to wait fifteen minutes for another car or walk. And most of them walk.

A visitor in Plainfield from one of the western states remarked the other day that he had never seen a street railway company run so poorly as the Plainfield line is. He commented on the poor cars, the insufficient heating of them and the dirty condition they are allowed to be in. He laughed at the story of the "economic expense" and wondered at a city that allowed such a state of affairs to exist as long as it did.

GOT THE "CREDIT" MARK.

Exceptional Good Work of High School Students at Wellesley College.

The Plainfield High School is represented in the Freshman class at Wellesley by two students who are doing exceptionally creditable work. Miss Helen L. Hall and Miss Angie S. Kuhl have each received the mark "credit" in every subject of study for the first semester. The college gives three grades of mark: "Unsatisfactory" for failure; "satisfactory" and "credit" for especially meritorious work.

Of the P. H. S. class of '96, Charles Anthony Squires has recently received a commencement appointment at Williams College for general excellence in scholarship.

At Union College Henry Arthur Pearce is holding in his class the first place which he won in the entrance examinations last September.

BOY AND ELEPHANT.

Little Prince Nooro and His Unique Life Among the Animals of a Tropical Forest.

"The Boy and the Elephant" is the title of an interesting story in St. Nicholas. The author, Gustavus Frankenstein, tells of the kidnaping of a boy by a wild beast that treated him kindly. The opening paragraphs describe the abduction and the experiences that immediately followed it.

It was on the bank of a beautiful river, and they stood looking at each other; little Prince Nooro and the noble elephant that had saved his life from a crocodile. The elephant gently wound its trunk around the body of the little boy, and, taking him up, went away through the thicket into the deep jungle. Nooro had seen tame elephants, and was at first not afraid; but as he was carried along through the forest he became uneasy. "I want to go to my mamma!" he cried. Of course the elephant did not know what he meant. Besides, he had his own notions of what he ought to do with the boy; and so he went on.

Over high hills and across deep valleys went the elephant with long, swinging steps.

By and by he set the child down, because he wanted to eat the leaves of some young palm trees. Nooro started to run away, but the elephant took him up and placed him high up in the fork of a tree, and then Nooro began to cry. The elephant paid no attention to his crying, and while eating would reach up to him a bit of the fodder, that Nooro only could the leaves. When he had eaten all he wanted, the elephant took him down from the tree and went onward till they came to a spring, where he took a good drink, after having again put Nooro in a tree. Then the elephant, by the trunk, of a large nut lying on the ground, he dipped up some water and lifted it to Nooro, and the little fellow, being very thirsty, drank heartily. This pleased the elephant very much.

Leaving the spring, it was not long before they were under some tall trees bearing fruit. Nooro knew the fruit quite well, and was fond of it. The elephant, too, liked it very much, and, reaching high up with his trunk, brought some of it down, which he ate with great relish. He did not forget the little boy, again perched aloft in the fork of a tree, and to him he gave fruit as fast as he could eat. And now more than ever was the elephant pleased and much honored, for he was eating what he himself liked, but because the child ate also. Besides fruits, they also had nuts of several sorts.

When the sun went down and the darkness came on, Nooro began once more to think of his mother, and that made him cry; but at length he fell asleep. Then the elephant spread on the ground some large palm leaves and soft, dry grass, making for him a kind of bed. When he awoke in the morning the little boy again thought of his mamma and cried; but as each day passed he cried less and less.

The elephant had placed him in a large gentleman's nest, made of a great many sticks, and so high up in the branches of a tall tree that he could just reach it with his trunk and put Nooro into it. But when it rained heavy that the elephant would take Nooro down with him and place him under his body, closing his huge legs around him, and setting up great, broad palm leaves on each side of him, and it was a rare thing that a drop of rain fell where the little shelter which Nooro was neatly nestling. Sometimes these heavy showers lasted for hours. While the rain came down in torrents, he would peep out to see the monkeys and the other animals running for shelter among the trees and branches.

With those creatures he soon was on the best of terms. The monkeys grew very fond of him, and when he was up in his nest they would come to him with pockets full of nuts, or, perhaps, to pose to see him eat. Besides, they brought the little baby monkeys to play with him; and nothing afforded them greater sport than to see him try to climb after the young monkeys as they leaped from limb to limb. And, out of sheer joy, the older ones themselves would scamper up and down among the branches.

Certainly this was not the best society for a child to grow up in; but if he did not learn his letters, he grew strong and active.

Problems for the Bowlers

Questions That Will Have to be Met By the Bowling Congress Sooner or Later

BOWLING has reached a vogue in the United States that even the most enthusiastic followers of the ancient game of ten-pins would have scarcely hoped to see. There have been years in bowling when critics smiled and said: "This is truly the high water mark," but they were in error. The maximum of interest has not been reached. More money is being invested in bowling alleys and participants in the sport than ever before, but as he was carried along through the forest he became uneasy. "I want to go to my mamma!" he cried. Of course the elephant did not know what he meant. Besides, he had his own notions of what he ought to do with the boy; and so he went on.

THOMAS CURTIS.
"Father of Bowling."

es no longer depend upon the chivalry of rival bowlers to sojourn match games to permit the fair sex to have exclusive use of bowling alleys at certain hours. The feminine bowlers demand and receive concessions. They get the exclusive use of alleys certain days of the week and the development that they have exhibited in the regular game is such that recently one of the most noted bowlers in the west, W. V. Thompson, was beaten in a series of games by a woman roller. And the average of the victor was well up in the 190 mark, too, it is reported.

Recently the American Bowling congress held a session in Baltimore and such legislation as the experts thought wise and timely was put on the books. But the most important feature of the meeting was the report of the progress of bowling in the United States. It was said that over $12,500,000 was invested in bowling alleys and buildings used for bowling purposes, and that there were orders enough placed with firms that built scientific and "regular" alleys to warrant the supposition that the game would soon vie with golf in the matter of investments for plants.

The United Bowling Clubs of New York propose to give the biggest bowling tournament ever held during the week of July 15 to 22. I have the word of Secretary Sam Karpf, of the American Bowling congress, that the executive committee appointed to get funds has already obtained a cash guarantee of $7,500 for this tournament, and that there is plenty of time to increase this to $10,000.

Never before has so much money been contributed to bowling for prizes for one tournament. Thus was with the best bowlers of the land, banded together in one team, made a circuit of the big cities, meeting teams for its patronage. Bowling seems to have the competition open to any regularly organized bowling team that won a championship. The latter term is, of course, elastic enough to please a great many and makes it possible to get representatives from every part in the country that has a championship winner. Cities like Chicago, Cincinnati, New York and Brooklyn might be represented by three or more teams, while such cities as Peoria, Waukesha, St. Louis, Omaha, St. Paul, Minneapolis—in fact almost any good wide awake place, might send from one to three teams. Ten thousand dollars in prize money is not a thing that could well be overlooked. It is the value of the great American Derby value, for which scores of owners and trainers spend innumerable hours of worry preparing their best kings and queens to win the classic event. It is what many an executive head of a business house puts in a year of brain fagging work to get. This is a commercial age in sport, it would appear, and after all the give-for-glory tournaments there is no value in stimulating interest in games.

Preceding the great tourney or coming as an adjunct—the date has not been definitely settled—there will be a match contest for a series of games between the recognized best teams of rollers that will attract the attention of the bowling world. This event may develop into a feature that will overshadow the national tournament. Five men, selected by competition, covering many trial games, and coming from as many cities, will compose the All Star team. They will be pitted against the Greater New Yorkers practically the same team that in two years of touring in the United States established records for excellent bowling that may never be approached or passed. W. V. Thompson, expert in bowling, and a Brill, alight man, accepted as one of the best exponents of the scientific game in the west, will lead the All Stars in the battle for $500 a side. With him will be A. J. Kenna and Frank Brill, and others who are time-tried veterans on the alleys. In the Greater New York personnel will be such stars as George Stein, William Cordes, the captain of the team, D. C. La Rue, Fred Chiott, that veteran, Mr. Thyen, who has rolled in more high-class competitions in more cities and on a greater number of alleys than any other roller in the western hemisphere, G. Thipard, Pete Walt and others.

Problems aiming at the proper control of bowling will have to be met and solved by the American Bowling congress sooner or later, and the task will not be one that the delegates will choose to take up voluntarily. They will have to be forced a bit, it would appear, for the professional roller and his brother, the almost-pure amateur, are now wonderfully confused. Upon the proposition that the Amateur Athletic union cannot reasonably expect to assume control of bowling—many hold that this action would be manifestly indiscreet as the attempt to control billiards—the critics are united. Bowlers claim that their congress should be representative enough to supervise all league contests, inter-city tournaments and national tourneys. With that end in view, the congress passed rules and directed its officers to see that they were executed. But not a word has been said about separating the professionals as they are multiplying with great rapidity in big cities—from the amateurs.

Chicago is an offender in the matter of men of great bowling skill, practically selling their services to more than one team not in the same league. Some of the shrifty bowlers think it no discredit to appear in the competitions of at least three leagues. Certainly there is no bar put up to prevent this sporadic form of activity, but it cannot fail to have a depressing effect upon the club members of leagues that think too much of the amateur status of their clubs to expend a dollar in hiring skilled bowlers. The practice of engaging outside talent districts interest in the leagues, and is bound to result in a loss of membership. If the engaged rollers are like the professional athletes that athletic clubs have engaged to act as point winners, they seldom contribute to the financial support of the clubs employing them. As long as the managers of the various leagues give their consent to this form of bowling, there will be men who will seek to earn a few dollars.

"The Father of Bowling," former Recording Secretary of the American Bowling Congress Curtis, says that bowling has become so much a national game that it will give outdoor sports a considerably rub this summer. He says that once a man "gets the fever" he will select cool and well-ventilated alleys and spend his summer afternoons in rolling, despite the oppressiveness of the atmosphere outside. If the veteran be correct in his premises, it would behoove the men who have invested thousands of dollars in alleys to figure upon ventilation and refrigeration. The dollars that would go to the coffers of the baseball clubs would jingle in the cash boxes of the alley keepers if cooling draughts could be sent through the bowling alleys hot evenings.

In conclusion, I might say that the demand for bowling balls has been so abnormal this winter that the manufacturers are actually facing a famine in properly seasoned wood. Alleys require kiln-seasoned, high-class material, and expert workmen get liberal wages while installing them. It is a good thing for all communities that sports and pastimes make their demands upon the civilization, the forest, the workshop and the capitalist.

IN THE PUBLIC EYE ABROAD

Statistical and Historical Data Bearing on the News of the Day from Foreign Lands

FOR VICEROY OF IRELAND.

The Young Duke of Marlborough Is Reported to Be Seeking This Position.

RUMOR has it in England that Charles Richard John Spencer-Churchill, ninth duke of Marlborough, lieutenant in her majesty's volunteer army and husband of an American heiress, will be appointed viceroy of Ireland when he returns from the war in South Africa.

And this little rumor, and in England no one seems to doubt that the rumor will be followed by the fact in the course of a whirl to the uttermost depths English society and English officialdom. In these later days the British have considerable regard for their American cousins, but that regard does not go far enough to permit of the seating of two American women in the best places under the English crown without a protest. The viceroy and vicereine of Ireland, like the viceroy and vicereine of India, are usually merely in the royal family itself, and the British nation feels that her American cousin is getting more than her share of the glory of English institutions. With Miss Mary Leiter, of Chicago, as vice-queen of India, and Miss Consuelo Vanderbilt, of New York, as vice-queen of Ireland, American women will certainly be a factor in the English government and in English society.

The English people are blind to their foibles. They willingly forget all the bad they do in their lives, and permit only the good to live after them. In England to-day the young duke of Marlborough is an honored man with an honored lineage; the English people have forgotten that the duke's illustrious ancestor, the first duke of Marlborough, played fast and loose with English kings and queens; that he was a traitor to James II., whose army he deserted in the field for brighter personal prospects in the favor of the usurper William of Orange. Later, when his personal advancement seemed in demand it, he turned from plotting treason against the Stuarts to the same course against King William in behalf of Queen Anne. But these things the English people have forgotten, and remember only that the young duke's illustrious ancestor was captain general of England for ten years, from 1702 to 1712; that he brought victory to English arms on the historic fields of Blenheim, Ramillies, Oudenard and Malplaquet. These are the things they remember, and for these they honor the name of Marlborough.

The title of duke of Marlborough was created in 1702 by Queen Anne as a reward for the man who had befriended her, and who was even then the richest and the strongest in England and one of the greatest men of his day throughout all Europe. It was the culmination of a long list of titles which had been showered upon him for gallant services in behalf of different sovereigns, by the foundation of the immense fortune which he built up after he had forsaken the field of battle for a commercial life was a gift of £5,000 from Lady Castlemaine, mistress of the French king, whose favor he had secured by the payment of a bank book, and to the consciousness of having money at work earning something for them and held in reserve for their old age; to aid parents during the sickness of their children, and to create a fund the product of which will be exclusively used to provide means of industrial education.

Queen Victoria is said to have stated that it is more because of his wife than of the duke himself that she desires to place him in the important position of viceroy of Ireland. Her majesty recognizes the fact that the Irish people have a kindly feeling towards Americans, and it is because of this that she desires an American woman to reign over the magnificent castle at Dublin.

FOR SICKNESS AND OLD AGE.

A New Movement Started Among the School Children of France.

A BENEFICENT movement has recently been started among the school children of France in the shape of mutual aid societies, by two Frenchmen, Messrs. Edouard Petit and J. C. Cave. The object of these societies is to afford assistance to their child members during sickness and to furnish a pension fund for old age, to be drawn upon according to the amount deposited.

The plan upon which these societies are operated is as follows: The children deposit two cents per week, one of which goes to the mutual fund for aid in sickness, and the other to the pension fund. This money is deposited in a government depository, where it is invested in government bonds, and draws 3½ per cent. interest. The especial feature of these societies is the aid given them by the government. For every child who contributes during an entire year the state adds 19.3 cents to the common fund, and also gives a sum equal to one-fourth of the entire amount deposited by the children.

The sent deposited in the pension fund can never be recovered except in the form of a pension. If the child dies before reaching the age limit, or for any reason drops out, his penis go to the state, and the money derived from the reserve fund passes to the next of kin of the depositor.

Every school child is given a bank book, upon which is printed a statement of the pecuniary allotted. If one franc is deposited at the age of three years, the depositor may draw about 14½ cents annually when he is 55 years of age, and this sum is increased in proportion to the amount deposited, until it reaches the limit of $68.48 annually.

The sou deposited weekly as a reserve capital, which swells the mutual fund for sickness, does not draw as high a rate of interest as the pension fund, and a franc deposited at the age of three will yield but 12 cents pension at the age of 55. But the depositor does not part with his reserve capital. He can never possess it again, but should he die before he has reached it, the next of kin can take his entire deposits out of the reserve fund, and the depositor in the meantime would still receive the benefit of it during sickness. This fund is sometimes increased by appropriations from the government, and by legacies and gifts.

Some of the aims of the societies, and which commend them in the eyes of parents, are: To imbue children at an early age with the elements of economy; to accustom them to the use of a bank book, and to the consciousness of having money at work earning something for them and held in reserve for their old age; to aid parents during the sickness of their children, and to create a fund the product of which will be exclusively used to provide means of industrial education.

Tailor-Made Gowns of the Spring Season

A Variety of Materials and Colors Are Offered from Which to Select—Two New Colors

THE days of March, with their sunshine, their rain, their snow and then bright and warm again, bring to us a reminder of the close approaching spring when new gowns, and above all new tailor-made, will be a necessary feature of every wardrobe.

I know of nothing so eminently calculated to make a woman feel blissfully at peace with all the world in general, and with her feminine friends in particular, as the knowledge that, secure in the safe shelter of her wardrobe there is a new gown whose immaculate freshness will cede scathless out of the ordeal of the searching brightness of an early spring day, which we all know, to our cost, discovers and magnifies every sign of wear and tear in our winter gowns, and makes us feel woefully out of keeping with the exquisite freshness of nature.

So the wise woman, knowing of old the freaks of the clerk of the weather, and his trick of suddenly pouring sunshine's search-light upon our unprepared head-gear, arranges to take time by the forelock, and to discuss with her tailor, in the leisure which the importance of the subject deserves, the material and the style of the new tailor-made which is to be ready to make its successful debut on the very first of the said bright days.

In the spring tailor-mades there is a tendency to greater elaboration in the way of trimming, and with this addition to the usual plain costume there will be no lack of popularity for these most sensible gowns for street wear.

In colors the peculiar new shades for tailor-mades are terra cotta and pink. These are rather dark in the terra cotta, while the pink is of the faintest of that shade. These colors are considered very odd and are far from becoming to all, but there are many shades being used that are suitable for everybody, or at least from among them every woman can find something that will suit. These shades are gray, biscuit tan, royal blue, drab, light brown and teal brown.

The materials are cheviots, serges, broadcloths, tweeds, venetian cloth and homespuns, with the venetian cloths, cheviots and tweeds in the lead for popularity among the larger classes, but the broadcloths will find many friends among the wealthier classes who have always looked upon this material as their own.

In put they are mostly made with the basic effects, and strappings of the self-material. Some are trimmed with pipings of velvet, handsome braids, and lovely guipure lace on collars and revers.

A smart costume that I saw in one of the shops a few days ago was of pale gray venetian cloth. It was made with a graceful hanging skirt made with a train, a box plait at the back. It had a little short basque coat so arranged that it can be worn either opened or closed. It had a deep turn-over collar of white satin finely braided in jet and silver.

Another in the same shop was of a pale green, and was made with a double-breasted coat cut in the French style, which is very becoming to the figure. It had a turn back, scalloped collar of pale green satin covered with guipure lace. A long clinging skirt with graduated plaits stitched down at each side giving fullness and freedom about ten inches from the bottom of the skirt.

A third was of parma violet cashmere. The bodice of this is quite charming with its fine diagonal tucks, with a box plait down the center fastened with fancy pearl buttons. A square collar, bordered with ivory satin, with a tucked vest of the same. The skirt is plain, being relieved at the hips by groups of small tucks.

One of a gray and blue mixed goods was quite charming. The skirt was made with a box plait at the back with five rows of stitching around the bottom, and five rows down the front and around the skirt, in a shallow scallop about ten inches from the bottom in a tunic effect. The jacket has a tight fitting back and sack front, with rows of stitching around. A deep collar of blue velvet, and three large fancy buttons to fasten the front.

Velvet bodice and cloth skirt are to be a favorite theory of fashion in the immediate future. The combination is a good one for spring wear. An exceedingly neat model just over from Vienna is in deep purple cloth as regards the skirt, which is cut in scallops round the plain edge of the long tunic and stitched in several close-set rows of silk stitchings, over a six-inch hem of velvet of exactly the same shade of violet. The velvet also makes a bolero jacket, cut off short at the waist behind, and open in front over a vest of blouse-like form, which is covered with trimmings in alternate bands of purple satin ribbon gathered into ruches and black lace insertion. A deep collar of white satin, falling low over the shoulders behind and passing into revers at the front of the bolero, all covered with guipure lace, finishes the design. In that bodice the sleeves are also of the velvet; but in another case the velvet is used as a tight-fitting sleeveless coat, fastened down the front with cut silver buttons, and having spade-ends to each of the revers below the waist; both this bodice and the skirt are russet brown, but the skirt is of cloth, and trimmed with many rows of small tucks. Then the whole effect is heightened by a three-cornered vest of the throat and the entire sleeves being of a golden-brown satin, covered finely with white guipure. Such costumes as these are to be recommended for present construction, for there will soon be days on which they may be worn uncovered, assisted by a fur boa.

A KITCHEN OF LONG AGO.

How and What the Old New Englanders Cooked.

BY JEANNETTE DEVOE.

A copy of an ancient cookbook, compiled by "Several New England Ladies" over a century ago and known as the "Turnstreet Housewife," recently attracted my attention. I could not but wonder as I looked it over what would a good old housewife of those days do if she were suddenly put down in a modern city, surrounded by gas ranges, electric lights, elevators and steam heat instead of the old fashioned hearth with its deep chimney seats and blackened cranes, and were obliged to contend with the gastronomic propensity of the average household of today. Probably she would raise her hands in horror and wonder if, after all, the example of her thrift and industry had been sown on sterile soil.

The following directions were considered especially adapted to the needs of young housekeepers of the time of Cotton Mather and Priscilla Alden:

"It will not be out of place to suggest to a novice what will be expected in the way of meals in a farmer's household with a good many hands to feed.

"For Sunday morning in winter fry the hasty pudding that was left over from the previous supper. Eat it with West India molasses or muscovado sugar. In summer fried pudding is no lasting. Pancakes, with cider and sugar, are better. Flapjacks are good on holidays or when the men folks are not working hard. Weekday mornings farmers want some meat that can be cooked quickly, so as to let them go to the meadows before the sun is up. Salt mackerel and shad freshened overnight and boiled are good. When the shad catch comes, buy a barrel of them and salt them yourself.

"Johnnycake or hoecake is a good change from rye and Indian bread. It is always best to keep flour bread in the house, but with a large family of farmhands or apprentices it cannot be eaten commonly. Nut cakes are expected for breakfast and sometimes pye.

"Some families like to get up a great dinner on Sundays and have friends who drive to meeting from a distance come in for the morning. There is no objection to this if everything is prepared the day before. The meat should be plain roast, so that it can be started and left.

"A young child can tend the spit while the rest of the family is away. In winter the pyes should be put on the bench before meeting, so as to thaw gradually. If you wish to avoid the necessity of keeping any one at home, get some rice porridge, or brewis and cold meat. This, with pye, is enough for any one on a leisure day.

"For a weekday dinner boiled corned beef and pork, with a pudding and seasonable vegetables, is a standard dish and always relished by workingmen. Lay in a good supply of turnips, cabbages, pumpkins and squashes.

"Calf's head and pluck make a filling meal. You can have fresh meat frequently, even in warm weather, if, when you kill a sheep or calf, you pass it around to the neighbors and they return the compliment when their kill. It is usually safer to wait for cool weather before killing beef and pork. Fowls are always to be had. When the team goes to Boston in the winter with a load to sell, have it bring back a 50 pound firkin of codfish and a barrel of oysters, along with the molasses and sugar supply. The fish will keep frozen for weeks. A place can be sawed off and thawed when needed. It can be salted down and is much better than store codfish.

"Arrange the cold meat and vegetables left from dinner on a large platter for the men folks. Saturday night they will expect hasty pudding and milk, or bean porridge and pork in new. Brown bread and milk with pumpkin stewed dry, or baked sweet apples or huckleberries, are liked on a hot summer afternoon, especially if the milk is from Brown the week old cow. Pye and gingerbread and custards are good enough for common tea. Keep a loaf of rich cake on hand for unexpected company.

"For a boiled dinner, at 9 o'clock make a good, steady fire that will last until noon. Place the pot on the crane and fill half full of cold water; add a large piece of corned beef or pork, and at 10:30 put in the cabbage, at 11 the carrots and turnips, at 11:30 the parsnips and onions, and at 12 quarters of squash on the top. The dinner will be sufficiently cooked by 12 o'clock."

Simple and choice as these recipes are, there is as much resemblance between them and our modern day methods of cooking as there is difference between the old fashioned hearth and our drawing room gas logs. Both suggest the comforts of their day, which, after all, enough to keep us in touch with these good old times.

FASHION NOTES.

Various Items Concerning the Present Day Wardrobe.

A black gown is an essential item in every woman's wardrobe. It is also an economical piece to have two bodices, one high necked and long sleeved, the other an evening bodice, or there may be one bodice with transparent yoke and sleeves and a separate black underdress with sleeves and high neck to be worn beneath for ordinary occasions.

Flowers of silk and velvet are immensely worn, not simply in the hat or coque, but as accessories to the general toilette. Orchids, pinks, roses and particularly violets are tucked into the lace, pinned to the fur revers or the jacket or employed lavishly in the decoration of evening corsages. Violets continue to enjoy the extreme favor which has been shown them for several winters past, an unusual constancy on the part of fashion.

Hats are very large, especially when they are made of fur, shirred crepe de chine or tucked velvet. One, for example, is a sort of toque, large, as are all toques this winter, and made of pale green crepe de chine draped and interlined with net covered closely with silvery green spangles. Others, again, are quite elaborate. The illustration shows one of the latter class. The crown and the outside of the brim are covered with black snakeskin, while the brim is faced with sable. It is turned up at the side and trimmed with magnolia blossoms and foliage. In addition to which there is a sort of plume composed of shirred and tucked tulle.

THE SEASON'S STYLES.

Up to Date Fashions of Various Descriptions.

Tunics of lace similar to those worn last summer are in vogue this winter also, for evening costumes chiefly. They are made in the princess form, with no seams, the lace being joined so deftly by lace stitches that there is no evidence of the juncture, and the entire garment is thus moulded perfectly to the figure. It usually opens over a plaited or embroidered skirt in front.

Cloth is universally used, even for evening gowns and bodices. When employed in this way, it is usually enriched by embroidery and incrustations of lace or guipure and is combined often with velvet.

Shirred waists of mousseline de soie are far from being a novelty, having been worn for years past. However, some new feature is introduced every season, and this season it is a little band of beading separating the puffs. Through this beading is run black velvet ribbon, with satin stripes of the narrowest width, these ribbons forming choux down the front. The top chou is very large and has a jewel in the middle, the choux being smaller and diminishing toward the waist.

The ball gown shown is of white satin. The skirt is incrusted with bretter colored guipure and trimmed about the foot two ruffles of mousseline de soie. The bodice is covered with guipure and is draped in front by a jeweled brooch. Around the throat is a drapery of turquoise panne, and the belt is of blue panne with a jeweled buckle. The half length sleeves of guipure have draperies of blue panne, and the gown has for neck a collar of white satin with a lace ruffle.

SPRING MILLINERY.

Pretty Hats and Bonnets For the Approaching Season.

The models for spring millinery are very attractive. First, there are crepe walking hats with a narrow brim and a full crown. These are of one color or two, the crown and brim being made of different fabrics. A crepe de chine hat has bands and choux of silk and a quill or aigrette of cog feathers. The colors are green, gray, beige, black, dark blue and white. There are draped toques of straw in various colors, including golden yellow, bright blue and ecru, which are very effective. To aspect is to wear flowers, lace, etc., which are appropriate decoration. Finally, there are hats and toques of shirred crepe de chine, mousseline de soie, net and tulle, trimmed with spangles, flowers, ferns and all varieties of delicate adornment.

The flowers used this season are very beautiful and closely imitate nature. Tea roses and orchids are among the most fashionable, though the violet is, as usual, well represented. Foliage of any kinds is also much employed.

No very small hats are worn, all millinery being large or of medium size, with the exception of the little theater bonnets, which are simply small headdresses and are known as full.

The pleasing illustrates a morning jacket of cream liberty satin, bordered with gold embroidery. The neck and the arrangement of the vest and jacket is draped by choux at the shoulders over an underbodice of broche hellotrope silk. The straight sleeves are gathered at the wrist and have a turned back cuff of cream satin embroidered with gold. The neck frill is of lace, the cravat of cream satin. A belt composed of gold and ornaments the loose front. The back is tight and forms two plaits at and below the waist.

DRESSMAKING HINTS.

Details of the Manufacture of Fashionable Gowns.

Entire gowns are now made of mousseline de soie. In sewing the breadths together the tunic is liable to become puckered, and the best method of avoiding this unpleasantness is to baste a strip of paper along the line of the seam. After the stitching is done the paper is easily removed.

When a bodice is entirely or partly covered with guipure or embroidery, the latter should be cut with as few seams as possible. The pieces should be matched as exactly as possible, in order to give the impression that the bolero, or whatever the decoration is, is all in one piece.

The most elegant dressmakers always put one or two thicknesses of mousseline de soie between the guipure or open embroidery and the satin over which it is used.

When pleatings or ruffles of mousseline de soie are used, the hem is almost always covered by a fine ruche of the same mousseline, or by a ruffled narrow ribbon.

The cut shows a pretty wrapper of soft wool plaid. It is held in at the waist by a heavy cord with tassels at the ends and has a large collar of plain cloth matching the predominating color of the plaid, bordered with a band of cloth of a harmonizing shade. Wide straps of cloth cover the collar and passes down the front of the wrapper. The tight sleeves have turned back cuffs of plain cloth, and the high collar watches the ruffs.

RED CROSS WORK IN MANILA

Trained Women Nurses Have Been Placed on the Philippines, Assistable to the Army Hospitals.

BY MILDRED MERRIAM.

The work of the various Red Cross auxiliaries which started about to end early in 1899 has been going on all this while, to the surprise of many of the committee who had charge of the work. It is now perhaps as important as ever.

The ladies of the committee recently held a meeting at the residence of the chairman. At this meeting the money received to date was reported as $5,700, the number of nurses sent to Manila by them as 29 and the work as still in full progress and as efficient as ever.

The government is now prepared to move 1,000 at a time, so that those nurses are not being sent out by the committee. But those already in the field are being eagerly retained for the special service for which their training and large experience especially fit them.

A great part of the money expended was used in procuring delicacies for the sick and forwarding them to the Philippines. Many lives have doubtless been saved, since recovery so often depends on diet alone. Milk, which it is next to impossible to get in Manila, because the cows die of a disease which is very common there, had to be replaced by other foods.

Five often very fine. There was an average of 2,500 sick and wounded in the hospitals, and repeatedly as many as a thousand of these were under the care of the committee nurses.

Out of the entire number of nurses sent out only one was not a graduate trained nurse with large hospital training and professional testimonials of highest efficiency. The nurses have entered heartily into their work and rendered faithful and intelligent service.

At the beginning of hostilities the wisdom of sending women nurses by the government while a state of war existed so near Manila was doubtful, but the success of the nurses was proved by the great demand for their services. At one time there were over 1,000 sick and wounded men under the charge of the committee nurses, and up to the present time the officers' wards and the most serious cases. All now in the field have agreed to remain in the service until June 1, 1900, and the committee has decided to make very effort to keep the work up to its full efficiency till that date.

The greatest care was taken by the committee to properly house the nurses so that they would not suffer from their confined work and the deleterious effects of the climate. The best results have followed, and a nurse has been very rarely incapacitated by illness.

From the time the first nurses started on the transport Grant they have been far from idle. Five hundred and fifty-two cases were cared for on that trip, together with a like number on the other transports. After their arrival in Manila the rush was simply continuous, and until the arrival of the Sherman they had only a few hours to themselves between dispensing Red Cross supplies and answering emergency calls to officers' wives who were sick in their own homes. It was go, go, go, from early morning to late at night, with many night calls besides.

Many letters have been received by grateful officers testifying to the noble work done by the self sacrificing nurses. In an early letter, dated Sept. 2, appealing for clothing of the whole, Colonel Woodhull wrote: "I take opportunity to say, and I am very glad to say it, that the nurses supplied by your association have been of inestimable value. Their tact, skill and high moral quality of the women themselves and upon Miss Henshall's excellent judgment, firmness and executive ability. When there is an opportunity for civil help, as there is here, I cannot expect to find it better than in the ladies of your new associates have done through these excellently selected and well managed representatives."

Miss Henshall was the person selected by the committee for the general charge of all the nurses that they should send out.

The foregoing is cited to show that the doubt entertained by those in power regarding the utility of female nurses in the field has been disproved by the nurses themselves and that their noble self sacrifice has been the inspiration of much good from other sources and that they deserve great reward from a grateful government.

FOR BRIDES TO WEAR.

Dressing Now Current For a Most Fashionable Young Woman.

There will be a rush business now and the beginning of Lent for girl, married, for it is quite out of custom to be wedded during those days. A fashionable girl will Easter for their wedding, but there are others, and to these others I am going to tell about some swell wedding gowns and one or two others not quite so swell, perhaps, but fully as pretty.

The very handsomest one is for a tall and slender blond, and it is absolutely novel in every way. In the first place, it is of dead white armure as thick as brocatelle and a good deal stiffer, and there is a long, square train, with a regular ruff of silk and ruffles beneath, put the train is plain and hangs from the shoulders. The front is a perfect empire shape, and the silk hangs in unbroken lines from the bust line, where it is sewed to a yoke of shirred white chiffon.

Around the bust from under the right arm there was a scarf, or "long shawl," of white Spanish lace draped up to the yoke on the left side, where it was caught up into a bunch with a spray of orange blossoms and then fell to the very floor. The yoke ended at the throat, the rest of the neck being left uncovered.

The sleeves were of shirred chiffon and reached to the knuckles. A tulle veil hung to the bottom of the train in the back and to the waist in front. I should mention that there was a thin little spray of orange blossoms hanging loosely down with the lace scarf, that were are to be worn in the head. The modiste told me that the bride is to carry a large bouquet of orchids and ferns.

A stunning traveling dress for this same fortunate young lady is of pale pink camel broadcloth. The blouse waist is tucked and run in diagonal lines. *The skirt is very long for an out*door gown and has eight or ten lines of stitching directly around the bottom. There is a very deep flounce in front, and on both sides from about the knees in a diagonal line to the center of the back are narrow tucks, perhaps 50 of them.

The skirt is sheath shaped all around, set very directly in the back, where it is laid in many narrow plaits. With this goes a black velvet pointed Eton jacket with stitched cut out bands of the pastel cloth and a high collar and the wide revers of the same. The revers are embroidered lightly with gold thread.

Brides do not have the "secondary" dresses as they did. Everything but their traveling gowns is just such as they would wear at any time.

The traditional orange blossoms are also a little out of date, and white heather often replaces them; so do other preferred blossoms. One thing I may note is that out of 25 brides three had long, square trains, and the very heaviest quality of satin duchesse, armure and faille are used.

One fancy seen in three of these was a square opening in the blouse shaped waist and this filled in with shirrings of chiffon. No bride wears a low cut bodice, and most of them have the collar as high as the ears and chin will permit. Only one out of six fashionable brides will have a point lace veil. All the others must be content with tulle.

This one favored young lady says she will end the deep point flounce down the front of her gown are heirlooms and have been in the family for generations. So they have, but not her family, for I happen to know just whose great-great-grandmother were the lace in England. They were exchanged with that English family, and so the American bride will wear the priceless lace.

This young lady will wear for traveling a mouse colored cloth. There is a polished tunic edged with a deep ruffle of lace. There is a side pleated flounce of this cloth beneath the tunic. The waist is blouse shape, the upper part being laid in plaits, and the lace applique is set across the bust.

Plaids are very much used and tucks are largely employed as decoration upon all these wedding dresses.

Next week I am to have delightful times looking at the models for the new Easter millinery. For once I am thankful that I am not the slightest inkling as to what we are to have. We can only hope that the fates will be kind.

GWENDOLYN POMEROY.

EMBROIDERY.

It Is the Most Favorite Among Most Generations.

The rage for embroidery shows no symptoms of decreasing, and having such a wide field to choose from in design and construction within the sweet charm herself the great modiste are to still further exemplify the luxury to which this class of decoration may go. One of the newest ideas is the embroidery of open silk over embroidery of the same shade with parts of mousseline de soie which comes through the open spaces with a many effect. Open and relief embroideries upon satin, satin, cloth, etc., although now old fashioned, have not yet been relegated.

The four leaved clover, long a favorite of fashion in the form of brooches, pendants, charms and similar ornaments, is now used as a motif for embroidery and appears in applications upon cloth gowns.

Narrow black velvet ribbon is much used in application, not merely in straight bands, but in cheverons and geometrical designs. Narrow gold lace, plaited along the middle is similarly used, but lends itself more readily to elaborate and fanciful motifs.

The illustration given today shows a young girl's jacket made of heavy cloth. It is double breasted, closing at the left side, and the front forms a sort of square tab separated at the lower end from the basque. The back is closely fitting. There is a high flaring collar with a scalloped edge and a single revers. Applications of velvet ornament the back, front and sleeves of the jacket. The collar is faced with velvet and the revers covered with it. The applications are outlined by lines of stitching. Two rows of pearl buttons decorate the front.

ADVANCE FASHIONS.

Indications For the Coming Spring Styles.

Lavender and lilac shades predominate among the advance styles of spring and summer goods, and so color is fairyist to be fashionable. Even the very simplest can wear it. In all over open goods such as are now sold by the yard for making transparent waists for summer wear there are materials composed of alternate stripes of lavender batiste or fine repp and white valenciennes lace. Then there are sheer printed stuffs in lavender and white, and lavender and white embroidered batistes in the same color. A touch of stock is frequently introduced in the embroidered or printed design of delicately tinted lavender or lilac. If the design is not of a floral character naturally treated. Some of the detached set patterns are exceedingly attractive, especially some very pretty pink batistes with rather large figures embroidered in spaces of black and white.

A pleasing model is a costume of cashmere cloth. The skirt is decorated with a stitched band, which is arranged in points to design a tunic. The right side and the under part of cloth laid in horizontal stitched plaits. The embroidered collar forms a sort of plaited drapery in front, and the high collar and plaited revers are of pointed cloth of the dress revers are of white cloth. The hat of black chenille is trimmed with feathers.

WOMAN'S PART IN WARTIME.

Titled Dutch Ladies Who Are Shown Good Colonels and Brave Wives Who Cast Sheet.

BY GLADYS LA TOUR.

The great interest that every nation is taking in the strife between the Boers and the British has been participated in by the women as well as the men. American women might well take example from the women of the Netherlands. How many of us who are proficient in the arts of tennis, teas and golf could handle a gun in self defense? If necessity should demand, what woman of your or my acquaintance could hold her horse against heavy artillery fire?

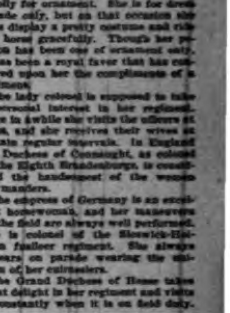
It is a generally accepted theory that in civilized countries these duties do not fall to the part of the gentler sex, but who can foresee the events that might make the knowledge of the handling of a gun of extreme value?

Abroad one of the most picturesque features of the home guard is the woman colonel. In England and Germany especially the woman colonel is a well established institution, but she is wholly for ornament. She is for dress parade only, but on that occasion she does display a pretty costume and rides her horse gracefully. Though her position has been one of ornament only, it has been a royal favor that has conferred upon her the compliments of a regiment.

The lady colonel is supposed to take a personal interest in her regiment. Once in awhile she visits the officers at mess, and she presents a flag after certain regular intervals. In England the Duchess of Connaught, as colonel of the Eighth Strandenburgs, is considered the handsomest of the women of her manders.

The empress of Germany is an excellent housewoman, and her maneuvers on the field are always well performed. She is colonel of the Slesswick-Holstein fusileer regiment. She always appears on parade wearing the uniform of her cuirassiers.

The Grand Duchess of Hesse takes great delight in her regiment and visits it constantly when it is on field duty.



DUCHESS OF CONNAUGHT IN COLONEL'S UNIFORM.

The severe style of military dress is very becoming to her, more so than to the other European court ladies, for she is about the only one of the royal family who can lay claim to the distinction of being really slight.

The hereditary Princess Charlotte of Saxe-Meiningen and the crown princess of Roumania are other popular colonels of the Germany army. There are not many of them, for the German emperor has made the custom of appointing women colonels common. He was the first to appoint foreign princesses colonels of Prussian regiments.

The young queen of the Netherlands was greatly delighted when Emperor William conferred upon her the Fifteenth hussars. Her mother, Queen Emma, is colonel of a Prussian regiment. The queen is very proud to make the princesses colonels of these regiments that are connected by tradition to their own countries.

All this only goes to show that the fullest possible training by the highest of court circles has no actual significance as indicative of ability to lead to the true military sense of the word. There is a marked difference between their nobility position and that of the American lady. The one is all show while the other is all utility.

The recent report that President Kruger intended to fill the trenches with women has made the American women sensitive to the possible determination of the Transvaal people to maintain their liberty, no matter what the cost. Such a move on the part of Oom Paul would have a tremendous moral effect upon all the nations of the world, and it shows to what desperation the Boer race must place in their women that they will permit them to fight, even in such extremes as the present days.

The remarkable upon thousands of Hessian women, mostly society ladies and dressmakers, are making application at the war office for positions at the front. All want to be nurses or assistant nurses, or anything that will bring them near to the seat of the fighting. Though the war office discourages as much as possible ladies going to the front, lots of them start just the same.

A DEMOCRATIC WEEKLY.

PLAINFIELD, N. J.

Terms—$2.00 per year.

A. L. Force, Editor and Proprietor

Mr. Martine as One of the "Big Four."

The selection of James R. Martine as one of the delegates-at-large to represent New Jersey at the Democratic National convention, to be held in Kansas City July 4th, would be becoming an honor on the "Farmer Orator" that he not only personally deserves, but in action which would be accepted and justified by good politics. However much one may disagree with Mr. Martine as to the political principles and public policies of this country, it will be conceded by everyone who knows him—and his friends are legion throughout the State—that there has been no man who has been more steadfast and honest in his devotion to enunciated tenets of the dominant element of the party than has the "Farmer Orator."

Indeed, in 1894, nearly all the then prominent Democratic leaders of the State either bolted the ticket outright or else remained inactive and luke warm throughout the campaign, Mr. Martine worked like a Trojan till election day expounding the principles of the Chicago convention and advocating the election of its candidates.

Even after the overwhelming defeat that Bryan and Sew—ll met with at the hands of the voters of the country, Mr. Martine, with characteristic consistency and perseverance, remained unflinching in the firing line of the political battalion. He was there through thick and thin, and now, when the political condition of affairs is such that those who hooted and jeered, figuratively speaking, at the procession which he was constantly sounding the reville for in its darkest days, have fallen into line, it is eminently proper and fitting that he should be among the elect.

Now is the Chance.

What public sentiment, condemnation proceedings by the Board of Health and a vast amount of ridicule has failed to accomplish in the effort to get the city to abandon the veritable rookery which has served as a police station and city court room, the fire flend brought about in a few minutes yesterday. The use of this building for such important municipal purposes has been a disgrace and reflection upon the progress and enterprise of the city for several years. At its best it has been nothing more than a make-shift, but now that the interior has been gutted and made untenantable by flames it will be a gross wrong to attempt to utilize it any further for police and court purposes.

The fact that Plainfield will probably have a city hall, in which there will be provisions for the proper housing of the police force, the detention of offenders and their subsequent trial in a decent court room, does not require the further use of this old rookery for such purposes. The time when Plainfield will have a city hall in use is still considerably distant, and as a consequence the Common Council should at once make arrangements for the temporary use of some other place better fitted for police and court purposes than the building gutted by the yesterday. The cost will not be much greater, and even if it was the taxpayers will not object to a reasonable expenditure for work that is so necessary and urgent for the best interests of the city, its servants and its prisoners.

The Philadelphia Press has little faith that the projected cigarette crusade in Philadelphia will accomplish anything. "The smoking of cigarettes by boys," it says, "will go on as usual. The cigarette evil is one which laws can do very little to diminish. It is largely a home and school matter. If parents and teachers will do their duty the practice would fall off seventy-five per cent. They do not do their duty and the practice continues and grows constantly. The cigarette evil can be checked by dealing with it in the right way, but ephemeral bursts of energy succeeded by long periods of lethargy will accomplish little good."

Even the most inveterate "shopper" occasionally likes a hint as to what she should purchase; and she gets that hint from the advertisements she reads in her favorite newspaper, says the Pittsburgh Record. If the "shopper" can thus be moved, thousands of other purchasers can be more easily influenced. Advertisements point the way to trade.

THERE IS A CLASS OF PEOPLE

Who are injured by the use of coffee. Recently there has been placed on all the grocers' shelves a pure grain food drink called GRAIN-O, made of pure grains, that takes the place of coffee. You can drink it and give it to children, and all will like it. It does them good. You get the flavor of the finest coffee, but it is entirely free from the harmful drug in coffee. It is not expensive. Yet it is. Ask for GRAIN-O. 15 cts. and 25 cts. per package. Try it. Ask for GRAIN-O.

The Proposed Franchise Tax.

The franchise tax bill introduced in the Assembly by Mr. Foote, of Plainfield, was drawn up by Speaker Jones, but the one whose ideas are best represented in its provisions is none other than that eminent and influential gentleman, Governor Voorhees. The measure is undoubtedly the most important which has or will appear in the Legislature at the present session. If passed it will be of direct interest to nearly every corporation in the State because of the fact that corporations using public franchises in the operation of their enterprises have already invaded and secured concessions from very many municipalities, and it is only a matter of time when probably every town of big or little importance will have to cope with the provisions cited in the proposed law.

The proposition of the measure is that all corporations coming under its demands, and they include nearly every enterprise of every kind that utilizes public privileges in, over or under public streets, shall furnish annual reports showing the amount of gross receipts for the year preceding. Upon this amount a franchise tax of 2 per cent. shall be levied, and then this amount is apportioned by the State Board of Assessors and finally collected by the officials of the various municipalities to which it applies.

In an interview in relation to the proposed law Governor Voorhees explains that when there are existing contracts between the companies and the different municipalities, whereby percentages or license fees are to be paid, pursuant to any resolution, ordinance or agreement, the measure provides "that these shall not be affected," and requires payments to be made as heretofore. "Then the percentage of the gross receipts apportioned to these localities exceeds the amount so paid, the municipality will receive the excess. But until that time payments are to be made as required by the agreement.

In the case of cities that are already collecting a special tax on the receipts of corporations working under franchises granted them by such municipalities—as for instance, the case of Plainfield collecting 5 per cent. of the gross receipts of the Street Railway Company—the law will only impose the payment of a sum in excess of the amount already being paid to equal what the 2 per cent. State tax would call for.

It would probably not make a great deal of difference with the Plainfield Street Railway Company under the terms exempted from by the Common Council, but with the electric light, gas, water and telephone companies the franchise tax would mean that they would have to pay considerably more than they do now to the city treasury.

In speaking of its chances to become a law, Gov. Voorhees says that "undoubtedly the measure will meet with considerable opposition, and it may not contain all of the promises that some may think should be enacted. It will, however, serve, if enacted, to establish a new policy in the State, and the communities wherein franchises are enjoyed will have the benefit of its provisions, instead of the State at large. It may not meet with the approval of those who believe that a much higher scale of tax should be imposed. As some one has said, it is not so much the length of the step as it is the direction in which the step is taken that is to be considered. The measure, I believe, is in the main, a fair one to all affected by its provisions."

The joint committee of the Legislature, which is making up the budget of appropriations required by the various State departments, has decided to recommend an increase of $25,000 for the Banking Department. This is made necessary by the law giving to the department the supervision of all building and loan associations in the State. Without money with which to carry out the letter and the spirit of the new law, the new statute would become a virtual dead letter. This should not be. Loan and building associations have great sums of money entrusted to their care, and the stockholders in these concerns—mostly people of moderate means—are entitled to have their interests safe-guarded to the best of the State's ability and energy.

A unique political incident is that of the executive committee of the Hudson county Democratic committee presenting a petition asking City Collector Davis, the Democratic leader, to appoint his son, William J. Davis, to be a clerk in his office to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Myles McCartin. The collector will probably comply with the request, as his son is competent.

The determination of Rev. Dr. Sheldon to manage and edit the Topeka State Capital for one week as he thinks Jesus would if He was in charge of a newspaper, is one of the most unusual, unique and bold enterprises ever undertaken by mortal man. The State Capital will be the most closely read paper of the world for this week.

Republican State Convention.

In the call for the Republican State convention for the election of delegates to the National convention, to be held in Philadelphia, which was issued Monday by Franklin Murphy, chairman of the State committee, a unique and unusual ruling is held in the sentence describing those who are qualified and desired to participate in the primaries for the election of delegates to that gathering of political spirits. It has always been a rule that only professing Republicans are entitled to take part in primaries called for the purpose of electing delegates to conventions of the party, but under the call issued by Mr. Murphy yesterday this rule is given a construction that will admit of a wide latitude of opinion as to what fits a man for the right to vote at the primaries that will be held to choose delegates.

After explicitly calling upon sincere Republicans to participate in the selection of the delegates, the official call adds "and all who approve of the wise and patriotic administration of President McKinley and who desire the great prosperity that prevails throughout our country to be continued by the maintenance of the policy under which it has been promoted."

Probably there are some who are not out-and-out Republicans who approve of the President's course in some respects, and it would seem that according to the ideas of the recognized head of the Republican organization in New Jersey these gentlemen will have a perfect right to vote in the party primaries, either for good or bad reasons—as they may be prompted—the same as those who are straddling-laced in their Republican professions.

In the table of the number of delegates that each county is entitled to send to the State convention, it is noted that Union county has 44. Somerset county is entitled to 16.

The Common Council having issued its final demand to the People's Gas Company, we shall now await with considerable anxiety and interest to see how the new corporation looks upon the terms which it is proposed to exact if a franchise to do business is granted.

Robert Davis, the Hudson county Democratic leader, suggests the name of Former Senator Smith as a likely one to select as one of those who shall represent the Democrats at the National convention as one of the delegates-at-large.

STANDS IN TWO COUNTIES.

First Baptist Church Said to be Par ly in Union and Partly in Somerset County.

Not many preachers of the Gospel can say that for thirty years they have preached in a church in one county with their congregation in another, but this is claimed to be true in the case of Rev. Dr. D. T. Taylor and his people. It is claimed according to geographical lines, that a good portion of the First Baptist church, which faces toward the brook, back of the edifice, is in Somerset county, while that portion used for the seating of the congregation is in Union county. This state of affairs has existed for nearly thirty years, and there has never been any dispute regarding it.

There are many old residents who can remember when the brook extended a considerable way toward Front street. This stream was narrowed according to the needs of the times. When the First Baptist church was built it was determined that more land was needed for the large structure, and therefore extra property was obtained by filling in the brook and bringing the bank to its present location close to the sheds. It was impossible to disturb the brook so that any trouble would arise in high tide, and allowances were made for that. In the early days there was a large pond of water located in that vicinity and it was considered a most desirable place for skating in the winter. As years went by this was gradually filled in, until the present day there is nothing more than an ordinary brook, which is large enough for all purposes.

In the early history of the church all the baptisms took place in the brook back of the property. This was practiced until the new church was built in 1868 and the baptismal pool was placed in that edifice. The brook has always been the dividing line between the two counties, but the exact geographical line has never been accurately established. On this ground the claim is established that Dr. Yerkes preaches in one county and his congregation is located in another. This is a curious fact. If true, and is probably not paralleled in this State.

Forty Years a Freeholder.

William Harrison Stites, one of the oldest residents of Cocntown, who died last week, was remarkable for his advanced age. For forty years continuously he was a member of the Somerset County Board of Freeholders, severing his association with that body only a few years ago when he was compelled to do so on account of his health.

TO PREVENT DAMP WALLS.

A Simple Process Which Involves But Little Expense and Labor.

It is unnecessary to dilate upon the danger and undesirable character of damp walls. Not only do they endanger the furniture, books, fittings and dressings of the house, but, in truth, a much more serious matter is the peril which they convey to the health of inmates. It is also known that in many cases walls, as though gifted with the power of voluntary perversity, will persist in growing damp, where no recognized cause exists. In a recent article touching upon this matter the writer describes a very simple remedy for this difficulty. He says: In many localities there is a great deal of complaint about damp walls. Expedients of all sorts have been resorted to in order to remedy this evil, but in most cases they have involved great cost and labor, and sometimes the only alternative was the tearing down of the wall and rebuilding it with a filling of Portland cement and other impervious material. A simple process is said to effectually do away with all dampness. Applications are made alternately of dissolved white soap and dissolved alum. Three-fourths of a pound of soap is melted in one gallon of boiling water. The liquid thus obtained is thoroughly beaten, to cause a stiff froth. This is applied to the wall when completely incorporated by stirring and made hot. The time for preparing the wall should be after a long dry spell, and, as the wall must be as free from moisture as possible, this condition can be assisted by the judicious use of fire. Then brush the surface to be covered until as clean as possible. With a wide, flat brush coat the surface with the boiling soap preparation, working it back and forth until the wall is covered with small bubbles. Let it remain 24 hours to dry out, then apply in like manner the alum solution, dissolving half a pound of alum in four gallons of water. The alum coating may be nearly at blood heat. This should stand a day or two to dry and harden; then another application of soap, the same as the first, must be put on. How many coats are needed depends on the condition of the wall; sometimes half a dozen would be necessary. The soap and alum form a coating insoluble in water, and this unites with the material in the wall, filling all of the crevices and making a thoroughly waterproof surface.—Housewife.

ONLY A DREAM.

A Convict's Sweet Illusion of Freedom and Wealth Ruthlessly Dispelled.

The day of my discharge has come. How happy I am. How proud I feel as I stand in my cell by the door. I can hear myself in my "store" clothes, then make my way, eager and trembling with delight, toward the front office. There, after a few preliminaries, I am handed my discharge and my money and joyfully go forth to battle once more with the world. How brightly the sun shines. How fresh and invigorating the air. Its actually gladdening to hear the stir behind those ugly frowning walls.

And, now that I am once again free, where will I go, and what will I do? Ah! a thought strikes me. I have not yet breakfasted. Where is there a good restaurant? Right down the street. I enter and give an order that makes the waiter stare in astonishment. Ha, ha! He will stare harder than that when he sees me get outside of that breakfast. Beefsteak. Fried potatoes, eggs, ham, hot rolls, butter, coffee and—. Hello, while the cook is hustling around making ready the feast I will take a drink. Is there a saloon near? Yes. Just two doors below. Thither I go, and feeling rich indeed, for haven't I 25 big American dollars in my pocket? I ask everybody up to drink. All accept. The drinks are placed on the bar. The barkeeper is making change for a ten, we raise the glasses to our lips, and—

Clang! Clang!! Clang!!! goes the gong, and I rise and open and, as usual, go to my daily grind.—Minnesota Prison Mirror.

Plastered Bread.

Just as the most tasteful way of cooking shad is on a plank, so many people think that the best corn bread is that cooked in the same fashion. Into two tablespoonfuls of cold hominy rub a tablespoonful of butter or lard, one egg, a little salt and milk. Add corn flour enough to make the batter just stiff enough to be spread upon a board. Do not let the batter be more than half an inch thick on the board. Put it in the oven, or before a hot fire if you can manage it, and let it brown. Pass a coarse thread between the cake and board, turn it and brown the other side. Use a well-seasoned hardwood plank.—Farm and Fireside.

The Retreat.

The difference in our estimate of people and things depends on how we take them. If we eat the whole nut, there is a good deal that is coarse and unnutritious; but if we have the talent of picking out the kernel we generally find it sweet. Even the squirrel knows enough for that. Persons of a very wide and varied experience are apt to despise this squirrel wisdom. Out of each of their battles, sieges and fortunes they have contrived to extract a central core that was interesting.—Emerson.

FRIENDS OF THE YANKEES.

What Is the Reputation Which a Traveled Blacksmith Gives the Boers.

Blacksmith Peavey must certainly be put down as one of the greatest travelers among the residents of Manchester. A story of his years of travel from land to land and of the life among different peoples would make a biography in itself. He is a bachelor, resides in West Manchester, and will be 50 years old next May. He learned his trade at Ashland, of this state, and has worked at it in almost every civilized land on the globe. He was $100 in cash when he was 27 years old, and in 1878 started for California.

His brief stop among the Boers is most of interest just now, but he put in five years in Sacramento and thereabouts, in Arizona and New Mexico, and was in the rush from Seattle to the Skaggett mines, British Columbia. Then he went to Honolulu and spent 18 months in Hawaii. On March 21, 1883, he started his greatest trip, he becoming one of the party of 23 that purchased the brigantine Nancenil, bound for Siberia. Seventeen of the owners sailed, with four outsiders as ship's officers. Most of the men wanted to go to South Africa, but the captain claimed he knew whereof he talked, and insisted on Siberia. The Siberian trip was a mistake and a failure, and the boat was disposed of for cash.

When the venture was given up Mr. Peavey went to blacksmithing, and his subsequent course covered points in Japan, Cores, Hong-Kong, Shanghai, Canton, Amboy, Foo Chow and Tientsin in China, Manilla in the Philippines, Singapore in India, New Guinea, New Caledonia, New Hebrides, the Gilbert group, Fijis, the Friendly and Society islands, New Zealand, Tasmania, Australia, Queensland, Thursday Islands, New South Wales, Victoria, Ceylon, Calcutta, Bombay, nearly every port in the Mediterranean, Italy, Germany, Hungary, Spain, France, Sweden and Norway, England, Scotland and Ireland. On September 26, six years ago, he sailed for the old New Hampshire hills.

"In all my travels," says Mr. Peavey, "the Boers were the best people in all the world to the Yankee man, and the Japanese a close second."—Manchester (N. H.) Union.

Shocking the Earth.

The revelations at Prof. Milne's observatory on the Isle of Wight of the manner in which earthquakes extend their impulses thousands of miles through the frame of the globe are a source of ceaseless wonder. In September last Prof. Milne's instruments detected remarkable tremblings of the earth on the 3d, 10th, 17th, 20th and 23d. Since then he has traced the origin of the shakings on the first three days named to Alaska, on the 20th to Asia Minor and on the 23d to Japan. But every earthquake does not thus set the globe in a tremble, for the shocks at Darjeeling, in India, on September 25 and 26 were not felt at the Isle of Wight, the reason being, Prof. Milne thinks, because those shocks were due to local landslips.—Youth's Companion.

Arthur's Round Table.

The round table, which is supposed to have been that of King Arthur's time, is a revered bit of furniture in the county hall of Winchester, England. Tradition says it is the same table around which King Arthur and his knights were wont to assemble. It is an ancient painted oaken table of circular form. A royal figure bearing the orb and sword and wearing the crown adorns the center.—Detroit Free Press.

Funeral of Mrs. Smith.

The funeral services of the late Mrr. Phillip Smith were held Monday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock from the home on Craig place. There was a large attendance of relatives and friends. Rev. Dr. W. R. Richards, pastor of the Crescent Avenue church, officiated, and his remarks concerning the exemplary life of the departed were very impressive. The display of floral tributes were many and beautiful. During the service two favorite hymns were sung. Interment took place in Hillside Cemetery, and those who served as pall bearers were L. W. Randolph, Mr. Beston, George Edwards, S. R. Struthers, Alex Thorn and C. W. Compton.

FINAL DEMAND TO THE PEOPLE'S GAS COMPANY

Common Council Cites the Terms Under Which Franchise Will be Granted.

DOLLAR GAS FOR TEN YEARS

NEW COMPANY MUST AGREE TO STRINGENT STIPULATIONS.

Council Will Do Nothing Further Until the Company Agrees to Accept the Terms—Firemen's Bill Opposed.

The regular March meeting of the Common Council held last Monday was void of any exciting features. There was not even any large expenditure of money, although a number of important matters were introduced to engage the attention of the members, all of whom were present except Mr. Clifton.

The report of last year's Council regarding the petition of the People's Gas Company for a franchise to furnish one dollar gas to the city was introduced by Mr. Mollick with a little addition. This addition provides that the term of years the company is to sell dollar gas shall be ten instead of five, and that the company shall furnish security in the sum of $10,000 for the faithful performance of the work, that the tearing up of streets, laying of mains, etc., shall be done under the direction of the street commissioner who shall see that the streets are put back in their proper condition. It also provides that no other pipes shall be interfered with and that the work shall be completed within one year from the time the franchise is granted. A resolution followed the reading of the above. This provides that until the People's Gas Company accept the terms offered by the Council no further steps shall be taken in the matter.

Another matter of importance was the action taken in direct opposition to the passage of Senate Bill 76 and Assembly Bill 230, which provide for the increase in pay of the members of the fire department and also for a pension for the firemen. A resolution was offered to the effect that it is the sense of the Council that Assemblyman Foote and Senator Crose use their efforts to prevent the adoption of the bills.

It was ascertained that Bill 76 was drafted under the influence and at the suggestion of the active members of the local department, members of the State Mutual Firemen's Benefit Association, and while the members of the Council showed themselves heartily in favor of doing anything for the firemen within reason, it was the unanimous opinion of the Council that these bills would work injury if adopted. Mr. Corbell was outspoken against it. He thought Plainfield was paying all that it could well afford to for the department, about $20,000 a year. Mr. Buckle felt the same way. He said that with a workman if the time that he loses in a year. Not so with a fireman. He receives his pay just the same, and he thought that the local firemen ought to be satisfied for the present. Other members felt the same way.

Residents of Netherwood avenue asked the Council to appoint commissioners to establish the grade on that avenue, and take such action as is proper for the macadamizing, grading and curbing of the street.

The Board of Assessors petitioned the Council to have the city maps corrected and the property transfers made before next May. Assessor H. C. VanHorn was given the contracts to do the work at a cost not to exceed $150. F. W. Runyon and others complained about the great amount of dust that is blowing about the streets in the business part of the city and petitioned to have the streets sprinkled. The petition was referred with power.

Dr. VanHorn, who at the last meeting was appointed City Physician, learned in the meantime that Dr. Carman's time has not expired, and that he has another year to serve. Rather than complicate matters he resigned, and Mayor Rockfellow withdrew the nomination. Dr VanHorn's letter explaining the case was read and filed.

Mayor Rockfellow appointed S. Shanahan as Poundkeeper, and the following as special policemen: David Best, Jeremiah Cash, Dennis Kane, Thomas O'Gorman and James Carty.

Collector Martin reported through the city clerk that the number of unpaid poll tax remaining on the books for the past two years amount to $561 75. This report was made at the suggestion of Mr. Dumont, and the latter had the statement referred to the finance committee with instructions to urge the collection of this money, which he said can be done.

As a result of a conference between Messrs. Corbell and Mollick free gas for the fire department houses have been secured through the generosity of H. G. Runkle. A letter was read from Mr. Runkle which had been addressed to Chief Doane. This letter states that from March 1st of the present year until further notice the Plainfield Gas and Electric Light Company will furnish 250,000 cubic feet of gas to the fire department houses, free, and that all gas used above that number of feet will be charged for at regular rates. The generosity of the company was acknowledged and a vote of thanks was given to Mr. Runkle.

Mr. Buckle stated that a few days ago a very antique piece of furniture that has been used by the city caught fire and as a result its condition is such that it cannot be used. He referred to the city jail. In connection with this he stated that the Olympia building had been secured at a rental of $30 a month, and it would require about $70 to place the building in proper shape for its use as a jail. He offered a resolution confirming the action of the police board in securing this building. The same member offered another resolution voting $25 to Thomas Martin, former warden of the city jail. This money is to relieve him and his family. Mr. Buckle also stated that his services would be dispensed with in the future as they would not be needed in the new place.

John Mortmer petitioned for a wholesale liquor license for the place 220 Park avenue in the building owned by Rosa Frucht. The matter was referred. Residents of East Third street petitioned for an electric light, as did also residents on Leland avenue near North avenue. The liquor license held by John E. Beerbower, formerly of the City Hotel, was transferred to Charles R. Knapp, the new proprietor.

Mr. van Herwerden offered a resolution transferring $1,000 from the general to the fire fund. Mr. Mollick moved that an electric light petitioned to be located under the Grant avenue bridge be granted.

Quite a discussion followed over the question of again changing the night of meeting. Mr. van Herwerden, according to the notice he gave at the last meeting, moved that the by-laws be changed so that the first Monday instead of the second Monday in the month would be made the regular night for meeting.

Mr. Dumont thought the second Monday should be tried for a year at least so that a fair opportunity would be given to prove whether it would be successful. He saw no particular reason why another change should be made now.

Mr. van Herwerden said that the collector and treasurer were better suited by having the meeting on the first Monday, and by making the meeting come later it affected the employes of the city, especially those in the street cleaning department.

Mr. Dumont argued still further and thought it would be well to try the new scheme and see how it will work. He said that it would give the city clerk more time, also the treasurer and collector. Mr. Corbell favored the second Monday and argued from that point of view. Mr. Buckle favored Mr. van Herwerden's idea, and when the vote was taken the first Monday was selected, 6 to 4. Messrs. Mollick, Buckle, Lee, Craig, van Herwerden and Smith voted for the first Monday, while Messrs. Corbell, Dumont, Stook and Tolles opposed it.

After a recess of five minutes was taken to allow time to audit the books, Council adjourned.

YOUNG VETERAN GONE.

William Stewart Succumbed to Rapid Attack of Pneumonia Last Night.

After a brief illness, William Stewart, a veteran of the Spanish American war, died at his home, 412 John street, at a late hour last Monday. He caught a cold several weeks ago which developed into pneumonia last week. His constitution was too weak to stand the strain and he passed quietly away.

Stewart was twenty-two years old. He enlisted at the beginning of the war with Spain and was honorably discharged at its close. He was the elder son of David Stewart, janitor of Hope chapel. He leaves a father, mother, and younger brother. He had a large circle of acquaintances in this city where he was very popular. He was a member of Hope chapel.

A Still Alarm.

A still-alarm was sent to fire department headquarters Monday from 416 East Second street. Chief Doane and No. 2 hose wagon went to the place. Burning soot in the chimney was discovered and speedily extinguished. The house is the property of the Anderson estate.

Work on Westfield-Railway Trolley.

The date set for commencing the work on the trolley road between Westfield and Railway has been set for March 20th, if the weather permits. A gang of 200 men will be put on the work.

UNCONSTITUTIONAL LAW

NOTHING PREVENTS JUSTICES FROM ACTING AS COLLECTORS.

Supreme Court Upholds the Argument Made by W. S. Angleman for Justice Sedam.

A decision of special interest to all justices of the peace has just been rendered by the Supreme Court in the case recently taken up by Justice Storms, of New Market, to test the constitutionality of the act which made it a penal offense for any justice of the peace to issue a summons on behalf of any person for whom he was agent.

It will be remembered that Justice Storms, who had acted as agent for R. G. Chase & Co. in the collection of a bill against William R. Hayes, afterwards issued a summons against Hayes in a suit brought to enforce the collection of the claim.

On the hearing of the case Justice Storms rendered judgment against Hayes. The latter thereupon sued Storms before Justice Sedam at New Brunswick for the penalty of $25, prescribed by the act mentioned. On hearing the case Justice Sedam gave judgment against Justice Storms. The latter retained W. S. Angleman to carry the case to Supreme Court in order to test the constitutionality of the act. Mr. Angleman argued the case at the November term of the Supreme Court. He contended that the section of the act imposing the penalty was not constitutional because its object was not expressed in the title.

The opinion of the court just rendered sustains the position taken by Mr. Angleman and decides that that section of the act is not constitutional and reverses the judgment obtained against Justice Storms with costs.

OVER $50,000 RAISED.

FOR NEW BUILDINGS FOR CENTENARY COLLEGIATE INSTITUTE.

A Meeting of the Trustees Held in Newark Monday—Enough Money to Start With.

At a meeting of the trustees of the Centenary Collegiate Institute, held in Newark Monday, convened to consider plans for the rebuilding of the institute, the sum of $51,000 was pledged towards the rebuilding fund. Of this amount $35,360 was subscribed by members of the board who were present, and $15,500 pledged in the name of friends of the institute.

This splendid offering, together with the $116,500 in hand received from insurance, makes the speedy rebuilding a certainty. A large sum in addition will be required to carry out the plans projected by the trustees. The purpose is to make the institute the best of its class in every respect.

The trustees elected Rev. Dr. George H. Whitney, of this city, a member of the board and assigned him to the committee on plans, to fill the vacancy made by the death of Rev. Dr. J. M. Freeman.

The present school year will close June 1st, and it was decided to continue the sessions of the institute next fall.

MR. LONG DECIDED AGAINST.

Borough Recorder Didn't Want to Pay for Stove Pipes That He Didn't Buy.

An interesting contract case was tried Monday afternoon before Justice Matthias and a jury composed of Doer W. Budd, Jacob Voehl, A. J. Winckler, Theodore Stiles, Andrew Love, Jr., and Wm. Debold. The case was that of A. M. Griffen against Borough Recorder Eli Long for an account of $27 in connection with the purchase of a range some time ago.

The defendant was represented by S. S. Swackhamer, who contended that the range was satisfactory, but the things that go with it were not. It was for the dissatisfied parts that the defendant refused to pay. Frank Blatz, of the firm of Murphy & Blatz, represented the plaintiff, and after the case was opened by Mr. Griffen, Mr. Blatz answered charges. He claimed for his client that everything about the range and the parts were satisfactory and no dissatisfaction was expressed until a year after the range was installed and the grate was burned out. A number of witnesses from A. M. Griffen's place testified as to the range being satisfactory, while the plaintiff and his servant girl testified that it was not.

After both sides had had their say the case was given to the jury and in a few minutes they brought in a verdict for the plaintiff for $15 41.

To Keep Up Interest.

To follow up the interest awakened in Plainfield by the addresses of the Archbishop of Canada and Mrs. Lewis, a meeting is called for Friday afternoon, March 16th, at 3:30 p. m., in the guild rooms of Grace Episcopal church. Mrs. Lewis will preside. An association will be formed and a large attendance is desired as many can assist in spreading information about these homes for English and American girls in Paris, who can help in no other way.

TROLLEY CAR RAN WILD.

THRILLING MISHAP CAUSED MOTORMAN TO QUIT HIS JOB.

Jumped the Track at Cranford and Came Near Plunging Into the Creek.

One of the Plainfield street cars is out of commission at present and a motorman is out of a job. It all came about through an accident at a deadly curve at Cranford Saturday night. The car was making the curve near the bridge at that point. Without warning it jumped the track. Before Motorman Hoy could control it the car had glided across the tracks which converge at that point and crashed into the bridge with sufficient momentum to force it to literally climb the south side of the abutment for a distance of three or four feet. Fortunately there were no passengers in the car. Both the conductor and Motorman Hoy were badly frightened. The end of the car was stove in and damaged considerably. Motorman Hoy was so badly frightened that his at once threw up his job. He said he had had enough of railroading. The disabled car was pulled back to the car house late Saturday night.

Superintendent Adlesman does not censure the motorman. He believes that the car was thrown from the track by coming in contact with a stone that had lodged between the rails.

The point where the accident occurred is a particularly dangerous place, owing to the peculiar way in which the trolley company was compelled by the Township Committee to lay the rails.

The car had a narrow escape from running into the creek. Had it done so it would have plunged down an embankment about ten feet and the possibility of loss of life or serious injury would have been apparent. Hereafter extra precaution will be exercised by motormen in rounding this curve. All motormen have been cautioned to run exceedingly slow hereafter at this point.

"STORY OF THE TREASON"

TOLD BY W. W. ELLSWORTH LAST MONDAY AT THE CASINO.

Illustrated with Views of Rare Old Prints and Highly Treasured Manuscripts—Career of Benedict Arnold.

The large audience that comfortably filled the Casino last Monday was made up of a number of the teachers and many of the pupils of the public schools of this city and the borough. The entertainment afforded was a lecture entitled "Arnold and Andre, the Story of the Treason." It was given by William W. Ellsworth, of New York, a direct descendant of the brave Col. Ellsworth, who fell at Alexandria, Va., during the War of the Rebellion, and was for the benefit of the Washington Rock Memorial Fund under the auspices of the Continental Chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution.

Mr. Ellsworth was introduced to the audience by C. W. McCutchen, of this city, who briefly told of the efforts of the ladies on behalf of the historical work they have on hand. Mr. Ellsworth's lecture was illustrated with many handsome views of old prints and manuscripts—copies of ancient and carefully treasured documents—that were projected from a stereopticon upon canvas. For an hour-and-a-half Mr. Ellsworth read in a clear voice the "Story of Treason," taking his story from the early days of the Revolution when Benedict Arnold, the young and impetuous youth, was first given a commission in the Continental Army up to the time of his conspiracy with Major John Andre, his escape to England and the final execution of Andrew who had been captured by the American forces. The story was well told and it proved both interesting and instructive to the older as well as the younger portion of the audience. The views and old prints and manuscripts were particularly interesting and many of them had never previously been seen in this city.

A LENTEN LECTURE.

Fourth of a Series Given by Miss Wilberforce Lyon in All Souls' Church Monday.

The first of a series of six Lenten lectures on "Europe in Africa in the Nineteenth Century," by Miss Dorothy Wilberforce Lyon, Ph. D., of Elizabeth, was given Monday morning at 11 o'clock in All Souls' Unitarian church. The lecture was a general discussion of the entire course of events in South Africa from the time of the first Dutch settlements there until the present. Miss Lyon had of course much to say about President Kruger and the Boer war. She gave full credit to the views of both sides, but appeared to be more in sympathy with the English. Her lecture showed careful study, and was given in a bright and interesting manner.

The remaining five lectures of the course will not be given in All Souls' church, as advertised, but at the home of Mrs. Harlot Burton Ford, 726 Watchung avenue. The subject for the one to be given next Monday is "England's Native Wars and the Establishment of her Power in South Africa."

KEAN'S TROLLEY WILL GO ON TO CRANFORD.

Senator Gives Orders to Push the Work Without Further Delay.

OTHER TROLLEY RUMORS.

RIKERS GETTING READY TO CONNECT WITH ELIZABETH.

Company is Distributing Rails Along Jersey Avenue, and the Work Will be Started When Weather is Settled.

Senator John Kean arrived in Elizabeth from Washington Saturday, and had a conference with the officers of the Elizabeth Street Railway Company, and gave orders to have the work of construction proceeded with. The tracks will be immediately laid on Westfield avenue as far as the Cranford line. The rails have been ordered, and the work will be begun at once on their arrival.

Secretary Whelan said Monday it was the intention to build the road as far as Cranford this spring, and that the arrangements for widening the avenue would be made.

The Westfield and Elizabeth Street Railway Company seems to be making a move to have the road completed, and the connection from Elizabeth to Plainfield finished early this spring.

The company has distributed its rails along Jersey avenue, and evidently the work of construction of the connection with the tracks of the Consolidated Traction Company on West Jersey street in Elizabeth is to be begun as quickly as the weather will permit.

No communication has been received from the company by the Elizabeth city officials, but it is expected that at an early meeting of the City Council an application will be made for right of way for an extension of the line to the water front.

There was a report current that the North Jersey company will discontinue running its cars on West Jersey street, and will give up the tracks on that street to the Westfield and Elizabeth Street Railway.

It was also said that the company has in contemplation a change in the system of running cars on the various routes in Elizabeth. It is said that the Newark cars will have their terminus at the arches, and that one run of cars will be from North to South Elizabeth, or from North avenue to South Broad street terminus. The First street cars would run to Lyons Farms and Evergreen cemetery.

CONVENTION OF OLD MAIDS FULL OF FUN

Big Crowd Attracted to the Y. M. C. A. Hall to Enjoy the Entertainment.

ELIGIBLE BACHELORS RATED

HAPPY HITS MADE ON MANY WELL-KNOWN PLAINFIELDERS.

Wonderful Remote-Control Machine in Charge of W. O. Chapman, Who Transformed the Spinsters to Whatever They Wanted.

The "Old Maids' Convention" given in the Y. M. C. A. Hall last Thursday by a number of Plainfield women, assisted by a few from out of town, was a great success. Before the hour arrived to call the convention to order every seat was taken in the hall and a large number of people were obliged to stand throughout the whole performance. The fact that the affair was given for charity had a tendency to increase the patronage. From beginning to end the participants kept the audience in a continual roar of laughter. The cast is as follows:

President, "Frownlizz Jane Grimm," ..... Miss Alice Crane
Secretary, Bonnie Abigail Hodge," ..... Mrs. Decker
"Calamity Jane Blaxton," ..... Mrs. A. C. LaMontagne
"Rachel Rebecca Sharp" ..... Miss Fryden
"Tilly Tottle" ..... Mrs. C. O. Gilbert
"Mary Jane Tomkins" ..... Miss Rue Woodland
"Jerusha Matilda Springston," ..... Mrs. W. K. Browning
"Patience Dugins Mann" ..... Mrs. W. B. Van
"Sophia Stuckup" ..... Mrs. S. B. Strothers
"Julietta Long" ..... Miss Bertha Southam
"Betsey Bobbett" ..... Miss Frances Dailey
"Lucy Longface" ..... Mrs. Charles T. Gelling
"Cleopatra Bella Brown" ..... Miss Demarest
"Experience Eakaleve," ..... Miss Margaret Vermeule
"Penelope Gertrude Doolittle," ..... Mrs. N. F. Ward
"Greater Ann Nightingale" ..... Miss Mary French
"Violet Ann Raggles" ..... Miss Robinson
"Polly Anne Bumps" ..... Mrs. J. H. French

The convention was called to order by the president, and the first part of it was devoted to the discussion of papers on the rights of women, the reading of the market report, and the display of talent, vocal and instrumental music and recitations by the members. Those participating were dressed in the old-fashioned style. Cats, parrots, dogs and other animals usually found among old maids, were also present.

"Penelope Gertrude Doolittle" read a very interesting paper on the relative merits of man and woman that received the approbation of the convention. "Jiffy Short" and "Betsey Bobbett" delighted all with a vocal solo and instrumental music. There were so many amusing features at the convention that it would be impossible to enumerate them. The reading of the market report showing the status of the men available for marriage, was the most amusing. A lamentable fact was that there was not enough men to go around. Here is the report:

F. S. B.—First National Bank stock slow; B. L.—Coffee stocks, bid in; B. VanD H.—Unusual demand; A. B. L.—Electrical stock afloat; F. C. A.—Hard to obtain; L. W. VanB.—Short and fluctuating; M. E.—Stationery, but good; W. R.—Judicial, fairly active; E. M. F.—Real estate, going to the highest bidder; J. R. M.—Tammany stock; F. D. C. M.—Long on the market, will advance; R. J. S.—Drugs, interested in Bond Street stock; A. A. F.—Oats stocks, quiet but steady; F. W. F.—Dental instruments. Out of the market; A. H. I.—Watered stock. To be had for the asking.

After everyone had satisfied themselves as to womanhood, Prof. Makeover appeared in the person of W. O. Chapman and offered to change any of the women and make them as they desired. He had a remodelescope and by placing the women in the machine he effected the change. "Jerusha Springston," a very fat lady, wanted to be a little girl again, and after she passed through the operating Rock VanVinkle appeared and gave her initiation. Gertrude Doolittle wanted to be a singer. She appeared afterward as Mrs. Ward and gave a vocal solo. "Miss Makeover" wanted to be a poetess. This resulted in Miss Ella Sorrell coming forth and reciting a selection. "Miss Boggles" wanted to be queen of cheesedom, but the machine would not accomplish this. "Cranky Ann Nightmake" desired to be a violin player. After she went through the machine Miss Marguerite Burnett appeared and played a violin selection, accompanied by Miss Clyde Burnett. "Cleopatra" wanted to be an electrician, and she was transformed into Miss May Batchelor, who gave a recitation. "Patience Desire Mann" was desirous of being a man. She was then put through the machine, and Robson H. Martin came forth and sang a pleasing baritone solo. "Simple Stuckup" was quite old but she wanted to be older. This broke the machine and further changes were impossible. This part closed with the singing of a popular selection by Mrs. Ward. Throughout the entertainment the members of the convention sang popular songs, individually and together, and the whole affair made a great hit.

Those who took the part of the president and secretary are from Somerville. They, as well as all others, received much credit for the very fine performance given.

FORESTERS' GOOD TIME.

COURT WATCHUNG GAVE A SUCCESSFUL "SMOKER."

Many High Chief Rangers From Out of Town Present—Musical Entertainment Provided.

The "smoker" given Thursday by the members of Court Watchung, I. O. dependent Order of Foresters, at their brother Foresters' quarters proved a high old time, many high chief rangers from out of town, besides some not so high in the popular order, being present. Among the chief officers present were High Chief Ranger Starrat, of Matteser's Harbor, Staten Island; J. C. Calvert, past high chief, of Elizabeth; Wm. T. Bingham, high court deputy, of Elizabeth; Lewis T. Titsworth, past high chief ranger, of Dunellen; J. R. Naylor, past high chief, of Plainfield; H. E. Davis, high secretary, of Elizabeth and High Typstead Lowry, of Plainfield. Representatives of Court Dunellen, and members of the order from Elizabeth and Scotch Plains were present to the number of fully 200.

The evening was passed with a musical entertainment principally, solos being sung by William Holmes and High Secretary J. H. Davis, while a phonograph served to enliven the occasion.

High Chief Sharrat made a few remarks outling the benefits to be derived from the order.

After the entertainment coffee and sandwiches were supplied the guests, followed by cigars. While the smoke filled the hall a "feast of reason and a flow of soul" predominated. The evening proved to be one of the pleasant events in the history of the local order. The visitors felt well repaid for becoming the guests of so genial hosts at Court Watchung proved to be.

The entertainment committee consisted of Thomas R. Binford, chairman; John Daub, Asa F. Randolph and John Lewis.

TO AID MARCONNIER.

Trinity Reformed Church Cookery Has Booths to Help Out True Society.

An important step in religious circles was taken last Thursday by the consistory of Trinity Reformed church, when that official board decided unanimously to accept the application recently made by the members of Marconnier chapel to become members and a branch of Trinity Reformed church. This action was taken after due deliberation, during which the good work done and carried on in that field was fully investigated. The members of Trinity Reformed church are glad to answer this call for help, and they will supply Christian workers for the Sunday-school at the chapel, and will occasionally assist in the divine services held there Sunday evenings.

Trinity church will assume full charge and in a few days the deed transferring the property will be arranged. Friday evening, March 23d, probably, a preparatory service will be held, and Sunday, March 25th, is the date set when the new arrangements will go into effect. In the afternoon of that day officers and members from Trinity church will hold a service at the chapel. Sacrament will be administered and members of the chapel will be received into church membership. There will also be instructions given to mark this event. From that date Trinity church will assume control and it stands in the spiritual matters of this branch of their church.

DEATH OF MRS. SWAIN.

Passed Away After an Illness Extending Over Two Years.

Mrs. Phillip Swain, aged 48 years, died Friday afternoon at her home on Craig place, after an illness extending over a period of two years. During the past three weeks her condition was critical and death was expected at any time. The cause of death was chiefly heart trouble. Mrs. Swain was a native of this State and was a resident of the borough for many years. She was a devoted Christian woman and a faithful member of the Crescent Avenue church. A husband and four children survive her. The children are the Misses Margaret, Stella and Miss Swain and Walter Swain. She also leaves a brother, Joseph Bogart, of this city.

Shotgun Exploded.

While Peter Emmons, of Woodland avenue, was shooting at pigeons at Campbell's road house Thursday afternoon, his Parker breech-loading shotgun suddenly exploded. Strange to say Mr. Emmons was not injured. His hearing in his right ear was much affected however. The breech mechanism was defective.

Patent Granted to F. C. Klumpp.

Louis Ramser & Co., Patent Attorneys, of Washington, report that on last Tuesday Frank E. Klumpp, a resident of this city, obtained a valuable patent for improvements in pneumatic water supply systems.

THE OCEAN GRAVEYARD.

Just What Sable Island Is—Where It Lies—Its Fight Against the Sea.

Sable Island belongs to Nova Scotia, is 140 miles from Halifax and 82 miles from Cape Canso. It is a long, narrow, shrubless waste, scanned by wind and wave and of ever-changing aspect. A cone-shaped hill near the east end, once a mere undulation of sand, is now over a hundred feet high, and is still growing. Other hillocks are greatly increasing mowed away by storms. The hillocks are liable to be undermined so swiftly and swept out of existence that they are carefully watched from the various stations on the island, and, when being no certainty how far an inroad of the sea will extend after each successful attack. Even the coarse grass of the island grows in a different manner from that of the mainland. It is found to bear seed, while on the grass roots which run along under the sand. During the winter the sand is blown over the grass, and buries it sometimes three or four feet deep. But the hardy blades grow up next season, as if the island had been properly dressed. Even the cold of winter in order to make them all the stronger. The island itself is fighting for self-preservation. It seems as if it drew ships into its fatal embrace as rallying points for its loose and shifting sand, and then to throw itself by a bulwark of wrecks against annihilation by the sea. Tradition says that when Sable island was discovered by Cabot in 1447, it was 80 miles long and 10 miles wide. In 1802, when a rescue station was established there, it was only 40 miles long. Since then it has shrunk to but little more than 30 miles in length, and in width it is only a mile at its widest. Within 28 years the western end has seven miles. Should the present rate of encroachment be continued the government engineers are pointed out as former sites of lighthouses. One of these was so swiftly undermined by the sea that it had to be abandoned with the greatest precipitation. The spot on which it once stood the superintendent's house is now under two fathoms of water.

The island, rapidly diminishing as its western end, is slightly gaining at its eastern. Slowly, like a ship dragging its anchor, it is moving eastward. While it ever reach the edge of the shoals, stand tottering on the brink of the abyss till it receives its coup de grace and plunge over the submarine bank forever into the depths? Unfortunately, its end will probably be long in coming. There is good ground for believing that this gray sand bar will slowly wear away until it becomes another submerged shoal added to an ambuscade already some 60 miles in length—for it is the eastern extent of the island from one end of the island and 26 miles from the other.—Gustav Kobbe, in Alden's.

WEATHER FORECASTS.

Every Land Now Has Its Daily Reports by Telegraph and Cable.

A century has passed by since the first meteorological society of Europe published the "Ephemerides Mannheimenis," containing weather observations at regular intervals. From these records Brandes subsequently made and studied the first weather maps. Now every civilized land has its daily reports by telegraph and cable.

The United States weather bureau boasts its forecasts are 200 stations, and last summer Prof. Moore added 16 kite stations for determining the condition of the air high above the ground. The country has extended its lines to the West Indies, and is hoping to reach Hawaii and Alaska; Canada is pushing the Bermudas, and is stretching toward the Klondike; European bureaus are moving toward a special cable to Iceland.

Each outlying stations are very important for the protection of the nearer regions, but no more increase in observers will enable us to predict accurately further ahead or in greater detail than we now do.

What is first needed is a more profound study of the forces that affect the weather. The crying need of meteorology is not more stations, but more study. The highest talent for scientific investigation is not employed. There are no problems more difficult than those that concern the weather, and none more important. He who solves one of these will benefit the whole world and merit a great reward.

The endowment at any university of a special school for meteorological research will mark the beginning of a bright era in the history of this science, and will benefit humanity.—Youth's Companion.

Reasoning.

Monsieur Caillaux, the simple-hearted and ingenious Frenchman, happened to be riding in a train in the same compartment with a lady who was in a constant fear of a smash-up.

Every jolt made it stop, every jar, every sound of the bell or whistle, she cried out:

"Oh, oh! Have we run off the track? Is it a collision? Are we going to be killed?"

Caillaux paid no attention, but remained wrapt in solemn silence. Presently the lady said to him:

"And you, sir, aren't you afraid of railroad accidents?"

"Yes, I am," answered Caillaux reassuringly. "It has been foretold that I am to die on the guillotine!"

The nervous woman went into hysterics and had to be removed from the train at the next station.—Youth's Companion.

Mrs. Hix—I don't take any stock in these faith cures brought about by the laying on of hands.

Mrs. Dix—Well, I do. I cured my little boy of the cigarette habit in that way.—Chicago Evening News.

THEIR AIM TO SAVE BEAUTIFUL BIRDS.

Former Mayor Alex. Gilbert Again Chosen President of the Audubon Society.

TO EDUCATE THE YOUTHFUL.

PROMINENT NEW JERSEY PEOPLE INTERESTED IN SOCIETY.

Annual Public Meeting Held in the Crescent Avenue Church Chapel Thursday—Interesting Report Read by the Secretary.

The cosy chapel of the Crescent Avenue church was much too small to contain the large number of ladies and gentlemen who Thursday afternoon attended the annual public meeting of the Audubon Society of the State. Standing room was at a premium. Had those interested in the meeting been aware of the liability of so large an attendance, it would have been held in the lecture room of the church.

As is well known the purpose of the Audubon Society is two-fold—to arouse an interest in birds, particularly among young people, and to the preservation of the native birds, and to discourage buying and wearing the feathers of any wild bird, and thereby lessen the present slaughter of bird life for commercial purposes. Leaflets, setting forth the objects and principles of the society, were distributed before the business meeting, which was held at 3:30 o'clock. A life membership in the society can be secured by the payment of a fee of $1, except for teachers and scholars in any of the schools when a fee of but 25 cents is made. There are no annual assessments for life members.

The president of the society is Former Mayor Alexander C. Gilbert, of this city. Among the vice-presidents are the Hon. Charles J. Fisk, of this city; Rt. Rev. John Scarborough, of Trenton; Hon. C. J. Baxter, Trenton; Attorney-General John W. Griggs, Trenton; Mason W. Tyler, Plainfield; Mrs. Florence Howe Hall, Plainfield; Pierre Mall, Plainfield; John Gilford, Princeton; Mrs. Sophie Bledsoe Herrick, Bayonne; Charles B. Yardley, East Orange; Frank M. Miss Anna Haviland, the secretary and treasurer, read an interesting report regarding the society and the efforts it was putting forth for the preservation of the birds. The report stated that there was a membership of 168, with eight local secretaries. She said the members have manifested a widespread interest in the cause. Bird study had already been made an important element in the public schools in the State, and the children have displayed much interest in the matter, many of the pupils of the schools having taken up the study of birds. Miss Haviland referred to the work of the local Audubon societies in several of the more important cities of the State, and of the laws that had been enacted for the protection and preservation of both the game and wild birds. In regard to the bevelled edge of the children in the schools, Miss Haviland said that many of the teachers place upon the blackboards the names of the birds as they appear in the spring and summer months and in that way seem to awaken interest in them.

After the reading of the report the following officers, including those given above, were elected for the ensuing year:

President, Alexander Gilbert; secretary and treasurer, Anna Haviland; executive committee, Rev. A. C. Nickerson, chairman; Miss Caroline Haviland, Mrs. Frederick Goodhue Mead, Mrs. David Hall Rowland, Miss Florence Tweedy, Miss Mary A. Mellick, Charles C. Abbott, Austin C. Apgar, Andrew J. Gavett, Charles A. Sartnet, Wm. Stillman.

With the close of the business meeting William Dutcher, a well-known ornithologist of New York, gave an interesting and highly instructive talk on birds, illustrated by views on the stereopticon. This was the most entertaining feature of the meeting and much appreciated by those who had the pleasure of listening to it. Mr. Dutcher threw some light upon the life and characteristics of the birds not heretofore known by many, who, with much satisfaction, saw the handsome views which he displayed.

The meeting was the most interesting in the history of the society.

Rudolf's Fine Hospitality.

The party of business men from this city who were the guests last Thursday of Superintendent Rudel, of the B. and S. Electric Traction Company, report a pleasant time. Besides a trolley ride in a special car to South River, the gentlemen were the recipient of beautiful hospitality at the hands of Mr. Rudel, who gave them a perfect symposium at the Mansion House in New Brunswick.

STORY OF BILL COOK.

Record of the Famous Indian Territory Outlaw Who Died in Albany Prison.

The recent death of "Bill" Cook, the famous territory outlaw, at the Albany penitentiary, where he was serving a 45 years' sentence for train robbery, removes with a possible exception the last of the desperadoes who ran the gauntlet of crime in the Indian territory for a number of years. The inhabitants of Fort Gibson well remember "Bill" Cook, the boy who worked on a farm near that place. He was an industrious lad and saved his small earnings.

The territory at that time was in a turbulent state of affairs. Crimes were so frequent that the Indian police guarded their homes against the violators of law with shotguns and Winchesters. Bill Cook disappeared from Fort Gibson one day; yet nothing attempt was thought of this. It was common for men then to drift from one place to another. Young Cook returned to near Fort Gibson, and his services were always in demand. He was a hard-working young man, and his delicate physique and pale face was for him the popularity of his fellows. He disappeared on several occasions, but would always return. It was at this time that two or three gangs of outlaws made life a burden on the highways. The robbery of mails and stores and other crimes against the people greatly. Deputy marshals were unsuccessful in their efforts to exterminate the gang, but, on the other hand, some of the marshals fell by the wayside victims of the treacherous outlaw's rifle. Winchester, in the history of the territory were the people so terrorized. The Starr gang was among the first to haunt the people and commit desperate deeds. They soon considered the worst set of criminals that ever infested the country. Simultaneously with the deeds of these men a gang of organized criminals appeared.

Young Cook, who had made frequent trips to see home where was never suspected of being a member of a gang of well-organized outlaws. One day Cook left the farm. He afterward turned up in several fights and was recognized. The report was circulated that the heretofore frequent trips of Cook were to participate in crimes, and then return to his work to avoid suspicion. It may be said in passing that Bill Cook was the leader of a gang that stopped for nothing in the way of crimes. Strychnine was his favorite. It was for a long time a feared outlaw and it was with relief that the people of the Indian territory learned of Cherokee Bill's capture. He was tried at Fort Smith on a charge of murder and was sentenced to be hanged. He paid the penalty of his crime on the gallows.

The capture of "Cherokee Bill" led to the breaking up of the Cook gang. Cherokee Bill and Bill Cook were great friends and much attached to one another. The latter was the first to be captured and are to-day paying the law's penalty. Afterward Bill Cook was arrested. Many crimes were laid at his door, but it is said that the gang was responsible for a great many of the deeds credited to Cook. He was tried at Fort Smith, that court then having jurisdiction, on a charge of train robbery and was sentenced to 45 years' imprisonment, which has just run out short by death. The story of Cook is a sad one. He never profited by his deeds, save to make a reputation as a daring criminal. The Dalton, Nice and Hart gangs have long paid the penalty they so richly deserved. The criminal life days who infest the territory cannot be compared in class or methods to the former outlaws. The days of criminal success are about over.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

IRON IN THE ARCTICS.

Two Interesting Spots in the Northern Part of Russia and Sweden.

According to the Zeitschrift fur Angewandte Chemie, the largest and at the same time the most northerly iron mine in the world is situated in the north of Sweden, at Kiruna, to which railroad has been built from this mine, a distance of 114 miles, to a good port, which is accessible to vessels of deep draft. The governments of Sweden and Norway bore the expenses of the construction of this railway, which cost about $3,040,000. This bed of ore is near Lake Luossajarol, and 65 miles farther north than the well-known and long-time worked Gellivare mine, from which ore work out of the richest and the quality of Swedish iron has come.

The deposit is said to be even of better quality and richness than the old mine. It is estimated that there are here 200,000,000 tons of iron, but if more in sight, and borings that have been made have led to estimates of the deposit as from 700,000,000 tons upward. Should be also starting to open a railway from mines to the Ofotfjord district, near Tongvoer. The ores of the Russian mine are reported as 68 per cent. pure iron, and the extent of the deposit is excelled only by the mine of Kiruna. The Russian iron deposit has been known for some time, but on account of the lack of fuel and transportation nothing has been done toward developing it. Quite lately coal of good quality and in large and available veins has been discovered near Tawlogrost. The Russian finance minister proposed for the government to build a railroad to connect the coal and iron deposits and to give exit for the latter to the sea, but only lately the present high price of iron in Russia. The proposition is now to be taken up, and active measures are on foot to develop this mine.—Baltimore American.

THEY HELP THE MISSIONS

IMPORTANT MEETING OF TRINITY REFORMED CHURCH SOCIETY.

Miss Lillian A. Force Appointed Superintendent—An Address by Mrs. E. B. Horton.

The Young Women's Mission Band of Trinity Reformed church met Friday evening in the lecture room of the church. Miss Lillian A. Force, the newly-elected president, presided for the first time. The first part of the meeting was devoted to transacting the monthly business. This included a report from the treasurer showing a balance of about $26, which is to be divided between the home and foreign mission fields. Miss Searing read several letters from beneficiaries of the band who are located in the west.

The president at this time announced the appointment of the various committees for the ensuing year. They are as follows:

Domestic missions—Mrs. A. J. Moore, chairman; Miss I. L. Bogart, Miss Grace Smith, Miss May Vanfleet, Miss Mabel A. Woodruff, Mrs. L. Fischer, Foreign missions—Mrs. F. E. Woodruff, chairman; Mrs. F. S. Cutter, Miss J. Kissam, Miss Kirch, Mrs. W. Startup. Paper mission—Mrs. Will F. Williams, Mrs. A. E. Leggett, Miss Sadie Holmes, Miss Lillian Benson. Flower mission—Miss Emma Line, chairman; Miss Bessie Martin, Miss Gertrude Tier, Miss Beulah Waters, Miss Mabel Wycoff, Miss Grace Wycoff. Birthday and birth—Mrs. Mabel Woodruff, chairman; Miss Grace Rose, Miss Josie Fritz, Miss Abbie VanOlden, Miss Bertha Fischer. Cake committee—Mrs. W. Startup, chairman; Mrs. B. B. Rogers, Miss Anna Searing, Miss Cora Laire. Programme committee—Mrs. L. S. Smith, chairman; Mrs. F. E. Woodruff, Miss May Griffen, Miss Minnie Williams. Entertainment committee—Mrs. H. W. Marshall, chairman; Mrs. A. Leggett, Miss Etta Krymer, Miss Ada Chandler, Miss Adelaide Barker. New membership committee—Miss Lillian Benson, chairman; Miss Jennie Quick, Miss Martha Anthony, Miss Maude E. VanDyke.

This concluded the business and the president introduced Mrs. E. B. Horton, a mission worker of wide experience and ability, and an officer of the Board of Domestic Missions. She has spoken at this church before and is no stranger. Last Friday she talked briefly concerning the mission work in North Dakota and in the south among the mountain whites. She depicted the condition of some of the people in these far away parts of the country, showing the urgent need for more work on the part of Christians at home. In many instances these people live a great many miles from stores and it is impossible for them to get articles that are a necessity, hence they appreciate the barrels of good things sent. In referring to the work in the south she said that the denomination thus far could only support one teacher, while there is a call for five more. Mrs. E. Barrows, of Boston, said that there are 60,000 women in the denomination and it is proposed to try and get $1 from each one this year for a century collection for mission work.

MRS. HALL WANTS THE SCHOOL BILL PASSED

Public Statement Issued By President of New Jersey Woman's Suffrage Association.

URGES THE WOMEN TO VOTE.

PROPOSED LAW PRESERVES PRESENT RIGHTS OF THE FAIR SEX.

Mrs. Hall Points Out Several Features of the Bill Which She Considers Good Enough to Recommend Its Passage.

Mrs. Florence Howe Hall, president of the New Jersey Woman's Suffrage Association, issued the following statement to the public Saturday, in which she advocates the passage of the school bill now before the Legislature, and also urges upon women to participate in the school elections which will be held throughout the State outside of the cities March 25th:

"A bill revising the system of public instruction is now before the Legislature, and will doubtless be passed, with some modifications, before the end of the session. A difference of opinion exists as to certain features of this bill, such as the best method of apportioning money to the schools, powers of the State superintendent, etc. All who believe in our public system of education must rejoice, however, in the increased advantages given to children.

"I. By lowering the age of admission to the kindergarten from five to four. This is a logical consequence of the establishment of kindergartens since they are specially intended for very young children.

"II. By enabling the people of adjoining school districts to establish a Union Graded School, thus providing a better school than either district would be able to sustain alone.

"III. By giving Boards of Education power to provide for the transportation of children. With our rapidly developing trolley system, the latter can be transported at very low rates, by special contract, thus securing better advantages to those living at a distance from good schools.

"IV. By arranging for evening schools.

"VI. The employment of a medical inspector, thus preventing the spread of contagious diseases, and saving a community from untold misery and suffering, and loss of life and property.

"VII. By providing that all schools built hereafter shall be constructed with due regard to proper heating, lighting, ventilating, and other hygienic requirements, thus protecting alike the eye sight and health of all possessions—health and eyesight.

"VIII. By establishing a written contract system for the employment of teachers, thus protecting the latter from unjust or arbitrary dismissal.

"Other excellent features might be enumerated, did space permit.

"While the bill gives no new rights of franchise to women, it carefully preserves those already possessed by them, to wit: the right of voting on all questions (save the election of school trustees) at all school meetings, and the right of serving on or trustee in cities as well as in rural districts.

"Sixteen or more women were serving in this capacity at last accounts, and a number of substantial school-houses in our state have been erected through the feminine vote.

"It is to be hoped that mothers and all other women interested in education and the welfare of children, will attend the annual school meetings to be held March 25th, and will use to the considerable power of franchise they now possess.

To Improve Entrance to Avenue.

C. M. Meeker has received the contract to macadamize Evergreen avenue from Hillside to Woodland avenues, and the work will be started at once. In connection with this improvement James E. Martine has promised to macadamize the road from Woodland avenue to Watchung avenue, and then a fine road will run continuous in that section, adding much to the value of the property. F. J. Hubbard is the surveyor under whose direction the work will be done. The Plainfield Water Supply Company has also been asked to lay a six inch water main through the above section and provide fire plugs.

Her Death Unexpected.

Mrs. Lydia M Atkinson, aged about 60 years, daughter of the late William C. Apgar, died Saturday at the home of her sister, Mrs. S. A. Robinson, 121 Watchung avenue. Death was due to heart and liver complication. Mrs. Atkinson was ill about three days and her death was unexpected. Her home was in New York, but occasionally she visited the city. A daughter, Mrs. William Reed, of New York, survives her. The funeral services were held from the residence, 121 Watchung avenue, Tuesday afternoon last at 2 o'clock. Interment private.

ROBISON BEAT KYTE FOR FREEHOLDER.

It Was the Hottest Political Contest in the History of Fanwood.

MR. KYTE LACKED 31 VOTES.

BOTH FACTIONS INDULGED IN VERITABLE LOVE FEAST AFTERWARDS.

The Primary was Participated in by 112 Voters—Township Nominations Made Without a Fight After Freeholder was Decided.

What was undoubtedly the hottest political fight in the history of Fanwood was witnessed at the Republican primary Thursday over the candidacies of Mayor George Kyte and John Robison for the nomination of Freeholder. Mr. Robison has filled that position for several years past, but during the last few months Mr. Kyte has been working to secure the Republican nomination, which is regarded as equivalent to an election in Fanwood under ordinary conditions.

Both candidates and their friends have brought every influence possible to strengthen their forces, and up to last night it was a doubtful question as to which would be victorious. At the primary 175 votes were cast. Freeholder Robison received 87 and Mr. Kyte 56, thus giving the former the nomination again by a majority of 31. On motion of Mr. Kyte himself the nomination was then made unanimous. After this action the contestants locked arms and entered into a regular mutual admiration society, both sides agreeing to go to the polls and work hard to elect the candidate.

After the nomination of Freeholder the Republicans of Fanwood borough withdrew and the voters of the township held a separate primary for the nomination of township officers. The following were nominated:

Township committeeman, three years, William R. Buckley; two years, Wm. H. Terry; one year, Wm D Johnson. Collector, L. W. Miller. Assessor, James Goodman Constable, George Allen. Justice of the Peace, Joseph Clark. Surveyors of Highways, Thomas R. Whitenack and Andrew Schaefer.

The following appropriations were recommended: Road improvements, $1 750; police, $50; sidewalks, $150; fire department, $250; support of the perr, $350.

The primary was called to order by Mr. Kyte as a member of the county committee. A. D. Beckon was made chairman, and W. B. Noble secretary. At the township primary afterwards John Robison was chosen chairman, and Mr. Noble continued to act as secretary.

The Democratic voters met in the Bucket and Eagles Company's rooms last evening to nominate candidates for the spring election to be held next Tuesday. Charles Haberle was made chairman and John Rudin secretary. The following nomisations were made: For Freeholder, Clarence Lambert; for Town Committee, three years, Thomas J. Nichol; for Town Committee, two years, George Scudder; for Town Committee, one year, Theodore Buchman; for Collector, John L. Darby; for Assessor, Charles French; for Constable, Joseph Guerrier; for Justice of the Peace, Philip Blank.

DINNER TO CHURCHMEN

Pleasant Affair for Workers in the Park Avenue Baptist Church.

At the residence of Mrs. Peter Wyckoff, 912 Putnam avenue, a complimentary supper was tendered by G E. Hall to the pastor, deacons and trustees of the Park Avenue Baptist church, Thursday evening. Covers were laid for fourteen. At the close of the supper a number of interesting and spirited after dinner speeches were made.

Each guest received a little booklet especially prepared for the occasion. The little volume contained a complimentary notice to the pastor, deacons, and trustees, with suggestions and questions as to how the work in the church might be improved and enlarged.

The guests of the evening were Rev. John W. Richardson, Wm. M. Tallman, T. I. Runyon, D. M. Runyon, Andrew Fish, J. W. Johnson, John H. Dowse, Roland C. Treadwell, C. K. Compton, A. D. Thompson, F. K. Fish, Sr., F. D. Ostrom.

Entertained When Club.

Mr. and Mrs. Will F. Williams, of Central avenue, entertained the Thursday Night Whist Club at their home last Thursday. The full membership of the club was present and a very pleasant evening was passed. The contest for honors was very close and interesting. Miss Etta Krymer and Miss Bertha Thorn were successful among the women, while Richard Dunlap and John G. MacLoughlin won the first and second honors for the men. The usual social features were enjoyed, not the least of which was the serving of refreshments by the host and hostess. The club will be entertained Thursday evening, March 23d, by Miss MacLoughlin, of Somerset street.

SPENT NIGHT IN JAIL.

EDWARD LITTLE NEARLY FROZEN IN TWO HOURS STAY.

Then Warden Martin Let Him Out and Together They Embraced the Stove Until Daylight Came.

Despite the fact that Councilman Buckle, president of the Police Board, and Chief Grant issued explicit orders that no one should be confined in the remains of the city jail except on some very serious charge, one prisoner spent the night there. He was Edward Little, colored. He was locked up at 11 o'clock. Two hours later Warden Tommy Martin found him stiff with cold. Martin rescued him, chilled to the bone, and together they hugged the stove in the corridor until daylight appeared.

Little has been living with his stepmother in a flat on West Front street. According to the testimony of the latter, Little has refused to work this winter. He went home drunk Thursday and became so abusive that Patrolman Mattox was called in. On the arrival of the policeman, Little transferred his attentions from his step-mother to the officer so that Mattox felt it necessary to lock him up. Little wanted to instruct the policeman in pugilism and matters reached an exciting state. A few minutes in the cold, damp cell calmed Little's spirits wonderfully and Warden Martin found him in a rather demoralized state.

When Boundsman Frederickson arrived at the jail Thursday morning, he found Warden Martin and his prisoner in the intimacy with the stove.

City Judge Runyon went over to the jail at 9 o'clock to hold court. Warden Martin had carted several loads of debris out of the court room and placed a chair without a back behind the remnants of the desk for Judge's use. The Judge climbed over the wreckage, glanced at the accommodations and didn't look happy. He finally held court in the doorway and the policemen and reporters were allowed to keep on their hats during court as a young gale was blowing through the places where the windows should have been.

Little's story was heard and his stepmother gave her testimony. As Little had only had two hours in the cell, the Judge sentenced to a fine of $5 or ten days in the county jail.

The Judge calculates that one hour in the wreck is equivilent to ten days in the county jail. Had Little remained in the cell a little longer he would have escaped without other punishment, provided he lived through it.

"POP" JONES DEAD.

His Old Body Racked With Rheumatism, but He Was Full of Patience and Humility.

David Jones, a colored man, who held the regard and respect of everyone who knew him, died at his home on West Second street Thursday afternoon. He suffered much of late years, and for four months past past was in such agony from rheumatism and asthma that it was impossible for him to lie down or sit down. He spent all his days and nights continually in a kneeling posture, and ever without a word of complaint.

Those of his race loved and revered him and aided him as best they could, and many others considered it a privilege to add to his comforts even though it was not possible to lessen his pain; and he was an object lesson of patience and humility to all.

For many years David Jones was a chef at the Sheridan House in Elizabeth, and also at the Washington Rock Hotel.

He was born a slave, and earned his freedom by cooking for the sick in the armies of '61. Probably no man in New Jersey ever filled so completely the character of "Uncle Tom" as did David or "Pop" Jones, as he was lovingly called.

HIS END WAS PEACEFUL.

Aged Daniel Hogan Laid Down to Take a Nap From Which He Never Awakened.

Apparently as hale and hearty as ever, Daniel Hogan, of 123 New street, laid down Thursday afternoon to take a nap from which he never awakened. He was in his eighty-ninth year. Death was the result of old age which affected the heart. Nearly a half century of Mr. Hogan's life had been spent in and near Plainfield, and he was well-known among the older generation.

Mr. Hogan was a native of Ireland. He came to this country in 1841, and after eleven years spent in New York city, during which he settled down to ordinary hugs, could have "drawn" a pipe of this character.

Women as Census Takers.

There's little to wonder at in the statement that women were such a success at census taking in Cuba, where they were for the first time officially employed in a government capacity. In Washington and other women-Women census takers would not only be pretty sure to make a victim give her right age, but if it came to the point she could always guess at it more accurately than a man. It takes a woman to catch a woman.

OLD PIPE OF PEACE.

Recently Exhumed on the Battlefield of Pittsburgh Landing.

Throws Light on Prehistoric Mound Builders—Belief That the Crude Work of Art Is Less Than Six Centuries Old.

Recent excavations on the field of the battle of Pittsburgh Landing have brought to light many interesting relics of the mound builders. Col. Cadle, the well-known G. A. R. and Loyal Legion man, who is a member of the Shiloh commission, is an ardent antiquarian and geologist, and in the course of the work of leveling the battleground into the proportions of a national public park, has lost no opportunity of delving into the mounds, of which there are a number on the ground. The relics exhumed are sent to the Smithsonian institution to be carefully photographed and recorded. It is for this reason, says the Cincinnati Enquirer, that by far the most valuable and interesting piece of work that has come out of an American mound in several decades was seen by only a few Cincinnatians. Col. Cadle lectured before the Cincinnati Natural History society the other evening on "The Work of the Mound Builders on Shiloh Battlefields." The lecture was particularly opportune, as the commission had exhumed on the day before the little statue, of which a good photograph is shown. Col. Cadle was on his way to Washington with the piece which he considers the greatest find of the age.

The statue is nine inches long and carved from soapstone, out of which the pipes of the Indians were always made. This piece is itself intended for a pipe, as the hole between the shoulders is for tobacco and the opening in the bones for a stem. The kneeling woman is of a distinctly aboriginal type and may be taken as a fine picture of the woman of the times. The work is exceedingly well done and, while the woman is not beautiful, many of the lines have individual grace. The piece, which in the first ever taken from the mounds that will grace any idea of the looks of the builders, cannot but be of the highest importance to the antiquarian. If this relic is to be accepted as a criterion the original mound builders were of the same race as the American Indians. The theories that the race which erected the mounds were of a different type, or were prehistoric to the Indians as to us, would fall to the ground and an interesting field of conjecture be opened to ethnologists, many of whom have long maintained that the American Indians are lineal descendants of the lost tribes of Israel.

Among other remarks on the subject Col. Cadle said in his lecture that much light had been thrown on the mounds by the recent excavations at Shiloh. Just as the forester can approximate the age of a tree by the rings in the bole, and the ice man tell the age of a berg of ice by the layers of his teeth, so the geologist can approximate the age of a cliff, a sliding or a mound by the action of the elements on the rocks or the size of a certain species of tree growing on it. Col. Cadle stoutly maintains that the mound from which this statue was taken cannot have been more than 500 years old. It was so situated that in the fall and spring, in the time of heavy rains, the overflow from an adjacent hill cut little canals across it. These, he estimates, have been made in the last 500 years, proving that the mound was made at that time. The theory that the American Indian was well known to the use of tobacco and have been accustomed to smoke the pipe of peace, since the statue was evidently made to be set in the middle of a circle and smoked from a stem with many over the one living man, with ordi-

ROSELLE WINS DAILY PRESS LEAGUE TROPHY

Park Club Ended Season With Three Straight Defeats on Their Own Alleys.

OPPONENTS FROM ROSELLE.

TWO FIRST GAMES WERE WON BY ONLY SEVEN PINS.

Parks Made a Big Score in First—Second Was Stiffly Fought From Start to Finish—Third Easy for Roselle.

Three straight defeats on their own alleys was the fashion in which the Park Club bowlers ended the season of The Daily Press Bowling League Thursday. But the first two games were rousing ones and were marked by as exciting finishes as have been seen during the tournament. The visitors from the Roselle Casino are now champions of The Daily Press League and their crack young bowler, D. W. Mulford, has carried off individual honors in the contest for the highest average score.

A number of spectators of both sexes accompanied the Roselle team to the Park alleys last night and there was a good turnout of the Park Club people. Chauncey D. Smith, who has won the prize for the highest average spares per game, and Forster, both of the Westfield team, were also present.

The visitors took the lead in the opening game and began to run well in front. In the seventh frame, their lead amounted to 19. Then a remarkable thing happened. Every one of the Roselle bowlers broke on the eighth while the Parks had a clean frame. The ninth showed the two teams very close. The windup was thrilling. The Parks held their own but the brilliant work needed to win the game came not. A double header by Dr Thiers at the end might have saved it but his best was a spare with seven on the last ball. So it was that Roselle won by just seven pins.

The second game was one of the most bitterly contested of the whole tournament. Roselle led on the first frame by a single pin, on the second the teams were tied, Roselle gained the mastery on the third and led by thirty three, only to lose the lead to the Park Club in the next frame by ten. Again they swapped places in the fifth, Roselle in front by three pins. That was increased to seventeen in the next. The seventh saw a brace on the part of the home team, and plenty of strikes ran them in front again by twenty-four pins. The Parks still led in the eighth, lost it again in the last, Roselle making a a rattling wind-up that saved the day. Luck was against the Parks on the wind-up for Fred Ball, Johnson and Hibbard all drew splits. Roselle won again by seven pins.

After the first two frames of the last game, the interest began to drag. Roselle bowled steadily and left the home team far in the rear. By the sixth frame the Roselle contingent was ninety-two pins ahead. During the game, there were several wonderful shots made. Fred Ball scored two spares on seemingly impossible splits. The wind-up was slow, Roselle leading by 121 pins.

The individual scores were as follows:

THE MODERN NIGHTCAP.

Worn by Young Ladies for the Purpose of Perfuming the Hair.

The young women of to-day are wearing nightcaps. Very different from the caps that our grandmothers wore, however, are the dainty confections of this period.

The object of the cap is to perfume the hair. Perfumes and extracts are apt to injure the hair. The alcohol in them is said to engender gray locks, and, while young women are willing to apply powder to a small part of their pompadour, they object distinctly to gray hair.

The caps in question are made something on the order of the head dresses worn by the Florentine ladies of caste in the 17th century. They are made in two layers of thinnest silk, between which are tiny pieces of cotton batting, heavily dusted with sachet.

One young woman who objected to the strings to her cap, and who knows that it is not good for the hair to pin the cap on—for during the night the cap might become disarranged and the pins pull the hair or irritate the scalp, has made a queer cord of the batting, sachet and silk, and plaits it in her hair. She contends that this perfumes the ends, which are tossed on top, and conveys a wave of sweetness with every motion of the head better than the cape.—Philadelphia Times.

FOREIGN GOSSIP.

Nearly 50 per cent. of the people of France and Germany are engaged in farming pursuits.

Natural gas, conveyed through bamboo tubes, has been used for years in China for illuminating purposes.

The population of London is equal to the combined population of Paris, Berlin, St. Petersburg and Rome.

The depopulation of Peru is illustrated by the fact that the valley of Santa, which in the days of the Incas had a population of 700,000, now has only 5,000.

The Muckross estate, which includes the famous lakes of Killarney, is annually visited by so many visitors that their fees amount to at least $5,000 a year, which is two per cent. of the price paid by Lord Ardilaun for the property.

The military budget of the French republic foots up a total of 29,000 officers, whose pay also amounts to nearly £4,000,000. Italy, under the same head, has 14,000 officers, drawing £1,450,000 annually. Spain pays, on account of 23,000 officers, the sum of £2,750,000.

One of the reasons why Paris is so pleasant a city to live in is that there are many "mondes" there. Whether you are literary, or musical, or artistic, or, indeed anything whatsoever else, you are sure to find a little congenial world and society devoted to your favorite form of art.

The greatest banquet in history took place on August 18, 1889, when the 60,000 mayors of France sat at 5 table in the Palais de l'Industrie, in Paris. There were three relays of about 12,000 guests each. To prepare the feast required 75 chief cooks and 12,000 waiters and scullions, etc.

WHEN HERRING SWARM.

How Thousands of Barrels Are Captured with Torch and Net in Massachusetts Bay.

Never in the history of Massachusetts bay fisheries has there been recorded a more successful herring season than the present one. Thousands of barrels have been trapped, many have been taken in the gill nets, but the torch and dip net have played great havoc with the shining-backed fishes. The taking of fresh herring in the harbor and near the shore this season is such large numbers brought thousands of dollars to the trappers, and because of their cheapness and quick delivery hundreds of vessels have been baited up, sent to the fishing grounds and brought in on quick trips.

The use of the torch for enticing fish to the surface of the water dates away back; the Boston, Swampscott and South Shore fishermen have dipped sperling near Plymouth by the aid of the torch for 50 years, as well as the Eastport native fishers. The novelty about this season's business is the dipping of full-grown herring at night by the use of the torch. There have been few spawn herring taken in this way, for the fish that once made the waters of Boston bay thick with a sea of milk by their deposits of spawn and melt have not shown on this coast for years. The herring which struck this coast in such countless numbers this season is an entirely new species.

Among the novel boats engaged in fishing is the pot-roleum boat Quertette, and when Capt. William Dexter extended an invitation to a reporter to make a trip it was accepted, and the craft was churned toward Cohasset at the rate of seven knots an hour. Outside Boston light a heavy swell was met, but the boat kept on until the lights of Cohasset were sighted, then the anchor was dropped and the mainsail set to keep her from rolling.

The preparation for torching was simple, as when the dory was hauled up alongside a pole with a grate on it was lashed in the bow. The fire in the grate filled with cotton, over which was poured petroleum. There were four men in the dory—two on the oars, one to dip and a boat steerer. As soon as the pot was lighted, after the torch was lighted, and while the men on the oars made the dory spin through the water the man in the bow stood ready to dip when the fish came to the surface in response to the light.

Soon there rose to the surface herring in countless numbers, and every time the dip net went down a bushel of the shiny backs was brought into the boat. Thirty dips were made, netting a take of ten barrels. Then the dory went alongside the launch and shoveled them on deck. Ten trips were made, and Capt. Dexter said he had 100 barrels, which was all he could conveniently carry.

The anchor was hauled up and the boat headed for Boston. It was as novel and pleasing a way of taking fish as the writer ever saw, and when under way the crew sat down to a delightful meal of fish fresh from the water. The boat arrived at T wharf at 5:30 a. m., and when the market opened at seven o'clock part of the catch was sold for bait and the balance to the dealers.—Boston Globe.

Women's Hands.

Women's hands are increasing in size. Outdoor sports in which they indulge have had the effect of widening their hands, and glovemakers are turning out large sizes in greater quantities. The fashion of wearing no gloves in summer has hurt the glove trade considerably. Last summer it was the exception to see a girl or woman wearing gloves.—Detroit Free Press.

JUST STARTING IN LIFE.

DEATH OF HENRY V. RYDER AFTER A SHORT ILLNESS.

Well-Known and Popular Young Man—Was Champion Tennis Player of Hillside Club.

The death of Henry V. Ryder, son of Mrs. Charles E. Ryder, of East Front street, occurred Thursday afternoon about 1 o'clock. A little over a week ago he caught cold at an entertainment and later it developed into a severe attack of pneumonia, with typhoid complications. This caused his death. Dr. George Ryder, of New York, and Dr. Murray, of this city, were constant and faithful in their administrations.

Mrs. Ryder and her remaining son have the sympathy of the community in the loss of one who was so near and dear to them. He was highly esteem and admired by all who knew him for his many excellent qualities. In a large circle of friends and acquaintances he will be greatly missed.

Henry V. Ryder was born in this city and has lived here all his life. He was prepared at John Leal's school for a course at Yale College. He was graduated from the college in 1897 with honors. While a student at Yale he was a member of the champion hockey team.

After completing his course he entered the employ of the Atlantic Trust Company, New York, under the president, L. V. F. Randolph, of East Front street, where he remained up to the time of his death. He was a valued employe. His executive ability and steady habits won for him a place of responsibility that was a source of pride to him and his friends.

Mr. Ryder was prominently identified with tennis and golf, and was one of the best players in the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club. He was the champion tennis player of the club, having won this honor three times. Last season was his third successful play in tennis. As a tennis player he had few equals, and in golf he won many honors. In season he devoted his spare time to tennis and golf merely for the exercise, and he was to be found on the courts or links many times during the season for these games.

Mr. Ryder was a member and attendant at Grace P. E. church, and the funeral services were held from that church last Sunday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock.

ALMOST A CENTENARIAN.

ALFRED BONNELL DIED AT THE AGE OF NINETY-FIVE.

Was Remarkably Active to Physique and Mind Up to a Few Weeks Ago.

Alfred Bonnell, who was one of the oldest residents in this vicinity, died about 2 o'clock Saturday at his home, 23 Manning avenue, after an illness lasting about five week, which was due to apoplexy. He had three strokes, the third occurring March urday. From that time up to the hour of his death he was unconscious. While his daughter, Mrs. Spencer, was visiting at his home a few weeks ago he was then very ill, and when her death occurred suddenly early in the morning of Washington's Birthday, he scarcely recognized the fact when informed of it.

There was probably no more familiar figure in the borough than Alfred Bonnell. For more than a half century he continued to go about and notwithstanding that he was, at the time of death, nearly 95 years of age, he was always remarkably able to help himself. In more ways than one was he remarkable. He seemed to have a constitution of iron. Up to five weeks ago he always enjoyed the best of health. Just previous to his last illness he went to Newark alone and looked after some business. He was accustomed to taking long walks and this never seemed to fatigue him the least. He had an admirable disposition—always kind, gentle and loving. Especially to the boys were these qualities the strongest. His memory was strong and clear as a crystal. He had a faculty of telling a story in a very interesting manner. In appearance Mr. Bonnell did not show his age. His walk was elastic and firm and he was very proud of his health and ability to do for himself.

Mr. Bonnell was born at Chatham, this State, April 30th, 1806, and his business was that of a lumber dealer. At one time he had a mill at Cranford. During the early part of his life he resided in New Brunswick, Miss children were born to him and his wife. Of that number four died in early infancy. Miss Henriette Bonnell and George Bonnell, who resided with their father; Mrs. Augustus Drigan, of Asbury Park, and John C. Bonnell, who lives in the west. Mr. Bonnell was a very devout Christian and he lived his profession. He was a member of Holy Cross church, having been confirmed by Rev. T. Logan Murphy when 75 years of age.

The funeral services were held from the house, 23 Manning avenue, Tuesday last at 2:30 o'clock in the afternoon.

CITY JAIL PUT OUT OF BUSINESS BY A FIRE.

Overheated Stove Ignited Woodwork and the Interior is Ruined.

OCCURRED JUST AFTER 12.

CITY WILL BE OBLIGED TO IMPROVISE A LOCKUP.

Morgan Bird, Who Owns the Building, Estimates the Loss at $2000—Everyone Looked Happy When Blaze Was Seen.

The City Jail had another narrow escape Thursday. An overheated stove in the corridor was responsible. Before the flames were extinguished, however, the interior of the lockup was so generally demoralized that it will be of little use to the city hereafter. A large crowd watched the efforts of the firemen, cheered mightily when the axes were used and vowed vengeance on the man who sent in the alarm.

Only the regular denizens of the building, the creeping and the crawling ones, were there when the fire started. Warden Tommy Martin, who occupies the second floor with his family, was absent on business. Mrs. Martin and the children were also away. There was a fire in the stove and there is no doubt but that the conflagration started from it.

Several men saw the fire, but somehow they neglected to send in an alarm. A young colored man finally ran down Central avenue and notified McCue that the station house was afire. McCue was inclined to unbelief. Meanwhile the blaze continued at a merry pace. Finally McCue consented to investigate. He found the flames busy with the interior. The colored man went running down the street yelling "fire."

John VanNest, an employe at Redden's stable, heard the shout and hurried into The Press office for a key. His explanation was that there was a fire on Park avenue, hence the key was found sooner, perhaps, than it might otherwise have been.

The alarm was sent in from box 15, at 12:15 o'clock and the fire department responded promptly. The fire had gained considerable headway in the corridor and on the upper floor. The stream from the chemical engine and two regular lines of hose were laid in.

When there was no fire the axe was used freely and the interior of the place now presents a sad appearance. It is practically ruined as far as the interior is concerned, although the cells did not suffer greatly.

A great crowd assembled to watch the fire. City Judge Runyon was on hand and he looked positively happy. The police didn't seem worried either, and Tommy Martin wasn't greatly agitated. His property on the second floor was covered by $500 insurance.

Morgan C. Bird, the owner of the building, visited the scene of the fire and remarked that he guessed it was gone this time. He estimated the value of the building at $2,000, and placed his loss at $800. It is covered by insurance.

BIG LAUNDRY COMPANY.

Morey & LaRue Have Organized With Capital of $100,000.

Morey & LaRue, a laundry firm who have been conducting establishments in several Jersey towns and cities, have organized a company under the laws of this State, the Laundry Company. Articles of incorporation were filed at Trenton yesterday and the stock is capitalized at $100,000. Under the provisions of incorporation the company can conduct business in every state of the Union. The headquarters of the company will be at Elizabeth.

The company has organized by electing the following officers: President, Mahlon Morey, Elizabeth; vice-president and treasurer, W. A. LaRue, Easton, Pa. Secretary, J. F. Lake, of this city. Governor Voorhees and Senator John Kean are also members of the company as stockholders. After April 1st Mr. Lake will devote his entire time to the business of the new company. In the meantime he will be located at the hardware store which he recently disposed of to H. E. Gayle.

Can't Drill in Black Rock.

Now that the Crescent Rink has been leased to a manufacturing concern, the plans of the cadet battalion of the Plainfield High School will have to be changed. Their present quarters in Washington Hall are too crowded to allow any manoeuvring, and it is proposed to hire the Crescent Rink now that the worst of the cold weather is over and drill there until warm weather comes. But with a factory in the rink, drilling will be out of the question.

ROSELLE CAPTURED DAILY PRESS TROPHY

D. W. Mulford, of Roselle, Won Prize for High Average Score.

STANDING OF THE OTHERS.

C. D. SMITH, OF WESTFIELD, FIRST IN AVERAGE SPARE CONTEST.

Roselle Carried Off Two of the Honors —Standing of Bowlers in Two Individual Competitions—Dr. Thirty Rest Local Bowler.

The first season of The Daily Press Bowling League is over. The last of the series of games were rolled last week The Roselle Casino was easily victorious and now holds The Daily Press trophy until next winter's tournament shall be decided. By steady accurate bowling the Roselle team took the lead from almost the first and has held it since. The Westfield Club ended the season in second place. The Park Club, of this city, after an auspicious beginning, finished in third place, while the Cranford Casino by consistently poor rolling brought up the tail of the column.

Besides winning the chief honor of the league, the Roselle Casino also carried off one of the individual prizes. In the competition for the highest individual average score D. W. Mulford, of that club, won easily by a remarkable average. Chauncey D. Smith, captain of the Westfield team, captured the other prize for the highest average number of spares per game. The Park Club contingent failed to distinguish itself in either contest.

Dr. Thiers, who was high man on the Park team, improved his average slightly and advanced from eighth place to tie with Fred Condit, of Westfield, for seventh place. F. O. Ball, captain of the Park Club five, stepped ahead of Hibbard, of the same club. Shangle, of Roselle, showed an improvement and got further away from the unpopular end of the list.

The standing of those who qualified for the individual competition by rolling fourteen games or more is as follows:

	Games Rolled.	Average.
Mulford, Roselle	18	186.7
C. D. Smith, Westfield	18	174.3
F. O. Ball, Park Club	18	173.8
A. E. Dowling, Westfield	18	169.4
Thiers, Park Club	18	168.4
Brown, Cranford	18	164.4
Hibbard, Park Club	18	164.1
Condit, Westfield	17	163.1
Shangle, Roselle	18	162.8
Barry, Cranford	18	157.5
Hibbard, Park Club	18	156.8
Condit, Westfield	18	156.7
Dunn, Cranford	18	156.5
Bowers, Roselle	18	155.8
Hibbard, Park Club	18	155.1
Ross, Cranford	18	154.8
Rahn, Cranford	18	154.6

The others who took part in leagues games were as follows:

	Games Rolled.	Average.
A. C. Ball, Park Club	6	171.3
Warner, Westfield	6	171.2
Dowling, Westfield	6	169.3
F. H. Ball, Park Club	6	167.8
Wise, Cranford	6	167.3
Dr. Thiers, Park Club	6	166.8
Bowers, Roselle	6	166.3
Hibbard, Park Club	6	164.3
Brown, Cranford	6	164.2
Barry, Cranford	6	157.5

In the spare average competition, Chauncey D. Smith, of Westfield, was high man. Roselle's captain Shangle trailed in his last series to catch up but failed although he advanced his average eight points. The other Smith won with an average of 5 11, while the Roselle Smith was second with 4 88.

Patterson, of Roselle, went a'lar spares in his last series and advanced from fourth to third where he is now tied with Forster, of Westfield, with 4 41. Dr. Thiers, high man for the Parks in that contest, showed improvement and rose from sixth to fifth place. Johnson, also of the Parks, stepped up from thirteenth to ninth while Hibbard, of the same club, advanced one place.

The standing of those who qualified for this contest by rolling fourteen games or more is as follows:

	Games Rolled.	Average Spares.
C. D. Smith, Westfield	18	5.11
Forster, Westfield	18	4.41
Patterson, Roselle	18	4.33
Thiers, Park Club	18	4.01
Johnson, Park Club	18	3.94
F. H. Ball, Park Club	18	3.89
Mulford, Roselle	18	3.83
Condit, Westfield	17	3.59
Shangle, Roselle	18	3.59
Barry, Cranford	18	3.56
Hibbard, Park Club	18	3.50
Condit, Westfield	18	3.50
Dowling, Westfield	18	3.44
Shangle, Roselle	18	3.33
A. C. Ball, Park Club	18	3.28
Dr. Thiers, Park Club	6	3.16
Rahn, Cranford	18	3.00

The other bowlers who took part in league games show the following averages:

	Games Rolled.	Average Scores.
Dunn, Roselle	3	5.00
Wilmer, Cranford	3	4.66
F. H. Ball, Park Club	3	4.66
A. C. Ball, Park Club	3	4.33
Whitney, Cranford	3	4.33
Ross, Cranford	15	4.00
Hammond, Roselle	3	3.66
Warner, Westfield	3	3.66
Van Horn, Park Club	3	3.66
Wise, Cranford	6	3.66

The scores of the concluding series between Roselle and the Parks last week were watched with interest as there was a fair possibility that there might be a change in the first three. Mulford, the crack young bowler of Roselle, was not up to his usual form or else the new alleys bothered him for, in the first game, he rolled his lowest in any game in league play. He braced up but not sufficiently to hold his average which dropped from 189 4 to 186.7. He was still far above any of the rest and won the prize, $10 in gold, easily. Sharp, of Cranford, was second by only a small majority with Charles A. Smith, captain of the Roselle contingent, a close third. Smith had his troubles as well as Mulford and dropped back two points.

ENDEAVOR OFFICERS.

Those Selected by the First Baptist Society.

At the annual meeting of the Christian Endeavor Society of the First Baptist church held Friday the following officers were chosen for the coming year: President, George F. Bonte; vice-president, J. Herbert Case; treasurer, Miss Jessie Sexton; recording secretary, Miss Velma Oakley; corresponding secretary, Miss Alice Woodland; superintendent of Junior Endeavor, Miss Grace Yerkes; chairman lookout committee, Mrs. Fiester; prayer meeting, Miss Mattison; missionary, Mrs. Flanders; social, Dr. W. K. Browning; welcome, Douglas Drake; Sower, Miss Sue Woodland; music, Clifford Braider.

The various reports showed a steady progress in every department. After paying all bills there is a balance in the treasury of $2. A hearty vote of thanks was extended to the retiring officers by the society. The members of the various committees will be announced in a few days by the chairman of each.

REV. DR. RICHARDS MAY LEAVE PLAINFIELD.

Received an Urgent Call From Central Congregational Church in Hartford.

PROBABLY WILL ACCEPT IT.

CHURCH IS A LARGE AND INFLUENTIAL ONE.

Though He Has Declined Many Similar Offers Dr. Richards Is Said to Regard This With Considerable Favor.

Rev. Dr. Richards, who has been the pastor of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church in this city for many years, has received an offer to accept the pastorate of the Central Congregational church in Hartford, Conn., and though he has declined many offers to leave Plainfield since he has been engaged here, it is understood that there is a strong probability of his accepting this latest one.

The Hartford church that desires his service is one of the largest and most influential in Connecticut and the officials of it are very anxious to secure Dr. Richards as their pastor. Dr. Richards is giving the proposition serious consideration, and though he will be strongly urged to remain in Plainfield he may not do so.

Several weeks ago Dr. Richards received a call to the pastorate of the church in Baltimore which Rev. William Matthias Babcock resigned from to go to the Fifth Avenue Presbyterian church in New York. He was made a very liberal offer, but declined it.

Dr. Richards is regarded as one of the most able ministers in the Presbyterian church in this country. He receives a salary of $5,000 per year from the Crescent Avenue church. His retirement from work in this city would be distinct loss to religious circles, and would be regretted not only by his parishioners but by the members of all other denominations.

AGED WOMAN'S BIRTHDAY

MRS. PHOEBE ROSS NINETY YEARS OLD SUNDAY.

The Event Made an Occasion for a Pleasant Gathering of Friends.

There was a quiet birthday party at the home of J. D. Spicer, on West Fifth street, last Sunday. His mother-in-law, Mrs. Phoebe Ross, was ninety years old Sunday. Besides her own children, Richard Ross of Bound Brook, Mrs. J. D. Spicer and Mrs. W. L. Titsworth, and their children, Mrs. Ross invited two of her former pastors and Dr. Main, her present pastor, together with their wives, to attend the party. Dr. Main was prevented from attending because of an engagement to preach in Bethlehem. Rev. H. M. Baker, of East Sixth street, and Rev. Dr. Lewis with their wives, were present. Mr. Baker was Mrs. Ross' pastor at New Market, many years ago, and officiated at the marriage of her daughter, Mrs. Spicer in 1867.

The birthday cake, which formed the centerpiece at the supper table, was appropriately ornamented and bore the dates 1810 1900. Mrs. Ross was able to take part in the social enjoyment both before and after the supper, and at her request, simple and pleasant religious services occupied a portion of the evening.

Music of the olden time, appropriate remarks concerning the earlier history of the century and of Mrs. Ross family, especially by Mr. Baker, the presence of the children and grandchildren, brought the beginning and the end of the century together as one. The enjoyment of the occasion was greatly heightened by the fact that Mrs. Ross was able to enter into every phase of the occasion with a strength and interest which seemed more like one of few years than one who had lived so nearly through the century. The distribution of the presents had been timed by the grandchildren so that one appeared each hour during the day and evening. This added zest to the occasion, and gave something new constantly.

Such a event gives double interest to that higher type of Christian life which preserves both body and spirit through so many decades and brings at the close a ripeness of soul which rejoices at the doorway we call death, through which God welcomes those with whom He has dealt kindly. Ninety beautiful years on earth are the promise of endless years of greater beauty in the land upon the border of which those present to-day call aged stand waiting to pass through into the better land.

3,000 Feet of Trolley Track to be Laid.

William Hand & Son have begun the work of carting the materials for the tracks of the Westfield and Elizabeth Street Railway Company between Elizabeth and Lorraine. There is still 1,600 feet of track to be laid to complete the line. As soon as the materials are on the ground the work of laying the tracks will be started.

MUSCLED MEN COMPETED

FIRST SECTION OF CONTEST IN Y. M. C. A. GYMNASIUM.

Hageman Made the Best Showing But the Events Were Keenly Contested.

Six of the young men of the Plainfield Y. M. C. A. turned out Saturday evening for the first section of the novice indoor athletic contest held in the association gymnasium that evening. There was no overwhelming victory for anybody, but Hageman, a new comer in Y. M. C. A. athletic circles, made the first showing, winning one event, tieing for first place in a second and finishing third in the other. Those who took part were Hageman, Bentliff, Thompson, Cahoone and Hobbie.

The three events selected for the first section of the contest were the standing broad jump, the fence vault and the running high jump. It was a novice contest in which only members in the association being eligible. The best athletes of the association were consequently barred out, and those who competed were practically new men.

The standing broad jump brought out some fairly good material. Hageman won with 8 feet, 2¼ inches, while Taggart was second with 8 feet. In his three turns Thompson fouled twice by stepping backward, but even then he cleared 7 feet, 8½ inches. With a little more care, he would have given the leaders trouble. The others finished in the following order: Cahoone, Bentliff, Hobbie.

Thompson and Cahoone tied for first place in the fence vault with 5 feet, 10 inches, which was good. Both were rather new at the event, and lost their chances of going higher by fouling. Cahoone seemed to show the better form. Hageman was next. The others followed: Bentliff and Hobbie, a tie, Taggart.

Several of the competitors were new at the running high jump and none of the marks were high. Hageman and Hobbie tied at 4 feet, 5 inches. Both were capable of clearing the bar several inches higher. Taggart was third, and with practice would show much improvement. The order of the others: Thompson, Cahoone, Bentliff.

The second and last section of the competition will take place next Saturday evening. There was a number of visitors present Saturday evening including a delegation of young women.

ROBBED A SMOKE HOUSE.

Farmer Lane a Victim of a Gang of Thieves—Three of the Alleged Looters Under Arrest.

Chief of Police Koch and Constable Totten, of Somerville, landed three men in jail Saturday, charged with robbing Abram Lane's smoke house, near North Branch Station. Lane smokes meats for his neighbors, and about a week ago his smoke house was cleaned out by unknown parties. Several days later some well known young men in Raritan aroused suspicion by offering smoked meats at low prices. Warrants for their arrest were obtained and the above named officers succeeded in landing three of them. One of the quartette, Jim Sisser, suddenly disappeared before the officers could lay hands on him. Gus. Wyman, John Fury and Fib. Mullmer were arrested. The latter was released on his own recognizance and Wyman and Fury were lodged in jail.

About thirty hams, shoulders and pieces of smoked beef were found hidden under the hay in Sisser's haymow at Raritan.

Death of John Shepard.

John Shepard, after an illness of several months with consumption, died Sunday at his home on New street. He is survived by a wife and three children. The deceased was a well known painter and was at one time employed by the firm of Woodston & Buckle. He came to Plainfield some years ago from Hunterdon county. He was a brother-in-law of Peter V. Weaver, the latter marrying Mr. Shepard's eldest sister, who died about eight years ago. The deceased was a member of the Exempt Firemen's Association. Mr. Shepherd was 56 years of age. The funeral was held from his late residence, 214 New street, Wednesday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock.

A Trolley Rumor.

A rumor is current in Bingoes that the trolley road, which will soon connect New Hope with Philadelphia, will pass through Bingoes to Raritan, connecting New York city and Philadelphia by trolley. The line would pass through Mt. Airy, Bingoes, Rosville, Clover Hill and Neshanic. At Rosville there will be a junction where a branch will run to Flemington and eventually to Easton.

Dotter One in Newark.

Bernard M. Shanley, president of the Essex and Hudson Gas Company, which controls the gas lighting of Newark and the other communities of Essex county, has announced that the rate for gas after April 1st will be $1. The present rate is $1.20.

RUDE TELEGRAPHY.

The Odd But Effective Means South African Have of Sending News and Messages.

Much surprise has been expressed at the quickness with which the natives of South Africa have learned the results of the recent battles between the Boers and British. These natives know nothing of our method of telegraphing, and yet, when victory has been declared for either of the contending parties, the news has been flashed with amazing celerity to remote parts of the country. The manner in which the news is carried is novel and most interesting. Throughout Africa the natives are expert in the use of what is known as the drum language, and they use it as we use the telegraph and the telephone, namely, for the purpose of sending a message from one place to another.

The most important events, as well as the daily occurrences in every village, are transmitted in this way. In the Congo region, near Stanley Falls, one of the natives who had studied in the use of the drums that they can carry on a conversation with one another at a great distance, just as easily as though they were standing side by side. The chiefs or head men of the various tribes converse daily in this fashion, and thus each quickly learns what has occurred in the surrounding districts during the past 24 hours. The drum used for this purpose is fashioned, as a rule, out of a hollow tree trunk, which is covered with the skin of an antelope.

In regard to the quickness with which news is transmitted in Africa, Peter de Deken, the famous traveler, tells two good stories. While Inspector Five was in control of the station at Bonoko, he visited one day a distant outpost and found that it would be impossible for him to reach home until late at night. As he looked forward to a hearty dinner, he requested a head man, who was with him and who was an expert drummer, to send word to the station, several miles away, that dinner was not to be served until he returned. The head man drummed a straightway another drummer repeated his message, and so the news was flashed from point to point until it reached the distant station. When Five reached home at slight he found the table laid and the dinner ready to be served. This was the message his servants had received: "The Bwana matori (governor or inspector) will be home late in the evening. Don't eat everything up."

GIVING DRUM SIGNALS.

Mistakes are sometimes made in telegraphing and telephoning, and Peter de Deken's second story shows that one may blunder also in using the drum language. Inspector Five took several days' outing during his stay in Bonoko, and on the day of his departure the thought struck him that it would be well to take a photograph of all those natives who, from time to time, had acted as his domestic servants. Accordingly he issued a drummer to notify them that they were to appear before him at a certain hour, in their holiday clothes. The drummer at once sent a message, but what was the surprise to find at the appointed hour, not his servants, but all the police of the station, drawn up in front of his residence. The drummer, it seems, had either misunderstood Five or had blundered in sending the message, instead of summoning domestic servants, he had summoned state servants.—Cincinnati Commercial Tribune.

Observed by an Ostrich.

Senator Allen, of Nebraska, is a famous stump speaker, but he tells of one occasion when his eloquence was utterly wasted. He was campaigning in Nebraska and was to speak at the fair grounds. "I had a grandstand," he says, "was full to overflowing, and the opportunity seemed to be ripe for a great speech. But just as I began a man driving an ostrich hitched to a sulky. I don't know whether you ever saw a trotting ostrich. He's fast, but out west he was a great attraction. Well, as soon as that bird began to run around the track I wasn't in it. The ostrich monopolized the attention of every man, woman and child. When the bird stopped the people listened to me, but when he threw out his long legs again there was a roar of laughter and applause that drowned every word I uttered. Finally I gave it up and retired in favor of the ostrich."

What She Always Says.

It makes no difference how little a boy is, when his mother scolds her she always says: "You ought to be ashamed of yourself—a big boy like you."

TO HOUSEKEEPERS.

Some Suggestions Which May Be of Value to Their Domestic Duties.

Salt codfish has a great food value, which causes it to be much sought after. It is almost as nutritive in its salted form as it is when fresh, though it loses a little of its digestibility. When it is scarce the dealer often substitutes a cheaper fish for the genuine cod. A way to test whether you are getting the real thing or not is to rub a bit of the fish between the thumb and finger. If it is cod the fiber will loosen and become woolly, but will not go to pieces. Other fish will crumble readily between the fingers.

A few drops of ammonia in the water in which you wash your cut glass —or your pressed glass, or any kind of glass at all—make it look bright and sparkling. Deeply cut glass may require an occasional scrub with a soft brush and soap. For cleaning silver, take equal parts of ammonia and alcohol and enough whiting to make it like cream. Apply with a brush, if the article is elaborately carved, and set aside to dry. When dry it will be ready to polish, which may be done with a dry flannel or a chamois.

It is not extravagant to use eggs freely both on the table and in breakfast breads, cakes and custards. One pound of eggs used as food will average about the same in value as one pound of the very best quality of butters' meat. Eggs also contain more phosphates than the average of other foods. There is also a specially valuable form of sulphur and iron in eggs.

It is said that there is no taste or scent of cottonseed in cottolene if the cottolene is fresh. Just as soon as it is a little stale the objectionable taste is observable. It is—the cottolene—a mixture of refined cottonseed oil and clarified beef fat. The difficulty of getting it perfectly fresh is the chief objection to its use.—Detroit Free Press.

COLLECTING THE RENT.

How a Hard-Hearted Landlord Wrung Money from His Poor Tenant.

"Step! Step! Step!"

It was some one mounting the stairs. It was a slow and heavy step, and there was something grim and gruesome about it—something to tell the listener that the sole owner and proprietor of the step was a lop-shouldered son of a gun without mercy in his heart to grease a sunflower seed.

"'Tis he—the landlord!" gasped the woman who sat in the gloom of her garret room with white face and palpitating heart.

The step came nearer—the frail door was kicked open and Adamant Flintstone stood before her and said:

"Woman, I am here! If you cannot pay me my rent out you go!"

"Oh, Mr. Flintstone, have you no heart!" was the pitiful entreaty.

"Not a bit. Pay or go!"

"But think of your mother."

"I haven't any."

"Then your sisters!"

"Never had one."

"Is it possible that because I owe you $120 rent you will drive me out on the street on a night like this?"

"I am in the landlord business for money," was his unfeeling reply.

"But will you not respect that heaven will prosper a man who has neither pity nor mercy?"

"I can. I am making 14 per cent. on my investment. Will you pay or shall I chuck you out of the window?"

"I—I will pay!" she gasped, as the storm increased and the wind tried to shake the stuffing out of the old tenement.

And pulling two $100 bills out of her pocket she handed them out and received $80 in change, and Adamant Flintstone chuckled in his frozen heart as he turned away and left her trying to choke herself to death with a button hook.—Philadelphia Press.

ONLY HIS ORDINARY METHOD.

Weary Citizen Offers Impromptu Explanation of Suddenly Sitting.

He was quite weary as he ambled deviously along one of the south side streets. To begin with the day's walking had, for some half hour, melted under the sun's rays and then frozen under the fierce winds which followed. This condition of affairs caused him to use great circumspection in his footprintings. He had enjoyed a season of conviviality up in the city, had hugged the stove in his car homeward and was feeling a bit under the weather.

He stumbled and slipped on his way with palpable effort. There was considerable of a ground swell at any rate, and he found that his steering gear made too much travel. The result was that he tackled with such frequency that he covered more ground than was absolutely necessary. Finally he reached a street corner where there is a foot bridge over the gutter. This bridge had an extra supply of ice and was glacial in its smoothness.

He stepped upon one foot on the bridge and braced himself for the trip across. Then he lifted the other foot to place it on the bridge, but he didn't proceed. Both feet flew upward, as if seeking to unite him to the face. He sat with extreme suddenness and vigor. A look of pain and disgust flitted over his features as he felt about him with the purpose of determining his location.

"Hello, Jim," called a friend, who came up at this interesting juncture, "rather hot tumble that. Going to sit there any longer? Unusual, ain't it?"

"No," said Jim, confidently. "Nothin' unusual 'bout it, not 'tall. I most generally sit down like that."—Chicago Chronicle.

FATHER SMYTH WILL STAY IN PLAINFIELD.

Decides Not to Leave St. Mary's Parish to Go to Jersey City.

LIKES HIS WORK HERE.

ANNOUNCEMENT MADE AT 7:30 MASS SUNDAY.

Causes Much Satisfaction Among His Parishioners as Well as His Many Friends of the Protestant Faith.

It will be gratifying and pleasant news for the parishioners of St. Mary's Roman Catholic church, as well as his many friends in this city, to learn that Rev. Patrick Smyth has decided not to leave Plainfield to accept the pastorate of St. Mary's church in Jersey City. This decision of Father Smyth was made last week. It was announced to the congregation of St. Mary's church at the 7:30 o'clock mass Sunday morning. The announcement was received with much satisfaction by all.

For seventeen years Father Smyth has been at the head of St. Mary's parish. His indefatigable efforts to build up the parish have borne abundant fruit of his success. He has seen his church grow from a mere handful of people to an important parish. By his proverbial kindness, Christian spirit and devotion to the spiritual as well as temporal affairs of his people, Father Smyth has endeared himself to all and is beloved by old and young.

Outside of his own denomination Father Smyth is highly respected as a citizen. The fact that he has decided to remain in the city, where for so many years he has made his home, is indeed gratifying to many people who have learned to look with favor upon the kindly face of the good priest whose faithful ministerations have been fraught with much good to the community.

To a local reporter Father Smyth said Monday morning: "Yes, I am happy to say that I am going to remain in Plainfield. This is my home. I love my people and my work here at St. Mary's parish. I don't think I have an enemy in the place, but I believe I have hundreds of friends. Many of my warmest friends are to be found among the Protestants whom I meet from day to day and whose lives have been in touch with mine these many years. Plainfield is good enough for me. The offer of another change, as flattering as it may appear, had no particular attraction for me. I am satisfied to remain here at home."

While the Forty Hours' devotion, which began Sunday morning, is being observed, Father Smyth will have to assist him Rev. Father Hedges, of Seton Hall, Rev. Father Wilson, of Cranford and Rev. Father Ellett, of Newark.

FUNERAL OF H. V. RYDER.

Services in Grace P. E. Church Sunday Afternoon Were Largely Attended.

The obsequies of the late Henry V. Ryder held at the Grace P. E. church Sunday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock were very impressive and were largely attended. Mr. Ryder was so well-known and liked throughout the city that there was a large number of friends who were anxious to show their respect to his memory.

Rev. E. M. Bodman, the rector, with Rev. Floyd Appleton, the curate, conducted the regular Episcopal funeral service in which the full-vested choir took part. Mr. Ryder was at one time a member of the choir of that church, and was the first of any of the old members of the choir to die.

Extensive floral offerings were displayed. They were very beautiful.

Following the service in the church, the remains were taken to Hillside cemetery where the interment took place, Rev. E. M. Bodman conducted the services at the grave.

SICK FOR THREE YEARS.

Mrs. Ellen F. Billett Died Monday Night After a Long Illness.

The death of Mrs. Ellen F. Billett, aged 65 years, occurred last Monday at her home on Somerset street, after a long illness. During the past three years she was an invalid and for the past three months she was confined to her bed. She was born at Benson, Vt., and her maiden name was Ellen F. Carter. She was the widow of James F. Billett. For several years she lived at Whitehall, N. Y., and five years ago she came to Plainfield. She was a devout member of the Methodist church at Benson. Three daughters, Mrs. W. H. Bates, of New York; Miss Laura Billett and Miss Jessie Billett, and one son, J. Fletcher Billett, of this city, survive her. The funeral services were held from the house yesterday afternoon at 3 o'clock. Interment will take place at Whitehall, N. Y., today.

SCHOOL TRUSTEES CHOSEN IN BOROUGH

George D. Hallock, Henry A. McGee and John H. VanWinkle Elected to the Board.

THERE WAS LITTLE CONTEST.

PRESIDENT M'CUTCHEN'S REPORT REVIEWED WORK FOR PAST YEAR.

Recommended Appropriations Approved of by the Voters—Suggestions for Improvement Made by the President.

The annual borough school meeting was held Tuesday evening in the High School building on Somerset street. The attendance of citizens was, as usual, very large. Contrary to expectation there was little or no excitement and everything passed off harmoniously. S St. John McCutchen, president of the Board of Education, call the meeting to order, and Dr. H. K Carroll was made chairman. Borough Clerk Frank Rowley was chosen secretary. George P. Brown and D. M. VanVliet were made inspectors.

The time having arrived to nominate School Commissioners, B. A. Hageman, Jr., made an enthusiastic speech in which he nominated George D Hallock to succeed himself in the Board. He referred to Mr. Hallock's ability, integrity and devotion to duty. He said that he knew the nominee to be a person singularly fitted for the position. He dwelt upon the fact that there was too much criticism of borough officials, and unless it was stopped it would drive good people out of the borough. He did not consider it was any special privilege to fill an office and then be abused for trying to do what was right.

Dr. Cooley then nominated Henry A. McGee to succeed himself, and David Kenney nominated Andrew E. Kenney. Rev. J. O. McKelvey was nominated, but he declined. John Godwin nominated Paul Loizeaux to succeed himself, and P. A. Emmons placed in nomination the name of John H. VanWinkle.

The total vote was 366 as follows: George D. Hallock, 93; H. A. McGee, 119; John H. VanWinkle, 86; Andrew E Kenney and Paul Loizeaux 68 each. The first three were declared elected. The appropriation was carried by a vote of 84. This includes for teachers' asiaries and current expense, $12,400; for text books and supplies, $1,700.

District Clerk R M. Fountain presented his annual report as to the financial standing of the various departments. The general school account shows that the receipts were $32,709 80 and the disbursements, $32,-167 67, leaving a balance in the hands of the Collector of $7,541 71, and a balance of 72 cents in the hands of the Clerk. The library fund shows that the receipts were $179 08 and the disbursements $176 12, leaving a balance of $2 96. The receipts for the building fund were $9 294 26 and the disbursements $9,214 86, laving a balance of $479 40.

The report of President S. St. John McCutchen was read by himself as follows:

To the Legal Voters of North Plainfield:

The record of the schools of the borough for the past year is one of quiet progress. The Watchung School has furnished the relief from overcrowding under which we suffered so long, and except in some minor points of construction, is satisfactorily filling the needs it was built to meet.

An earnest spirit shown by teachers and scholars seems to prevail in the schools, and serious, intelligent and systematic work is being done. The work of education is undergoing constant development.

Methods of teaching, text books and appliances become antiquated and are superseded by those that are more progressive and effective. To those of us who knew the public schools of many years ago, the change to the enlightened, advanced and scientific methods of this day is most surprising. This development is shown in many ways.

Our supervising principal has reported to us an interesting experiment in our school attended by the use of a modern text book and method in teaching arithmetic in the third and fourth year classes. These classes of very young children, with these modern aids to the study of that difficult subject, arithmetic, passed a better examination on ten thought problems selected at random, than did the eighth year pupils on the same examples.

This experiment shows the value of adopting the latest and best helps to learning, and the necessity of keeping

HIS ACTIONS ARE QUEER

STRANGE CONDUCT OF A FIFTEENTH SON OF A MILLIONAIRE.

Taken in Custody by the Police, But Released When Doctor Said He Was Sane.

After a wild and thrilling chase through the city streets late Tuesday afternoon Constable John Gjettiesen captured a young man. The only trouble with the young man was that the police questioned his sanity. John started his victim on North avenue and captured him on Front street. Some fifty men and boys joined in the pursuit.

The young man gave his name as Charles Price. He claimed to hail from Philadelphia and to be the fifteenth son of a millionaire. He afterwards decided that his home was in Hartford and that he was really a count by inheritance. He seemed well-educated and rational in his conversation.

Price has been in Plainfield several weeks. He obtained a job at the Scott Press Works as machinist but showed a complete ignorance of the use of tools. He has since paid frequent visits to the rooms of the Relief Association and so annoyed Miss VanBuskerk, the superintendent, by his obtrusive attentions that the police were notified. He wrote her several letters. It is also alleged that he stopped several young women on West Second street and tried to get into conversation with them.

The police report that he hung about the Crescent Avenue church, opening the door for young women and talking to them To the police he claimed that he was out of work, hadn't a cent and was starving. Last night he showed a large roll of bills to a Plainfielder.

After Gjettiesen's chase, Price was detained at the jail for several hours. Mayor Rockfellow and Chief Grant examined him, as did also Dr. Carman. The latter declared that he was not insane. He was released during the evening promising to leave this morning to accept a position in Garwood. If he does not go his peculiar actions are likely to land him in jail shortly as the police are inclined to be suspicious of him.

A HOSPITAL SITE.

Board of Governors to Consider New Location—Between $3,000 and $4,000 Subscribed.

The board of governors of Muhlenberg Hospital wi l meet in regular session next Monday evening. At that time one of the most important matters to be considered will be the report of the committee having in charge the selection of the land as the site for the new hospital building, which is now almost an assured thing Just what action will be taken on the report cannot be stated now, but it is likely to be favorable.

Regarding the new hospital and purchase of land it can be stated that in the board of governors and medical staff there has been subscribed between $3,000 and $4,000. This is highly commendable when it is considered that these members have always been liberal contributors to the hospital and have freely given their services. This should prove an impetus to many to come forward and contribute toward the proj ct, which is well worth the attention and interest of everyone in the city.

Missionary League Convention.

The eighth annual convention of the Christian Endeavor Missionary League of the Reformed (Dutch) church will be held in New Brunswick May 2 1 and 3d. Rev. A. De W. Mason, president of the league, promises the attendance of a number of prominent missionaries of the church. A partial list of the other speakers includes Rev. Dr. D. Sage Mackay, of New York; Rev. Dr. James M. Farer, of Brooklyn, and Rev. W. W. Clark and Rev. Dr. Charles H. Pool, of the Board of Domestic Missions.

Summit Prohibitionists Nominate.

The Summit Prohibitionists are the first to enter the field with candidates for the municipal offices to be filled at the election on April 10. The Commissioners of Appeals nominated were: Charles L. G. Reeve, Marcellus C. Halsey and William B. Cain; for member of Council from the Second ward, Charles B. Grant was nominated, and in the First ward, Frank Wright.

RIGHTS OF CATHOLICS.

BISHOP M'FAUL SAYS THEY SHOULD BE BETTER RECOGNIZED.

Declares That They Should Have Representation in New Jersey According to Their Numbers.

Trenton, March 21.—In the course of a brief sermon at the Cathedral Right Rev. Bishop McFaul has called attention to the fact that the Catholics, considering their numbers, were receiving very little recognition in the affairs of State. The bishop explained that he did not advocate increased representation on mere religious grounds, because nothing would be more adverse to his ideas than a Catholic party, or an Irish party, or a German party.

In referring to the remarkable increase in numbers and prosperity of the Catholic church in the State of New Jersey, Bishop McFaul said that the Catholic population was rapidly approaching half a million, or about one-third of the population of the State. He asked his hearers to consider whether such a large body was accorded that representation on the public boards of the State, which was proportionate to their numbers.

The bishop said that some of the other religious denominations had been slighted of late years that the Catholics had made any progress whatsoever in this direction, and, the bishop said, they were still far from the enjoyment of their full rights, and that representation to which their numbers entitled them.

This he attributed to the apathy of the Catholic laity, and he expressed the desire that there should be more activity manifested by Catholics in the advocating and maintaining of their rights under the Constitution of the State. He said that he did not desire to be understood as advocating anything like a Catholic party, but that he wished his people to act as American citizens entitled to certain rights under the Constitution, and fearless in using legitimate means to attain their exercise.

MISSION SOCIETY OFFICERS.

Annual Elections Held by Crescent Avenue Presbyterian and First Baptist Societies.

The annual meeting of the Women's Foreign Missionary Society of the Crescent Avenue church was held in the church parlors Tuesday afternoon Mrs. Wellington Smith, a missionary from China, made an interesting address telling something of their work among the women in the Celestial Empire.

The election of officers followed and resulted as follows: President, Mrs. Samuel Milliken; first vice-president, Mrs. Wilcon W. Smith; second vice-president, Mrs. Stuart Pattersen; third vice-president, Mrs. W. R. Richards; treasurer, Miss Margaret Tracy; secretary, Miss Scribner; secretary for literature, Mrs. I. N. Field.

The annual meeting of the Woman's Home Missionary Society of the First Baptist church was held Tuesday afternoon in the parlors of the church, at which time the election of officers resulted as follows: President, Mrs. D. J. Yerkes; first vice-president, Mrs. John D. Runyon; second vice-president, Mrs. Frank Biglow; third vice-president, Mrs. Reuben Knox; secretary, Mrs. Isabel Miles; treasurer, Mrs. George H Batchelor; work committee, Mrs. Dwelit C. Brokaw and Mrs. Harold Sctrell; secretary and treasurer incidental committee, Mrs. Frank Biglow.

The annual report of the treasures showed that about $500 had been collected during the year to be sent to the headquarters of the Woman's Home Missionary Society to be used for home missions. It was also reported that during the year two barrels of clothing and useful articles were sent to missionaries in the west, and one box of useful articles was sent to a missionary in the south.

TRIED TO PICK LOCK ON CELL AND GET OUT

But His Scheme Resulted in Making the Lock All the More Secure.

GABE BROWN THE PRISONER

POLICE HAD HARD WORK TO OPEN CELL YESTERDAY.

Broken Piece of Handle from a Pail Was the Device He Used—Participated in "Rough House" and Was Fined $5 by the Judge.

Gabriel Brown did not believe that Patrolman Vanderveer was justified in locking him up last Tuesday. So he felt it his duty to release himself as speedily as possible. He was working away at the lock with a broken piece from the iron handle to his pail when Sergeant Kiely interfered. It was the first attempt made to "break jail" for many years, but City Judge Runyon did not think it serious enough to impose any heavy punishment.

The trouble began in a saloon on West Third street, where some white friends of Brown's favored a little "rough house." Brown, who is a Negro, deserted Kiely by the door and drew a match-box with which he threatened to shoot his pursuers. Brown's language, according to the story of Patrolman Vanderveer, who arrived on the scene at that time, was strong and uncomplimentary. The policeman says Brown had a knife.

For his abusive language the officer locked Brown up after sundry struggles on the part of Brown who objected to going to jail. He was landed in the cell, however. When Sergeant Kiely examined the jail later in the evening, Brown was industriously trying to pick the lock. He had broken the iron handle of his pail into four pieces.

Although he didn't unlock the door, he succeeded in disturbing the mechanism of the lock and it was only after much trouble that the police were able to release him this morning. Brown admitted, when arraigned before City Judge Runyon yesterday, that he broke the handle to the pail, but couldn't remember why he did it or what happened after that.

After hearing the testimony, City Judge Runyon set the fine at $5.

Howard Doty, arrested last evening by Patrolman Watson for loitering in a hallway on East Front street and refusing to move on when ordered to, was also fined $5. Complaint was made to the police that a gang of young men were making themselves objectionable in the hallway where they congregate nightly. Doty claimed that he had not been there regularly and had moved as soon as the officer spoke.

YOUNG MAN SUICIDES.

Nicholas Williams Swallows Carbolic Acid in Presence of Several Companions.

Somerville, March 21. — Nicholas Williams, a well-known young man of this place, committed suicide in the office of Taylor's livery stable, in Railroad avenue, last night.

Williams was playing with snowballs with the liveryman's children early in the evening, but at 7:30 o'clock he entered the office of the stable and, displaying a two ounce vial of carbolic acid to several young men, announced his intention of taking it. It was believed he was joking, but before he could be prevented he swallowed the acid and then walked across the street. When he felt the effect of the poison he turned quickly and walked back to the stable, where he fell in front of the door and died in a few minutes. His wife knows no reason why he should have committed suicide.

Three Acres Piers Land for $2,500

Philipsburg, March 21.—The Edison Portland Cement Company, which has begun building a $1,000,000 plant at Stewartville, paid $2,500 for a strip of about three acres. The owner, John W. Cline, had caused the abandonment of the preliminary work on the plant two weeks ago by refusing all offers for that part of his farm. The company had to have the land for a railway to its quarries.

Board of Trustees Old Walks.

A matter that should engage the attention of the Mayor and Borough Council is that of having sidewalks laid on Mountain and Watchung avenues in the vicinity of the Watchung School. The condition of walks there is very bad for the teachers and scholars to go back and forth.

John Rowland, of East Second street, is suffering with an attack of the grip.

IT IS NOT SETTLED YET.

THE GRIEVANCE COMMITTEE OF RAILWAY MEN DELAYS.

Troubles on the Jersey Central to Be Discussed Tomorrow With President Maxwell.

Mauch Chunk, Pa., March 21.—The difficulties between the Central Railroad and its members will be brought to the attention of President Maxwell tomorrow at the office of the company in New York.

A representative from each of the five Brotherhoods, from every lodge between Jersey City and Scranton, will attend the conference with the general grievance committee. The original date set for the conference was today, but this was changed at Maxwell's request.

Jersey City, March 21.—It is stated here that it is almost certain that President Maxwell will refuse to consider the grievances of the men when presented to him by the grievance committee representing the Brotherhoods. Individually he is said to be ready to meet the men, but it is rumored that he will not take up the grievances in the form and manner it is proposed to present them.

The men say there will be no immediate strike even if Mr. Maxwell refuses to treat Even if the general grievance committee should fail to bring about a settlement, the chief officers of the Brotherhoods will have to be called in to try and bring about a peaceful settlement. This would be a work of weeks at most.

PORTO RICO SCHOOLS.

Dr. Carroll Made a Few Extemporaneous Remarks About Them at Rec. ough Meeting.

While the annual school meeting was being held last Tuesday in the borough and the citizens were waiting for the time to arrive to close the polls, President McCutchen, of the Board of Education, requested Dr. Carroll, the chairman of the meeting, to give a brief talk concerning the schools of Porto Rico and education in the islands. The Commissioner responded and gave a very interesting talk. He said that the schools of Porto Rico under the Spanish rule were free only in name. There are no school houses, or even one well-appointed building for holding school. It will be one of the first duties of this Government to inaugurate a school system and provide necessary buildings.

He said that the boys and girls are taught in separate places, the former by men teachers and the latter by women teachers. Dr. Carroll said that he questioned the scholars concerning their acquirements, and they answered readily. When he asked them about their own place of habitation they could tell him nothing.

Dr. Carroll stated that there is about 25 per cent of the inhabitants of the island that can read or write, and 16 was in 1867 that the first school for girls was organized. In conclusion the speaker related the incident in connection with the presentation of flags by the scholars of the Franklin and Bryant Schools, this city, to the American school at Ponce.

ITALIAN FUNERAL.

Band and Mourners Escorted Remains of Lorenzo Ciochitto to Cemetery Yesterday Morning.

A brass band and fifty mourners marched before the hearse that bore the remains of Lorenzo Ciochitto to their final resting place at St. Mary's cemetery yesterday. The funeral service was held at St. Joseph's church. Ciochitto was the Italian who died at the Muhlenberg Hospital Sunday night from hydrophobia. He was a member of an Italian society in New York, which took charge of the funeral services.

Rev. Father Miller conducted the services at the church. A delegation from the Italian society, accompanied by an Italian band, came but from New York and marched to the church.

They turned about and went to the cemetery, the band playing the dead march. A short service was held at the grave in St. Mary's cemetery.

Sprained His Ankle.

While alighting from one of the Jersey Central trains at the North Avenue station Monday evening Charles W. McCutchen, of Rockview avenue, tripped and fell, spraining his ankle. The injury was not a serious one, however, and will only confine him to the house for a few days.

Thumb Crushed.

Lawrence Gervey, of West Third street, caught his hand in the cog wheel attached to the electric crane at the Ford Machine Tool Works Tuesday afternoon. The thumb was badly crushed. It was dressed at the hospital.

ELECTIONS CONTESTED

ONE MAY TURN CRANFORD OVER TO REPUBLICANS.

Another Recount at Westfield, Where One Man Received Only Majority.

Application by petition has been made before Supreme Court Judge Van Syckle at Trenton, for an order for a recount of the votes cast at the annual township election in Cranford, Tuesday, March 13. Judge Van Syckle granted an order on the ground that thirty marked ballots were used by the Citizens' or Fusion party, as stated in the petition.

The recount will be made by the Union County Board of Election at the Court House in Elizabeth, Monday, March 26, at 10 a. m. The County Board of Election is composed of P. J. Ryan, of Elizabeth; John L. Crowell, of Rahway; William C Burr and John W. Murray, Jr. The returns of the Cranford election showed that 537 votes were cast, of which the Citizens' ticket received 271 and the Republican ticket 253.

When the recount is made, should the thirty ballots in question be thrown out, it will place the Township Committee in the hands of the Republicans, who on election day elected only one of three Township Committeemen.

The order for the recount has created consternation in the camp of the Citizens' party who fear that arrests may follow.

Judge VanSyckle has also granted an order in the matter of the application of Henry C. Sergeant, of Westfield, for a recount of the votes cast at that place on election day. Henry Sergeant was the Democratic candidate for member of the Township Committee for two years, and was declared defeated, Martin Welles, the Republican candidate, having received one more vote than Sergeant. In two districts Sergeant received 256, Welles 257.

BIRDS OF PLAINFIELD.

Interesting and Instructive Lecture Given by Miss Haviland Tuesday Afternoon.

Miss Caroline Haviland, a member of the Audubon Society, read a paper Tuesday afternoon at All Souls' church before the Plainfield Branch Alliance Francaise and Other Liberal Christian Women. Miss Haviland had a number of specimens of birds to illustrate her talk. In her paper she told most entertainingly of the characteristics, habits, colors, marking and migrations of the birds. Her paper also treated of the various kinds of sparrows, blue birds, robins, finches, thrushes, etc. The migrations of the birds, she said, were made generally at night and the flight of the bird was from one to three miles from the surface of the earth. The sparrows, blue birds and robin were the first to make their appearance in this section in the spring, followed later by the finches, thrushes and the song birds.

Miss Haviland read her subject in a clear distinct voice, and to students of the birds and members of the Audubon Society it proved both entertaining and instructive.

THACKERY EVENING.

Second of the Series Held in All Souls' Church Tuesday.

All Souls' church was comfortably filled last Tuesday by those of a literary taste who were interested in the works of Thackery. This was the second of the five evenings devoted to the study of this celebrated author's works. Last evening Edgar Burr Smith read for the edification of the audience a review of one of Thackery's best productions—"Pendennis." It was a description of his fortunes, misfortunes, friends and greatest enemies. Mr. Smith read the synopsis of the story in good voice and he was well received. After the reading the paper was discussed.

Uniform Rules for Grain Dealings.

A special committee has been appointed by President Barrows of the Produce Exchange to consult with the grain committee of the Exchange with a view to formulating a uniform rule for grain transactions. It is understood that the committee will favor the establishment of a special rate for trade between exchanges. A meeting of the grain trade of the Exchange will soon be held to act upon the committee's report.

Church Covers a Debt.

The Second Reformed church congregation of Somerville has wiped out its church debt by raising $5,000. The church building, costing $30,000, is now clear of all encumbrance.

THE SCHOOL BILL PASSES.

SENATOR CARTER SUCCEEDS IN HAVING IMPORTANT AMENDMENT MADE.

Cities May Have Appointive Boards if They So Elect—Cash for a New Chamber for the Senate.

Trenton, March 21.—Both branches of the Legislature pegged away at business yesterday and disposed of a large batch of bills of more or less importance. With only three days more of the session in sight there is need for hustle and the statesmen are doing it. The Senate had another long discussion on the bill to modify the school laws. Mr. Carter wanted it amended so that it would provide for the appointment of school boards, except in those cities where a board is selected by popular vote. Such an amendment was finally passed and the bill now goes over to the House.

The joint committee on appropriations has decided to recommend an appropriation of $280,000 for a new Senate Chamber and an addition to the State House, and an appropriation of $80,000 for a new addition to the State Normal School at Trenton.

The Senate passed the following Senate bills: Providing for a deputy chief of the labor bureau and the abolition of the office of secretary; requiring the bodies of persons who died of contagious disease to be hermetically sealed before removal from the State; permitting municipalities to fix a discount rate for prompt payment of taxes. Also the following House bills: Providing for a public library commission and making an appropriation of $100 toward each municipality that may appropriate a similar amount; extending the soldiers' tenure of office act to county positions.

The House passed the following: Senate bill providing for a State Sewerage Commission with power to divide the State into sewerage districts and to make plans for the disposal of sewage from the municipalities within those districts; House bill permitting cumulative voting for directors of corporations; permitting Sheriffs in counties under 125,000 population to have the custody of and provide the food for prisoners; giving local Boards of Health the power to provide for the licensing of plumbers; prohibiting the killing of birds and animals while snow is on the ground; providing for a fine of $200 for the adulteration of coffee and other foods; permitting cities to establish a fund for the pensioning of firemen; Senate bill authorizing the creation by Boards of Freeholders of County Boards of equalization; providing for a Commission to investigate and report to the Supreme Court the best method of examining law students; authorizing Cape May to spend $5,000 a year for music.

TURNED STATE'S EVIDENCE.

Young Steer Tells All He Knows About Robbery of Farmer Lane's Smokehouse.

Somerville, March 21.—Young Slaser, who was implicated in the robbery of Abram Lane's smokehouse, at North Branch Station, has turned State's evidence. Slaser is a son of the landlord of the Raritan Hotel, and the stolen goods were found secreted under the bay in Slaser's barn. Gat Wyman and John Tury, who are in jail for being implicated in the robbery, are furious at Slaser and say they will turn State's evidence and implicate him in other crimes. The public are anxiously awaiting the arraignment of Wyman and Tury, as they expect some startling revelations to be made, and some mysterious crimes may be cleared up.

Recount of Cranford Votes.

Cranford, March 21.—Justice VanSyckle of the Supreme Court recently granted an order requiring a recount of the ballots cast at the recent town election here. It was asked for by the Republicans, who alleged that about thirty marked ballots which should have been thrown out were counted for the Citizens' ticket.

ACCESSORIES.

Pretty Additions to the Costume of the Moment.

The fashion of wearing ornaments in the hair in the evening is establishing itself firmly. These ornaments are not merely combs or fancy pins, but signets of tulle, flowers and feathers, bows of ribbon, big butterflies and Mercury wings of lace and spangles.

The little headdresses intended for theater wear are too small to be called bonnets and are, in fact, scarcely more than hair ornaments. One, for example, is a twist of pink velvet forming a little circle, with three pink marabout in front, the rib being defined by a line of crystals. Another consists of three mauve marabout curling from a chou of tulle of the same shade.

The newest veils have chenille dots of unequal size and are very odd in appearance.

Bows formed of many ruffles of black or white mousseline de soie are much worn with theater and visiting costumes, but not for walking in the street.

Today's illustration shows a bodice of satin cloth. It is tight and has short coattails at the back, while in front it opens over a vest of plaited silk. The fronts are trimmed with diagonal bands of black velvet, terminating in a loop, with a crystal button, and the chou sleeves are also encircled by velvet bands. The wide peleriue collar and the high, flaring collar are of guipure, the latter being trimmed with velvet bands.

FUTURE FASHIONS.

Hints of Styles For the Approaching Season.

Fur, being very fashionable, is to be worn as late into the spring as possible, on the question of packing it away for the summer will be long deferred. Instead fur capes and boas will be used at the seaside and mountain resorts for chilly days and evenings. During the spring they are to be worn with street costumes without other wraps.

The styles of spring coats are those for walking. The new models are chiefly of cloth or woolen fabrics and are much adorned with incrustations and embroidery. For more delicate costumes real galloons of mousseline de soie continue to be in great favor as a decoration.

The prettiest style of gown, much employed this season, is the seasonably cool and pretty one to figure largely among summer fashions when the material chosen is heavy enough to sanction it.

A picture is given of a spring street costume. The skirt of black satin is laid in deep plaits, except in front, the plaits being stitched as far down as the knee. Below that they are free, forming a flounce. The bodice, which is of bright plaid silk, is fitted at the back and stretched in front and has a wide collar and peleriue bordered with narrow mixed silk fringe. The revers terminate in cordelières. The very narrow belt is covered with jet nail heads, and a white tulle ruche is worn. The toque of cherry jeanne is decorated with a gold and jewel-ed barrenbow and two brown and white quills.

FASHION'S FANCIES.

Styles For Bodices of Thick or Thin Materials.

Light and voporous bodices are still much worn for demitoilet and are draped in a fashion which defines the lines of the figure instead of concealing them. For tailor made costumes the plain bodice, tightly fitting in front as well as at the back, are beginning to take the lead. They are not worn with a belt, but instead are slightly elongated in a point before and behind, which has the effect of rendering the waist more slender in appearance.

The decolletage for young girls is only moderate, usually square or round, and does not leave the shoulders and top of the arm uncovered. For older women, however, the decolletage, round or pointed, falls off the shoulder, allowing it to show. Many gowns having a decidedly low cut have yet long sleeves, these being of transparent material, such as tulle, lace or mousseline de soie, shirred or plaited. In order to keep these sleeves in shape, they should have a plain lining, but this is of white or pale pink gauze and does not show.

The cut depicts an evening corsage of white crepe de chine draped over a white silk lining. The pointed decolletage is framed in a torsade of white mousseline de soie twisted with a cord of pearls. Crossed bands of mousseline pass down the front, with pearl motifs. The drapery of the bodice is plaited diagonally at the top. The sleeves are also plaited in diagonal groups of plaits and have a line of pearls around the edge of the wrist.

EVENING COSTUMES.

Rich Materials and Colors of Great Preference.

For evening costumes there are beautiful satins and thick, plain silks, which are to be trimmed with open white embroidered mousseline and flounces of embroidered mousseline de soie. These are no longer new, but in addition there are shown brocades and broche silks in which flowers of natural size are thrown upon grounds enriched by designs of lace, flights of birds, stars, ribbon knots, etc.

Pale tones are pre-eminent, even for middle aged women unless they are of so full a figure that white and light colors give them a clumsy appearance. Straw, cream, light blue, mauve, rose, pale green and particularly pale gray are worn, very few darker shades being seen for evening.

Rich silks are made very tightly and plainly, but if they have to design they are elaborately trimmed. On the other hand, brocade and other silks with large figures are made with scarcely any decoration, the design itself being sufficient.

An illustration is given of a bodice of satin cloth. The back and sides are covered with the diagonal breadths of the gown, being braided horizontally and trimmed with two rows of metal buttons. Plaited frontlets of silk reach from the belt to the shoulders. The facing collar is trimmed with braiding, as are the tops of the tight sleeves, the wrists of which have plaited cuffs of silk matching the bodice. The belt is of grosgrain, with a large, oval oxidized buckle.

Romance and Fashions on the American Riviera

The South Eastern States Are Profiting from the Reign of Patriotism Among the Fashionables

QUEEN FASHION reigns supreme in this historic old town of St. Augustine, where are gathered together those of the fashionable set from many cities who wished to escape the rigors of the Lenten season at home, and who did not wish for a season abroad.

And, indeed, why should any American woman wish for a season abroad if it is climatic conditions she is looking for. Along the Florida coast the summer breezes are blowing, and along the beach and in the spacious hotels the finest creations of the summer novelties are displayed. That is to say, the novelties that are being displayed at the fashionable wintering places of the south to-day will prove but the forerunners of the brilliant novelties of an unusually brilliant season at the northern resorts when their day comes.

All the way from Charleston south to Havana one finds these summer breezes, these fashionable folks and these summer gowns. That territory represents to the Americans what the Rivera of France represents to Europe; it is the American Rivera. Each winter season sees a larger gathering of the fashionables in these parts, each season sets additional from new parts of the nation. The really swellest have almost discarded the annual pilgrimage to Europe for the winter season; patriotism is becoming a hobby with them and the people of the south are profiting by this hobby. Long live the hobby.

Aside from St. Augustine, Jacksonville and Savannah are favorite stopping places, and at both the hotels are crowded to the limit. And who could ask for a more beautiful place in which to spend the winter season than the beautiful city of Savannah. People have told me that they went to Nice for the romance connected with that historic French town, but why the necessity? As I wandered through the beautiful streets of Savannah a few days ago and viewed the old southern homes with their vine-covered verandas, their tree-bordered walks, the ample proportions of the old mansions themselves, and met and talked with the kindly southern women whose chief attraction lies not in their fashionable attire, but their sweet simplicity and charming southern manner, I realized as I never did before the charm of our own south and the attractions it offers for the American people as a winter resort.

At Jacksonville, at St. Augustine, at the smaller cities and towns further south, one finds the same conditions, the same charm, and the growing popularity of the American Rivera is richly deserved.

This growth of patriotism on the part of American women, which has given to the south that which it rightly deserves, is destined to prove a blessing to Porto Rico and probably Cuba. I overheard a conversation between two charmingly gowned young women in Jacksonville the other day which goes to prove the truth of this statement.

"We would have gone to Ponce this winter," said one, "but papa had been there and said that he could not find suitable accommodations for us. We were so terribly disappointed that he has promised to build a house in Porto Rico for a winter home for mamma and myself."

"That would be simply delightful," said the other. "I was in Ponce last fall, and it is the most charming place I was ever in. So unique, and so romantic, you know. If only a number of nice people would go there for the winter it would be simply delightful, and I have heard of a number of people who intend going there in future."

That would, but it was enough. These same charming daughters of wealthy papas can make or unmake any place which their fancy dictates, and so it is that Porto Rico will come in for a share of the benefits of the prevalent American patriotism.

But I have not written a word of fashions in all this rambling letter, and the south this winter presents so much of fashions to write about. One sees so many beautiful things that are a help in the full understanding of what is to come when the March winds and the April showers of the north have given place to the sunshine of May and June.

One of the things that my visit here has taught me is to watch for a great display of tucks, plaits and ruffles in the summer gowns of silks, grenadines, mousselines, crepe de chine, gauzes, cambrics, linen, organdies and lace.

In skirts one will see garments that are much fuller than for several seasons, but costumes will not depart far from the clinging tendencies, and the ideal lines of nature are not to be absolutely hidden, but the gown sufficiently tight to give a graceful movement, the extra fullness being at the knees and below.

There are some new ideas illustrated here in the false box plaits in which the plait is laid on. There is also a great tendency noticed towards drapery, and will be seen in softer material, as skirts are nearly all gathered up slightly at a point back of the hips, this giving way to the bustle, as women of to-day insist upon free, graceful and easy movements.

At some of the society functions, all of them of an informal nature, that I have witnessed during the few days that I have been here, I have seen some of the most beautiful of gowns for all sorts of occasions. Space will not permit of a description of them, but I send along three sketches of charming examples of the dressmaker's art which will illustrate the tendency of the styles as illustrated at these southern resorts.

CLOTH GOWNS.

Cloth Still Preeminent Among Fashionable Fabrics.

Cloth costumes continue to be first favorites. Those of delicate tints are worn on ceremonious occasions, when formerly satins and brocades only were considered suitable. Many costumes for evening are of white cloth goat fitted with lining, plaid or moire, with elaborate applications of passementerie and lace.

For the street the cloth tailor made gown still holds its own. The skirt is plain and clinging, the bodice fitted, with a short basque, the chief originality being in the cut of the revers and the method of trimming.

Tight lacing has been steadily retiring from fashion for some years, the use of the bicycle and the growing favor in which athletic games are held by women assisting in its rapid disappearance. The figure now commended by the mode retains its natural proportions and implicitness, but is kept trim and neat by a well fitting corset suited to its contours.

The cut shows a girl's costume of navy blue wool goods trimmed with galloons of navy blue silk mixed with metal. The flat, scant skirt has several lines of the braid and is mounted on the tight fitting bodice, which is trimmed with lengthwise bands of galloon and others arranged to simulate a yoke. The small guimpe and the collar are of guipure. The sleeves are tight. The hat of gray felt is trimmed with choux of navy blue taffeta and a quill.

THE COIFFURE.

Ornaments For the Hair and Different Styles of Dressing It.

Little Mercer wings of jet are worn as hair ornaments with evening dress.

Fair hair is always prettiest when it is dressed in a fluffy way, which allows the light to show through it. Dark hair, on the contrary, should be arranged so as to show its gloss, in large masses, full of reflections.

Never was fashion so eclectic as at present. Any style which is becoming is permissible, and originality is to be desired so long as it is not ugly. The arrangement of the hair has a more marked effect upon the aspect of the face than has anything else, and every woman should find out what particular method best suits her features and then adhere exclusively to that style. It is difficult to give general rules to fit every case, but it is safe to say that any very flat, tightly drawn way of dressing the hair is becoming and that women with a low forehead should always leave it uncovered, drawing the hair back from it. A high forehead, on the contrary, looks better if softened by light locks falling over it.

The picture gives today shows a long redingote of beige cloth. It is tight fitting, and the seams are covered with galloon. It opens to show about a foot of the hem, where the stripes of the braid seam forms a loose plait. The tight sleeves are ornamented with stitched straps running lengthwise. The coat collar, revers and double peleriue are of red cloth, bordered with lines of stitching, and a tiny facing of red cloth extends down the front of the bodice to the tassel with olives and loops. The hat of red straw is trimmed with flowers.

FASHION HINTS.

The Present Mode Favorable to Plump Women.

It has been said that straps are much in vogue, bare hands covered with jewels being seen not even the most elaborate functions. Circumstances alter cases, however, and women with short, plump fingers will do better to avoid overloading them with rings. Women inclined to be fat would also be wise if they would avoid the collar necklace composed of rows of tiny beads, linked tablets or medallions, as such close ornaments make the neck appear shorter.

The fashionable figure of the period is one favorable to stout women. The low bust and loose bodice are replaced by the rigid Louis Quinze form, tight and straight, with a high bust and a deep point at the waist. Flashing usually favors the slight, but the present time shows an exception to that rule, slender women appearing to less advantage than plump ones in the ultra medisli bodice. The wise woman will adhere to the form which suits her best, regardless of the exact mode.

The costume illustrated is of light periwinkle blue bengaline. The skirt is trimmed with ten almost flat ruffles and forms a single flat plait at the back. The back of the bodice is tight, but in front it is cut in three bands, which are draped across a plastron of guipure de venise and fastened by rosettes of satin and jeweled buttons. The large guipure collar is a continuation of the plastron. The sleeves, of elbow length, are horizontally plaited and are finished with a frill of lace and a satin chou with a jeweled button.

WARM WRAPS.

Outside Garments to Accompany Calling Costumes.

Capes and similar loose wraps are better for accompanying a calling costume than are jackets, as it is always desirable to enter the house in the wrap worn as an outside garment, which conceals the gown. A wrap is easily slipped off and left in the hall, or at least it may be allowed to drop away from the figure.

A chamois skin corset cover is a most convenient thing to have in cold weather, as it gives a great deal of warmth, while adding very little to the bulk of the figure. It is best cut in the bolero form, coming above the waist as a basque is a quite unnecessary adjunct. The arm holes and the neck should be large. A lining is not desirable, as it makes the gown much thicker and does not add greatly to its warmth. These vests may be washed in warm suapsuds as easily as a handkerchief. They will be still and hang when first dried, but a little rubbing and puffing will make them quite soft again and bring them into shape.

A picture is given of a gown of sapphire blue cloth. At the left side is a pointed panel of sapphire velvet striped with white, decorated with black and white garnitures. The tight bodice is slightly draped across the front and fastens at the left side under a bow of fringed blue velvet and an ornament. The revers and the cuffs of the sleeves also match the skirt panel, and the high toque is bordered with black and white galloon. The toque of blue velvet has a bow of the velvet with fringed ends and a cluster of black ostrich feathers.

PREVAILING MODES.

Plaited Gowns Are the Principal Novelty Shown.

Plaited skirts, bodices, sleeves, vests and boleros, with bodices draped above the bosom, and a revival of some empire effects are the novelties in the wardrobes of the present and the immediate future. The skirts are very limp about the feet, where the outside is usually separate from the lining, and is simply faced with silk. The lining skirt is slightly stiffened around the foot with very light crinoline or haircloth, the bands of stiffening being cut in curves to fit the curve of the edge and applied flat.

Sleeves are very tight up to the top of the arm. There they expand somewhat to allow of being properly adjusted to the armhole, and any extra fullness is taken up by short darts, which are pressed flat. The top is reinforced by stiffen-ing, which is included in the darts. The bottom of the sleeve extends beyond the wrist, whether it is cut in points, rounded, fluted or simply left plain and straight. It is better to stiffen this part of the sleeve, also, in order to keep it from wrinkling.

Collars are very high, and the height increases toward the nape to the back of the head. They are well stiffened and shaped to the neck, flaring a little at the top, to allow freedom of movement for the head.

The cut depicts a bodice of black satin, having a wide plait at the middle of the back and gathered at the waist in front. The short basque is cut in deep scollops, and the tight sleeves form points at the wrists. The front is heavily embroidered in jet, and revers, in colored silks, and the upper part of the sleeves is similarly adorned. The collar is fastened by a choe of white mousseline de soie. The silk belt has a crystal buckle.

EVENING GOWNS.

Prevailing Mode For Full Evening Costume.

Whatever may be the style of the skirt of an evening or ball gown, it now invariably has a train, not necessarily long, but still a decided train. Nothing can be more graceful than these clinging skirts, expanding into soft, trailing folds around the feet.

A great deal of crepe de chine is used, with fringes, embroideries, velvet, feather, and ribbon trimmings, the ribbon usually flowers which are very delicately and beautifully made. A flower trimming must, however, always be fresh; otherwise it is a disfigurement, and it is necessary to be frequently renewed, and is, therefore, an expensive sort of decoration.

Ball gowns are enriched with many elaborate ornaments. Boleros, plastrons, cuirasses and tablets of skirts are covered with embroidery, spangles and jeweled effects which are magnificent under artificial illumination. Sometimes silks, metals and jewels are all combined. A bodice of white satin is thus adorned, the skirt being plain.

As illustration is given of a princess dinner gown of black velvet. Rows of sparkling jet trimming appear above a little above the foot, and a decoration of spangled embroidery gives a coat effect to the upper part of the gown. There are no sleeves, and the decolletage is round. A display of pink mousseline de soie surrounds it, fastened at the left side by a choe of the same material, the fringed ends being enlivened by long loops.

Places of Refuge in Chicago

A Comparison of the Mission House, the Saloon and the Prison

The days of the winter season are nearly over. Soon the spring sunshine will drive the snows and frosts of Old Boreas from the land. The winter in Chicago has not been a hard one as winters go, but yet there has been more suffering and want than humanity cares to contemplate.

The Wanderers of the Streets.

As I write these lines the north wind is piling the snow into every nook and corner of the great city, and driving the wanderers of the streets, the outcasts and homeless, into the police stations, the saloons, the mission houses, in fact into any place that affords a shelter for the moment from the raging blizzard.

It is remarkable the way in which this class of humanity manages to exist through the winter season; the methods they employ for holding body and soul together while they wait and watch for the first signs of the coming spring.

For the class who will work, when work may be had, the winter just closing has not been a hard one. They have been able to find odd jobs that brought them each day the few cents needed for the necessities of life as they understand life. As a result the cheap lodging houses have done a better business than for several years past, for it is seldom that a man will ask shelter at the police station if he has the price to buy a bed at a lodging house, no matter how poor the house may be.

But there is a large class who never work, habitual bums and beggars, who remain in Chicago during the winter simply because the city offers them a large field in which to beg for an existence, and many of that class sleep and breakfast at the police stations every day. To those in the saloon and the mission houses are an undisguised blessing in that they offer a stopping place during the day, and until the police stations open for them at midnight.

The Mission Houses.

But while the saloons must be classed among the places of refuge for outcasts in every large city there is a difference in the hospitality they offer to that of the mission houses.

A Welcome Extended to All.

In the mission houses of every one is welcome, and the hand of fellowship extended to all be he the b l a c k - l e g d r u n k a r d or the friendless laborer out of employment. Both the Salvation Army and the Volunteers maintain many of these mission houses scattered over all of the poorer portions of the city, and officers of the organizations stand on the street corners to invite and direct the outcasts to their places of warmth and good cheer, an invitation that is eagerly accepted.

Inside these sheltering doors there is light and heat and cheer for all with no questions asked. There is not one in a dozen among these audiences who come for other than the refuge the place offers from the biting storm, and yet many are caught in the meshes of the hopes held out of a better life by the mission workers. Men enter from out of whose lives both honor and self-respect" have all gone; with nothing but the morbid passions of the animal left, and before they leave the spirit of hope has entered their souls. It is a hope that is within their understanding, the hope of a better manhood of which even the worst may deem themselves capable. The step may be but a small one, but it is in the right direction, and while the second may never be taken the first has done some small amount of good.

Such is the refuge which the mission houses offer.

The Saloons.

And now what of the refuge offered by the saloons? There is the same light and heat, the same shelter from the driving storm, but to whom is it offered?

"Put Up the Price or Get Out."

That portion of the business section of Chicago south from Harrison street to Twelfth is given over to all manner of dens of iniquity in which the cheap saloon predominates, and in these the homeless by thousands may find a momentary refuge, but it is only momentary, for the sharp-eyed attendants easily pick out the moneyless loafer seeking only for shelter, and out he must go again.

Cheap orchestras offer questionable music as an attraction for the street wanderer, and the majority enter more readily than they would the mission houses. But once inside it does not take long to discover the difference in the two places. The half-frozen, half-starved man, without money secures a position as near the red-hot stove as is possible; he draws in every degree of heat that his few moments' stay will enable him to get, but from the time he sets foot within the door an attendant has an eye on him. It takes but a few moments to determine whether he is going to "buy" or not, and if not his room is preferable to his company, and he is told so in rough words.

Perchance he has the price of one glass, but even that will buy him but a few moments of rest and warmth. It must be spent and spent quickly, and once it is gone the result is the same as though he had entered penniless, out he must go again.

"Move with us for awhile and rest," says the mission worker; "put up the price or out you go," says the bartender, and this illustrates the difference between two classes of refuge offered the street wanderers and outcasts in a great city.

The Police Stations.

Who can justly picture the horrors of a night in a Chicago police station when the wintry winds drive hundreds of outcasts there for protection. Not in the police stations as a criminal, not as a man who has sinned against society, but as a charity guest of a great city. Such a guest is to be pitied rather than condemned for any shortcomings.

The Charity of the Municipality.

The quarters of the criminals, the thieves, the highwaymen, the murderers, are as palaces compared to the ones assigned to the homeless outcasts who must ask charity of the municipality. There may be good reason for the lack of comforts for these unfortunates; it might be that to provide such comforts would but encourage vagrancy, but when one looks at the hard stone floor, reeking with filth, covered by the hundreds of homeless men, many as filthy as the floors on which they lie; when one notes the thin garments that are all that stand between a man and the cold winter; when one listens to the cursings and blasphemy that continue throughout the night, and when one compares all this with the more comfortable quarters of the criminals one sees a new reason for the reign of outlawry.

The sleeping accommodations for the homeless furnished by Chicago in her police stations may be no worse, but is certainly no better, than that furnished by any other large city. Few men will willingly sleep on the hard stone floor, the accumulated filth, on the cold nights of winter if they can get better accommodations, and what easier method is there of getting better than by committing some crime for which they will be sent to prison for a few days or a few months, until the winds of winter have ceased to blow, until nature offers greater inducements for a life out of doors.

The Bridewell.

It is conditions such as these that fill the city prison every winter. The "Black Maria" must needs make frequent trips to and from the police courts to accommodate the ever growing population of the Bridewell during the winter months. For the past four months new arrivals at the prison have numbered from 50 to 100, or even more a day. Familiar faces come and go throughout all the winter season; the man who in the early fall is sentenced for a few weeks finds it convenient to seek another sentence as soon as possible that will carry him through the winter. Any number of prisoners when their day of discharge arrives, and they see the snows of winter coming the signal to beg to be allowed to remain yet a little longer. The prison is their only home, and prison though it is it is preferable to the days in the streets, and the nights in the police station.

The "Black Maria" Makes Frequent Trips.

Worst of all, but of the many. The man who follows the life of the criminal much as the tradesman follows his trade, who steals as a chosen means of livelihood, waits anxiously for his day of release, but the man who steals as the means of securing a needed winter home does not.

There is in the Bridewell at the present time a man who was given a four months' sentence for burglary. He stole nothing, but he did break into a house, and once inside he awakened the inmates and begged of them that they call a police officer to arrest him, and explained his reasons for his actions. The officer came, the charge of house-breaking was preferred and the prisoner was sentenced to four months in the Bridewell. To-day the story of his imprisonment is known to the authorities, but the prisoner would not accept his freedom when it was offered. His sentence will expire in April, and by that time the world will again be a pleasant place for the outcasts and the homeless.

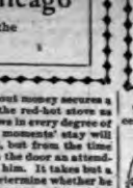
The Troubles of a Credit Man

His Berth in a Chicago Retail Store is Not a Bed of Roses

There is probably a smaller percentage of people in a town as large as Chicago who buy goods on credit than can be found in smaller places. But while this percentage may be smaller there are still thousands of people who run credit accounts at the stores in Chicago, and there are thousands more who would do so, so if the merchants would but give them the opportunity.



They Would Like a Charge Account.

It would be practically impossible to give anything like accurate figures of the retail credit business done in a year in Chicago. I asked the credit man of what is probably the largest store in the city that does a credit business if he could give me some idea what the retail credit business of Chicago would amount to in a year.

"I would not attempt to give an estimate," he replied. "I could of course tell you what our credit business amounts to each year, but that would prove nothing. It is certain, however, that the business that goes onto the books of the retail stores of Chicago that permit the running of credit accounts would run well into the millions.

"In our own case fully one-third of the business we do goes onto our books in the form of charges against our customers. There are, I imagine, other houses in the city who do a greater percentage of charged business than we do, but we are carrying all the accounts that have been made for that I consider it safe to carry. We could easily double our credit business in a year's time, but it is a question whether we could do so with safe accounts, at least a large number of safe accounts to prevent an increase in the percentage of loss, and it is that little matter of loss that the credit man must figure on if he is to prove of any value to his employer. Keep down the percentage of loss and profit will take care of itself."

Does Credit Pay?

There has always been a difference of opinion as to whether the merchant who sells for cash or only can and does sell goods cheaper than the merchant who does a credit business. I do not expect to prove anything by the following, but there can be no harm in quoting from the statements of both classes of credit man has to say on the subject of prices in connection with credit accounts. I asked him what the percentage of loss was on the amount of business done, and he replied that it was considerably less than one per cent. Then I asked him if even so small a percentage of loss as that would not have to be added on the prices charged for goods, and if not why it was that his concern, with the two items of loss from bad accounts and book keepers' salaries to account for, could afford to sell goods for the same price as the merchant without these two items to consider.

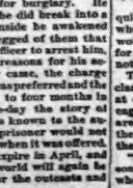
The "On Time" Article Costs Extra.

"These are days of the keenest kind of competition, when profits are cut to the very lowest point at which it is possible to do business at all," he said, "but you will find that, quality of goods considered, our prices are no higher than those of any strictly cash house in the city. The reason such a thing is possible is because of the larger volume of business that we do, which we would not do if it was not for our credit system.

"There is probably one-half of our 'charged' business that would go elsewhere were it not for the matter of accommodation which we extend in the matter of credit accounts.

Not a Bed of Roses.

The life of a credit man is a large department store is certainly an interesting one. If there is any man engaged in the mercantile business that must keep posted on all the latest tricks of the sharpers the credit man is the one. They must be able to read all classes of human nature at a glance, and would be censured as quickly for turning away a customer who deserved credit, and where credit would prove profitable, as they would for granting credit to anyone who did not pay their bills.



Spoils His Chances For Credit.

There are hundreds of these latter class who apply for credit privileges at every credit granting store in Chicago every month, and some of them are sharper than the credit man, and then another item is charged against the loss account.

"A credit man must be seemingly conscienceless," said the gentleman whom I have quoted before. "To the persons applying for credit as a matter of accommodation, and who intend to pay the bills they contract, it is seemingly an easy matter to secure an account with us, but occasionally I run across a case where nothing but nerve-cheek on the part of the applicant prevents our extending the credit they seek. This class of people act 'cheap-fish' when they apply for credit, as though they were asking for something which they did not deserve, and I often mistake these actions for criminal intentions, and so lose what might have proven a good customer.

"When a man asks for credit with seemingly good intentions I ask for references, and if employed, who he is employed by, or if in business the name of his firm. That is all, but before I grant his request he is fully investigated. If he is employed, the amount of his salary is ascertained from his employer; if he is in business his financial standing is secured from the commercial agencies, and if they are satisfactory he is informed that he has been placed on our credit books."

Good and Bad References.

"There are three different kinds of references that I place very little reliance in under certain conditions," continued the credit man. "One would naturally suppose that reference to a bank would be the very best that could be given, but I have been taken in so often by relying on such references that I have ceased to look upon them as reliable.

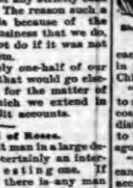
The Word Goes Not Count.

"It is very seldom that we get beat for a small amount by anyone giving a bank as reference when opening an account. Not so very long ago we were requested permission to open a credit account with us and gave one of the prominent banks as reference. When I investigated I found that she had a deposit there of more than $2,000, but that her account with the bank was only of a few days' standing. I notified her that she could have a credit of not over $300 provided that her account was paid the first of each month. She bought the full $300 worth in three times, but when the first of the month came around she was not to be found and her account with the bank had been withdrawn. That woman was conducting a profitable business on a capital of $2,000 which she had never expended, but utilized to secure credit at the stores. It was certainly a profitable business for her.'

"Another reference that I have learned not to place much reliance in is one from a politician. The third is that from a minister when presented by a woman. When a man comes in with a reference from his pastor it is a different matter, as his power of personality is not with the bank or a woman's with the ministerial profession, but a politician is too easily influenced by possible votes to make his name good as a reference."

One Item of Loss.

"When opening accounts with parties unknown to us it is customary to limit the amount of the credit extended to them. In fact, it is only the well known business men of the city who may have unlimited credit on our books. In the case of salaried employees we usually limit the amount of credit extended to them to the value of one week's salary in each month. That, I believe, is the rule in force in practically every store in Chicago.



Has Beat the Establishment.

"Of course, you know, there are exceptions to all rules, and one of these exceptions cost nearly every store in the business district of Chicago that extends credit to patrons a large sum a few weeks ago.

"About six months ago a woman came to me with a request for a credit account. She was gowned in the height of fashion, and was at the time wearing jewels that were in themselves a small fortune. She represented herself to be the wife of a well-to-do board of trade man, and said that her husband was worth at least $100,000. As she wished to make a few small purchases at the time I complied with her request at once, intending to look up the case later.

"Something or other prevented until the first of the month came around, and I found that her account was a little over $300. We sent a bill as she had directed, and almost by return mail we received a check for the full amount. That settled it, and that woman could have all the credit she wanted. The next month we got a check promptly for the amount of her account, and she has since been a customer for three months. In that time her account with us had grown to a little over $1,000, which we will never get. The woman has gone to Europe with her purchases, the husband, who was only one of the small fry on the board, has failed, and we, like the rest of the stores, are the victims of a misplaced confidence."

Growing Popularity of Curling

The Game Has a Well Established Place in American Sports

AMERICANS are doing their best to prove that curling is not a game to be exclusively indulged in by the Scotch. Boosters in the United States are now firmly established that if an expert Canadian wishes to show his prowess as a skip he must come to this country to get widespread recognition. Some critics of curling sports circulated the quips when the Northwestern Curling association announced Milwaukee as the place for the big bonspiel of the year, that "too many Germans there," said one. "The substitution of lager beer for Scotch whisky will not do in curling," said another. But they were writers who perhaps had never seen a curling rink. The ruddy-faced Teuton is as likely to become an expert curler as the athletic Scot. There is no reason why an Ona Indian from Terra del Fuego should not make as adept at the game. Englishmen, Irishmen and New Englanders play the ancient game, and there is every prospect of rich competition between Poles, Russians, Italians, French and others becoming proficient enough to appear in some future bonspiel.

Secretary J. C. Wall, of the Milwaukee curling club, on whose shoulders rests the weight of preparations for the last bonspiel of the Northwestern Curling association, never saw a curling stone until he was a grown man. Richard Pritchard, the Chicagoan who took highest honors in the point medal contest at the bonspiel, has been one of the veterans of the Chicago curling club for years, but in his native country, Wales, the only curling he knew anything about was the youthful sport of climbing a hill to set in motion an avalanche of bowlders, and to shout with his companions when the rocks went thundering into the valley. William Nelson, the second prize winner in the point contest—he had 39 points, to Pritchard's 39—is best known in the middle west as a third player. The memory of the oldest curler in the country does not extend back to the time when Nelson first began outwicking. It is said of him that the only inducement that could be offered that could get him to leave his business would be the proffer of a home in Labrador, where a good rink of ice could be had any day, so that he might send the curling "stane" down the central line. The skips from Portage, St. Paul, Winnipeg and other cities who pitted their rinks against one another at the bonspiel were of various nationalities. The Scotch did not predominate, yet when the curlers returned to their fields after an exciting time on the ice the American and the Caledonians and the Teuton rubbed elbows at the table when the toast was said:

"Doo till a bumper to the brim,
And here's wi' a' my heart to you:
May curlers on life's slippery rink
Frae cruel rubs be free, hoo."

In 1893 it was certain there were but 12 curling clubs in the United States, with a membership of 600. The same authority says that Scotland had 481 clubs then, with a total membership of 18,800; England, 33 clubs, with a membership of 1,000; Ireland, three clubs, with 64 members; Norway, one club and 15 members; Russia, one club and 26 members; New Zealand—think of that!—six clubs, with 120 members; Quebec province, ten clubs and 1,061 members; Ontario province, 99 clubs and 4,551 members; Manitoba, 18 clubs and 810 members; Nova Scotia, seven clubs and 287 members; Newfoundland, three clubs and 99 members, and New Brunswick, three clubs, with 153 members. To get the census of clubs and players for the year 1900 would mean a task that would involve much labor, and then the results would be very incomplete. The growth of interest has been manifold, the growth of membership has quadrupled. The time may come in America when the sights seen on the magnificent sheets of ice in the rink will be duplicated—sometimes 400 rinks are participating at once in a bonspiel, and as each rink has four players the noise of the shouting of 1,600 enthusiasts, to say nothing of the thousands of excited spectators, must be heard to be appreciated.

Skip J. E. Jones, of the Portage (Wisconsin) rink, took home the championship medal from the last bonspiel by the narrow margin of one point after the number of games by actual play in the aggregate of events. There is little about the name Jones to suggest that the skip was a canny Scot. He is a good native born Badger, and says the Americans may win the great prize for curling before even the veteran Scotchmen.

Joe Davis, than whom there is no more enthusiastic curler and cricketer, says that the most important factor in the curler's outfit is the granite stone with which he does his scoring. Strange to say, there has been no discovery of granite in the United States that will fill the bill for curlers, and all the stones are imported.

The granite must be highly polished—the heaviest stone is easily managed if it is keen and brilliant, while, without these properties, the lightest stone is dull, unmanageable and as obstinate as the proverbial mule. The stone must be keen when the ice is dull, and quick when the ice is brightest and fastest. The American granite looks well, polishes well, but will not stand the knocking about without chipping that the imported stone does.

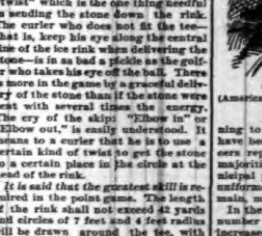
No one can deny that there is humor in the game of curling. The skip, or, as an American might say, the captain, of the rink often keeps up the courage of his men and assures victory by his jollity, his queer sayings, his limitations, in a short, pithy way of the old Scotch curlers, and, standing at the tee, he should be able to direct his men how to place the stones so that his side may be first to take it and last to hold it. A good skip will not censure his players if their style be awkward, providing they possess the necessary "twist" which is the one thing needful in sending the stone down the rink. The curler who does not fit the tee—that is, keep his eye along the central line of the ice rink while delivering the stone—is in as bad a plight as the golfer who takes his eye off the ball. There is more in the game by a graceful delivery of the stone than if the stone were sent with several times the energy. The cry of "Soop the line in" or "Elbow out," is easily understood. It means to a curler that he is to use a certain kind of twist to get the stone to a certain place in the circle at the head of the rink.



RICHARD PRITCHARD.

It is said that the greatest skill is required in the point game. The length of the rink shall not exceed 42 yards and circles of 7 feet and 4 feet radius will be drawn around the tee, with the centre line plainly marked through the center of the four foot circle and down the rink to the "hog score." The latter is the line which penalizes—no stone will count if it does not pass that point.

Shorn of technicalities, the aim of the curler, who is entitled to curl two stones, is to get the stones closer to the tee than his opponents. Every competitor can play four shots at each of the following periods of the game: Striking, inwicking, drawing, guarding, chap and lie, wick and curl in and raising and chipping the winner. Imagine a gigantic shuffleboard table out on the ice and the little disks that are used to slide up to the tee of the table and you will gain some sort of an idea of a curling rink where the curling stones are provided with handles bolted into the stone.

What part do brooms play in the game? Considerable. The skips superintend the sweeping which clears fancied and real obstructions from the sliding stone. Only when the stone has glided past the middle line can the sweepers begin to clear the way and they can sweep before the stone until it reaches the tee. This for the player's party. The adverse party can use brooms after the stone has passed the tee; obviously if there are brooms to make a gamester passage for the stone it will continue to roll until it does not count in the game. The sweeping must not be so that the stone is retarded or obstructed in its course, and if a stone be touched by a broom it is "dispunished."

PROGRESS IN CUBA.

Western Portion of the Island is Happy and Prosperous.

Information Furnished by Gen. Pitchaugh Lee, Governor of Havana and Pinar del Rio Provinces and Friend of the Cubans.

Writing to the Chicago Tribune of Cuba and its progress in industry and education, Gen. Pitchaugh Lee says, among other things:

When I assumed command of Havana after the evacuation of the Spanish on January 1, 1899, the deplorable condition of the island is well known. Business of all sort was suspended; agricultural operations had ceased. There was scarcely an ox left to pull a plow, had there been the plow left. Mules and mules of country, unshakable by the human race, and domestic animals, were visible to the eye on every side. The great fertile field of Cuba in some places resembled an ashpile and in others a dreary desert.

The rapid and brilliant victories of the American army and navy astonished the more intelligent class of people on the island, while the peaceful passage of large bodies of American soldiers under the guns of Morro castle into the harbor of Havana amazed the people of Cuba. The sight of the flag of the United States waving over the public buildings and being carried through the streets of Havana was a most interesting object lesson, and conveyed to the minds of the Cubans the strength of the American government and the great reserve power behind it.

Those who saw that picture would not know the one they would see today did they return. In the interval a wonderful progress has been made. The arms of the Cuban soldiers have been stacked and they have quietly returned to their vocations. Villages has everywhere increased. Many of the houses have been rebuilt, and more and more farming lands are beginning to be taken up. Municipalities have been reorganized, with new officers representing the wishes of the majorities of the inhabitants. Municipal police have been formed and uniformed under the charge of, in the main, most capable officers.

In the provinces of Havana alone the number of public schools has been increased by 14. This number is in reality far larger, for the work of establishing schoolhouses and securing teachers is necessarily slow. There are now in Havana 4,771 children attending school, an increase of more than 100 per cent since January 1, 1899. In all the island the number of schools constructed in the province was 434.

The province of Pinar del Rio is probably the richest in the island. A remarkable improvement has been placed there in the peaceful conditions of the people. The municipalities there are still largely in debt, but since American occupation they are becoming more and more self-supporting, and the indebtedness can also be discharged. The most remarkable feature of the resuscitation of Pinar del Rio lies in the fact that the province has never yet asked for rations, so largely supplied to other provinces. This is considered a remarkable evidence of industry and vitality.

Those Cubans who have reached a voting age are as capable of organizing a form of government to-day as they ever will be. If they construct a stable government of the people, to protect life and property and give confidence to capital, they should be entitled to control their own affairs. If not, the strong hand of the United States must be placed again on the helm.

Cost of the Spanish War.

Total expenditures of our government on account of the war with Spain were about $362,500,000, divided as follows: War department, $222,000,000; navy department, $69,000,000; paid to Spain for the Philippines, $20,000,000; interest on bonds, $20,000,000; pensions, $8,000,000; increased expenses in departmental service in Washington, $2,000,000.

Jews in the United States.

The American Jewish Year Book, just issued, gives the Jewish population of the country as 1,043,890. It is stated that of these there are 400,000 in New York, 92,000 in Illinois, 85,000 in Pennsylvania, 50,000 in Ohio, 40,000 in California, 25,000 in Maryland, and 25,000 in Missouri.

Dog Checks for Soldiers.

American soldiers in the Philippines are all wearing "dog checks." A "dog check" is a lead medal about the size of a dollar, with the volunteer's name, regiment and company stamped on it. It is hung on a leather string around the neck, and served to identify the dead or severely wounded.

A Notable Golden Wedding.

To have lived to the age of seventy-five years; to have been married a half century; to have been the pastor of one church for thirty-eight consecutive years, and to have, together with his estimable wife, been tendered a notable surprise on the occasion of the golden anniversary of their married life, is few of the good things of life which Rev. Dr. David J. Yerkes, pastor of the First Baptist church, has been blessed with.

The affair arranged in honor of the golden wedding celebration of the venerable pastor and his wife March 14th was an event of more than passing importance. It is aptly described as one of those things that "occur but once in a life time," and as such was made as auspicious as kind and generous friends could devise.

When the aged celebrants of the event were being showered with congratulations, overcome with honors and presented with a golden purse of $1,000, it was a proud and gracious moment in their lives. They well deserved all the reverence and homage paid to them. The greater part of the lives have been spent in earnest and active work in the Christian field in Plainfield, and through it all they have held the esteem and won the admiration of all who have come to know them — and their friends are legion.

To Scoffers.

To scoffers at the proposition that Plainfield ought to own and operate the water supply system of this city, as well as all other commodities distributed through the use of public privileges, the following editorial note from the Newark Sunday Call is recommended for careful perusal:

"The borough of Chatham, Morris county, put in a water plant two years ago, costing somewhat less than $45,000, providing for the supply of the whole district, with ample provision for larger future demands. Upon the basis of a private company, supposing the town to pay for fire-plugs, the plant would now return a profit, beyond interest, sinking fund and maintenance, and it will next year pay a surplus besides the fire protection. Now, upon any basis of calculation such as the private companies so numerous in this State would make, this plant would be capitalized upon a basis of the earnings of the future, sure to increase with the natural growth and with the gradually increasing use. It is perfectly safe to say—and this could be guaranteed if necessary—that the water plant would sell today for $150,000 to a private company, and it would be a first-rate speculation, too. Chatham, then, has provided itself with a necessary public supply, of the greatest importance indeed, and could show a profit easily of $100,000 on the deal. The lessons are obvious."

After reading the above the suggestion comes to our mind that it would be a good thing if the present Common Council would take up the question of the municipal ownership of the water supply system of this city. The project was considered to some extent by the Council of last year, but nothing ever came of the agitation. Let it be stirred up again.

The Two-Term Rule.

The principal reason advanced by Frank Bergen in justification of his candidacy for the Republican Congressional nomination in the Eighth district is that Representative Fowler has already held a seat for three terms, and that the honor should now be passed to some other Republican. The Newark News thinks that if this is the best reason for Mr. Bergen's aspirations, then the fulfilment of his ambition should be indefinitely postponed.

The News points out that the present delegation of New Jersey Congressmen wield greater influence and enjoy more prestige than any other set of representatives elected from this commonwealth in many years. This is because, according to the ideas of our Newark contemporary, the Representatives are nearly all men who have been in Washington for several terms, and by experience have "learned the ropes" in a manner that a new member could not expect to do until they had been through the same course.

The News sums up its arguments in this style:

"The State or the district that persists in the two-term rule can hardly hope to exert any perceptible influence in Congress or to stamp its impress upon the history of legislation. Its representatives scarcely have time to familiarize themselves with the course of business. They do not have time to make helpful acquaintances or to form the connections without which a member is practically helpless. A mediocre representative with ten years' experience is ordinarily worth more both to his constituents and to the Nation than a Webster in his first term."

Ponder Over This.

Thomas P. Fowler, a railroad man who was being examined by the New York State Railroad Commission to determine whether or not there was an unfair effort being made to restrain competition in the carrying of coal from the Pennsylvania mines to the seaboard cities, offered this remarkable piece of evidence:

The new road would, of course, reduce the price of a ton just as if you dumped potatoes on the market in a demand. Without the restrictive there would be coal on the market not needed, and stove coal would be a drug at $2 a ton. I suppose that would satisfy the individual operators.

Think of it! Coal a drug on the market at $2 per ton! And the gentleman supposes that it "would satisfy the individual operators." The complacent manner of the coal baron is interesting, instructive and amusing all at once. Whatever this man Fowler may think of the disposition of the "individual operators" we know several million consumers, more or less, who would be highly and perfectly satisfied with coal a drug on the market at $2 per ton.

The Office Holders.

Those who follow State and local political affairs appreciate the fact that Union county Republicans are well-provided with offices in the State government, but just to what extent these perquisites of politics prevail very few are aware. The Newark Sunday Call yesterday published an instructive and interesting review from Trenton in which it is shown how many offices each county controls.

Union county produces many of the big office holders. The Governor and United States Senator John Kean hails from this county; so does the Chief Justice. Charles A. Goulding, the Deputy Supreme Court Clerk, gets $3000 a year for seeing that everything is proper in the office. He is chairman of the Republican county committee. Frederick Adams, one of the Judges of the Court of Errors and Appeals, gets about $1,000 a year for his work of hearing heavy legal arguments and deciding on their merits. James T. Morgan, secretary to the State Bureau of Statistics, $1,500, is a new man from Union.

Charles J. Baxter, the Superintendent of Public Instruction, lives in Plainfield, and gets $3,000 a year. Samuel B Moore, the keeper of the State Prison, gets $3,500 for looking after a big brown institution on the banks of the Delaware and Raritan canal. This was always considered a very choice plum by the Democratic leaders. Robert Stockton Green, son of the late Governor Green, also hails from this county. He holds down a $2,500 seat. He is a Democrat. Noah F. Morrison, of this county, is the Assistant Journal Clerk of the House. William B. Tucker, Deputy Factory Inspector, is accredited to this county.

Somerset county has been regarded as particularly backward in asking for public offices, either appointive or elective, but this little bailiwick makes a poor showing beside the aggregation from Union.

Somerset has the Clerk of Court of Chancery, Lewis A. Thompson, $4,000; E. J. Anderson, Supervisor of State Prison, $3,000; J. B. Betts, Deputy Superintendent of Public Instruction, Democrat, $2,500

Rev. Dr. Sheldon having finished his career in the sanctum editing a paper in his thinks a Christian should be will now have an opportunity to serve as a peacemaker on the spot where he wielded the pen and shears with such dulling effect last week. The owners and the editors of the Topeka Daily Capital are in a muss over the determination of one of the principal stockholders of the concern to continue the paper along the lines laid out by the reverend gentleman. The editor-in-chief is violently opposed to the deal and has vowed the edict that no such state of affairs shall be permitted to exist. The result is that the contention will probably be taken into the courts for settlement. Now let Rev. Dr. Sheldon step to the front and convince, by his religious reasoning, one or the other of the disputants that they are on the wrong side.

The Orange Journal, one of the most stalwart and influential Republican newspapers in the Eighth Congressional district, says nay to the proposition of Frank Bergen that he be chosen to succeed Mr. Fowler as the Republican candidate for Representative. The Journal says it is ages not any more whole hog for its purpose the retirement of Fowler.

It is not an untruth to say that the New York State Legislature is bi-hosed, and that Governor Roosevelt does not have much to say about it.

The Franchise Tax.

The most important measure of general interest brought before the Legislature at the present session is the proposition to impose a tax on franchises owned and operated by the great corporations who have never paid their just share of public burdens. The passage of this measure by the Assembly Monday will be recognized as a creditable act. The bill was drawn by Governor Voorhees and he has been much interested in it, and if it meets with success in the Senate the measure will undoubtedly be promptly signed by him.

Under the bill, should it become a law, the State will lose the money heretofore paid into the State Treasury as the tax on miscellaneous corporations. Last year this amounted to $119,003 Under the proposed new law some of these corporations will pay an increased tax. The amount paid to the State last year by some classes of corporations and the amount to be paid under the new franchise tax bill, if enacted, is compared below:

	Paid Last Year.	Proposed by Bill.
Trolley roads	$69,400	$180,400
Telephone and Telegraph companies	19,603	19,603
Gas and Electric companies	29,912	204,400
Pipe line companies	24,705	26,000
Total	$143,140	$270,503
Total paid Treasury	$119,003

This money will be collected by the State and paid over to the municipalities in proportion to the amount of property located in each. It is not known just how much the tax will yield, but it will exceed $325,000. The increase falls mainly on the trolley roads and the gas and electric light companies.

The New York Chamber of Commerce has unanimously adopted a resolution declaring its emphatic opinion "that every consideration of honor, justice and humanity demands that trade between the United States and the Island of Puerto Rico shall be unrestricted by any customs duties whatever." The Philadelphia Record adds that there is hardly a commercial organization in the land which does not approve this position, and that, moreover, it has been shown that the enforcement of Dingley tariff rates on Puerto Rican imports from other countries would provide all necessary revenue for ordinary expenditure. The repulsive proposition for a special tariff is, therefore, without excuse, except that the trusts demand that in their interest the pledged faith of the Nation shall be broken.

There is not today a prominent mercantile enterprise which has not been built up and maintained by judicious advertising, says the Philadelphia Record. This aid to commercial activity will increase business as surely as powder will go off if the trigger be pulled. What one man can do by means of effective advertising another man can repeat.

Take away all manner of advertising and the great score or the successful business would disappear, says the Philadelphia Record. Moreover, much of the trade between nations would become a thing of the past. Advertising promotes commerce and is indispensable alike to the merchant prince and to the humble beginner in business.

Among the bills passed by the Assembly is one increasing the annual appropriation for stone roads from $150,000, the amount voted last year, to $200 000. This appropriation, if it becomes a law, will insure the expenditure of at least $600 000 for new roads in the State during 1900.

The Newark Advertiser thinks that Somerset county would have been void of enterprise indeed if it had not seized the present opportunity to declare the Jersey peach crop a failure.

And now the women are said to be fighting in the ranks of the Boers. If the British are wise they will import a few thousand mice and rats into the Transvaal.

It is the evident desire of a number of Newark Democrats that Mayor Seymour shall retire. The Mayor probably intends to Seymour about this.

The precocious pupil who said that the capital of the United States was in the trusts spoke the truth.

The Legislature is on the home stretch. It will probably adjourn sine die this week.

Foreign nobility come to this country with a lot of airs and go back with one heir.

Euchre Club Entertained.

STILL WANT LONER FARES.

Board of Trade to Hold a Special Meeting To Discuss the Subject.

President Woolston, Eugene Laing, Jamie O. Pope and Charles W. Runyon were the only members of the Board of Trade present at the rooms in the Babcock building Monday night. The number was not sufficient for a quorum and therefore no meeting was held. The quartette sat about the rooms until 9:30 o'clock enjoying each other's society. No other members putting in an appearance, not even Secretary Harry C. Runyon, it was decided to abandon any attempt to secure other members at that late hour. It is presumed that the disagreeable weather had much to do with the lack of a quorum.

At the suggestion of President Woolston it was decided to hold a special meeting next Monday night. It is urgently requested that all members attend this meeting, as special business is to come before the Board with relation to the matter of securing a reduction of fares on the Central Railroad. Committees from other Boards of Trades are waiting to hear a report from the Plainfield Board, when it is possible that a committee of the whole will be appointed to meet with the Central Railroad officials with a view of bringing about the much discussed reduction.

"Nellie" is no More.

"Nellie" the bull-dog owned be John Powers, the Somerset street druggist, died very suddenly last Sunday and quite a few are mourning in consequence. Mr. Powers sent the dog to the kennels owned by Mr. Finch, on Park avenue, and the animal was tied with a rope temporarily. He attempted to jump over a board partition and succeeded. This resulted in the dog hanging himself. When one of the men went into the place he found the canine dead. "Nellie" was a remarkable dog in many ways and she was well liked by every one who knew her. Her family is now scattered about the city, but each one is old enough to take care of himself.

Played Euchre in Elizabeth.

The members of the Montauk Euchre Club journeyed to Elizabeth last Monday where they were entertained by one of their number, Miss Nellie Breen. Everyone had a good time and it was early this morning when the Plainfielders arrived home. Mrs. J. M. Smalley and Mrs. Robert M. Clark won first and second honors for the women, while Frank Blatz and Arthur A. Cannon were successful in securing the first and second for the men. The booby prizes were won by Miss Clara Williams and Horace Huff. The club will be entertained Monday evening, April 21, by Mr. and Mrs. Arthur A. Cannon, of Somerset street.

Thrown Out Of Sleigh and Hurt.

Mrs. Michael Quinn, of Park avenue, was thrown out of a sleigh at the corner of Park avenue and Fourth street, Friday noon, and was badly bruised and cut. She tried to avoid a trolley car and turned the horse into Park avenue. The runner to the sleigh caught, upsetting it and throwing Mrs. Quinn out on the crust. The horse ran away and was caught at Ninth street

A Big Cockfight.

Some forty sports from New Brunswick, Metuchen and Plainfield gathered near Oak Tree Saturday evening for a cocking main. The birds were from New Brunswick and Metuchen. Twelve battles were arranged, but when twelve were over, each side had won six. An extra battle was arranged and the New Brunswick bird was victorious. The main was for $200.

Y. M. C. A. Athletic Contest.

The second and last section of the novice athletic contest at the Y.M.C.A. gymnasium was held Saturday night. Three events were contested. They were the running broad jump, hop, step and jump and the potato race. According to the points scored in all the events, Hageman won first place with 32½ points, Osborne was second with 900, and Thompson third with 220.

To Add Door Street Opening.

Wm. M. Stillman, who has purchased the Dyer house on Craig place, in order that Dyer street may be opened into this city, will remove the house to Grove street, corner of Craig place, adjoining the residence of Dr. Adams.

Rev. Dr. Stryker Seriously Ill.

Rev. Dr. Stryker, of Asbury Park, has many friends in Plainfield who will be pained to learn that he is seriously ill, and fears are entertained that he will not be able to again preach should he recover from his present illness.

Must Have More Room.

Inspector M. B. Snow, of the Post-office Department, has had charge of the arrangements for establishing the free delivery system in Summit, and after a careful examination decided that with the introduction of that system May 1st, considerable more room in the postoffice would be required. After a conference with the owner of the building, Dr. J. Boyd Rist, it was decided to enlarge the office by commencing work at a store in the rear. The additional room thus acquired will almost double the facilities of the office for handling mail.

BOROUGH IS PRAISED BY MAYOR SMALLEY

Annual Message Ends in Glowing Account of Advantages of Local Canada.

A REVIEW OF YEAR'S WORK.

URGES EXTENSION OF DUER STREET AND WIDENING OF SOMERSET.

Says That if the Municipality Progresses as it Should These Improvements Must be Made—Police and Fire-men Praised.

Below will be found the annual message presented by Mayor Smalley at the annual meeting of the Borough Council Monday night:

Gentlemen:—Entering now upon the second and last year of my term as Mayor, I wish to congratulate the Council upon the record of the last twelve months. While candor compels me to admit that there are exceptions to every rule, yet, speaking of the majority, there has been displayed a most commendable spirit of fidelity to the trust reposed in you by our citizens.

The transaction of all public business in open session, and the absence of all star chamber proceedings, has afforded the public opportunity to fully understand the reasons for all our actions, and has met with general approval. I believe that a continuance of such policy will be wise.

During the past year the appropriation for street purposes was devoted almost entirely to repairing streets already macadamized, which, in view of the fact that little attention had been heretofore given in that direction, was necessary, and, in my judgment, most proper. The proposed increase of one thousand dollars in the street appropriation for the coming year is intended to enable us to complete the work of repairs, and also extend the macadam system to some hitherto neglected streets where it is much needed. The macadamizing of Watchung avenue, from Grandview to Gedding-ton avenue, is most important because of the new schoolhouse and development of our borough in that direction. The upper end of Duer street and a number of short streets to form connecting links of the macadam system, deserve particular attention. Our most efficient chairman of the street committee will doubtless call the attention of the Council to these matters in detail.

In regard to the published offer to open Dover street from the borough to the city, it is incumbent upon those who will be most largely benefitted thereby to take immediate action. The contribution asked of property owners is so trifling in comparison to the benefit they will receive by way of increased convenience and enhancement in value of their property, that any hesitation on their part in raising the required sum is surprising. If they do not feel the matter to be of sufficient importance to lead them to contribute so moderate an amount for the purpose, certainly this Council can hardly be expected to take any action.

Some lack of enterprise and business sagacity has been recently manifested by certain property owners on Somerset street, in regard to the proposed widening. Business on that thoroughfare is decreasing yearly, and unless something is done in the immediate future to remedy the conditions now existing, it will be a source of regret to all interested.

In speaking of street matters, it is proper to say that the plan of dividing the engineering work between two surveyors has proven satisfactory, and I recommend its continuance.

The excellent condition of our Fire Department, and the enterprise of its members was displayed to marked advantage by the fireman's parade conducted under its charge. The borough may well be proud of its volunteers who have always shown a commendable public spirit. Some expenditures will be soon required to preserve the borough property devoted to this department. The West End Hose house needs painting, and other repairs are required with which the committee in charge are familiar.

The police force of the borough deserves credit for its effective work done during the year. While small in number, its members are active and efficient, and the administration this department has reduced the number of violations of ordinances, and proves that our citizens are, as a rule, orderly, and justified my promise of a year ago, that the peace and good order of the borough should be maintained.

The subject of taxes is one always duction in the item of taxes collected for borough purposes has been noted by our citizens. We are fortunate in possessing a Collector unusually well qualified for the position. His faithful and persistent attention to the duties of his office, has tended greatly to the benefit of our financial condition, and he is entitled to the commendation of our people regardless of party.

In closing, I desire to call attention to some of the very exceptional advantages of our borough. There seems to be a tendency among some of our citizens to belittle the importance of the sections we possess. North Plainfield is today the largest municipality in Somerset county, and it is confidently asserted that the census of 1900 will show our population to have nearly doubled in the last ten years. Our sidewalks and street pavements are unsurpassed by any town of similar size in this State. Our public schools are second to none. No better or cheaper water supply is known in the State, and the only possible improvement in that direction would be that which might result if the water plant was owned by the borough. The public and private lighting is of a high order. Our churches, our residences, our railroad facilities, our shade trees, our drives and our natural surroundings are so far above the average as to compel the admiration of every visitor, and should develop the pride of our citizens and inspire a spirit of public enterprise in their representatives.

Signed,

N. B. Smalley, Mayor.

ALMOST A WATERY GRAVE.

Narrow Escape of a Little Fellow—Rescued by Charles Ellis in Thrilling Manner.

Chas. Ellis, a driver employed by Powlison & Jones, made a thrilling rescue a few days ago of a small boy who had a narrow escape from a watery grave. Ellis was driving over the Elm place bridge when he heard the shrill voice of a child crying "Mamma! Mamma! Oh, Mamma!" Investigation by Ellis revealed a diminutive specimen of the small boy sitting beneath the bridge on one of the iron girders, while the swollen waters were running swiftly and threateningly below. About the time Ellis discovered the boy he noticed a small boat shoot beneath the bridge and float down stream. Ellis took in the situation at once and set about to rescue the lad. From his wagon he got a long rope and throwing one end of it into the water above the bridge told the imprisoned boy to grasp it as it floated by and then to tie it to his body. The little chap did as directed. He then dropped into the water and was drawn by Ellis from beneath the bridge to a place of safety. When taken from the water the boy's teeth were chattering and he was trembling with the cold and the fear of a whipping. The young hopeful said he got in the boat for a ride. The current being swift he became frightened and when the skiff glided beneath the bridge he grasped the girders and swung himself up.

LECTURE ON DON QUIXOTE.

Delivered by Prof. Fitzferald Before Members of Monday Afternoon Club.

An interesting lecture on Cervantes' Don Quixote was given Monday afternoon in All Souls church by John D FitzGerald, a professor at Columbia University, under the auspices of the Monday Afternoon Club. The lecturer combated the idea that the story of Don Quixote was a satire on the church, or sacerdotalism, or chivalry, because the writer, Cervantes, was devoted to the church, and in the seventeenth century, when the inquisition punished offenders against the church, such a satire would not have been tolerated, and Cervantes was too chivalrous a knight himself to satirize the institution of chivalry. Mr. Fitzgerald considered the book a satire on human enthusiasm. It was written at a time when chivalry was about ending and romance was developing into the modern novel. The book gives a perfect idea of Spanish customs and manners and delineates the Spanish character as full of paradoxes. In closing and picturing Don Quixote as a true knight, full of devotion, chastity and chivalry, the lecturer described a counterpart of his character he had met in Spain, a violinist, self-denying, faithful, loyal, filial and bounden to the right by a sense of duty.

WAS TAYNOR ELECTED?

It is Claimed That Legal Requirements Were Not Complied With Regardless.

There seems to be some doubt as to whether the election of Charles Taynor, as Justice of the Peace, which occurred last week in the borough, is legal. The law is quoted as saying that when a person contests for the unexpired time of another person the person whose term expires should be printed on the ballot. This was not done at the election last week, and many contend that Mr. Taynor is not legally elected to the position. There is little likelihood of anyone contesting the point, however, and Mr. Taynor is quite likely to keep his office.

BOROUGH COUNCIL ORGANIZED FOR YEAR

Appointment of Subordinate Officers Made by Mayor Smalley.

WM. DEBELE FOR FIRE CHIEF

MAYOR DOES NOT THINK IT BEST TO NAME JULIUS STAHL.

Making-up of Committees the Same as Last Year Except That Councilmen Lee is Placed Where Mr. Burtis Served.

The annual meeting of the Mayor and Borough Council was held Monday evening and all the members were present except Mr. Swackhamer. Chas. A. Lee, the new member, was present, and took the place vacated by Mr. Burtis, whose term has expired. Previous to the regular meeting there was a conference of the members to consider certain matters which were brought up at the meeting which followed.

It was nearly 8:30 o'clock when the meeting was called to order, and by that time the lobby was filled with citizens, principally firemen, who were interested in the appointment of a Chief of the Fire Department. The first event on the programme was the reading of Mayor Smalley's message. This will be found in another column. After the reading of the message the Mayor made the appointments for the coming year. The appointments and salaries are as follows:

Borough Clerk and Auditor, Frank B Ley, $500; Borough Counsel, Chas A. Reed, $350; Marshals, W. T. Campbell, F. E Winn, J. J Kiner, Fred Emmons, $600 each; Overseer of the Poor, J. J Stahl, $150; Superintendent of Highways, Thomas Dowd, $50 or $2 a day when employed; Borough Physician, J. Harvey Buchanan, $125; Chief of Fire Department, William Debele, $100; Engineer Fire Department, Alonzo Brokaw, $50; First Assistant Chief of Fire Department, William Demarest; Electrician, Joseph Newman, $125; Janitor Warren Engine House, George B. Stewart, $70; Janitor West End House, Frank Perry, $25; Borough Engineers and Surveyors, Frank J. Hubbard, west side; H. C. VanEmburgh, east side; Special Marshals, Patrick J. Ryan, Alex Maier, Wm. Kiernan, Emil Coley, L. W. Pope, Francis Whitely, James Bagley, Israel Jones, Louis Wyckoff, J. Block, Richard McDonald and George Gunther, 25 cents an hour for special duty, or $2 a day when doing regular duty; Poundkeeper, John Stine.

The salaries stated above are per year. The Borough Engineers and Surveyors are paid when employed. Last year their services cost the borough $108, and the sum of $392 was saved to the borough. The sum of $500 was allowed for this work. Otherwise the salaries are just the same for this year as last. No Borough Recorder was appointed, the Mayor deciding to fill that position, and thus that salary will be saved to the borough. A letter was received from Recorder Long declining the office for another year.

Regarding the appointment of William Debele, as Chief of the Fire Department, Mayor Smalley made a word of explanation. He said that he felt slightly embarrassed, as the members had given expression as to who they wanted for Chief. The man they had selected, J. J. Stahl, is present and he was sorry that at this time he could not appoint him. He thought that if he was continued in office he might do so later. Regarding Mr. Fairchild, he said that so far as he knew he had done his duty and had worked in harmony with the members of the department. He regretted that the conditions were such that he was obliged to make a change, but he felt it was his duty.

Mr. Rogers, on behalf of Mr. Fairchild, paid that chief a high compliment regarding his excellent services and willing co-operation with the members of the fire, water and lamp committee. He regretted that Mr. Fairchild could not be reappointed, and he offered a resolution that the thanks of the Mayor and Council be extended to him. The vote was unanimous for the resolution.

Various resolutions were offered by the Councilmen confirming the appointments by the Mayor and they were all unanimously adopted.

Mr. Valiant offered a resolution nominating Mr. Clark as President of the Council for 1900. As he did so he said it afforded him great pleasure to nominate this member. His association with him in the Council during the past twelve months had greatly strengthened his esteem and there was no one in the Council he would rather have the position than Mr. Clark. Mr. Clark at first declined the position, but was finally induced to take it.

Mr. Coddington offered a resolution making the first Friday evening in each month the time for the regular meeting of the Council. Mr. Clark offered a resolution making the by-laws of the Council for last year the rules for 1900.

Mayor Smalley then appointed the committees for the present year as follows:

Streets and public health—Robert Clark, Jr., chairman, 39 Jackson avenue; Harrison Coddington, John Valiant.

Fire, water and lamps—Geo. T. Rogers, chairman, 44 Myrtle avenue; Robert Clark, Jr., Harrison Coddington.

Audit and finance—John Valiant, chairman, 43 Myrtle avenue; Geo. T. Rogers, Charles A. Lee.

Licenses and marshals—Charles A. Lee, chairman, Grove street; Robert Clark, Jr., Harrison Coddington.

Stationery and supplies—Harrison Coddington, chairman, 12 Mountain avenue; Charles A. Lee, Samuel S. Swackhamer.

Laws, ordinances and taxation—Samuel S. Swackhamer, chairman, 109 Summit avenue; John Valiant, Geo. T. Rogers.

The Mayor said that during the coming year the services of the borough engineers would cost more for the reason that it is intended to push the matter of laying sidewalks and crosswalks. He also instructed Mr. Lee to give the police a shaking up, something they need.

Mr. Lee offered a resolution which provides that each regular marshal furnish a bond for $500 for the faithful performance of his duty. A similar resolution was offered by Mr. Coddington concerning the borough clerk and accountant. The amount of the bond in this case was made $1,000.

Mr. Valiant brought up the subject of the borough sprinkling the streets during the coming summer. He thought it would be a good idea to experiment in this direction and charge the expense to the taxpayers.

Mr. Clark said that he had conferred with Superintendent of Highways Doud about the sprinkling of the streets and that they had decided that no data could be secured until the experiment is tried. He favored the experiment under the most economic plan, and believed that it would save the borough money by preserving the macadam.

Mayor Smalley favored the plan also. He suggested that two or three sprinklers be secured, and that teams be hired. Thus the streets could be sprinkled at least once a day. The probabilities are the scheme will be tried.

The Mayor took occasion to again speak of the Duer street opening scheme, and stated that $300 had been subscribed, and throughout the balance, $200, should be contributed quickly. He urged this and said that he hoped the amount would be subscribed very soon.

In conclusion Mr. Clark stated that the street committee intend to divide the borough off into four sections, and on this basis take up the work of laying sidewalks and crosswalks. He hoped that if there is anyone who desire either the sidewalks or crosswalks before this work is taken up they would petition the Council for the same, and thus facilitate matters. The Council then adjourned to the next regular meeting in April.

TO EMULATE PARKHURST.

Rev. Arthur Crane to Visit From His Pulpit What he Sees in Vice Places.

A dispatch from Charleston, S. C., to the New York Sun says that Rev. Arthur Crane, formerly of Plainfield, but now pastor of the First Baptist church of Charleston, announced Sunday that he will begin this week to visit the "blind tigers" and question able resorts of Charleston to gather material by personal observation for an address which he will deliver to men only at his church next Sunday. The announcement has made a sensation here. Mr. Crane says he will visit these places with prominent members of his church. It is not a Parkhurst movement, he says, but his congregation and the public regard it as exactly that.

Mr. Crane went to Charleston from Plainfield a few weeks ago. While trying a similar movement in Boston several years ago he was threatened by a mob, but he did not falter. He says he will not be sidetracked by Charleston mobs.

Need of Trolley Waiting Stations.

A prominent Plainfielder, who with many others, was obliged to stand in the cold the other night at North and Watchung avenues and wait for a trolley car, remarked that he believed the Board of Health had the power to compel the trolley to erect a waiting station. He cited other places where Boards of Health had compelled trolley companies to do this very thing. If Plainfield's Health Board has this power it should by all means assert it.

SCHOOL TRUSTEES CHOSEN IN BOROUGH

pace with the progress of education, which is always advancing.

Although during the past year there have been many cases of illness among the pupils, yet the attendance has been good. We have had in attendance at one time 971 pupils, this is, of course, not the average attendance, but the best, but it indicates the number for whom school provision must be made, for them there must be provided desks, books and all the needed school appliances.

The school census taken last May showed that there were in the borough 1,182 children of school age all told, whether attending public schools, private schools or no schools, and when of this number we get into our schools 971, we have a large proportion, almost 90 per cent. of all the children of the borough. There is a gain this year over the attendance reported a year ago of seventy.

We are asking you to appropriate by special school tax $14,100, as against $12,000, voted last year, an increase of $2,100. This increase is made necessary in part, at least, 1st—By the increased membership; 2d—By the seriously increased cost of almost every item of support needed by the school; 3d—By the selection and purchase of advanced and more efficient books; 4th—A limited necessary increase in salaries.

The increased attendance will go far to justify our increased demands.

Estimating approximately, it is costing about $25 or $26 a year to educate each child in the schools; at the smaller of these figures the cost of 70 additional pupils would reach $1,750.

At the district meeting a year ago, after the reading from the superintendent's report of the condition of the school library, and the interest in good books shown by the pupils and by their home circles, generous citizens made contribution to the amount of $70 for the enlargement of the library. I wish to report that the money so donated and received has been expended in adding to the library and making it more efficient.

In my report a year ago I spoke at length of the rear part of this building, including those rooms which constituted the school building erected in 1882. I then called your attention to the fact that the old steam heating plant was nearly worn out and would soon need replacing; that there was no method of ventilating the rooms except by the inadequate and dangerous method of raising windows. All authorities join in condemning any such conditions and it is my judgment that a school building with only such means of ventilation would not today be permitted to be built. It is a constant endangering of the health of the children and should be changed. That something shall be done with the heating plant is now imperative. It has barely lasted this winter and has very insufficiently heated the rooms. We do not dare to continue the use of it for another year, and while a change in this respect is being made, we shall ask you to authorize the installing of a proper system of ventilation.

The Board of Education will shortly call a special school meeting and will then submit estimates for both of these improvements, and will ask you to authorize them and to vote appropriations to pay for them.

ONE OF THE BEST.

Last of the Series of Star Course of Entertainments Given.

One of the best and the last of the Star course of entertainments under the auspices of the Y. M. C. A. was that given Monday night in Association Hall. There was a good attendance despite the weather. Those who had the pleasure of listening to the clever recitations and impersonations of Edwin Vance Cook, of Cleveland, Ohio, were well repaid. Mr. Cook is certainly an artist in his particular line. He read selections from his own productions, that were highly entertaining. His humorous recitations were charmingly told and served to convulse the audience. The frequent and well merited applause was the best evidence of his appreciation. Miss Elizabeth McKinstry, of Brooklyn, also delighted the audience with violin solos that gave evidence of her skill as a musician. She was well received.

RIGID STIPULATIONS FOR GAS FRANCHISE.

People's Gas Company Held up by Common Council's Ex-acting Terms.

DOLLAR GAS NOT IN SIGHT.

HANDICAP PLACED ON THE NEW GAS COMPANY.

Restrictions in Franchise Might Establish a Dangerous Precedent—Plain Talk From a Well-Known Citizen and Taxpayer.

The gentlemen interested in the People's Gas Company which has offered to supply the citizens with gas at a cost not to exceed one dollar per thousand feet, do not take kindly to the positions assumed by the Common Council toward the new company.

The restrictions the Council has thrown about the People's Gas Company appear to the members of the new company rather arbitrary.

One of the provisions is that the work of tearing up the streets, laying of mains, etc., shall be done under the direction of the street committee. This is claimed by the representatives of the People's Company to be manifestly unjust. They think that such a clause in the franchise might be used in an unfair way and advantage taken to cause an enormous expense in the way of street excavation to an extent as to greatly embarrass the new company.

It is argued that no contractor would wish to assume the liability of having his work interfered with by outsiders such as the street committee of the Council would prove to be. If this committee saw fit it could place restrictions on the work and retard the laying of gas mains thereby causing great hardship and expense to the new company. Such a stipulation as the franchise offered by the Council would also establish a dangerous precedent.

Another equally strange restriction sought to be placed on the new company is that in regard to furnishing a security in the sum of $10,000 for the faithful performance of the work and the clause whereby the People's Gas Company to surrender to the city, besides the $10,000 security, its entire plant in the event of its neglect to comply with all the provisions of the franchise, viz: to have the work or completing the laying of mains and the supplying of gas to the citizens within one year from the date of granting the franchise.

The latter stipulation, it is claimed, is entirely arbitrary and unnecessary, to say nothing of placing a hardship upon the stockholders, who would be the sufferers in the event of possible financial embarrassment of the new company. The People's Gas Company is perfectly willing to furnish the $10,000 security for the faithful performance of its part of the franchise. It does not, however, believe it should be so handicapped in its efforts to supply the citizens cheaper gas than is now sold, by placing about it restrictions that may seriously cripple if not altogether hinder the consummation of the end in view.

A well-known citizen, a heavy taxpayer and a man who is noted for his public enterprise, said to a Daily Press reporter:

"It appears to me that the Common Council, by its recent action toward the new gas company, stands in the light of the citizens. Here is a company offering to supply us with dollar gas and the members of the Council say halt. For years we paid $1.50 per thousand and the old company, which practically had a monopoly of the city streets, never thought of reducing the price to $1.30 until the People's Gas Company was organized. Another thing, the old company has suddenly grown generous toward the city by offering to supply free gas to the fire department houses."

Continuing he said: "The Common Council is supposed to represent the people. It does not appear to me, from the present position taken by the Council, that they are doing so. They do not appear to have the interests of the people at heart as much as they do the Plainfield Gas and Electric Light Company. Certainly the people have some rights in this matter. I believe if the matter of giving the new company the franchise it asks for, without any narrow-minded restrictions, were put to a vote of the people it would be overwhelmingly in favor of the new gas company. The citizens now have an opportunity of procuring cheap gas. The People's Gas Company should be given the franchise they ask and thereby be the means of assisting in benefitting the property holders and taxpayers. I believe it to be the duty of the Council to grant the People's Gas Company a liberal franchise."

YOUNG VETERAN AT REST

OBSEQUIES OF LATE WILLIAM STEWART HELD FRIDAY.

Service Held in Hope Chapel—Large Attendance of Friends at Last Tribute of Respect.

The funeral services of the late William Stewart were held Friday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock from Hope chapel, and was very largely attended by relatives and friends, including a delegation from Winfield Scott Post, No. 79, G. A. R., by invitation.

Rev. Howard Stewart, of Allegheny City, Pa., a cousin of the deceased, opened the service with Scriptural reading and prayer. Rev. G. Kennedy Newell, pastor of Hope chapel, then made a few remarks about the life of the departed. He referred to his excellent qualities, of his devotion to the chapel and its services, to his Sunday-school class and the Christian Endeavor Society, of which he was elected secretary only two weeks ago. He also referred to his devotion to his country in enlisting in the late war.

Mr. Stewart then followed with a few remarks during which he spoke in a personal way about the departed. He told of his many good traits and of his life in general.

The departed and Frank Marsh, of this city, both enlisted in the 6th U. S. Cavalry, joining the Cavalry at Trenton. They spent six months in Cuba and were honorably discharged in October 1898 at Huntsville, Ala., when they returned home.

There was a very handsome display of flowers at the service. There were set pieces from the Christian Endeavor Society and the Sunday-school class, of which Mr. Stewart was a member. There was a number of smaller pieces from friends. The casket was draped with an American flag.

After all had viewed the remains interment took place in Evergreen cemetery. At the grave the taps were sounded on the bugle. Those who acted as bearers were Alex. Muir, George Firstbrook, Fred Firstbrook, John Evans, James Brown and George Cose.

During the service "Nearer My God to Thee" and "Meet Me There" were rendered impressively by a vocal quintette, composed of Judge Wm. N. Runyon, Mrs. William Westphal, Mrs. George Firstbrook, Elmer D. Cutting and Mrs. Donald McGinnis.

Good Time of Junior League.

At the meeting of the Junior League of the Monroe Avenue church Friday afternoon, the following programme was presented: Piano solo, Miss Aldrich; vocal solo, Mrs. O'Donnell; recitation, Zoe Rittenhouse; recitation, Sidney Gilbert; recitation, Jennie Thompson; recitation, May Gilbert; recitation, Flossie Gilbert; reading, Alice Ludis; song, Minnie Ludis; song, May Gesell; reports of secretary and treasurer; address by Mrs. Wheaton Lowry. William Fielding, the president of the league, announced the numbers and refreshments were served under the direction of Miss Aldrich.

Birthday Anniversary.

Mrs. Augustus Windham, of Fairview avenue, gave a party Thursday evening in honor of her son, Augustin Windham, who celebrated the anniversary of his birthday. Games and singing helped to pass an evening of real enjoyment. The celebrant received a number of very handsome presents. Among those present were: Mrs. Philpitt, Mrs. Dentz, Oscar Philpitt, Franklin Dentz, Mr. Werner, Miss Carry Dentz, Misses Bertha and Mamie Philpitt, Miss Wilsey, Eric Moraller and Jessie Perrine.

Sunday-School Officers Elected.

The annual meeting of the Sunday-school of the First Presbyterian church was held last Friday in the chapel of the church, when the following officers were elected for the ensuing year: Superintendent, E.M. Cave; assistant, L. H. Gates; second assistant, Miss Helen Bolce; secretary, E. D. George; assistant, Frank R. Hazleton; treasurer, Freeman Shotwell; librarian, Warren Townley; assistant, Frank C Knight.

Looks Like a Sure Thing.

As soon as there are assurances that spring has arrived no doubt the work of opening up Door street into this city will be started. However, this should not deter others from subscribing toward the fund.

Remains Interred Here.

The remains of the late Theodore Hill, who was an old resident of Plainfield, were brought to this city Friday and interred in the North Plainfield cemetery. Mr. Hill was a brother-in-law of the late John Harris, who lived on West Second street. He had been living in Newark, where he died.

Election of a Freeholder Contested.

The friends of J. T. Higgins, who was the Democratic candidate for Freeholder in Linden township, are contesting the election of Henry Krouse, Republican. It is alleged that a mistake was made in counting the votes.

WANTS TO BE GOVERNOR.

Richard Yates Is Anxious to Fill the Position Held by His Father During War Time.

Richard Yates is 35 years old. He is the son of the war governor of Illinois, "Dick" Yates, and was born in Jacksonville, Morgan county, Ill. He is accounted a orator of more than ordinary ability, and as a college youth was a winner in many oratorical contests. He entered Whipple academy at Jacksonville in 1873, and finished there in 1878. Then he went to the University of Illinois, from which he was graduated in the classical course in 1880, being his class orator.

RICHARD YATES.
(Young Illinois Politician Who Wants to Be Governor.)

After leaving college Mr. Yates went into newspaper work, and was city editor of the Jacksonville Daily Journal at a salary of $40 a month. The emoluments did not chain him to the business, and he went to the University of Michigan to study law. For lack of means he was compelled to leave Ann Arbor, and returned to his newspaper work in Jacksonville. In two years he saved enough money to enable him to return to college and finish his law studies, and he was graduated in 1884.

In 1885 he was elected city attorney of Jacksonville, and held that office until 1891. Since 1891 Mr. Yates has been called upon to make speeches on many important occasions. He is interested in the Sunday school work of the Methodist church, of which he is an active member.

He announced his candidacy for congressman at large in 1902, but after a strong campaign was defeated. He is a declared candidate for governor, and since making the announcement of his intention to run he has made a number of speeches throughout the state. Mr. Yates is married and has a family. His home is in his native town of Jacksonville, and at present he holds an appointment under President McKinley as internal revenue collector for the Springfield district.

BUTTER BY THE YARD.

A Curious Old Custom That Prevails in Cambridge, England, Unto This Day.

Probably Cambridge, England, is the only place in the world where one would be likely to find butter sold by linear measure. In accordance with the old custom, it is literally sold by the yard. For generations it has been the practice of Cambridgeshire folk to roll their butter into lengths, each length measuring a yard and weighing a pound. Deftly wrapped in strips of clean white cloth, the cylindrical rolls are packed into long and narrow baskets made for the purpose and thus conveyed to market.

The butter women who, in white linen aprons and sleeves, preside over the stalls in the mart, have no need of weights or scales for discovering their wares, constant practice and an experienced eye enabling them with a stroke of the knife to divide a yard of butter into halves or quarters with the utmost nicety and precision.

BUTTER BY THE YARD.
(A Queer Custom Obtaining Only at Cambridge, England.)

The university people are the chief buyers of this curiously shaped article. In addition to being famed for its purity and sweetness, Cambridge "yard butter" is eminently adapted for serving out to the university students in the daily commons. Cut into conveniently sized pieces, and accompanied by a loaf of the best wheaten bread, a stated portion is sent round every morning to the rooms of the undergraduates for use at the daily breakfast and tea.

Produce Short-Sightedness.

It is the opinion of a German oculist that the use of the ordinary slates by school children tends to produce short-sightedness. As a substitute he recommends pen and ink or an artificial white slate with black pencil. The latter have been introduced in some of the German schools.

AID FOR A PARIS HOME

PLAINFIELDERS TO HELP FREE IT OF DEBT.

Meeting Held in Grace Church Friday Afternoon—Dr. Rodman Presides Over.

The interest taken by some of the benevolent women of Plainfield in the homes for American women at Paris was displayed Friday afternoon when a large number were present at the Old Home of Grace Episcopal church to meet the Archbishop and Mrs. Ada Leigh Lewis, of Toronto.

Mrs. Lewis, before she became the wife of the archbishop was the founder of these homes and is still actively interested. Two weeks ago Friday Archbishop Lewis made an address at Grace Episcopal church in which he briefly told of the good work that had been done in Paris for unfortunate English speaking American and British young women. At that time Archbishop Lewis referred particularly to the Washington Home for American girls that has been established through the benevolence of a noble American woman. The purpose of the meeting Friday was to interest the benevolent women of Plainfield in an effort to assist in liquidating a mortgage of $37,000 which has been placed upon the Washington Home for its construction. The Home is now self supporting.

Rev. Dr. Rodman, rector of Grace church, presided at the meeting. Mr. Lewis briefly outlined the object of the work proposed and told of the urgent need of funds to raise the mortgage. Remarks were also made by the Archbishop and Dr. Rodman. Mrs. W. L. Patton, of this city, who has been a life long friend of Mr. Lewis and who has been interested in the Paris Homes for several years, introduced a resolution in behalf of an organization which shall be known as the "Plainfield Association in Connection with British and American Homes in Paris."

The purpose of this association is to secure membership at $1 a head and to discourage young women from visiting Paris, and also to give advice to those who are compelled to take up their homes in the Parisian capital for the purpose of studying the arts.

While a permanent organization was not effected Dr. Rodman was chosen honorary president and Mrs. W. L. Patton, secretary pro tem. When a permanent organization is made possible Mrs. Patton will probably be the first vice-president and acting head of the society. One of the features of the organization will be a lookout committee, composed of young women who will use their efforts to secure subscriptions and offer such advice to women contemplating going to Paris.

At yesterday's meeting about $40 was raised from those who desired to become members, some persons donating a much larger sum than one dollar.

It was decided not to perfect an organization until certain young women, who it is expected to interest in the project, are consulted. The mortgage against the Washington Home must be cleared before August, in order to obviate a renewal of the obligation.

SOLEMN HIGH MASS.

Impressive Service Held This Morning Over the Remains of the Late Eugene A. Gross.

The funeral services of the late Eugene A. Gross were held Saturday at 10 o'clock from St. Mary's R. C. church, when Father Wilson, of Cranford, conducted solemn high mass for the repose of the soul. The service was very impressive. The large edifice was filled with relatives and friends of Mr. Gross. During the service a quartette rendered "Praise Ye," from Athalia, with much effect.

The remains rested in a very handsome hand-carved Sun Domingo casket throughout the church, with extensive silver handles, and was carried in and out of the church on the shoulders of porters. The honorary pallbearers were Otto Arens, Gen. Long, Gen. Negley, John I. Holly, F. C. Kirchoff, Townsend Huna, of this city; Mr. Multhead and Mr. Bowman, of Jersey City. The latter were life-long friends of Mr. Gross. Interment took place in Hillside cemetery. There was an elegant and costly display of floral tributes received from the many friends of the deceased.

FELL ASLEEP WHILE SMOKING.

Williams' Body Found Friday in the Ruins of the Barns.

The barns attached to the Hotel Brunswick, at Metuchen, were burned in the height of the storm Thursday night. At one time the entire business section of the town was in danger. The firemen suffered greatly from the cold and several were frostbitten.

The body of Martin Williams, a transient, was found yesterday in the ruins. Williams was paid off Thursday, and it is supposed went into the barn to rest, fell asleep while smoking and set the place afire.

Mrs. Ryker seems to be somewhat of a Weyler.

FINGERS AND FIGURES.

New Method of Teaching the Multiplication Table Invented by a Polish Pedagogue.

The boys and girls in the schools of Poland are taught a method of multiplication by the use of the fingers. It is said that the little people find it much more interesting than studying so many multiplication tables. This method is used in multiplying numbers above 5; below that the children commit to memory the few short tables necessary. That they may learn the finger process readily, is the claim, the numbers are written with pencil on the fingernails. The method is as follows:

The thumb represents 6, the first finger 7, the middle finger 8, the next 9, and the little finger 10.

To multiply any of these numbers the fingers that represent the multiplier and multiplicand, or the numbers to be multiplied, are placed together as illustrated.

For example, to multiply 6 by 9, the fourth finger of the left hand (counting always the thumb as the first finger) and the third finger of the right hand are placed tip to tip. Counting these two fingers thus joined with those above, one hand hands, there are 7; add a cipher, and you have 70. Below these 7 fingers there are 2 on the right hand and 1 on the left, multiplying one by the other: 2x1 equals 2. Adding this 2 to

70, the first obtained, you have 72, the product of 9 and 8.

The second illustration, showing the multiplying of 7 and 9, may be clearly seen. Joining the second finger of the right hand to the fourth of the left, and counting those with those above—there are 8; adding a cipher—60. Below there are 3 on one hand and 1 on the other, 3x1 equals 3, which, added to 60, equals 63, or 7x9.

Multiplying 6 by 6 with the joining of the thumbs works out as follows:

Adding the thumbs, being no fingers above—2; with cipher, 20. Multiplying the fingers below, 4x4 equals 16, added to 20, equals 36, or 6x6.

Any of these numbers represented on the fingers can be multiplied in this way with perfect results.

A somewhat similar process can be used with the higher numbers, the thumb representing 11, and so on. In this case there is a change in the latter part of the operation, and 100 is always added to the final result.

To multiply 13 by 14 place the fingers representing those numbers together (the third on the right hand and the fourth on the left). As before, add the upper fingers, including the two that touch, there are 7; with cipher, 70. Now multiply the same fingers that were just added, that is the 4 and 3 upper fingers that were left, make 7 and now used again and multiplied—and equals 12. This 12 with the 70 makes 82, and adding the 100, the final result is 182, or 13 times 14.

Any number from 11 to 15 multiplied in this way will give correct results, as in the case of the smaller numbers.

This finger multiplication was invented by Prosopovitch, a Polish mathematician, who carries his method into many and much more difficult combinations.—"Jean Ely, in N. Y. Tribune.

Portland's Old Fire Horse.

In Portland, Ore., there is a big bay horse named Jerry, which is 23 years old, and for 17 years has faithfully served the city in the fire department. As Jerry has grown old the trustees of horse in active service will know that Jerry has certainly earned his board. Now Jerry has become old and is inclined to be stiff in the joints. Under such circumstances a private owner occasionally takes such a horse home and knocks him on the head, under pretense that it is a "mercy" to him, but the city of Portland thinks otherwise. So the fire commissioners have decided that they will not sell Jerry, but will feed him well and abused, nor will they "mercifully" kill him, but that he is to have free hay and oats at the expense of the city as long as he lives.

NO MORE INSANE CASES.

RADICAL CHANGE TO BE MADE AT BROOKSIDE RETREAT.

Dr. Cooley Will Abandon the Treatment of Patients Mentally Afflicted.

Dr. J. H. Cooley, proprietor of the Brookside Retreat, is about to make a decided change in his business. The institution on Westervelt avenue that has been conducted by Dr. Cooley for twenty-two years is not large enough to meet the increasing demands for rooms, and he has decided to discontinue taking insane cases at the sanitarium on Somerset street and convert it into a place for the care and treatment of chronic and nervous cases, the same as on Westervelt avenue.

With this end in view extensive alterations and additions are being made to the Somerset street building, among which is a complete Turkish Room. Dr. Cooley has had for the use of the patients. This will also be open to the citizens of Plainfield. Another decided improvement will be a sun parlor on the second floor.

During the many years that the sanitarium on Somerset street has been used for the treatment of insane people, there have been a large number of notable people confined at that place. They have come from most of the important cities in this country, and Dr. Cooley and his assistants have been very successful in treating them. In the future Dr. Cooley will make special efforts in the care of nervous and chronic cases and already he has applications from a large number of patients, who will be received as soon as the additions are completed.

SHADOW PICTURES SEEN.

THE VARIOUS CHARACTERS FROM "MOTHER GOOSE MELODIES."

The Entertainment Was Novel and Pleasing—Names of Those Taking Part.

The Women's Association and the Christian Endeavor Society of the Congregational church united their efforts and held a joint sociable in the church parlors last Friday. The programme was under the direction of the social committee, of which Miss Katheryn Dwight was chairman, and the flower committee, with Miss Alice Miller as chairman, both of the Endeavor Society. It consisted mainly of a series of shadow pictures principally representing various characters from "Mother Goose Melodies."

The doleful ballad of "The Peach of Emerald Hue," relating the sad experience of "Johnny Jones and his sister Sue," was first shown. Miss Freeman impersonated "Sue," with Phillip Suffren for "Johnny Jones," Miss M. G. Morse sang the ballad, Walter Raynolds acting as accompanist.

Wm. Millar was "Simple Simon" in his fishing experiences. Miss Carrie Fuller represented "Little Miss Muffet" and was properly frightened away by a huge spider. Miss Katheryn Dwight and Charles LaRue did the see-saw act for "See-saw, Marjory Daw." Miss Alice Morgan was "Mistress Mary," and busied herself in a shadow garden.

The romance of the milkmaid and her highborn suitor was presented by Miss Katheryn Dwight and Phillip Suffren. The song was sung by the Misses LaBoyteaux, "Simple Simon," still impersonated by Wm. Millar, went through his adventure with the "pieman," Frank O. Bristol.

After playing games the young women of the church served refreshments. Miss J. Louise Jenkins was chairman of the committee from the Women's Association in charge of that part of the social.

Waiting for Funds to be Refunded.

P. M. French, of Somerset street, who has charge of the sprinkling of streets, has signified his willingness to commence the work as soon as the subscribers notify him of their willingness to pay the customary fee. The strong petition presented to the Common Council last Monday had much influence and the Council ordered the city sprinkler out until the other arrangements are perfected, which will be long. Just at present a sprinkler is not a necessity and by the time it is needed no doubt Mr. French will be ready to start the good work.

Grand Master Paid a Visit.

Grand Master Workman Lambert, of Newark, paid an official visit to Columbia Lodge, A. O. U. W., last Friday. The evening was thoroughly enjoyed by the members, many of whom were in attendance. One candidate was installed and speeches were made by the grand master and by V. W. Nash, supervising deputy and grand overseer of the order. After the speeches a smoker was enjoyed, and some of the members enjoyed themselves pitching quoits.

Feature Was Dancing.

Miss Della Vrohl, of Somerset street, entertained a number of friends at her home last Friday. The feature of the affair was dancing. About midnight refreshments were served.

INSANE WOMAN WAS WANDERING IN SNOW.

Lightly Clad, She Was Found Near the Mountain by Chief Campbell.

TAKEN TO ASYLUM TODAY.

SHE WAS FORMERLY AN INMATE AT SNAKE HILL.

Examined by Drs. Long and Carman Last Night—Taken to Morris Plains Saturday by Chief of Police Grout.

Marshal Campbell, of the borough, found a woman wandering about the fields near the mountain Friday afternoon. She was nearly frozen. Investigation proved her to be Mrs. Anna Kehl, of East Front street. Drs. Long and Carman examined her last night regarding her sanity and decided that she should be committed to the Morris Plains State Hospital.

For some time the police have been watching Mrs. Kehl. She was at one time an inmate of the Snake Hill Asylum, but was released supposed to be cured. Of late her mind has wandered and she had done many strange things. One day she tried to burn all her clothing and partially succeeded.

An attempt was made to have her returned to Snake Hill on the old commitment so that the cost would fall on Jersey City rather than Plainfield where she had lived for only a short time. Friday afternoon she started out wearing only a light house dress, a shawl over her head and slippers on her feet. She wandered through the deep snow over at the base of the mountain until she was nearly overcome by the cold.

It was reported to Marshal Campbell that a woman, acting in a strange manner, had been seen walking toward the mountain. He went to investigate and found Mrs. Kehl. He turned her over to the custody of Chief Grout and she was locked up in the Olympia, the first prisoner to occupy a cell in the new jail.

She was brought before the physicians Friday evening and they decided that there was no doubt as to her insanity. Saturday Mrs. Kehl was transferred to Morris Plains under the charge of Chief Grant.

AN EVENING IN CHINA.

Clever Programme Carried Out at the Entertainment Given in the Vincent Chapel.

The literary department of the Epworth League of the First M. E. church furnished entertainment for the members and friends Friday evening in the chapel by spending "An Evening in China." There was a large attendance and a number of new faces were seen among those present. The chapel was decorated in green and yellow. The programme was a unique affair, representing various kinds of China ware.

The entertainment opened with a selection by an orchestra, composed of Robert Davis and John Lewis, cornets; Albert Davis, flute; Messrs. Derby, mandolins. This orchestra also rendered several selections during the evening and while refreshments were served. A feature of the affair was the description given of various kinds of ware made in China. Those who took these parts were Dr. Snodgrass, Miss Horton, Miss Dory, Miss Stafford and Mr. Edgar. The balance of the programme consisted of a tenor solo by Elmer D. Cutting, accompanied by Miss Edith Hulbert; mandolin duet by Messrs. Derby; solo by Miss Strong. Each number was well received. After the entertainment refreshments were served and a social time spent.

Christian Endeavor Missionary League.

The eighth annual convention of the Christian Endeavor Missionary League of the Reformed (Dutch) church will be held in New Brunswick, May 21 and 22, 1900. Representatives from Christian Endeavor societies from all over the country are expected. Rev. A. De W. Mason, president of the league, promises the attendance of several prominent missionaries of the church at the convention. A partial list of the speakers includes Rev. Dr. D. Sage Mackay, of New York; Rev. Dr. James M. Farar, of Brooklyn, and Rev. W. W. Clark and Rev. Dr. Chas. H. Pool, of the Board of Domestic Missions.

Recent Transfers of Real Estate.

The following transfers of real estate in North Plainfield were recorded in the Somerset County Clerk's office between Feb. 24th and March 5th:

Michael L. Connolly et ux., to Mt. Joseph's Home, $1,500; Edmund E. Pope et al., to Alonzo VanClief, $1; Charles Hyde et ux., to Charles Hyde Memorial Association, $500; Hannah E. Hoff and husband to George B. Sablowski, $6,100; Evelyn P. Dyer and husband to Wm. M. Bellman, $1,000; Evelyn P. Dyer and husband to Harriet E. Bellman, $1; Frank J. Lyng et ux., to John P. D. Kirch, $1; John P. D. Kirch to Katherine C. Long, $1; W. H. Van Winkle et ux., to Daniel Van Winkle, $400.

May be Repeated.

There is some talk of repeating the "Old Maids Convention," for the benefit of the Children's Home.

DR. AND MRS. YERKES WEDDED FIFTY YEARS.

Notable Golden Wedding Anniversary Surprise Marked the Event.

A GIFT OF $1,000 IN GOLD.

HUNDREDS OF FRIENDS CONGRATULATED VENERABLE COUPLE.

After Had Been Arranged Without the Knowledge of the Celebrants—Reception Held in the Church.

Fifty years of married life, filled with happiness and joy, have been completed by Rev. Dr. and Mrs. David J. Yerkes, of West Seventh street, and this memorable occasion was auspiciously celebrated March 14, in a way that will always bring pleasure to their lives and make them feel proud of the high esteem in which they are held, not only by the members of the First Baptist church, but by every person in Plainfield who know them. For thirty-seven years this faithful pastor and his wife have lived in this city. When the members of the First Baptist church united, as they did last evening, in giving to them a reception, it was a homage that was graciously given and gratefully received. A united people, as one person, congratulated this couple that have lived and worked so faithfully for the interest of the church and the cause of Christianity, giving the best that they had to further the interest of that which has been so dear to their hearts.

The reception tendered March 14 at the church was a surprise, and the plans so carefully made and carried out was a source of much pleasure to those who had in charge of it. The pastor and his wife expected to spend the evening quietly at home surrounded by their children, and preparations had been made for a home gathering. About 8 o'clock a coach went to the house and George F. Brown informed the pastor and his wife that they were wanted at the church. They were hastily driven there, when a slight greeted them that they will never forget. The large Sunday-school room, lavishly decorated and brilliantly lighted, was filled with several hundred parishioners and friends who had gathered to join in the festivities. In addition to the members of the church present, there were people from New York and various parts of New Jersey, and the pastors of the local churches.

As Dr. and Mrs. Yerkes entered the room the full chorus choir of the church, under the direction of Charles W. McCutchen, sang the Lohengrin wedding march. The bride and groom were preceded by Samuel Case and W. O. Chapman, as ushers; Anna Scott Yerkes and Dorrance Smith, as flower girls, and Vaughn McGee and Bessie Flanders, who were ribbon bearers. The couple were escorted to a platform that had been prettily arranged and decorated with drapery, stately palms and flowers. Beneath a large bell of a golden hue, illuminated with electric lights, they took seats. Suspended overhead were golden figures "1859-1909."

After the rendition by the choir Mr. McCutchen stepped to the platform and addressed the bride and groom. He said that he was glad that they had selected the 14th of the month as their wedding day instead of the 17th, which would necessitate the wearing of green on this occasion. He spoke of Dr. Yerkes' long and faithful service to the church, and of the devotion of Mrs. Yerkes, and how they have both been profoundly loved and admired by all. During the course of his remarks Mr. McCutchen introduced a great deal of humor, and with an improvised ceremony he re-married them. Toward the close he presented the celebrants with a handsome basket of fifty roses, and remarked that in the bottom there was a nest of eagles—golden eagles. This was the basket carried in by the flower girls. The eagles referred to were fifty twenty-dollar gold pieces, and on behalf of the members of the church he presented them to Dr. and Mrs. Yerkes amid loud and hearty applause. A pleasing and unexpected feature was the presentation to the bride and groom of two gold pens. These came from the Plainfield Ministers' Association, and were presented by Dr. Redman, on behalf of the association, who said that they might wish to return to their fond habit of letter-writing. The recipients were deeply affected and heartily thanked all.

Mr. McCutchen then invited all present to step forward and congratulate the bride and groom after the rendition of the Mendelssohn wedding march. It required sometime for all to pass around and greet pastor and wife, but each one accepted the invitation and extended their best wishes. Those who assisted in receiving were Mrs. Charles Smith, Miss Ida Yerkes, Mrs. Walter McGee and Mrs. Wilson.

The Sunday-school room, with its adjoining rooms, presented a pretty sight. Unusual good taste was displayed in the decorations and the most harmonious effects were secured. There was a liberal display of southern smilax, and this, with the golden colors, blended perfectly. The electric light bulbs were so covered as to shed a golden light, and the same effect was produced through the use of banquet lamps. The whole effect was oriental. There was a Japanese and a Turkish room, and an attractive place was the old-fashioned mantle and fire-place. Here were displayed photos of Dr. and Mrs. Yerkes taken when they were married.

The use of tall palms added much to the general effect, and especially attractive was the decorations in the dining room, where flowers and smilax were used.

At frequent intervals during the evening there were appropriate selections by Wm. Holmes, a duet by Miss Harris and Mrs F. M. Ward, and by the choir, all of which gave added pleasure to the event.

Dr. Yerkes was born in Philadelphia, Pa., January, 1835, and at an early age went to Hatboro, fourteen miles from the place of his birth, and spent his boyhood days on a farm, where the Yerkes family was established for many years. While attending a series of revival meetings at Hatboro he was converted, and soon afterward decided that he would study for the ministry. He entered the academy, where he lived, and completed the course. After that he went to Washington and entered the Columbian University, where he pursued studies in preparation for his service in the ministry. He was assisted in his preparation by Dr. Ide, now dead, but who for many years was a prominent member of the Baptist denomination. He was graduated from the university at Washington in 1848.

He then received his first call to the First Baptist church at Hollidaysburg, Pa., where he was ordained. He remained there a few years, when he resigned to accept a call to the First Baptist church at Pittsburg, Pa. He remained at the latter place until 1861, when he accepted a call to the First Baptist church at Brooklyn, which was then located at the corner of Nassau and Liberty streets. Dr. Yerkes remained in Brooklyn three years, when he received a call to the First Baptist church, of this city. He came here in the summer of 1863 and for thirty-seven years he has been the pastor of this church. When he assumed charge the membership was very small, but it gradually increased and a few years ago a handsome stone edifice was erected at a cost of $75,000 and was dedicated in November, 1869. Since then the church has been one of the largest and most influential in this State. Its present membership is about 900.

Dr. Yerkes' ancestors all lived to be old people. His mother died a few years ago at the age of 96, and his father was also well advanced. He has scarcely known what it is to be ill. Today he is well and strong mentally and physically, and earnestly asks to look after his congregation and preach every Sunday.

While Dr. Yerkes was a student in Washington he became acquainted with Miss Sarah Taylor, of Saratoga, and a year after he accepted the call to the Hollidaysburg Baptist church, they were married at the home of the bride. Mrs. Yerkes is of Welch descent, and although she is 73 years of age she is wonderfully preserved and is as rugged as her husband. Eleven children have been born to them, six of whom are now living. Those living are Mrs. Charles Smith, Mrs. Walter McGee, Joseph Yerkes, Miss Ida Yerkes, Mrs. Wm. Flanders and Miss Grace Yerkes.

Dr. and Mrs. Yerkes have occupied their present residence ever since they came to Plainfield, and have lived to see that part of the city thrive and grow until it is one of the most beautiful parts of Plainfield. Dr. Yerkes is a member of the Baptist Ministers' Association of New York and regularly attends the meetings every Monday morning in New York.

In addition to the $1,000 in gold presented at the church, $250 in gold was sent to Dr. and Mrs. Yerkes at their home. Among the many congratulations received was one from Rev. Carter Helm Jones, of Louisville, Ky., who sent a telegram, which was read at the reception.

Below will be found a list of the committees who arranged and had charge of the affair:

Advisory board—Mrs. B. J. Shreve, Mrs. C. W. McCutchen, Mrs. M. I. Cooley, Mrs. B. St. J. McCutchen, Mrs. Geo. Bachelor.

Finance committee — Mrs. Geo. Brown, Mrs. Frank Jones, Miss Stell, Miss Annie Boice.

Decoration committee — Miss Ella Sorrell, Mrs. L. J. Denton, Mrs. J. B. Probasco, Mrs. Wm. Chapman, Miss M. Harold.

Refreshment committee—Mrs. Harold Sorrell, Mrs. John H. French, Mrs. L. W. Randolph, Mrs. Clinton Randolph, Mrs. DeWitt Brokaw, Mrs. Lebbeus Mannion.

Invitation committee—Mrs. E. L. Bonney, Mrs. A. Vanderbeek, Miss Julia R Stelle and Miss S. Rafferty.

Music committee—Charles W. McCutchen.

Reception committee — Mrs. Geo. Chapman, the advisory board, the invitation committee, Mrs. S. T. Wilson, Mrs. L. V. F. Randolph, Mrs. J. H. French, Mrs. Wm. White, Mrs. R. K. Case, Miss Gussie Runyon, Mrs. Charles Smith, Mrs. Flanders, Mrs. Walter A. McGee, Mrs. Joseph Yerkes, Miss Yerkes, Miss Grace Joseph.

Assistants—Misses Cairns, H. and M Shreve, Cooley Randolph, C. and J. Randolph, Clawson and French.

Presided at table — Mrs. DeWitt Brokaw, Mrs. A. Milos, Mrs. Beuber Knox and Miss Anna Boice.

Aids in dining room—Mrs. Budd Vail, Misses Susie and Belle Milne, Misses Florence, May and Ella Serrell, Elsie Brokaw, Velma Oakley, May Bachelor, Rose Woodland, Pauline Denton, L. Joseph, Bertha Thorn, May McLaughlin, Ada Fountain, Marion Woodcock, Edith Miles, Grace Adams, Jessie Coddington, Minnie Smalley, Madeline Evans, May Stelle, Ida Lewis, Bertha Needham, Grace Bonny, Helen Robbins, Valiant, vanHerwerden, Roosp and Mrs. Walter Manning.

Ushers—Messrs. E. Wilson, Samuel Herbert and Howard Case, John McLaughlin, William Chapman, Douglass Drake and Arthur Serrell.

In addition to many men and women, whose names are not given, contributed in every possible way towards the success of the golden wedding.

The following original verse by Mrs. B. J Shreve was inscribed on a piece of silk and attached to the purse that contained the gold:

"1859."

The night is fair.
The storm of grief, the cloud of care,
The wind, the rain, have passed away:
The house is full of life and light—
It is the Golden Wedding Day.
"1909."

HIGH SCHOOL BASEBALL.

DECIDED PLAYING SEASON WILL BEGIN APRIL 11TH.

Series of Games Arranged With Other School Teams in This Vicinity.

For the baseball nine of the Plainfield High School the playing season will begin April 11. The schedule has not been completed but it will probably include ten or more games. Manager Townsend Moore has been in communication with a number of teams from schools of this section. His aim has been, however, to keep the expenses of the team as low as possible, and with that object in view it was found necessary to leave out some of the teams that want heavy guarantees.

A series of two games has been arranged with Leal's School, of this city, and another two-game series with the team from the North Plainfield High School. The Rutgers Preparatory School will send its team over from New Brunswick and the High School boys are likely to play a return game there. One of the most important games will be with the Hasbrouck Institute, of Jersey City, on which Claude Edwards, formerly of the Plainfield High School nine, is now pitching. The Plainfield team also has a game with the Newark High School on the latter's grounds. A number of teams are still to be heard from.

Walter Squires will captain the team and he will go behind the bat unless he should meet with some injury. Herman is also a candidate for catcher. Davis and Schoup are the principal candidates for pitcher, although Denton and VanAuken are both in line for the place.

The candidates for the infield positions are Schoup, Wright, Hazeltine, Mason, Fountain, Dubberley, Vanderbeek and R. Boyntan, Bridgman, Conant and Doane. For the outfield places the candidates are Tweedy, Thompson, Frod Mason, Pond, Ughetta, Titus, Suhr, Mills and Brakeley.

A meeting of the board of directors was held Thursday afternoon to consider the best method of raising the necessary funds for the support of the baseball team. Friday, March 26th, was set as the day for a special meeting of the association, when subscriptions for the support of the team will be received. Under the new constitution money can only be raised by voluntary subscription and by entertainment. A committee, composed of Townsend Moore and Fred Mason, was appointed to consider the advisibility of securing the Rutgers College Glee Club for an entertainment for the benefit of the association.

Steinbach's Link Belt.

L. E Edgar, an engineer of the Link Belt Engineering Company, of Philadelphia, has been at the coal "pockets" of the Lehigh Valley at South Plainfield superintending the putting in some new machinery there. He came to Plainfield, where he was the guest of Arthur O. Knight, West Sixth street. They were classmates at Lehigh University in the class of '98.

Changes at the Retreat.

Dr. J. H. Cooley, of the borough, has decided to make some changes at Brookside Retreat. An annex is now being erected at the retreat and the place will be conducted strictly as a sanitarium.

GEN. LUKE E. WRIGHT.

The South's Representative on the Philippine Commission, Headed by Judge Taft.

Gen. Luke E. Wright, who has been selected by President McKinley as the southern representative on the new Philippine commission, has for many years occupied a prominent position with the bar of Tennessee, and while he has resisted all the allurements of personal preferment, he has wielded a great influence in the politics of his state.

He comes of a family which has produced many conspicuously able lawyers. His father was Judge Archibald Wright, who was a leader of men and affairs in this part of the country; and his mother was a member of the Eldridge family of Mississippi, which has produced many illustrious lawyers, statesmen and soldiers.

When the civil war began, Luke Wright was yet too young to have assumed a vocation in life, but he was not too young to carry a gun for the confederacy, and on January 4, 1861, he enlisted in company G, One Hundred and Fourth Tennessee senior regiment. He became a second lieutenant of artillery, attached to the division commanded by Gens. Hate and Breckinridge, in which capacity he served in the principal engagements of the west under Bragg, Johnston and Hood. He was wounded at the battle of Jonesboro, Ga.

After the war, Lieut. Wright was admitted to the bar in Memphis, and married a daughter of Raphael Semmes, the naval hero of the confederacy. He was elected attorney general of the criminal court of Shelby county, and in that office displayed such distinguished capacity and talent that when, after representing the state for ten years, he resumed the practice of his profession in a private way, he took rank at once with the leading lawyers of the state.

Until a few weeks ago Gen. Wright practiced law in partnership with Hon. Thomas B. Turley, United States senator, of which firm also the late United States Senator Edward O. Harris was a nominal member up to the time of his death. Gen. Wright was twice chosen by the democracy of his state as their representative in national conventions of the party. His income from his law practice has been large, and his acceptance of the appointment just conferred upon him by President McKinley may by no means be ascribed to the pecuniary considerations attaching. He has been a lifelong democrat of the most conservative order.

HANDSOME OFFERING.

Gold Casket Presented to the Wife of Capt. Dreyfus by the Readers of a London Paper.

The illustration shows the very handsome gold casket presented to Mme. Alfred Dreyfus, by the subscribers and readers of the London Morning Herald.

The design is "renaissance" and the central panel contains three medallions in enamel; that on the right being Maitre Labori, on the left M. Zola, whilst the center figure is that of Capt. Dreyfus.

The corresponding panel on the reverse of the casket bears the following inscription in English:

"Presented to Mme. Dreyfus by the readers of the Morning Herald, London, as an earnest of their faith in the unblemished honor of her husband, Capt. Alfred Dreyfus, and as a token of their admiration of her brave and dutiful devotion to him in his unmerited suffering."

The cover of this casket is molded and domed, richly decorated throughout, and is again surmounted by an exquisitely-modeled figure of "Blind Justice" holding the scales and naked sword.

Novel German Post Card.

Germany sends out a post card on which is printed a red strawberry. When the strawberry is exposed to heat the color of the fruit blanches and disappears. It can be brought back to its original red color by blowing upon it.

CHARLES M. SCHWAB.

Romantic Career of the Present President of the Great Carnegie Steel Company.

Twenty years ago Charles M. Schwab went to work in the Carnegie iron works at Pittsburgh as a stake driver at a salary of one dollar a day. Now he is president of the Carnegie Steel company (limited) and draws a salary larger than that of the president of the United States. And he is only 37 years old. As the executive head of the great Carnegie interests Mr. Schwab is just now prominent in the public eye. He was born in Pennsylvania, and had only a common school education. At 15 years of age he went to work, and he does not believe in a college education for a businessman. For a year or two he drove a mail wagon and clerked in a grocery store. In his seventeenth year he got a job with the Carnegie company. His first work was to drive stakes for the foundation of a new building. His rise was so rapid as to be phenomenal. He became chief engineer in 1887, general manager a little later, and in 1896 a partner in the company.

Years ago he was offered a salary of more than $50,000 a year to go to England and take charge of some English iron and steel works. This offer he declined at once.

Mr. Schwab's objection to college men in business is based on his opinion that they are not practical; that they are too full of theory; that they try to combine work and pleasure, being unable to give themselves up to that complete absorption in business which is necessary to the greatest success. As proof that Mr. Schwab carries his belief into practice, it is stated that among the 40 or more heads of departments under his control only three have received a technical or liberal education.

NEW WAR INVENTION.

Movable Breastworks for South Africa Invented by a Patriotic English Artist.

The great loss of life suffered in attacking Boer intrenchments in South Africa has inspired Walter Severn, an English artist, to invent and patent a form of movable breastworks, by the use of which he thinks fortified kopjes might be captured without much danger to the attacking party. The breastworks consist of steel plates, mounted on wheels at such an angle that bullets striking them will be deflected upward. The inventor has the word of Maxim, the great gunmaker, that the steel plates need not weigh more than five or six pounds to the square foot so that the weight on each bicycle will not be more than that of an ordinary man. It is intended that the movable shields shall be pushed ahead of the attacking column by a number of strong men, detailed for the purpose. They may also be used to protect the wounded, to form squares, and to protect men who are cutting wires. They can be removed from the wheels and transported by wagon, and, when properly arranged about the sides, they would transform a transport wagon into an armored car.

Long and the Short of It.

It may be said truly of the new commander in chief in South Africa that if he enjoys the distinction of being the shortest general in the British army, he can also lay claim (certainly regularly) to possession of the longest list of degrees. Officially "Bobs" is Baron Roberts of Kandahar and Waterford, P. C., K. P., G. C. B., G. C. S. I., G. C. I. E., V. C., D. C. L., LL.D. He became "Dr. Roberts of Dublin" nearly 25 years before Mr. Chamberlain, who was "doctored" the other day.

Whist a Royal Recreation.

FUNNY YOUNG BULLDOG.

He Wears Spectacles, Smokes a Pipe and Is Very Properly Named "Artful Stockbroker."

A writer in London Sketch says: I was looking round the charming grounds of the Dayton Court hotel a little time ago, when a strange object appeared before my astonished vision—a handsome young bulldog, with a most unmistakable pair of spectacles and holding a short pipe between his teeth. I had heard of such kids to the sight of aged dogs, and at different shows had seen one with a set of false teeth and another with an artificial knee joint and lower portion of left foreleg. I soon discovered that this was no aged dog, and inquired of his mistress, Mrs. J. Leggatt, of Church house, Southall, the cause of these unusual decorations for a show dog and not a performing one. She told me that "Artful Stockbroker"—for that is this most excitable young bulldog's name—is one who is always spoiling for a fight whenever he sees another canine, no matter of what breed or size, but that when he has his spectacles on his nose and his pipe in his mouth he is too much interested in them to risk an encounter which might cause the loss of his cherished possessions. Certainly, when bereft of them in the show ring, he was breathing out slaughterings on all sides, and Mrs. Leggatt had no easy task to prevent a deadly battle with some brother bulldog.

"Artful Stockbroker" is a brindle, who was two years old on November 27. He is by Stockton ex Merit Only, and was bred by Mrs. Benham. He daily lights a pipe of his mistress's tobacco says of him: "He is so artful that he knows everything we are talking about."

THE MEADOW MOUSE.

By Using Its Dainty Little Forepaws in a Skillful Way It Secured a Meal.

One day a naturalist lay motionless on a fallen log in the forest, and silently watched an animal at play on the grass near by. This was a large, heavy mouse, a meadow mouse, that had come out from his home under the log and when tired of play had sat up to make his toilet. Using his forepaws as hands, the mouse combed the white fur on his breast and licked it into smooth and sleek. Satisfied at length with his appearance, he began to search for food.

He did not have far to go, for a few stalks of wheat grew among the thick weeds near at hand. The mouse was so large that he could probably have bent the stalk down and brought the grains within reach. If not, he could certainly have climbed the stalk. He did not try either of these plans, however, for these were not his ways. Sitting up very straight, he bit through the stalk as high as he could reach.

The weeds were so thick that the straw could not fall its full length, and the freshly cut end settled down upon the ground with the straw still erect and the grain out of reach. The mouse again bit the straw in two, and the stalk fell as the middle of February, but seldom get as far north as New England until the month of May. The robins winter in the southern states and in northern Mexico. They are to be seen in flocks the latter part of March in all parts, and are often killed in great numbers there, as they are in very good condition in the winter season. The migratory instinct is not so strong in this bird as in some others, and as far south as this it often remains in sheltered places all winter. Its attachment to familiar spots is very strong.

This Boy Was Impartial.

A Baptist and a Methodist minister were by accident dining at the same house. The latter, extremely solicitous not knowing how to ask one minister to say grace without offending the other. The small son quickly grasped the situation, and, half rising in his chair, moved his finger rapidly around the table, reciting:

"Eny, meny, miny, mo,
Catch a nigger by the toe."

He ended by pointing his finger at the Baptist minister and shouting: "You're it!" The reverend gentleman accepted the decision.

MANY WHO MAY BECOME GOVERNOR OF JERSEY

On the Democratic the Name of E. F. C. Young is Prominently Mentioned.

REPUBLICAN TIMBER, TOO.

SENATOR CHARLES REED MENTIONED IN LATTER CLASS.

Democrats Consider that Mr. Young Would Make a Strong Candidate—Primary Will Loom Up Strong in G. O. P.

Next year a successor to Governor Voorhees will be elected. Then the Democrats may be in a position to fight and give the country a taste of old-fashioned war fare such as was waged when Leon Abbett was the idol of the masses. Already Edward F. C. Young is being groomed for the Democratic Gubernatorial nomination. Should he consent to the use of his name in that connection it is probable that he will be called upon to head the ticket of his party. In that event the Democrats would mean business, as Mr. Young is a man who would not enter such a contest unless he had assurances of victory at the beginning. He would come here fully equipped and as he is very popular wherever he is known, especially in Hudson, the prospect would be that he would not only poll the full Democratic vote, but would, besides, get a large share of the independent element. When Governor Werts received the nomination, a few years ago, Mr. Young was an active candidate, and he would have carried the convention had the late Senator McPherson been present to lend him his assistance.

The Senator had just arrived from Europe and was detained in quarantine the day of the convention. During the administration of Governor Werts the Democratic party, through its race-track legislation, lost the confidence of the people of the State and was soon driven from power. Next the money question loomed up to distract the Democratic forces, and then followed a series of Republican victories. It is no wonder that in those perilous times Mr. Young had for shown an inclination to take part in politics. Now that a ballot is expressed that the old party may again become animated, and that next year may show a rejuvenation, the friends of Mr. Young are advising him to contest for the Gubernatorial chair. And there are other Democrats in New Jersey who would not be averse to a nomination provided the party was in ship-shape. For instance, there is Vice Chancellor Reed, who is said to have an ambition in that direction. And then there are Mayor Haussling, of Newark, and Mayor Hoos, of Jersey City, both strong and popular men.

It was noticed that in the group of statesmen who attended the newspaper men's banquet there were several who have already been mentioned in connection with the Republican nomination for Governor. There was President of the Senate Johnson, quiet, brainy and diplomatic; the ever-aggressive Pitney and that brilliant young orator, Senator Stokes. Then there were former President of the Senate Charles A. Reed, whose light is not hidden under a bushel by any means, and the popular State Comptroller, William S. Hancock. All of these are Republican timber of the finest quality. If Franklin Murphy and Judge Fort had been present then the next Republican candidate for Governor would have been talking. It is generally believed that many of the practical politicians of the party favor Pitney and that he will cut a wide swath in the State convention. And besides, he is supported by the radical element of his party, which is of much significance.

It is admitted that, should Judge Fort agree to enter the contest, he would prove a dangerous rival to Mr. Pitney. And then there is Mr. Murphy, who is in much favor in the upper end of the State, and is very popular in the city of Newark, who could give Mr. Pitney a stiff fight. Mr. Stokes, who is one of the ablest men in his party, has a large following among the conservative element, but he is not liked by a certain coterie of politicians because of his conservatism. Should the Republicans get into a tangle over the nomination the best thing they could do would be to compromise on William S. Hancock. And should they fail to agree in that way, then the names of Johnson and Reed are before them, and the selection of either would not be a blunder. But the convention is a long way off, and there is plenty of time in which to change the tide of events. If the Democrats mean to contest every foot of ground in this Gubernatorial contest a Republican blunder would surely mean a defeat for the dominant party.

To Meet in South Plainfield.

On Tuesday, May 18th, the Union County School of Methods will be held at the South Plainfield Baptist church. It promises to be one of the most interesting conventions held in some time.

FIRST TRIAL HELD IN NEW POLICE STATION

A Gay and Hilarious Party Rounded Up By Police Early Suuday Morning.

$5 OR TEN DAYS IN JAIL.

HUGHIE O'DONNELL'S JOKE COST HIM THREE DOLLARS.

Uncle Opened a Bottle of Home-Made Wine With the Result of Nephew Trying to Throw the Host Out of a Window

The first trial held in the new police station in the Olympia building took place Sunday morning. As if by some peculiar fate it was reserved that the official debut of the cell should be of more than ordinary interest on that occasion, there were six prisoners arraigned before the rail. The party had been having a gay and hilarious time in the home of Mrs. Carrie Reuter, on East Fourth street.

The prisoners were, besides Mrs. Reuter, Mary Nelson, Mabel Wilson, Wm. Drake, Wm. Greiger and Michael Muldowney. According to the stories told and admitted by all hands, the boys had accepted an invitation to make what they politely termed to be "a social call," even though the time of calling was beyond the midnight hour.

About 3 o'clock Sunday morning Patrolman Vanderweg heard a series of unearthly cries coming from a house on East Fourth street. He investigated and found the disturbance in the rooms occupied by Mrs. Reuter. Securing the aid of Patrolman McCarthy, Vanderweg went to Mrs. Reuter's domicile and quietly stole up the back stairs. The officers listened for an hour at the back door and then made a demand to be let in.

The request was complied with and as a result they rounded up the party and took them to the police station. When arraigned before Judge Runyon the boys all pleaded guilty to disorderly conduct. The women told conflicting stories, and after questioning the whole party for an hour the Judge decided to impose a fine of $5 or ten days in the county jail on all.

The fines of the boys were immediately paid. The girls were detained until Monday night as it was finally succeeded in raising the money to pay their fines.

Hughie O'Donnell likes to joke occasionally. It was all a joke, he explained to City Judge Runyon Monday morning, when he said to Patrolman Saffron, "You're to —— fresh." There were others remarks of a similar nature. After due deliberation, the Judge thought it ought to be worth $3 to Hughie. Mrs. O'Donnell paid the fine.

Hughie O'Donnell lives on South Second street. His prominence in illegal liquor selling cases has given him considerable acquaintance with the police. At 1 o'clock Monday a. m. Patrolman Saffron heard a steady stream of profanity flowing from the direction of O'Donnell's house. He investigated and found Hughie. The latter said that some strange woman had gone into his cellar and he was afraid that she would set the house on fire. O'Donnell had been drinking. When the officer asked for further particulars O'Donnell swore at him.

When John Fenelein went to call on his uncle, John Wolff, of George street, Sunday afternoon, the occasion was celebrated by the opening of a bottle of homemade grape wine. Fenelein drank too much and insisted on throwing his uncle out of the house. Patrolman Saunders was called to the place by the indignant uncle. Fenelein agreed to depart. Once in the yard the homemade brew took temporary possession and Fenelein was willing to fight anybody, his uncle preferred. Saunders then locked him up.

Fenelein was arranged before City Judge Runyon Monday morning. He pleaded guilty to the charge of drunk and disorderly. The Judge gave him his choice between a fine of $3 or eight days in jail. The cash was immediately forthcoming.

TEA FOR MISS RICHARDS.

Delightful Social Affair Given by Mrs David P. Hall, Saturday Afternoon.

A very delightful tea was given Saturday afternoon by Mrs. David Prescott Hall, of Madison avenue, in honor of her niece, Miss Alice Richards, of Maine. Miss Richards is a daughter of the well known authoress, Mrs. Laura E Richards, a sister of Mrs. Hall. Saint Patrick's green was the prevailing color in the dining room. The tint of green ribbons and candle shades combined with the green dresses of the young girls in attendance produced a very pleasing effect. Mrs. Hall and Miss Richards received in the parlor, while in the dining-room Miss Thompson, of Sing Sing, and Miss Edith Naglie, of this city, presided at the table, assisted by Miss Hall, Miss Conklin, and Miss Shepard of "The Gables," Fanwood.

PLAYED TO HIBERNIANS.

"OUR REGIMENT" FAVORABLY RECEIVED AT MUSIC HALL.

William J. Romain and Others of Cast Gave Pleasing Rendition of Comedy.

"Our Regiment" appeared at Music Hall Saturday evening under the auspices of Division No. 4, A. O. H. Its appearance was a decided success. There was a large audience to witness the performance, which proved to be all that was claimed for it, a jolly farce comedy well acted. The play itself was good and the Romain comedy players handled it with spirit.

The pantomime, "Pat to the Test," that preceded the play, was something new to Plainfield theatre-goers, but it found immediate favor. It was a clever artistic sketch, in which the participants accomplished the really difficult feat of holding the attention of the audience without saying a word. William J. Romain and Miss Ruth Berkeley portrayed an artist and his sweetheart, the latter masquerading as her lover's maid and trying to test his love. The part of the maid was taken by Miss Lucy Harris. The musical accompaniment was by the author, Harvey Worthington Loomis.

"Our Regiment" was based on the visit of the Eighth Irish Lancers to "Mudboroughon-Slush." Three separate veins of romance became delightfully confused during the progress of the play and a host of funny things happened. It was good, clean humor, while the action was continuous and without a dull moment to retard it.

Mr. Romain was excellent as the young lieutenant. His mannerisms were clever. While rather a shallow sort of a man, this lieutenant adopted himself to circumstances in a way that was truly wonderful. His love-making was delightful.

Malcolm Arthur, as "Samuel Dobbinson," was a great success. His dramatic collapse from the indignant parent and guardian to the humble and obedient husband was one of the cleverest parts. "Mrs. Dobbinson," impersonated by Mrs. Emma Brennan-Ince, carried the day and the audience as well on the occasion of these domestic encounters. Frank N. Drew, as "Mr. Ellaby," also contributed largely to the success of the performance. His comedy was on a high class.

Miss Audrey Kent and Miss Jeanette Connor played the parts of the daughter and niece of old "Dobbinson" with much life and spirit. Miss Lucy Harris was a charming niece for the enthusiastic "Ellaby" and played her part cleverly. Frederick Lewis, as the "Curate," was particularly strong in his attempted parochial discourses. Stanley Jessup looked and acted the "Lancer Captain" very satisfactorily. H. W. Tomlinton made a good butler.

GRANTED AT LAST.

James Sloser Gets a License for a Place Just Over the City Limits.

A great deal of surprise has been manifested in this city and in North Plainfield over the announcement that Judge John D. Bartine, of the Somerset County Court, has granted a license for a retail liquor store to James D. Sloser, to be located in the building owned by Charles Bock, on Somerset street, just over the city and county line in North Plainfield. Applications for the licensing of this place have been refused a number of times, and less than a year ago Judge Bartine himself declined to grant a similar application.

Owing to the previous attitude of Judge Bartine in respect to the licensing of liquor shops, the property owners did not think that it was necessary to make a vigorous protest against it, as they thought it would be refused without a doubt. The fact that Judge Bartine retires from office April 1st is offered as a reason of his taking the action in defiance of public sentiment in respect to the place.

Said Sweet Things.

The Junior Christian Endeavor Society of Trinity Reformed church held a very successful cake and candy sale Saturday afternoon from 3 to 5 o'clock in the primary department room of the church. Mrs. Cornelius Schenck and Miss Mary Brokaw were in charge and a goodly number of Juniors were present to look after the cake. Everything was disposed of and the proceeds will be devoted to increasing the fund for missionary purposes. The Juniors contribute so much to the missionary work carried on by the church, and this is one way they have of securing the money.

POLITICAL SITUATION AMONG THE CHINESE.

A Mission Worker Explains the Causes of Trouble in Native Ranks.

DR. AIKEN THE SPEAKER.

DELIVERED AN ADDRESS IN CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH.

Declares That the Ill Feeling of Natives Against Certain Missionaries Was Brought About by the Missionaries Themselves.

Some interesting statements concerning the political situation in China at the present day were made by Rev. E. E. Aiken in the course of a missionary address at the Congregational church last Sunday. Rev. Mr. Aiken has been serving at the missions of the American board in northern China and came to this country on account of the death of his wife which necessitated placing his two children in school in America. He graduated from the Yale Divinity School the same year with Rev. C. L. Goodrich, pastor of the Congregational church. Yesterday he spoke at the morning service at Rev. Mr. Goodrich's church and addressed the Christian Endeavor Society in the evening.

During the course of the latter speech, he sketched the present political situation in China. He told of the revolution there a short time ago the Dowager Empress secured secession of the reins of government, and, now, since that time, the anti-foreign faction of China had been steadily gaining in power. He referred to the troubles in the province of Shan-tung, where a secret society, known as the "Boxers," had demolished the property of foreigners and driven the Christian natives from their homes. These riots had resulted in a demand on the imperial government by the foreign powers that the Governor be removed. He was removed, but Mr. Aiken said, a recent despatch tells that it was only to be given another important office.

While these troubles in Shan-tung were primarily the result of the hatred of the foreigners, Mr. Aiken pointed out another cause that had its influence in arousing the "Boxers" to active demonstration against the foreigners. It was greatly to be regretted, but it was nevertheless a fact that some of the mission workers used their political influence in behalf of native Christians, when the latter became involved in lawsuits and other legal troubles. The mission workers did possess a certain amount of influence and it was a great temptation, he said, to bring it to the aid of the converts. In many cases these legal troubles were brought without reason and simply to persecute the followers of the Christian faith. This interference, however righteous, had its effect in stirring up the populace and increasing the hatred of the foreigners.

Mr. Aiken told of the sending of an American man-of-war to China last week at the request of the American Association of Shanghai on account of these same troubles. He seemed convinced that internal strife in China was imminent, but made no attempt to foretell the result to the Nation or to the mission work.

Mr Aiken was attired in a complete Chinese costume and showed a number of interesting curios from the Celestial Kingdom. During his address he sketched briefly the work of the missions and their growth. The meeting was largely attended and at its conclusion many lingered to converse with the missionary.

THIRTEEN HEARD HIM.

Rev. Dr. Richards Told a Small Audience About Palestine and His Trip Abroad.

Just thirteen people turned out last Monday to hear Rev. Dr. W. R. Richards' address on "Palestine" in the chapel of the First Presbyterian church, given under the auspices of the Primary Teachers' Union. Dr. Richards spoke, however, and the thirteen people heard a very interesting address.

Dr. Richards told of the interesting things he saw while in Palestine, particularly those that referred to the present International Sunday-school lessons. He pictured very graphically what he saw and told of his trips to Bethlehem, Nazareth and Jerico. Some of the personal reminiscences were very funny. A large map of the Holy Land was a valuable adjunct in explaining the situation of various places of interest.

PLAIN MRS. KRUGER.

Wife of the Transvaal President Is a Good Housekeeper.

Although Rich Beyond the Dreams of Avarice She Cooks Her Own Meals and Makes Her Own Dresses—A Lover of Birds.

Mrs. Paul Kruger, says the London Mail, is the embodiment of homeliness. In her appearance, in her manners, in her speech, she is as unassuming as the wife of a Lincolnshire farmer. And she is just as thrifty and frugal.

"Oom Paul" is worth about $25,000,000; and the credit for amassing that immense fortune he gives to the woman who for nearly half a century has cared for him and watched over him, and striven and saved for him. Farmer, herdsman, soldier, clergyman, ambassador, president of the Transvaal—in every phase of his wonderful career—Mrs. Kruger has always believed implicitly in her husband, has always shown him a humble, devoted admiration that is somehow pathetic to look upon. Paul Kruger is to-day, in her opinion, the greatest man who ever lived. And she is the proudest woman in the Transvaal. The struggling, ambitious farmer found a treasure when he found that gentle, blue-eyed lass, who, when he asked her if she would marry him, looked down demurely and said: "I can bake, I can cook, I can sew, I can clean, I can scrub."

Even in these days the first lady in the Transvaal bakes and sews and scrubs, to save the wages of a servant. She may be seen at five o'clock any morning the president is at home bending over a little kitchen stove preparing her husband a morning cup of coffee. The only accomplishment in which "Auntie" Kruger claims to excel is in making coffee; and President Kruger affirms that she attains

"TANTE" KRUGER.
(Oom Paul's Wife, the "First Lady of the Transvaal.") better results with less coffee than any other housewife in the Transvaal.

When Mrs. Kruger has finished her heavier household duties she dons a black alpaca dress, settles herself comfortably in the little parlor, and darns socks until evening. Every pair in the house has been "heeled" by his industrious wife.

Then, when there are no more socks to mend, Mrs. Kruger may take it into her head to make herself a new dress or "turn" an old one. Every dress that the good lady wears is her own work during the last few years was made by herself. Ladies who are in the habit of presenting dressmakers' bills to their husbands at frequent intervals will be interested to learn that the wife of the president of the South African republic has never had more than three dresses at any one time, and that they are all black. She is satisfied with two hats, which, like the dresses, are not at one. Every dress that the good lady wears or has worn during the last few years was made by herself. Ladies who are in the habit of presenting dressmakers' bills to their husbands at frequent intervals will be interested to learn that the wife of the president of the South African republic has never had more than three dresses at any one time, and that they are all black. She is satisfied with two hats, which, like the dresses, are not at one.

The hat reserved for special occasions, such as visiting with the president or going with him to church, is as well known in Pretoria as "Oom Paul's" invariable silk "topper." One of the lady's many good traits is her love of animals. She deplores the fashion of wearing birds or feathers in feminine headgear, and has herself never been guilty of anything of the kind.

When a statue was being erected to her husband the sculptor visited Mrs. Kruger to ask her opinion of the sketches. The drawings represented the president in his ordinary every-day clothes, with the invisible top hat on his head. Modestly Mrs. Kruger requested that the crown of the hat might be left hollow so that the birds could drink from it when the rain fell. This was agreed to, and now on the rare occasions when the rain falls in the Transvaal a little cloud of birds may be seen fluttering around the top of the Kruger statue, and drinking and bathing in the crown of the hat.

MISSIONARY EFFORT.

Bishop Ridley Has Given Many Years of His Life to It.

He Will Address the Ecumenical Conference on Foreign Missions to Be Held in New York, April 21 to May 1.

There will be no more striking figure than William Ridley, bishop of Caledonia, British Columbia, at the ecumenical conference on foreign missions to be held in New York on April 21 to May 1.

One of the few regions of the world still closed to missionary effort within its borders is still practically impossible, but considerable work is done among the surrounding peoples by missionaries, chiefly of the Church Missionary Society of England. Some of these missionaries have done notable work, and among them is Bishop Ridley. He was sent into India in 1866, working on the confines of the queer domain, and had his missionary training in that most difficult field. A few years later, however, his health obliged him to leave India, and he was appointed chaplain to the British church at Dresden, Saxony, where he remained two years. After this he occupied parishes in England a few years. In 1879 he was appointed the first bishop of Caledonia, British Columbia, bringing to his work there the fruits of his experience in his previous fields, and now for over 20 years has administered the affairs of that diocese with singular ability.

Bishop Ridley is well known as a scholar, and his contributions to philology have been considerable. He is the author of a number of works on local dialects, and has paid particular attention to the various dialects of western British America.

Fifty-eight leading British missionary associations and societies and 70 small missionary bodies will be represented at the conference. Only 11 of them were in existence before Queen Victoria acceded to the throne. Since 1837 British contributions to missions have increased fivefold.

There are now more than 1,544 men and women, inclusive of the wives of missionaries, as the representatives of British missions in China, the total number of Protestant missionaries there from Great Britain, Europe and America being 2,442. The number of known converts when the treaty ports were opened to foreigners in 1842 was six; it is now about 90,000. In 1837 there were only three ordained native Christians in connection with the Church of England missions; now the number in connection with the various British societies is nearly 2,000. The Wesleyan, Baptist and London missionary societies of Great Britain, in some of their fields, have been able to leave the work to the converts themselves and to pass on to the regions beyond. It is said that the work of the Christian church in Africa will soon be in the hands of the Japanese themselves. The British missionary societies have 45,000 native helpers other than the 2,000 ordained natives, and their native church members or communicants number to-day 1,000,000.

Full two-thirds of the entire company of missionaries are employed in India and China, because these two countries number more than 600,000,000, or more than one-half of the non-Christian population of the world.

RT. REV. WILLIAM RIDLEY.
(Missionary Bishop of Caledonia, British Columbia.)

Habits of Deadly Snakes.

Deadly snakes are not seldom seen moving about. This is to be accounted for in two ways. First, they are nocturnal in their habits and generally in repose when discovered. Secondly, if they should be on the move their colors are so much in harmony with their surroundings that they see the intruder first and gather themselves into a coil, so as to escape observation by remaining still and to be ready for defense if necessary. They always strike from a coil, and the distance to which they can strike a great deal depends on the manner of the coil and the position of the object struck at. From a good position a snake can generally strike an object distant one-half or even two-thirds of the creature's length. No snake can jump, in the true sense of the word, and so long as one remains extended at full length it is practically harmless. In such a position it may be easily killed or avoided.

GENIRAL TROUBLE HAS BEEN ADJUSTED

Conference Between Officials and Employes Occurs in New York.

MAY NOT BE PERMANENT.

SOME STATE THAT OTHER DIFFICULTIES MAY SOON OCCUR.

Railroad Officials Anxious to Avoid Trouble, and All Present Differences Are Said to Have Been Satisfactorily Settled.

New York, March 20.—Officials of the Central Railroad of New Jersey held conference yesterday with representatives of the employes of the road who have threatened to go on strike. The officials exhibited some anxiety to avoid trouble and all present differences, it was announced after the conference, were adjusted.

Some of the more dissatisfied among the men said, however, the matter could not be patched up for long and that more trouble is certain to come pretty soon. The troubles grew out of the dissatisfaction of the men because of the discharge of some of the employes without cause or notice. Another grievance was that objection was found to men for no other reason than that they were members of the Brotherhood.

A grievance committee was appointed by the discontented workmen some time ago, and it has conferred with the road officials several times. But up to yesterday, it was said, no agreement had been possible. The road would not admit the fact that it had settled disciplined men without due cause or that it had any antagonism toward the Brotherhood.

The differences grew more and more acute until it was reported yesterday in Jersey City that a strike would be inaugurated in the yard of the Central road in the afternoon.

GRIEF MAKES HER SONG-MAD.

She is the New Brunswick Jail and Sings all the Time.

Sheriff Barclay, of Middlesex county, has a prisoner who sings night and day. Her name is Annie Fanekas. She is song-crazy and cannot stop singing. Several days ago she received word of the sudden death of her mother.

The shock unnerved the girl, and the family by whom she was employed at New Market became alarmed over her queer actions. She burst out in song, and has since done little else. Dr. Wild said she was insane, and she was taken to the county jail in New Brunswick.

The girl sits constantly with her hat and coat on, as if in church, and holds a prayer-book in her hand, which she reads at intervals. Her voice is rather sweet, and inmates of the jail sit by the hour and listen to her.

Home From California.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward White have returned from their trip to California. Mr. White was absent 16 weeks. He expressed the opinion that the prospects for business in the land of sunshine and flowers is not as flattering as he anticipated. He said he would not advise a young man to go to California with the expectation of finding employment. There was little to be had and the wages were very small. Mr. White said he saw a number of New Jersey people in California, some being old Plainfielders, who expressed a desire to return to the east. California is a beautiful country to visit, particularly the southern section, but as a place of residence Mr. White thinks it does not compare favorably with Plainfield.

CHANGE FOR ESSEX IN BERGEN'S BOOM

Discord in Union County Ranks May Lose Nomination For This County.

BERGEN'S CHANCES SMALL.

TROUBLE IS CONTINUATION OF QUARREL AMONG ELIZABETH LEADERS.

Much Interest in Plainfield Over the Republican Congressional Nomina-tion—This City Might Supply A Compromise Candidate.

Every day brings forth fresh assurances that Frank Bergen is really in earnest in his attempt to secure the Republican nomination for Congressman in the Eighth Congressional district. Every local politician of the Republican party is interested as to means opposition for Charles N. Fowler, the present Congressman, and further troubles in the Republican camp at the county seat. The difficulties that may arise from this split in the ranks are far more reaching than appear on the surface.

The Eighth district includes all of Union county, Essex county, except the city of Newark, and the city of Bayonne in Hudson county. The delegates at the Republican Congressional convention are divided so that Union county receives 95; Essex, 86, and Hudson, 18.

Knowing ones say that this fight for the Congressional nomination that has just come to the surface is merely a new phase of the old split that has existed for some time in the Republican ranks at Elizabeth. The fight at the last county convention, when the upper wards of the county seat were lined up against the rest of the city, showed how deep was the feeling. This same undercurrent has existed since Former Mayor Rankin and Senator Kean came to an issue on the question of county leadership.

Although the statement has been made that Senator Kean is not behind Frank Bergen's boom, it is a well understood fact that Mr. Kean and Mr. Fowler are not the best of political friends. Then it is also known that Mr. Bergen is in very intimate relations with the Senator. The inference is that, even if Senator Kean gives no open support to the Bergen boom, he will not offer any opposition.

What is Frank Bergen's object in thus opposing Mr Fowler, is a question that the Republicans are discussing. Is it a real desire to go to Washington, or has the Elizabeth lawyer an ulterior motive in putting up his name as a candidate for the nomination?

A prominent Republican made the statement yesterday that just as sure as Frank Bergen continued to push his candidacy then would the next Republican nominee for Congress from this district be a resident of Essex county. Bergen can not capture all of the Union county delegates. Neither can Fowler if Bergen continues in the race with even the passive support of Senator Kean. That would mean a split in the Union county delegation. Congressman Fowler has many friends in Essex county who would support him if he came as the unanimous choice of Union. A squabble in the Union county delegation would present such an opening, however, that the Essex county people would not fail to take advantage of the opportunity, select a candidate and nominate him with the help of Bayonne while the Union countyites fought among themselves.

The opinion seems to prevail among the rank and file in this city that Congressman Fowler cannot be reconciliated if the fight goes on. Bergen, they say, cannot be nominated unless Senator Kean should come out strongly for him and possibly not then. The fight means practically the surrendering of Union county's chances for representation in the House of Representatives. With an Essex county man once in Congress, it would be many years before the coveted honor would return to Union.

This contest in Elizabeth will have its effect on Plainfield. So far the Plainfield leaders have refused to express their opinion on the fight. One prominent local Republican declared that this city would be united. Another believed that the city would be divided as it was at the county convention.

There is still another opportunity for Plainfield as suggested by a local worker. With the two Elizabeth factions quarrelling over a candidate, Plainfield might step forward with a compromise candidate to be supported by the county delegation. Such a course, while possible, is hardly probable. Plainfield has several citi-

EASTER MUSIC.

Special Programme is Being Arranged —Fine Singers Will be Heard.

The Easter music at the First Presbyterian church this year will be of special interest and grandeur. A quartette composed of three well-known singers from New York, and Miss Blanche Fellows, of this city, will take part at the morning and evening services, and there will be vocal solos by Miss Fellows. A special service will be held in the afternoon under the auspices of the Sunday-school, at which time there will be a presentation of carols by the school, and a vocal solo by Miss Fellows, accompanied by Miss Charlotte Cave, with violin obligato. The regular church choir will be augmented by soloists from the late Messiah chorus.

QUARRY BLAST WAS DEADLY

Premature Explosion Killed One Man and Fatally Hurt Two.

Somerville, March 28.—By the premature explosion of a blast of dynamite in Allen & Russell's quarry, near Watchung, yesterday, George Lord, the foreman of the quarry, was killed, and Frederick Mooney and Emil Louier, laborers, were so seriously hurt that it is possible both will die.

It is believed that the explosion occurred through the adjusting of the firing cap, for the main body of the men had hardly got a safe distance when the explosion came.

To Visit Brothers After Seventeen Years.

Miss Anna Johnson and her sister, Miss Alfrida Johnson, who have been residents of this city for some time past, left Monday for California, where they will take up their residence with their brothers, whom they have not seen in seventeen years. It was only recently that they learned of the whereabouts of the brothers. A correspondence followed and the young women finally decided to make their home with them in the future. They expect to reach California by next Sunday. Their many friends in this city will regret to learn of their departure for they were very popular.

Cornelius Schenck, Ph.D., pastor of Trinity Reformed church, and a near neighbor and dear friend of Mr. Randolph and his afflicted family, made a most effective prayer, eloquent in utterance, sublime in its Christian invocation and particularly touching in its commendation to Almighty God to: Whose gracious goodness he intrusted the spirit of the departed.

Previous to viewing the body was sung most touchingly "Christian, Good Night" Dr. Yerkes pronounced the benediction.

The pallbearers were J. F. Hubbard, J. B. Coward, J. C Pope, John Smith, H. C. Compton and George W. Rockfellow.

The interment was made yesterday in the burying ground adjoining the Friends' meeting-house on Watchung avenue.

THE GIRLS' SCHOOL INVESTIGATION.

Assemblyman Meeker Thinks It Has Gone About Far Enough.

In reply to a question, Assemblyman Meeker, the Union county member of the special committee appointed by the Legislature to investigate the conduct and management of the State Industrial School for Girls, said to a reporter yesterday that the committee probably would not hold a session this week.

Mr. Meeker thought that beyond looking carefully over the testimony already taken and holding one more session the work of the committee was about completed. He said he thought it "had already gone about far enough."

Mean Study Mean.

John Scott, a well-known cab carter, applied to the officers of the Mt. Olive Baptist church, recently, for a license to preach, believing that he was called to the work. Last Monday night there was a meeting of the church and it was decided unanimously to recommend that Mr. Scott take up a course of studies in school and prepare himself for the work of preaching. Mr. Scott has not yet decided whether to take up a course of studies or not.

—Councilman G.P. Mellick has been having an addition built to his summer house near the Hillside Tennis and Golf Clubhouse, making it more roomy and convenient.

—The sale of S. B. Wheeler's goods at Netherwood Farm Dairy Monday afternoon last was most successful. Everything was disposed of at good prices. William N. Pangborn was the auctioneer.

MR. RANDOLPH AT REST.

LARGE TURNOUT OF FRIENDS AT THE SERVICES TUESDAY.

Services Presided by Rev. D. J. Yerkes—Remains Interred in Cemetery of Friends' Society.

A large number of the friends of the late George W. F. Randolph and of his family were present at the home of the deceased Tuesday afternoon to pay their last respects to his memory. The funeral services were held at 4 o'clock at the family residence, 909 West Front street. Besides the relatives and immediate friends of the family many of the neighbors were present, as were also three gentlemen from the quartermaster's department in New York, where for so many years Mr. Randolph was a faithful and efficient clerk. They were Captain Sutorious and Messrs. Edward McLaughlin and M. B. Lovejoy. Chief Clerk Ballinger and Major Ewald, from the transportation department, also sent regrets.

The body of the deceased reposed in a handsome black cloth covered casket, with silver extensions, that occupied a position at the west side of the front parlor. At the head of the casket was placed a beautiful floral anchor, while a bunch of lillies and another set piece were beside the body, which was exposed to view The floral offerings were all from relatives.

A large framed portrait of the deceased, which occupied a position on the wall directly over the casket, was draped with the American flag caught up with crepe. During the services, which were very simple but impressive, the family remained in an upper apartment.

The services were begun by singing "Some Time We'll Understand," after which the Rev. Dr. Yerkes, pastor of the First Baptist church, made an address in which he dwelt at some length upon the uncertainties of life, and the fact that those who were fully prepared for that "Land that is Fairer Than Day" need have no fear of death, which comes to us all and from which none escape. Dr. Yerkes also touched feelingly upon the exemplary life of the deceased and of his generous, noble characteristics that so endeared him to not only his bereaved family but also to his neighbors and many friends.

STIRRING UP THINGS.

Rev. Arthur Crane Makes Sensational Charges in His Pulpit in Charleston, S. C.

It is evident that Rev. Arthur Crane, formerly of this city, who recently accepted a pastorate in Charleston, S.C., is stirring up things in that southern town, as the following despatch in the New York Sun indicates:

"Charleston, S. C., March 25—Rev. Arthur Crane, pastor of the First Baptist church, preached a sensational sermon today on vice and sin in Charleston. Last week he visited the 'silled tigers,' gambling houses and questionable resorts, and his sermon was a tirade against these places. He made statements in the pulpit about the city not altogether true, and some of his stories and jokes had the congregation in a flutter of laughter and merriment. It was a sensational day for a church. A great many people here are not in sympathy with the movement."

A FAREWELL RECEPTION

MONROE AVENUE METHODISTS SAY GOODBY TO REV. W. C. O'DONNELL.

He Will be Transferred to the Flemington Church by the Conference That Meets Next Week.

A farewell reception was tendered to Rev. and Mrs. William C. O'Donnell at Epworth House last Tuesday by the congregation of the Monroe Avenue M. E. church, of which Rev. Mr. O'Donnell is pastor. Next Sunday will be his last in this city and he will then be transferred by conference to Flemington. Such, at least, is the expectation.

There was a large turnout of the congregation to say goodby to their first pastor. During the years that he has been in Plainfield Rev. Mr. O'Donnell has made himself very popular not only with his congregation but with all those with whom he has come in contact. His wife has equally shared in his popularity.

There was a general expression of regret from all the present last evening that they were to lose their pastor and his wife and all united in wishing them the best of success in their new field and promising them a hearty welcome should they ever have the opportunity of visiting Plainfield again.

Epworth House was prettily decorated with palms and potted plants. During the evening several instrumental selections were given by Mr. Wallender, Wolfe, and Miss Hunselman, piano, and Walter L. McGee, superintendent of the Sunday-school, made a short speech, telling of the great esteem in which the young couple are held and wishing them the best of success.

A committee from the Ladies' Aid Society, with Mrs. I. P. LaRue as chairman, served refreshments.

Not to Change.

Do not be deceived by the false reports that are being circulated about town that Harper, the stationer, is about to remove his place of business from the old stand, 411 Park avenue. J. M. Harper, the business manager, told a Press reporter that he had not had any idea of making any change in location, but would continue the business the same as usual at the old stand, 411 Park avenue, third door from Fourth street.

Great Sachem's Visit.

Great Sachem William Newcorn, of the Improved Order of Red Men, has made appointments for his official visitations at several of the tribes of the state. Tuesday evening, he will visit Totowa tribe of Paterson. Wednesday, he goes to Ocean City to visit Keansia tribe. He has accepted the invitation of Canoe tribe, of Paterson, to attend its thirtieth anniversary on April 23rd.

TOLD OF THE HOLY LAND.

LECTURE OF DR. RICHARDS ON WHAT HE SAW IN PALESTINE.

Supplemented With Pictures Taken by the Reverend Gentleman During the Trip.

The chapel of the Crescent Avenue church was filled to its utmost capacity last Tuesday when Dr. Richards gave an interesting lecture on Palestine, through which country he traveled with the Roosevelt party about a year ago. While on this trip Dr. Richards took a number of pictures, and these, together with a few others, were used last evening to depict the country which is of such great interest to all Bible students. The pictures were about the best that have been seen on the subject, and the thorough and complete knowledge of the speaker on the subject made the lecture one of peculiar interest to all.

In traveling from one place to another through the Holy Land, Dr. Richards showed the principal points of interest and related the Bible stories concerning them. The chief events in the life of Christ were dwelt upon and places that He made memorable by visiting and performing some special deed were given an especially prominent place in the lecture. To the many Bible students present the lecture freshened their minds and gave them further interest in their study, and to those present who are not students the lecture was very helpful, and no doubt will tend to excite an interest for the study of this country.

Dr. Richards did not go into detail very much as the time would not permit, but he covered all that was of importance and in this respect the lecture was a great success, as well from a financial standpoint.

OCTOGENARIAN'S BIRTHDAY

Mrs. Betsy French Celebrated Her Eighty-sixth Year in a Pleasant Way Tuesday.

A very pleasant home gathering took place Tuesday afternoon and evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. C. Frank French, Washington avenue, in honor of the birthday anniversary of Mr. French's mother, Mrs. Betsy French, who was 86 years old. The occasion was one of great pleasure to the children, the children and grandchildren who gathered to do her honor. Mrs. French is hale and hearty and entered into the festivities with a zest characteristic of one much younger in years. During the affair there was vocal and instrumental music and speaking by the young folks, all of which added to the enjoyment of those present. There were sixteen members of the family present, and one of the features was the bountiful supper served during the early part of the evening. All wished the celebrant many happy returns of the day.

SEYMOUR AND SMITH BATTLE.

Newark Democrats Involved in Bitter Factional Quarrel.

Newark, March 28—The bitterest fight ever known in the Democratic party in this city is on, and the primaries tonight are likely to be lively, as is the convention to be held Thursday night.

Because Mayor Seymour, who is seeking renomination, refused to permit former Senator Smith to dictate appointments, the latter, it is said, has passed the word along the line to defeat the Mayor at all hazards.

The first gun in the battle was fired when the Common Council, which has been called upon to confirm the nomination of Frederick T. Leonard for City Comptroller, failed of a quorum.

Reformatory Commission Changes.

Trenton, March 28—Governor Voorhees yesterday appointed ex-Assemblyman George Squire, of Union, as a member of the State Reformatory Commission to succeed Rev. Dr. George S. Mott, resigned.

Sworn as the Officer.

William Drake, a hackman, was arrested last Tuesday by Patrolman McCarty for swearing to himself and then slinging profanity at the officer. He pleaded guilty and sentence was suspended on account of his previous good record.

In Mr. Gilbert's Place.

David P. Hall has been secured to take the place of Former Mayor Alexander Gilbert on the programme in the "Five Evenings with Thackeray," at the Unitarian church April 30th. The subject will be "Thackeray's Essay's."

Left Large Family.

Mrs. Noath Peterson, colored, aged 67 years, died yesterday afternoon at her home 107 East Sixth street. Death was caused by a tumor. She leaves a husband and eight children, six married and two single.

JENNIE PERSEVERES.

Little McLaren Girl Will Plead Again for Pardon for Her Father in Prison.

Little Jennie McLaren is about to make another attempt to secure a pardon for her father, who is now in State Prison, serving twenty years for the murder of his common-law wife, the girl's mother. Jennie comes from Hoboken, where she awakened much interest in the case. She appeared before the Court of Pardons last term. Last week she filed a new petition with several hundred signatures, many of the signers being well known officials and citizens of Hudson county. The petition reopens the case, and today the investigating committee of the Court of Pardons will go to the State Prison and will examine all petitions, Bunyon & Bruce, of this city, are her attorneys.

WHIST AND EUCHRE.

Card Playing Clubs Entertained by Mr. and Mrs. Rogers and Miss Force.

Mr. and Mrs. B. B. Rogers, of Westervelt avenue, entertained the Tuesday Night Whist Club, of which they are members, last Tuesday, for Miss Moser, of Somerville, who was to have been captained. This was the last meeting of the club for the present series, but the members unanimously agreed to reorganize and play another series. The next meeting will be held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Angleman, Somerset street.

The prize winners last Tuesday were Mrs. Walter Apgar and Mrs. W. H. Angleman for the women, and R. B. Rogers and W. H. Angleman for the men. After the games a social time was enjoyed and refreshments were served.

The Tuesday Evening Euchre Club was pleasantly entertained last Tuesday by Miss Minnie Force, of Carlton avenue. The house was tastily decorated with palms, potted plants, and a pretty effect was obtained through the use of colored lights. There were five tables, equal number, and the playing was close and exciting. After the game a collation was served and the members furnished vocal and instrumental music.

Miss Margaret Somers and Mrs. Harry Coddington won the prizes for the women, while Dennis E. Gavin and J. P. D. Kirch won the honors for the men. Miss May MacLoughlin, of Somerset street, will entertain the club in two weeks.

AGED WOMAN'S FUNERAL

Impressive Services Held Over the Remains of the Late Mary Cadmus Tuesday Afternoon.

The funeral services of the late Mrs. Mary Cadmus were held Tuesday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock from the homestead on Myrtle avenue. There was a very large attendance of relatives and friends. Rev. Charles E. Herring, pastor of the First Presbyterian church, officiated, and spoke of the exemplary Christian life of the departed. He referred to her great usefulness in church work and outside of the church, and also said she was the oldest member of the church at the time of her death. Words of comfort were spoken to the bereaved ones and they were helped by the words of praise of the aged woman.

During the illness of Mrs. Cadmus it was the custom for Miss Abbott and Miss Burrows to visit her and sing favorite hymns. They were present at the services Tuesday and sang two hymns effectively. There was a beautiful display of floral tributes, including a large wreath.

Interment took place in the North Plainfield cemetery and those who acted as pall-bearers were R. V. Cadmus, A. V. Searing, J. A. Burrows and W. H. Shotwell, all of whom were intimately acquainted with the departed.

FORTUNE FOR SERVANT GIRL.

Ann Byrne, of Summit, to Receive $25,000 From Aunt's Estate.

Summit, March 28.—Miss Ann Byrne, about thirty years of age, who is employed in the family of Prof. James A. Heard, of the Summit Academy, has been notified that she is one of three heirs to a fortune of $125,000 left by an aunt who died in New York several months ago. Miss Bryne was unaware of her aunt's wealth until an examination of her affairs showed that she had about that amount of money invested in real estate in New York. Miss Byrne's share of the fortune will be about $25,000.

Rescued Not Finished.

Elizabeth, March 28.—The County Board of Election was unable to finish the recount of the vote taken in Cranford, over which there is a contest, and yesterday afternoon the work was suspended until tomorrow, when it will be finished.

DUMONT WOULD DELAY BUILDING CITY HALL.

He Will Lead Opposition in the Common Council to the Project.

SAYS IT WILL COST TOO MUCH

PRICE OF BUILDING MATERIAL IS VERY HIGH JUST NOW.

By Carrying Out the Improvement a Year Later Mr. Dumont says That the City Will be Able to Save Several Thousand Dollars.

Current rumor has it that the opposition in the Common Council against the immediate building of a City Hall will be led by Councilman John B. Dumont. In the preliminary questions relating to the subject that have come before the Council, Mr. Dumont has been very particular that his vote should not bind him to support the City Hall movement. He has been rather reticent about speaking on the subject heretofore. Now, however, that the advocates of a new City Hall have announced their intention of securing immediate action on the part of the Council, Mr. Dumont was interviewed by a reporter yesterday morning concerning his stand and his reasons therefore.

Mr. Dumont was free to say that he did not believe that it would be wise for the city to erect a municipal building this year. The question of a City Hall has, he said, been a matter more or less of sentiment. The immediate need of better quarters for the police and the city jail than the old "rookery" no longer existed, he said. The new quarters in the Olympia were satisfactory and would answer the purpose for several years to come.

It would be the very opposite of economy, he explained, to build this year. Prices of building materials, he said, had been steadily going up for the past year until they are now higher than they have been for the past twenty-five years and higher than they are likely to be for ten years to come.

Mr. Dumont cited the fact that a number of builders right in this city have postponed proposed operations until the prices are somewhat reduced. If private individuals found the prices too high at present, Mr. Dumont believed that the city should not spend the people's money to pay such high prices when the need is not really pressing need of a new City Hall.

By delaying the City Hall movement for twelve months or more, Mr. Dumont expressed his opinion that the city would be the gainer to the extent of several thousand dollars, brought about by the reduction in prices of building materials that is, in his opinion, bound to occur. A City Hall would undoubtedly be a nice thing for the city but he continued that it was by no means a necessity at present and that the erection of one this year would be contrary to the best interests of the city and its most economical management.

MORRIS COUNTY'S IRON BOOM

Report That a Steel Plant will be Established at Port Oram.

The iron industry in Morris county, which has been booming recently, is to be further augmented. There will be a renewal of operations at the old Stanhope furnaces next week, and it is also reported in iron circles that negotiations are in progress between the executors of the Cooper-Lord estate and the Rockefellow syndicate for the establishment of a large steel plant at Port Oram. The proposed new works will be of an extensive character and will give employment to several thousand men.

The most welcome news to the iron ore miners now employed in several of the old mines is that after April 1st their wages are to be advanced twenty-five cents a day.

Theatre Evening.

Rev. A. C. Nicherson, the pastor of All Souls' church, entertained a good-sized audience at that edifice Tuesday, when he presented a paper on "The Newcomes." It was the third of the series of literary entertainments on Thackeray and like the previous ones was much enjoyed. After the reading the paper was thoroughly discussed by those who are close students of the celebrated author's work.

Loan Association Officers.

The following officers have been elected by the Plainfield Building and Loan Association: President, I. E. Barkalew; vice-president, Henry Lieke; treasurer, W. E. Codington; secretary, B. NEW IRISH LEADER.

John E. Redmond, Well-Known in This Country, Elected Chairman of the Nationalists.

John Redmond, the Parnellite leader, member of parliament for Waterford City, was unanimously elected chairman of the United Irish nationalist party at a meeting held in a committee room of the house of commons the other day. A vote of thanks was given Timothy Harrington for his success in restoring unity among the nationalists.

Since the death of Parnell Mr. Redmond has been one of the foremost of the Irish leaders. Americans had an opportunity of hearing his eloquence and of gauging his earnestness. He visited the United States in 1884 and made a tour of the principal cities with his lecture on "Fifteen Years in the British Parliament." They saw a strongly built man of medium height, a fine head, with thick hair of a ruddy color, and a small mustache, which in no wise concealed a firm mouth.

JOHN E. REDMOND.
(Chairman of the United Irish National Party.)

Mr. Redmond's speeches in parliament have ever an attentive and often a thrilled audience. He is a tactician who knows the value of obstructing business and who realizes just when and how to do it. He can speak for a day, or for days, if need be, as he did upon one occasion when he wished to hold the house on a question vital to Ireland. It was in that memorable speech Mr. Redmond gave to Charles Stewart Parnell his title of "uncrowned king," which has survived the great land leaguer, and which has been considered the most felicitous epigram in public speaking. Mr. Redmond's style is deliberate, he has wonderful reserve, and when he opens wide the gates of his oratory his power is superb and overleaps itself.

The new chairman of the Irish party is 44 years old and a Wexford man. He was educated altogether in Ireland. He stepped almost directly from the University of Dublin, where he was graduated, into the house of commons as representative of the borough of New Ross, and was afterward elected for Wexford, but since 1891 he has sat for the city of Wexford. He is a member of both the Irish and the English bar, and a lawyer who understands the origin of law as well as its theory and practice.

In 1884 Mr. Redmond made a tour of Australia and visited America on his way home, landing at San Francisco, and seeing most of the cities of America on his journey to New York.

COWS WEAR SPECTACLES.

To Protect Them from the Terrible Glare of the Snow on the Vast Steppes of Russia.

The enormous steppes of Russia, on which range great herds of cattle, are covered with snow for at least six months out of every year. The cattle live upon the tall bunches of grass which project above the snow. The long continued glare from these snowfields, it has been found, makes the animals blind, in which condition they are with difficulty able to find the necessary amount of food. A large Russian cattle raiser with an eye at once to profit and philanthropy has, accordingly, invented snow glasses for the protection of the cattle's eyes. The glasses are made of smoked glass and are fastened about the animals' heads by straps, as shown in the illustration. In a single herd, it is reported, there are 40,000 cattle which wear these queer spectacles.

Big Maple Sugar Factory.

More Vermont maple sugar is made every year in Davenport, Ia., from cheap yellow sugar flavored with vegetable extracts than can be produced from all the maple trees in the whole state of Vermont. Currant jelly is manufactured from the cores and parings of apples utilized after they have been evaporated; glucose, sugar, a vegetable acid and essential oil and flavoring matter complete the delicacy.

Teaching Patriotism by Means of Colored Paper in Chicago

Not the least important duty of the public school teacher in America is to inspire the pupil with love of country. Any method which tends to enliven the dull routine of school work with a touch of genuine sentiment, whose mission is to embellish a bare rule or principle with an outward beauty that will appeal to the sensitive child, comes the nearest to being in accord with the real science of pedagogy. The individualities of the children are too often ignored, and it is little wonder that the latter do not all fit into the same mold. There are few teachers who have not on their rolls the names of some few pupils who are dragging at the foot of their classes and who seem to take little interest in their daily work. It is now being more universally recognized that the fault is not entirely with the pupil, but often with the system. This fact has put every teacher on his mettle to discover just the thing which will make the sharpest appeal to pupils of this class.

Little Hands Making the Windows.

A certain teacher whose province it is to mold a portion of the youthful mind of a foreign settlement of Chicago and to see her charges well started on the highway of American citizenship, has discovered by a chance observation, that strawboard and colored tissue paper may be made into something of real value as an educational aid. She has seen in them a chance to replace the dismal and cheerless views from her schoolroom windows with a bit of cheer and comfort, a gayety of color more nearly approaching the hues of a bright autumn day in the country. This discovery has been the cause of beautifying and enlivening many school rooms in the crowded portions of the city. The scheme is receiving recognition among Chicago teachers as a happy expedient.

An Adjunct to Regular Lessons.

By the use of strawboard and tissue paper the children in the lower grades of the Chicago schools have learned to make beautiful and artistic illuminated windows, and this work is proving a valuable adjunct to the regular lessons. It has been found that almost every study may be profitably illustrated by a clever use of these transparencies.

George Washington, a Job but Effective.

The scheme is simple but effective. A design is drawn upon a sheet of strawboard and that portion of it which represents the body of the picture is then cut out, leaving a skeleton, the lines of which correspond to the lead joinings in a real illuminated window. Colored tissue papers are then pasted on the back of the skeleton over the apertures.

When skillfully made these transparencies, except on close examination, "may be taken for the real leaded and stained glass windows, particularly when the former are lit up by a flood of sunlight. Many of the windows made by the Chicago school children are of remarkable accuracy. Such interest has been taken in this work by the children of the foreign districts that the windows of many homes in this portion of the metropolis have been decorated by them, and many a gloomy and cheerless living-room has been blessed with a baptism of glowing light and color. It is unnecessary to add that the effect upon the whole household is a most salutary one. Lessons in patriotism are brought naturally and clearly to the child's attention through the medium of this new art work. The showy masses of color are what appeal most strongly to the average child. Consequently, much a pupil finds in these creations of his own lessons that he might never gain from a study of bare, uninviting facts.

Some Athletic Productions.

The fact that children between the ages of six and nine years can produce anything really artistic and worth exhibiting may be regarded by many people with incredulity. However, examination of the exhibits of illuminated windows made by children within the areas who attend the public schools of Chicago will convince the most skeptical that the ability of the youngsters in this line is marked. Some of the windows show elaborate and intricate figures similar to carpet and oilcloth designs, many of them being original. In the choice of a subject a wide latitude is allowed and all sorts of every studies from life are worked out with the colored tissue papers and strawboard.

One feature of this illuminated construction work which makes the scheme of practical value in the poorer districts is the inexpensiveness of the materials used. For three cents and a little labor a large window looking upon some dingy court may be transformed into a thing of art and beauty. Thus the cost of beautifying at least one small window at home is brought within the means of the poorest child, and the labor involved is performed with an enthusiasm that speaks volumes for success of the plan. So eager are the pupils to get the scissors into their hands and to experiment with the bright-colored papers that this privilege is held out, in many instances, as a reward of merit. With this reward in view the pupils apply themselves to their studies with increased zeal. In numerous instances the work has proved of lasting benefit to the pupil in that it has aroused within him a dormant liking for his school work.

A Happy Medium.

Pictorial effects in colored tissue paper and strawboard, as illustrated by this illuminated window work executed by the children of the Chicago schools, the becoming more and more widely appreciated as happy mediums by which quick and lasting impressions may be presented to the pupil's mind. Many children who are dull and slow in their regular studies seem readily to catch the meaning conveyed by these transparencies. Subjects of a patriotic nature predominate to a large extent in exhibitions of this work. "Barbara Frietchie" was the theme for a most impressive example of this style. It was made by one of the pupils after he had heard the thrilling story of the poem by Whittier and shamed the confederate soldiers with these words: "Shoot, if you must, this old gray head."

Barbara Frietchie, an Inspiring Theme.

Invariably American history lessons are more amply illustrated than others by the pupils, for the reason that they possess a greater fascination for the pupils of the settlements than for the children from the better portions of the city. Geography, literature, science and manual training are some of the studies which lend themselves readily to this style of illustration. Many of the figures and outlines used are, of course, copied from other pictures. By the use of these simple materials well-known paintings have been reproduced with striking effect. A splendid example of this is the "Immaculate Conception," which was made by the pupils of one of the higher grades. In the execution of this full-length window transparency the pupils took their own measurements and did their own cutting and pasting. The school to which this window belongs exhibits it with warrantable pride.

"The Stars and Stripes."

To the true American the most pleasing feature of the illuminated construction work done by some of the Chicago schools is the fact that the children, in all departments where the new art is used, are taught to make graceful representations of the stars and stripes. In this manner the national flag finds its way into the homes and hearts of the residents of the foreign districts. So beautiful are some of the windows made by some of the children at home that passers-by often stop to inspect them. Here, also, views of the national capitol and other buildings at Washington are frequently to be seen. It is cheering, to say the least, to find within the slums not even such slight evidences of the wholesome influence which is being exerted by the public schools of the city.

Children, whether foreign or American, are susceptible to the lessons that are presented to them through a medium which they can understand. And herein lies the whole secret of the success of the illuminated construction work. The "skids" which have crept into the work of the public school teacher have done do, not by the authority of school officials, but as a natural growth—the result of long experimenting with the vexatious problems of the schoolroom. They have been oftentimes, from little incidents of no significance in themselves, but which have pointed out to the alert teacher the only satisfactory means by which dull scholars might be made to enter into the true spirit of their school work.

The Grand American Handicap

Crack Shots of the Country Will Compete in New York From April 2 to 6

APRIL 2, at Interstate park, Borough of Queens, New York, the preliminary gun will be fired in the grand American handicap. Every lover of shooting in the United States will "watch the scores" that rise from the vicinity of the traps, although, physically speaking, this will be a chimerical task for most of the trap shooters will use smokeless powder. What the American derby and the suburban are to the followers of the turf, the national baseball season is to the "fan," or the Henley regatta is to the oarsmen, the "G. A. H." is to live bird shots. Last season the seventh annual "G. A. H." was shot, and it was the greatest event of its kind ever held in the world. Two hundred and seventy-eight entries were received for the event. This year the entries close March 24, and there is not a shot of prominence in the country who is not confidently expecting that the list for the eighth annual event will show over 300 entries. Manager Elmer E. Shaner, of the Interstate association, which will handle the shooters who come to New York to participate, has sent out the programme for the tournament. It is as follows:

HON. THOMAS A. MARSHALL.
Two-Time Winner Grand American Handicap.

Monday, April 3—Interstate Park Introductory, eight birds, five dollars entrance; team contest, 25 birds, $50 prize; Brooklyn Queens sweepstakes, 12 birds, seven dollars entrance, even distance, 30 yards' rise.

Tuesday, April 4—Nitro-Powder handicap, 16 birds, ten dollars entrance; handicap from 21 to 28 yards, and miss out counts if shot at; penalties.

Wednesday, April 5—Grand American handicap, 25 birds, $25 entrance, handicap from 21 to 28 yards, $1,000 guaranteed by the Interstate association and all surplus added, sterling silver trophy, $300 to first high gun, $200 to second high gun, and $100 to third high gun. All money in the purse in excess of the $1,500 will be divided in accordance with the number of entries received.

Friday, April 6—Grand American handicap continued; Interstate association badges, and Long Runs sweepstakes, even distance, and miss and out sweepstakes.

Last season 295 shots faced the traps as actual contestants in the record breaking handicap. The accommodations for this year's event are being made for a larger number of starters. It is to be hoped that the arrangements will be needed. In 1893, when the big handicap was started, there were 81 entries. From the entries that have already been sent in, it is to be seen that the same widespread interest will be again manifested—in fact, it is a surprise no follower of the traps if at least 40 states are represented in the list. Last year 29 states sent shooters to the handicap, and Canada and Mexico had nominations. New York and New Jersey naturally were most promi- nent among the states making large entries, but Illinois, with 34 entries—eight less than New York and seven less than New Jersey—was easily the banner western state. The grand total of 510 entries has been made in the handicap since its inception. Because the G. A. H. is thought to be of much importance to shooters, and is productive of much good to the high guns, it is not to be taken into the same category with the target shooting tournaments.

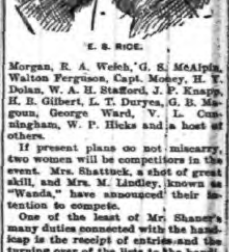
"There must, of a necessity, come a time when we must cease to grow," said Mr. Shaner, recently, in a letter to a follower of shooting;

"I do not know that our maximum has been attained, but I do know that the handicap is now rated as high with the skilled shots as the Olympian games were held by the ancient Greeks. The Interstate association has control and management where it can successfully view any strictures that carping critics can make. From a managerial standpoint, 278 entries are not unwieldly, and I believe it is possible to manage the G. A. H. successfully up to a point of 400 or more entries. But in the interest of contestants, to have a greater number of entries than last year, would, in my opinion, tend to cheapen our annual contest by reducing it to the level of a show. To continue to permit more and more entries would be retrogression, in my opinion. The handicap should be so arranged as to make conditions harder without departing from our system, and be so that it could be shot in one day. Without detracting from the interest in the least, conditions might be made so that the nominations would not exceed 100.

"I have held that should the entry list fall below 100, the G. A. H. would still be the finest of its kind in the world—it would still excel the Grand Prix at Monte Carlo and be in a class by itself. It would be unapproached and unapproachable. By limiting the number of entries we do away with possible unavoidable mishaps, such as change of weather, sudden illness of contestants, etc. It is evident that the big event has been a very severe strain on the contestants. The sportsmen would give their consent to the changing of conditions, not the system."

Mr. Shaner being a man who has to look after countless details, is not an enthusiastic about mere numbers as are the shooters. He means well and has the cooperation of the sportsmen, but it is safe to say that if the enthusiasm of the trap shots is any indication, the number of nominations will be as much larger this season as last year's list was greater than that of 1898.

To get a list of the most prominent shots who will fight guns at the birds, one needs but to look over a list of the skilled shots. Mayor Thomas A. Marshall, of Keithsburg, Ill., twice winner of the handicap, will surely be a starter. That he will be on the back mark with J. A. R. Elliott, Capt. Jack Brewer, Charles Grimm and Dr. Carver is not doubted by the critics. Then there will be Fred Gilbert, of Spirit Lake, Ia.; Rollo A. Heikes, of Ohio; H. S. Rice, Ed. Bingham, John Watson, H. H.



E. S. RICE.

Morgan, R. A. Welch, G. S. McAlpin, Walton Ferguson, Capt. Money, H. V. Dolan, W. A. H. Stafford, J. P. Knapp, H. B. Gilbert, L. T. Duryea, G. B. Magoun, George Ward, V. L. Cunningham, W. P. Hicks and a host of others.

If present plans do not miscarry, two women will be competitors in the event. Mrs. Shattuck, a shot of great skill, and Mrs. M. Lindley, known as "Wanda," have announced their intention to compete.

One of the least of Mr. Shaner's many duties connected with the handicap is the receipt of entries and the turning over of the lists to the handicap committee to arrange the allowances, March 25. The manager must provide at least 10,000 pigeons for the shoot. Mr. Shaner begins the hunt for strong flying birds, so that the shots may have the hardest kind of work in getting a big kill. Slower and heavier pigeons would be manifestly better matches for the guns of the experts. In many a contest a strong, muscular bird has flown over the boundary line so much dreaded by the shots, carrying a load of lead in its body. Of course the scorer says "lost bird" in such a case. "A sucker" with the same amount of shot in its body would fall within a few feet of the place where he first lifted when hit.

Among the western shots who have come up in the last few years is Richard Dwyer, the race-track starter. He would rather handle a shot gun at a shoot even on the coldest of days than go to a theater. He is now practicing daily for the G. A. H., and his friends say that he will give Elliott and Gilbert a hard run. "The born shots," men who are most prominent in the ranks of trap artists to-day, will need more than practice as a great factor in their victories at the traps, whether shooting at targets or flying birds. A few days' trial to "get the eye in" is absolutely necessary. So it may be taken for granted that the experts who will shoot in the G. A. H. are even now burning powder in practice.

The GLORY of the EASTER HAT.

MILLINERY openings for the spring of 1900 are a thing of the past. Easter hats are now a choice topic of conversation wherever women congregate, and this year the subject is certainly a fascinating one, for never before have hats been more beautiful or more varied. In the millinery of the day the latest Paris fad for ribbons is well utilized, but with the ribbons come great masses of flowers in their natural colors, with roses well in the lead, and after them the green foliage. Of this a novelty has been introduced in the form of gauze-like leaves that are prepared by a chemical process from tobacco and palm leaves.

Then in addition to flowers and ribbons fruit has made its appearance as a millinery trimming. It may not be decidedly new, in fact it was used to some extent in Paris as early as last year, but it is just as pretty as though it were a decided novelty. The luscious looking cherries which are being laid flatly on the brims of some of the low crowned hats look tempting enough to eat.

Of the popular shapes the majority have tall crowns and large brims twisted into all sorts of fantastic shapes with numerous bends at the sides, and in many of them one side of the crown is much higher than the other. In toques there are natty little affairs made of fancy braids, and lace effect braids. In these some are seen in which two, three and sometimes four different styles of braid are used. At times one may find them with crown of corn braid, and a border of fancy black edged at one side with a lacy braid of Nile green or other equally startling color. Then, again, one may find the crown of a red braid with a wide brim of fancy black, and edged with two rows of white lacy braid.

Green is a popular color. It is utilized in foliage, in ribbons and in the grassy-green braids that are quite popular. Yellow is also a popular color made up in combination with white. A hat showing these combinations was a large affair of yellow Swiss braid curled high at one side and lined with a white lace braid.

One of the pattern hats that attracted attention in a New York store was a lovely affair of white silk gauze made over a wire frame, and filled in at the top with pink roses and loops of green lady-effect ribbon, having the loops of the ribbon and pink roses resting on the hair at one side.

Another model hat was of fancy yellow straw trimmed with masses of white mousseline de soie and red cherries with their foliage mingled with red velvet ribbon.

A hat of black straw of an open work pattern turned high at one side had a lovely white ostrich feather sweeping over the brim, and caught with a paste buckle in front.

One of the prettiest of the small toques was of white shirred tulle with high loops of black velvet ribbon dotted with white silk and bordered at one edge with a very narrow ruching of white satin ribbon. White crushed roses at one side.

A large hat of Italian braid in a deep straw color had four pippings of scarlet velvet on the inside, and rosettes of scarlet chiffon mingled with white under the brim. Three black tips caught in front and drooping gracefully over the brim.

For children's hats nothing is prettier than the high peaked crowns with rolling brims and novel trimmings of straw braids in all colors. The braids are made into rosettes in some and in large loose loops in others. In many of the children's hats this is the only trimming.

And so one might go on through almost endless variety. Truly the Easter hat of the closing century is a glorious affair.

WOMAN WITH A LONG PAST.

She Tells in Trance of Previous Existence in Mars and India.

The greatest interest is manifested at Paris in a book by M. Flournoy, professor in the faculty of sciences in Geneva university, giving the history of some remarkable observations. The one is the apparent reincarnation of a woman, aged 30, of irreproachable character, who is engaged in a commercial house, says the New York Sun. She is subject to fits of somnambulism in which she refers to three previous existences—on the planet Mars, in India and in France in the time of Marie Antoinette.

Flournoy, who at first suspected trickery, either spontaneous or instigated, abandoned the hypothesis when the woman, telling of her life on Mars, spoke in a presumably Martian language, using clearly articulated sounds and forming words corresponding with definite ideas. The same words always correspond to the same ideas. She also writes peculiar characters which do not vary.

As regards India, she speaks and writes Sanskrit and Arabic, showing a thorough knowledge of both. Flournoy verified by means of old historical manuscripts only accessible to students of history the truth of the principal episodes to which she referred. No stress is laid on the Marie Antoinette period, as the opportunities for trickery are too great. As regards the other two, Flournoy vouches for their accuracy.

The woman remembers nothing when she awakes. She never had an opportunity in this life at least of learning Arabic and Sanskrit. Flournoy offers no conclusion. He simply narrates the occurrences, but does not disguise his perplexity. Several savants are investigating.

WILL TAKE WAGNER TO SEA.

California Capitalist Has Engaged Special Orchestra For a Voyage.

Robert Elliott of San Francisco, capitalist and cicuboan, feels the need of a sea voyage. The noise of the marine engine is disquieting to his nerves, so he prefers to go in a sailing vessel. He has engaged quarters on the Shenandoah, one of the speediest clipper ships afloat, which is to sail for Australia in a few days.

Mr. Elliott is a devotee of Wagner. The cabin doors were too small to admit a piano, so it was lowered through the skylight. Four wind instrument musicians, who could also double on strings, were engaged and set to practicing Wagner's music. By the time the Shenandoah is ready to sail the orchestra will have a large repertory.

"My physician advised a long sea voyage," said Mr. Elliott the other day to a New York World reporter, "and I feel just sick enough to obey him. My wife will accompany me, and as we are both fond of music the idea of taking an orchestra with us suggested itself. Our voyage is expected to occupy five months, including our stay in Sydney. It is possible that we will never go ashore during the entire trip."

NEW GUNS FOR THE NAVY.

Six Pounders That Can Fire Seventy-Five Shots a Minute.

The navy department at Washington has ordered fifty 6 pound guns for use on the new vessels of the navy. These guns are automatic and can fire 75 shells per minute, as demonstrated by tests made this week at Indian Head.

The highest record heretofore made with 6 pounder automatic guns is 42 to the minute. The tests of the new gun were regarded as so satisfactory that the secretary of the navy ordered the 50 guns, and it is the understanding that a larger supply will be on hand when the new batteries of the projected ships demand it.

Heretofore in the firing of shells from guns of this caliber it was necessary to pull the trigger every time a shell was ejected. According to the description of the new gun, as soon as a shell is put in the gun closes, fires, recoils and returns to battery, the breech opens, ejects the empty shell and leaves the gun ready for the next shell.

This process can be repeated so fast that a record of 75 to the minute was made. Navy officials look upon the new gun as a fine addition to the equipment of the new battleships of warships and congratulate themselves on the fact that it is an American invention.

A Home For Old Horses.

Articles of incorporation of the Equine Provident society were filed in the county clerk's office in Brooklyn the other day, says the World. The object of the society is "to provide a shelter and ranch where horses which have served their masters faithfully can be taken care of in their declining years." The directors are Henry C. Karpenstein of 125 Vernon avenue, Joseph O. Karpenstein of 25 Vernon avenue and Frederick J. Maynard of Tenth avenue and Seventy-second street.

SUITS FOR SPRING.

The Neatest and Newest Have Sweepingly Little Stess Jackets.

This week has been prolific in very novel waists, and she would be a difficult woman to please who could not find something to her taste.

The greater part of these waists are made entirely of ribbon and lace. This combination gives opportunity for many beautiful effects. One design has the sleeves made of alternate rows of old rose pink ribbon with white valenciennes insertion. The rows go around the arm. A full frill of edging of the same with finishes the wrists. The waist has horizontal lines of the ribbon and insertion, with a crush belt of wide ribbon in the same shade and a handsome bow at the left side.

The collar is of white mull, with a narrow ruffle of lace to match. Down the center in front are two ruffles of lace, with one band of ribbon between them, and on this are four bows of the ribbon, with fishtail ends. This idea is carried out in several colors, the most striking of all being black velvet ribbon over white lace.

Another one of these ribbon waists had narrower ribbon and cluny lace. The sleeves were so arranged that the ribbon and lace took a spiral form. Any kind of ribbon is pretty, and especially so is the pompadour printed or woven designs. Light ribbon united with black lace is also very handsome. There is a satin faced ribbon with a strong linen back that is quite as pretty for these waists as the more expensive all silk ones. "Waists" of all kinds will have a vogue this season quite equal to last, only that they will, generally speaking, be more ornate than they were.

The new silk squares for waists have caught popular favor. They are like big handkerchiefs, four in a set, two for the front and back and two for the sleeves. Some have white corners with clan borderings; others look like a pack of cards spread out. Roman stripes form the design on others. Taken altogether, they resemble the old bandannas worn by the mammies down south. But they are certainly stylish when made up.

Odd and striking effects are obtained by the different manipulation and matching of the stripes or checks.

A PRETTY SPRING SUIT.

Some of these squares have a soft and narrow fringe all around, carrying the colors of the silk. Where the body of the square is in solid color and the border is in graduated stripes it is often made up so as to have a bolero effect.

There are some close all over patterns in a sort of Persian design and coloring, the borderings being satin stripes of one or more of the predominating colors. The dainty pastel shades are mingled with rose, dark red, porcelain blues and greens in the rather metallic shades called serpent.

The new tailor suits are now out in force in all the stores, and there is a surprising similarity of design, especially as regards the jacket. The skirts are made wide at the bottom, not so long, and all are fuller at the top. The double box plait divides popularity with the "bonne femme" skirts. These are plaited part of the way down, and the fullness is allowed to form a sort of flounce at the bottom. A very little cloth shows up well in this kind of skirt.

There are very many ways of making a skirt look rich and handsome with little labor. One of the new suits is of very wide wale cheviot in a rich dark blue. The front breadth is rounded off over the instep and white cloth, with many rows of black braid. These rows of the braid extend around the whole skirt and up the slashed front, curled over at intervals.

The Eton jacket waist, which is the novelty of the season, is the slashed over the white and trimmed with the braid up the fronts to the shoulders. This special jacket is double breasted, but fastens invisibly.

The Eton jacket is the most stylish of the pretty basques evolved in a long time. There is scarcely a limit to the variety of them, and yet they are always Etons. Some are straight across the lower part in the back, some are rounded, and others have the little postilion setting exactly like those worn by the boys in Eton college.

They are intended to be worn with a fancy underwaist and as outdoor jackets, to be supplemented by a fur victorine or other small neckwear. For spring days are chilly or maybe with a small cape.

Laundering of Silk Stockings—Care of the Complexion.

Silk stockings, colored or black, should never be washed with soap. Warm bran water should be used, and the stockings should be squeezed, not wrung, and dried in the shade.

Cold, especially cold winds, have a worse effect on the complexion than the sun, which is usually considered its worst enemy. They parch and chap the skin, rendering it red and scaly, and care should be taken to protect the face before going out in cold weather. A very little cold cream, well rubbed in, and then a slight film of rice powder of good quality will shield the complexion wonderfully. Glycerin or cold cream should be used on the lips also, and a veil should always be worn. The powder may be washed off with warm water as soon as one returns indoors, and powder should never remain on the face overnight. The theory that soap injures the complexion is quite false. Of course, only fine toilet soaps should be used, but the face ought to be washed thoroughly with soap and warm water every night, to remove all dust and keep the pores of the skin open.

The cut shows a costume of green cloth. The skirt is ornamented around the foot by nine folds of deep blue velvet, and is lined with blue silk. The bodice is tight and is trimmed with velvet bands in front, closing with a double row of little blue buttons. Mrs. Watson is now cards. The yoke is of guipure, with an application of stitched green cloth, and the collar is also of the stitched green cloth. There are small revers of blue velvet around the yoke, back and front, and cuffs of blue velvet on the tight sleeves. Folds of blue velvet also trim the sleeves in points, and a velvet fold serves as a belt. The hat of green velvet is trimmed with a bow of blue velvet, a gold buckle and black plumes. JUDGE CROLLEY.

MILLINERY NOTES.

Hats and Other Pretty Details of Fashion.

Large toques in the turban style, such as have been worn during the winter, are appearing for the early spring. They are trimmed with plumes and tulle draperies. There are also toques garlanded with vine leaves and autumn foliage.

For elaborate wear there are toques of beaded or spangled lace and tulle, trimmed with one or two immense flowers, so large as to admit of no other decoration. These gigantic experiments are to characterize much of the spring millinery.

A novelty is seen in the form of long, single scarfs of white mousseline de soie, with ends embroidered in colored silk.

RECEPTION GOWN.

The fashion of mingling flowers with the ruches of mousseline boas has returned. These neck decorations are very pretty and becoming.

Embroidery of flowers in colored silks upon lace has been much used for rich table scarfs of renaissance and other lace, but its employment for gowns is a new idea. The picture shows a gown of this sort. The skirt of white crepe de chine is tucked lengthwise over the hips. The front and the lower half of the skirt are covered with point de venise. The blouse bodice, of the same lace, fastens at the left side with jeweled buttons over a fine plaiting of crepe de chine. The collar is also of crepe de chine. The top of the bodice, the epaulets and the top of the sleeves are heavily embroidered in silk with colored roses and foliage.

NEXT CUP CHALLENGE.

Sir Thomas Lipton Bent on Capturing the Coveted Trophy.

TWO YACHTS FOR TRIAL RACE.

Permission to Be Asked to Alter the Shamrock—Watson to Design a New Yacht to Be Called the Erin—Best Boat to Be Recognized as the Challenger.

The Boston Herald prints the following from its Glasgow correspondent:

You can state it on the official authority of Sir Thomas Lipton, who has just returned from Palermo and the Mediterranean, that he will challenge for the America's cup in 1901, and there can be no doubt of it. He favored me with an exclusive interview the other day, and we went all over the situation.

Sir Thomas has given attention to the suggestion that if the sail plan and forebody of the Shamrock were changed she would be a better boat. At first Mr. Fife strongly opposed any change in the Shamrock. For two months past, however, he has worked on the Shamrock's body and sail plans and has come to the conclusion that the attempt is worth making and has so informed Sir Thomas. Two years will have elapsed before the coming match, and now Sir Thomas notices he has met Fife, has made up his mind to alter the Shamrock. Fife has asked him to get absolute liberty from the New York Yacht club to reconstruct and alter her in such manner as seems to him best.

Designer Watson has been given the order to get out the lines of the new challenger, which, by the way, will be called the Erin, Mr. Watson is now working up the preliminaries and thinking matters out, and he will be prepared to give out the contract as soon as the terms for the next match are arranged between the Royal Ulster and the New York Yacht clubs.

Charles Russell, who is Sir Thomas Lipton's legal adviser, has looked into all the terms of former matches and has found out that the New York Yacht club in the match of 1871 match is on record—viz. "In case Valkyrie III is not the fastest British yacht after trial then you (Dunraven) will be allowed to substitute such yacht for the challenger."

These terms will be asked by Sir Thomas because he will send both the Shamrock and the Erin over to your side in the late spring of 1901 and thus give them a chance of at least two months of trial practice before the grand event comes off. Should the improved Shamrock be faster than the Erin then, as in the case of the Valkyrie III, Sir Thomas will ask that the faster of the two yachts be named, and up to date the rules of the New York Yacht club offered Lord Dunraven they will surely grant to Sir Thomas Lipton. Both yachts, in accordance with the terms of the mutual agreement clause previously agreed on, will be towed over under the same conditions as the Shamrock, and they should make the passage in 13 days. The practice sails will take place off Sandy Hook, and every day outside of Sunday will be given to racing over the regular America's cup course distance.

Sir Thomas is undecided whether he will be in America in July or August, but that he will do so over during the of these months is a certainty. He will have the members of the Royal Ulster Yacht club with him, and, as before, the match will be speedily closed. The chances are that the matches will be sailed during August or early September, and it may be earlier, for Sir Thomas intends if possible to have both of his boats on this side in late April or early May and have them ready for a match not more than 60 days after arrival.

On an early day Sir Thomas will informally send a letter to the New York Yacht club informing the members of his intention to challenge, so as to have a holding above others who may contemplate challenging. As he has stepped aside for a year, he feels before the match takes on that his future attempts to lift the cup should not be concerned in the new judgment or the challenge for 1901 is concerned. The alterations in the Shamrock will be made by Thornycroft, and in that event she will be towed to the yard in the south.

Mr. William Gibson, a very wealthy Irishman, from County Antrim, is a very close friend of Sir Thomas. He has suggested that he would like to be a party in building the Erin, Sir Thomas likes the fun so much that he will go it alone. When Sir Thomas will have completed the 1901 match, the outlay will be close to three-quarters of a million dollars.

NOVELTIES.

All the New Ideas Are Old Ones Remodeled.

There is nothing new under the sun, and fashion's most ready appreciate that fact. When they wish to launch a new style, they look over fashions long past, select a detail here, and a detail there, combine them, and, lo, there is the latest novelty! Just now there is a tendency toward the styles of the first empire; for, although the girdle is not carried up under the armpits, it is decidedly raised at the back, while in front it drops. This idea is exemplified in the shape of the newest corsets, which are made very straight and flat in front.

Skirts continue to be very long, flaring at the foot and molding the figure above. If they are plaited, as they very often are, it is so planned that the plaits or tucks add nothing to the bulk. Skirts which are of thin goods tucked or gathered are made over a separate silk lining, which is cut like a plain gown skirt, tight and perfectly fitting. It may have a circular flounce around the foot, but no stiffening of any kind.

An illustration is given of an accordion plaited gown of black mousseline de soie over black silk. The skirt is unplaited and has three bands of black chantilly insertion. The bodice has a yoke and berths of black chantilly, and the sleeves are also of black chantilly. The belt, which is tied at the side, is of mandarin velvet. The theater toque of spangled black lace, trimmed with a black lace butterfly and a chou of mandarin velvet.

Prospects For the Spring Wardrobe Now Clear.

Wide draped skirts are again to be worn. They are seen on the new spring models and are very becoming to a slender figure. One of the prettiest designs the figure closely, but is so arranged that scarf ends finished with fringe fall from it, seeming to be a continuation. The belt is very high, the top disappearing under a very short bolero.

Spring wraps are chiefly of cloth. The loose sack is among the models shown.

but the jacket with a tight fitting back and a loose front, with a single or double row of buttons, is equally popular. The basque is very short, especially at the back, and the newest addition is a set of two or three Carrick capes. The decoration consists of binding or stitched straps. Long capes falling to the knee are also to be worn and are seen in black cloth, braided with black, with a medici collar.

The cut depicts a street costume of wool goods of a mode shade. Around the foot of the skirt are two flat bands bordered with velvet. The tunic is edged with guipure and has three pointed bands of guipure, each band framed in strips of velvet. The bodice is fitted at the back and draped in front, fastening at the side with two clusps of velvet. The yoke and the top of the sleeves are of guipure bordered with velvet, and there is a velvet band at the wrists. The collar and little guimpe are of velvet, and a velvet belt ties at the back with long ends. The velvet toque is trimmed with straw quills, a chou of velvet and a jeweled ornament.

GOWNS FOR LENT.

Special Robes For Those Who Find Sackcloth Unbecoming.

It was Sarah Bernhardt who devised the very effective plan of combining lace and fur, and we all ought to be glad she did, for there is no denying its beauty. It is an odd combination to find a reception gown of all ever lace bordered with a couple of rows of black fur around the bottom, but one looks twice at such a gown and admires it.

The reception gown illustrated here will show the plan of the combination. The inner dress is of pale blue taffeta and the outer of the figured net. This has the skirt laid in plaits and sewed down to the knee, fitting the skirt rather closely. From there it is left loose to the bottom, which forms a sort of flounce. The waist is swathed across the front and has a simulated bolero, with a tie made of pale blue crepe de chine finished with netted silk fringe of the same color. This scarf or tie is so long that it goes twice around the neck and ties in the centre front like a jabot. These are shown now in a few of the best stores and are sure to become very popular.

I saw a very dainty and girlish dress for a very young lady to wear at one of the pubblical parties where girls are expected to forsake all the vanities of the world. This was a white dotted net, very fine, with pinhead dots. The underdress was also of white, being taffeta. The skirt was trimmed closely lengthwise to about 15 inches from the bottom, and the surplus fell into a full flounce. Above this was a band of renaissance lace, and above that equidistant were two others all around. The belt was of white, and the other bands crossed the waist.

The sleeves were merely ruffles and puffs of the net. There was a long scarf of white tulle drawn from the right shoulder to the waist and from there to the back and fastened in each place with bunches of parma violets and bows of white ribbon. There were bows of this on the shoulders and a lacing of the ribbon around the upper part of the arm tied at the elbow in a pretty bow.

The gloves to wear with this reach but to the elbow. The tulle scarf floats loosely after the last bunch of violets. What a sweet and lovely peitenr gown! Any young would not repent of all sorts of little slips of confusion and commission in such a gown, she is past buging for.

I saw two dresses just finished for her by the dressmakers. These ladies do not keep Lent quite so strictly as some do, and there is to be a grand dinner at the home of one, and that is the reason for the being of the gowns. One is of lemon colored peau de soie, with bunches of wood roses and green stems embroidered upon the skirt and waist. The dress is cut peiroess shape and draped a little across the front. The neck is cut square, and there are three rows of lace gathered and sewed around the edge. Below these is a band of sable, and another borders the whole skirt. There are but straps on the shoulders. The long gloves will leave little of the arm to be seen.

The sister's dress is of heavy helliotrope satin duchesse. The skirt is plain save for a rich cascade of butter colored lace down the left side and from there forming a full ruffle all around the bottom and up to a point. There are revers of the same back and front at the shoulders and placed so that they come to a double point on the top of the shoulder, forming a sort of sleeve.

The dress is low on the neck. The waist is swathed to the left side and has a small standing bow or ribbon of the same shade in front. The lace drapes across the front of the waist. These two dresses form a most artistic combination when beside each other—the one yellow, with purple flowers; the other purple, with yellow lace.

I must mention one more festive gown, and that is for a very young lady. The body of the whole is of exquisite cheney design of vague and indistinct roses and leaves on a blue white ground. The low waist is slightly puffed and has a pointed belt of black velvet. There is a band of wide white renaissance lace across the bust and drawn over the shoulders for sleeves. This part, however, has a puffing of pink chiffon under it. There are four quite deep ruffles of pink chiffon on the skirt, cut so that they form a sort of point in front and are deeper in the back. Each is edged with a narrow ruche, and the upper one is headed with one.

THE WORK OF WOMEN.

Some of the Things They Are Doing and Saying.

The young girl who invented peppermint gum is now the bride of a Boston tailor. She has made the comfortable fortune of $300,000 from her discovery, and money is still flowing in as freely as ever.

A grandniece of Martha Washington lies ill and blind in a little mountain cabin in Lower California. Mrs. Minerva Abbot is the grandchild of Mary Dandridge, who was the sister of Martha Washington. She is now 80 years old and very feeble.

One of the most interesting Sunday school classes in St. Louis is composed of some 200 little children, none of whom is over 6 years of age. Mrs. J. H. King, a young matron, has worked wonders with them. She has introduced a new feature into the kindergarten work—namely, pretty little movement songs. Keeping the restless children in action has been the keynote of her success.

Since Mrs. Fetrough and her stepson-in-law arrived in Washington they have not been able to leave the harem apartments without incurring personally publicity. The Turkish minister is seeking an out of town residence in the neighborhood of Chevy Chase that will afford the exclusive quarters necessary for his wife and sister. One of the joys among fashionable feminity this spring will be the "at homes" of Mrs. Fetrough at the country legation of the Turkish minister.

The new dean of the woman's hall of the Northwestern university, Mrs. Emily Huntington Miller, has been engaged in literary and educational work since 1872. She has also been prominent in woman's work at Chautauqua. Her verses for children have made her name a household word.

The grandniece of Macaulay, Mrs. Beatrice Potter Webb, is working with her husband in gathering statistics for a "History and Analysis of Local Government," which is to be published in 1904. The history will not be completed until 1912.

The Countess of Strafford, formerly Mrs. J. Cushing of New York, sailed from Liverpool for this country on the White Star liner Oceanic on March 7. She will be entertained by her relatives in New York city.

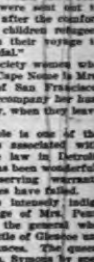
Mrs. Grundies in Australia, the champion of woman suffrage and the rights of women in general, recently opened a debate on the question, "Ought sex to be a legal disability?" She is recently quoted as saying, "Had a keen colonial secretary I would have seen to it that women were sent out to Cape Town to look after the comfort of the women and children refugees whose treatment on their voyage to Durban was a scandal."

Among the few society women who are anxious to visit Cape Nome is Mrs. Monroe Salisbury of San Francisco. She will probably accompany her husband and son in May, when they leave for the mining city.

A woman constable is one of the progressive features associated with the majesty of the law in Detroit. Miss Pinsmonneau has been wonderfully successful in serving warrants where men constables have failed.

Queen Victoria is intensely indignant at the marriage of Mrs. Penn Symons, widow of the general who was killed at the battle of Glencoe under tragic circumstances. The queen had secured for Mrs. Symons by special royal warrant an extra pension and residence in the royal household.

With one who was graduated from the University of Michigan and was later honored with the Greek chair at Smith college and afterward a graduate from the American School of Archeology at Athens rests the distinction of being the only American woman that has ever ascended the Matterhorn in Switzerland. Miss Peck has also climbed the Presidential range in New Hampshire.



An athletic club for men and women of the smart set of New York is soon to be established. Mrs. Pauline H. Lyon of Chicago, who is at the head of the movement, hopes to make athletes of the Four Hundred.

The Crown Princess Stephanie of Belgium is to wed the Hungarian Count Lonyay, and the Hungarian-Austrian embassy in London on March 20. The marriage is strenuously opposed by King Leopold, and unless he relents the crown princess will be unable to retain her title of royal highness and upon her marriage will become a plain everyday countess.

Americans have already carried the club idea into Porto Rico. "The American club," though its members consist of both men and women, has come for its president a woman whose mansion home was in Philadelphia. The object of the club is "social culture and mutual improvement." The club has already erected an almshouse for street beggars.

The Constitutionalist

A DEMOCRATIC WEEKLY.

PUBLISHED AT

PLAINFIELD, N. J.

Terms—$2.00 per year.

A. L. Force, Editor and Proprietor

Tom Lane in Kentucky.

A dispatch from Frankfort, Ky., says that "Thomas F. Lane, of Summit, N. J., has been appointed by Jno Beckham, the Democratic claimant as Governor, as an aide on his official staff with the rank of Colonel Colonel Lane is a son in-law of Senator Blackburn. He is here as the guest of the Chief Executive."

If this is the truth it means that Mr. Lane is going to shake the dust of New Jersey from his shoulders and his himself to the blue grass region. Tom Lane has been one of the political figures of Union county for a decade past. He has been one of the most active and aggressive Democrats in the ballwick, and the hotter the fight the better Thomas seemed to like it. With such characteristics he will undoubtedly be in his glory in Kentucky, where politicians on both sides of the fence are of the most irascible stripe In the ring of circus politics, Kentucky is just now affording a show that eclipses anything of its kind on record. His debut on such a critical period as this will be a momentous occasion for Tom, but we have no doubt that he will prove equal to the emergencies.

We regret to hear that Mr. Lane is to depart from New Jersey, and especially from Union county, but as a real Kentucky colonel where military titles are as thick as distilleries we believe that the Honorable Tommie will cut a polite and impressive figure, and add lustre to the ranks of native Jerseymen. Our best wishes go with Mr. Lane.

Changing the Constitution.

The necessity of some important changes being made in the Constitution of the State of New Jersey, in order to adjust the primary points of government upon a basis more in sympathy with modernized things, has long been recognized by those who are in touch with the legal machinery of the Commonwealth. Tinkering with the fundamental law of the State, however, is a weighty job which should be carried out with greatest discretion and most sober judgment that it is possible to command. Anent this important subject, the Newark Call editorially remarks:

"Whether the time has come when amendments to the Constitution reforming the courts of New Jersey will be considered fairly and liberally by the public and the Legislature is by no means certain; but the time is here (and, indeed, is past) when some change should be made. The courts are doing their work with more delays, at higher expense and with less justice to public and private interests in every way than would be easily practicable under a better system. Of course, no system, however excellent, will make a good judge out of a bad man; but good judges may make a bad system reasonably thorough by hard work and high ideals. Generally speaking this is what has been going on in New Jersey but it is hard and dangerous business, and a very slight falling off in the character of the judiciary might cause evils which a better and simpler system would prevent."

The opportunity for any New Jersey town to try the voting machine was killed in the Assembly Thursday, when the bill permitting such municipalities as desired to try the experiment to do so, was killed by a vote of fourteen for to twenty-nine against. The bill was not mandatory in any way, but notwithstanding it was defeated without much ado. It is to be regretted. If the bill had become a law some town would undoubtedly have made the experiment of using voting machines. Then it could be seen whether they worked good or bad. It is a fact, however, that they are used in a number of other States with the most satisfactory results. Despite the defeat of the measure the day is coming when some method will be devised to receive and compile the vote in New Jersey in a much more expeditious manner than the present cumbersome and slow system permits.

It scarcely seems possible, but it is given out as an actual fact that Ocean Grove—theantraight-laced municipality down by the sea—is considering the possibility of securing the National Republican convention to meet there. Ocean Grove people have got the idea in their heads that in case Philadelphia fails to keep its financial promises with the Republican leaders it will be an easy thing to induce the G. O. P organization, with Uncle Mark Hanna at the head, to move over to the seaside Jersey town and hold the great political assemblage there. Just imagine, if you can, several thousand excited politicians from all over the country trying to observe the strict rules laid down for the conduct of those within the precincts of Ocean Grove!

Saturday last was "rapid transit day" in New York. "On to Harlem in Fifteen Minutes" is the cry. Shall means of transit to New Jersey stand still? Let Our slogan and effort be: "On to the Jersey Shore in Two Minutes." This is entirely possible with the completion of the North river tunnel. Thence with diverging railways over the beautiful hills and valleys of New Jersey we would be placed in a position to defy competition in the offering of beautiful home sites to the tired citizens of the great metropolis. Rapid transit and very much lower fares will be needed if New Jersey is to hold her own against the great movement now started in New York. It is worse than folly to delay this step until the tide has set in against us. Rapid and frequent trains and lower fares will multiply the receipts of railroads and bring thrift and wealth to all within a radius of twenty-five miles of New York. Let the slogan be, "On to the Jersey Shore in Two Minutes."

Even though his political principles are violently antagonistic to Col. Bryan, it is evident that Lieutenant-Governor Woodruff, of New York, like the Nebraskan, proposes to do some traveling on his own account in the hope of gaining a place on the National ticket—the G. O. P. Vice-Presidential honor being his goal. Last week Mr. Woodruff made a flying trip of 3 000 miles just for the sake of delivering a speech and widening his acquaintance in Nebraska with a view of strengthening his candidacy. He arrived in Lincoln just in time to deliver his oration at a Republican affair, and after the effort was completed he jumped on a return train and went speeding towards home. If anyone of the numerous Jerseymen who have been mentioned as likely running mates with McKinley should earnestly desire to land the nomination, it would be well for them to get a bunch of railroad passes in order to keep up with the pace which the Honorable Tim has set.

An agitation has started among the department stores of Philadelphia for the issue by the government of a new coin of the denomination of a half-cent. A petition in favor of it has been numerously signed in Philadelphia, and an effort is being made to arouse interest in other cities. The merchants claim that in these days of keen competition, when large sales and small profits are the rule, some such plan is necessary. Several individual firms in Chicago have issued their own half cent pieces, which, of course, are only redeemable in their own establishments. The use of a half-cent coin might be of advantage in a small way to the small purchaser, who now has to surrender the half-cent when he buys one article which costs two for a quarter, two for fifteen cents, and so on.

It is a matter for congratulation on the part of all people living along the line of the Central Railroad of New Jersey that the trouble between the employes of the company and its executive officials has been adjusted amicably without resorting to the extreme of a strike. It is very—very seldom that a strike avails good to anyone, be they directly or indirectly concerned, and it is therefore gratifying to know that there has been no serious clash between the two elements that go to make up a great railroad system such as the Central is.

The Trenton True American points out: "What a contemporaneous prosperity, when millions are at the disposal of stock jobbers and trust boomers, and a great publishing house like D. Appleton & Co., with assets of over a million dollars, unencumbered by any mortgage, should go the wall for lack of capital. When two great publishing houses, like Harper's and Appleton's, are starved in the midst of plenty, there must be something wrong in the balance of affairs."

The public never "discovers" a merchant in the manner in which an author or a musician or an actor is discovered, says the Philadelphia Record. No friendly hand can drag the merchant from obscurity and make him famous. He must push himself to the front. He must be the architect of his own fortune. With the aid of the wonderful lamp of publicity every shrewd business man can become an Aladdin.

The decision of the Councilmanic street committee to ask for a smaller appropriation this year than was granted last, will be welcome news to property owners whose resources will be severely taxed this year by the contemplated municipal expenses of a special character.

The Lamp of Steady Habits

The lamp that doesn't flare up or smoke, or cause you to mend and tinker; a lamp that looks good when you get it and stays good; the lamp that you never willingly part with, made you have it; that's

The New Rochester.

Other lamps may be offered you as "just as good" —they may be, in some respects, but for steadiness of habit, there's only one. To make sure the lamp offered you is genuine, look for the name on it; every Rochester bears that name.

We make all stoves too, just as good as the lamps; in fact, anything in oil or gas fixtures.

PEDDLERS ON PARADE

NOVEL FEATURE OF THE ODD LADIES' ENTERTAINMENT.

Women Escaped the Farce and Were Grotesquely Attired — Music and Recitations.

The independence characteristic of the ladies composing Mizpah Lodge, No. 71, United Order of Independent Odd Ladies, was fully displayed Monday on the occasion of the entertainment which this organization provided for their many friends. It was the ladies first attempt at so complete a programme as they furnished and it was a perfect success. For more than three hours the fun predominated. It was a novel affair to say the least, and it was all gotten up by the women, although they did call in a few of their gentlemen friends to assist them.

There were recitations by Mrs. Fred Book, Mrs. John Manley, little Miss Anderson, and John Carney. The latter kept the guests convulsed by his droll German dialect stories, and he was frequently compelled to respond to encores. There was also a solo by Mrs. Striglaw and selections on the phonograph in charge of Mr. Brady.

Not the least feature of the evening's entertainment was the peddler's parade, during which some of the ladies, grotesquely attired, passed among the visitors and sold them products. Mrs Westphal was provided with lemonade; Mrs. Bush, fruits; Mrs. Cox, notions; Mrs. Waldron, popcorn, and Mrs Angleman, hot cocoa. The sales were brisk.

After the parade of the peddlers there was a clipping contest in which pleased some of the older folks as well as the juniors. Some of the prizes captured was as startling as they were amusing.

During the evening a handsome rocking chair was drawn at ten cents a number. Ticket No. 115, held by W. E. Koyer, of 257 East Third street, won the prize. The ladies then served delicious cake and an abundance of hot coffee.

The entire affair was successfully brought off under the management of Miss Mate Dorbright as chairman; assisted by Mrs. Agnes Randolph, treasurer; Mrs. Tillie Ilker, secretary; Mrs. Henry Angleman, Mrs. P. Sweeney, Mrs. A. K. Mattis, Mrs. David Bush and Mrs. Daniel Page.

LIVED OVER NINETY YEARS.

Death of Mrs. Mary Cadmus, One of the Oldest Residents in This City.

The death of Mrs. Mary Cadmus, widow of the late Andrew A. Cadmus, aged 91 years, occurred Saturday at her home on Myrtle avenue, North Plainfield. Owing to her advanced age and feebleness her death was not unexpected. She was ninety-one years old and the daughter of Stephen Deeds, a pioneer in New Jersey, who was prominently identified with good works. Mrs. Cadmus was one of the organizers of the First Presbyterian church in this vicinity and has always been closely associated with the work in that denomination. She was a woman of rare Christian qualities and attainments and lived a life of devotion to her church and home.

When Mrs. Cadmus first saw the light of day there was very little to mark this place which has grown to such large proportions. She was born on the Cadmus estate near Grant avenue and lived within a half mile of that place all her life. For some time past she was unable to leave her home and was closely confined. Early in life she gave much toward the church of which she was a member and to her efforts is due much of the success gained by that denomination in this vicinity.

She leaves two children—A. L. Cadmus and Susan W. She also leaves two grandchildren and five great grand children.

The funeral was held Tuesday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock.

$224 Raised at a Rally.

A rally was held at the Calvary Baptist church Sunday when the sum of $224.25 was raised toward liquidating the church debt. The rally was in charge of the pulpit committee of the church.

Brought Stretill Property.

John Doull Millet, of this city, has purchased the Stretill property, corner of Hillside and Prospect avenues, and is planning to make some notable improvements about the place.

A JOB FOR DR CARROLL

PRESIDENT McKINLEY WILL PROBABLY OFFER HIM A PLACE

But It Is Not Expected That It Will Be Governor-General of Porto Rico.

Dr. H. K. Carroll, President McKinley's special commission to Porto Rico, to examine into the affairs of the Island, returned Friday evening from Washington, where he was in attendance at the session of the executive committee of the ecumenical conference of Methodists that will be held in London in September, 1901. The session were held to further the interests of the coming convention and was attended by persons high in authority in Methodism. While in Washington Dr. Carroll had the pleasure of presenting the various members of the executive committee to President McKinley, who received them most cordially.

In connection with Dr. Carroll's visit to Washington, it can be stated that there is little likelihood that he will be sent to Porto Rico as Governor of the Island. He has not a very strong desire to take the position and unless it is forced upon him he will probably not accept it. However, the Porto Ricans would be glad to have him accept the position for they want a person in that place whom they can trust, knowing that they will be treated fairly. It is rumored that Dr. Carroll may be given a post somewhere else, one that will be of more importance than that in Porto Rico President McKinley recognizes in Dr. Carroll a man of peculiar ability and worth and is desirous of placing him where he will be of the most value.

NOT FASTIDIOUS THIEVES.

They Steal Anything From Church Bells to Chickens.

Thieves have been visiting the section between Union and Roselle, and not away with bells on them. They broke into the Kypling chapel, suspended the belfry, and got away with a brass bell weighing over three hundred pounds. The chapel was built by Richard Kypling, a New York diamond broker, twenty-five years ago. After getting the bell they stole two sets of harness from Louis Wenz and one hundred and fifty chickens from Wenz and other farmers in the vicinity.

GROCER ASSIGNS.

Firman A. Long Unable to Continue Business on Somerset Street.

Firman A. Long, the Somerset street grocer, has made an assignment to E. W. Conklin, wholesale grocer, of 29 Murray street, New York, and arrangements have been made for a sale of the stock at private sale next Saturday afternoon at 3 o'clock. The sale will include horse, wagon and harness owned by Mr. Long, and everything contained in his store. William N Pangborn, auctioneer, will sell the goods. Terms will be cash. Lawyer J. P. D. Kirch is attorney for Mr. Long.

Mr. Squire Denies a Report.

Former Assemblyman George A. Squire told a reporter Saturday that there was absolutely nothing in the report published in several New York papers to the effect that he was to start a theatrical enterprise in New York to provide continuous vaudeville entertainment for the downtown people of that city. He denies all alleged interviews with him on the subject.

Ladies' Aid Society Elects.

The annual election of officers of the Ladies' Aid Society of the Crescent Avenue church, held a few days ago, resulted as follows: President, Mrs. Wm. Scribner; first vice-president, Mrs. H. H. Richards; second vice-president, Miss Oliver King; secretary, Mrs. Julia Ketcham; treasurer, Mrs. Horace Kimball; assistant treasurer, Miss Margaret Yates.

Hurt His Foot.

James Ellis, of Arlington avenue, an employe of the Electric Light Co., sustained a severe injury to his right foot Saturday morning by the cover of a man hole falling upon it. The foot was badly lacerated. Dr. Long dressed the wound, when the injured man was conveyed to his home.

Engagements Announced.

The announcement was made last week of the engagement of Miss Gertrude Walz, daughter of Ernest L. Walz of LaGrande avenue, to John J. Imbrailty, of New York. Mr. Imbrailty is now stopping on Crescent avenue, this city. At the same time came the announcement of the engagement of Miss Pauline F. Humphrey, of Nethwood, to Rev. L. Louis Walz, Jr., of Brooklyn. Rev. Mr. Walz is the son of E. L. Walz, of LaGrande avenue.

The Strange Confident.

I hid my sorrow from the friend most dear,
And with a smile shut down the uprising tear:
As to a priest of God, a cure of souls,
I told it freely in a stranger's ear.

Trash to Take Million.

George D. Rockefeller, an old resident of Somerville, presented a check at the Second National Bank there Monday for $2,000,000. Rockefeller said that the amount had been placed to his credit in the bank by John D. Rockefeller. The paying teller accepted the check and persuaded Rockefeller to go in search of a truck to carry off the money. He has disappeared.

Organized an Uncle Tom's Cabin Co.

George Roberts, of this city, has organized an Uncle Tom's Cabin Company, and its first appearance will take place in a short time at Flemington, Hunterdon county. The company will then make a tour of the State. The company is composed of thirty-five people, all first class artists.

Building Boom in Netherwood.

There is much promise of a building boom in Netherwood this spring and the indications are that several fine dwelling houses will be erected.

BOARD OF TRADE SCORES TROLLEY.

The Wretched Service of Street Railway Company is Roundly Condemned.

WAITING STATION WANTED.

AT THE WATCHUNG AND NORTH AVENUE SWITCH.

Sufficient Comments Secured to Ensure Extension of Line to Watchung — Nothing Done Yet About Cheaper Railroad Fares.

After several unsuccessful attempts to hold a meeting, which heretofore has failed owing to the absence of a quorum, the Board of Trade Monday got together a sufficient number of members to make a meeting possible. There were present besides President L. B. Woolston, William A. Woodruff, John D. Runyon, James C. Pope, Eugene Laing, Herman Schwed, Chas. W. Runyon, and Harry C. Runyon, the secretary. It was expected that F. G. Lounsbury, the former president of the Board, and chairman of the committee having in hand the matter of attempting to bring about a reduction of fares on the Central Railroad, would be present. Mr. Lounsbury was detained at home, however, and the Board had to do without the report of the committee. Mr. Lounsbury sent word by Mr Woolston that the committee had nothing of importance to report, no progress having been made toward the desired end.

President Woolston stated that Mr Lounsbury had told him that he would visit Elizabeth in a few days and ascertain what action had been taken by the Board of Trade of that city. It is also expected that something will soon be learned from Cranford, Westfield and Roselle.

The next matter discussed was in relation to the proposed extension of the trolley line up to Watchung. Secretary Runyon informed the Board that nearly all the consents of the property owners had been secured for the right of way and that the people were anxious to have the road built as soon as possible as far as Bember's Corner. Henry Y. Wilson was the principal objector to the road. He now wants $7 500 for what he considers will be a damage to him. As a sufficient number of signatures have been secured without Mr. Wilson, there is no further obstacle to the construction of the road.

Considerable of the Board's time was then taken up in a discussion of the Plainfield Street Railway and the wretched service and poor accommodations supplied the public. The road was roundly denounced for not providing a waiting room at the transfer station at Watchung and North avenues and also for not maintaining a light at the waiting room so kindly supplied gratuitously by Messrs. Woodhull & Martin at the terminus to the road at Dunellen.

All the members were of decided opinion regarding the waiting room at the transfer station. President Woolston said the public was not being fairly treated by the trolley company. After nearly every member had passed anything but complimentary opinions regarding the miserable service afforded the public at the hands of the Street Railway Company, Mr. Pope offered a resolution, that was unanimously adopted, to the effect that the Board respectfully requests the Plainfield Street Railway Company to at once provide a suitable waiting room at or near the transfer station at Watchung and North avenues and also to place a light in the waiting room at Dunellen.

Secretary Runyon was requested to superintend the transmission of the Board's action. It was suggested that if the desired relief, the matter should be brought to the attention of Col. Hine.

It is understood that a room now vacant, where formerly a barber shop was located, can be rented for 50 cents a day

After some further discussion regarding a firm that desired to locate a cigar factory in Plainfield and the much-talked-of trolley to South Plainfield, the Board adjourned.

Mission Work in China.

Mrs. Wellington White, a missionary from China, addressed an audience at the chapel of the First Presbyterian church Monday afternoon, under the auspices of the Woman's Missionary Society of that church. She told some very interesting facts concerning the mission work in the Celestial Empire and gave some of her own experiences while laboring among the women of that country.

Miss Grace Rowland, of East Second street, has recovered from her recent illness.

DEATH ENTERED HER CLAIM

MRS. SARAH PANGBORN DIED IN PENURY MONDAY.

She Was a Claimant for the Property of Late W. S. Allen, Who Was Said to be Her Husband

Mrs. Sarah Pangborn, who has been contesting in the Pennsylvania courts to gain control of the property of the late W. S. Allen, of Williamsport, Pa., on the ground that Allen was none other than Stephen Pangborn, who deserted her thirty years ago and assumed the name of Allen, died in penury at her home on Lake street Monday.

Mrs. Pangborn's husband left her after a quarrel one year after they were married. She never heard of him after until the death of the man known as Winfield S. Allen in Williamsport. Then Mrs. Pangborn secured evidences which led her to believe that it was her husband Lawyers looked the matter up and claimed that there was no doubt but what Allen's real name was Pangborn Allen left a wife and two children in Williamsport, and when he died was wealthy.

Several months ago Mrs. Pangborn commenced action to get control of the property he left on the ground that she was his lawful widow, he having never secured a divorce from her. Mrs. Pangborn was fifty-eight years of age and since the desertion of her husband she has supported herself by taking in washing and doing other manual labor.

She leaves one daughter, Mrs. L. Miller, who will continue to prosecute the claim for the property left by Allen, on the ground that she is now the only lawful heir

All But $35 of the Requisite $500 Has Been Pledged—Fifty Odd Contributors.

The opening of Duer street is now an assured fact as $445 of the necessary $500 has been raised toward the project. The condition was that if the sum of $500 was raised in the borough to open the street to the brook the balance of the work would be done without any further expense to property owners. The issue of $35 will now be raised in a short time and this will guarantee the success of the scheme. There are now fifty-one contributors on the subscription list, mostly all boroughites and those who will be benefitted by the opening. There are several Plainfielders on the list and some who are indirectly benefitted.

There is no doubt as to the great benefit to be derived from this improvement and the work will probably be started within a few weeks. The work of securing a suitable bridge across Green brook will not be hard, as the Freeholders on both sides of the stream are said to be willing to erect it.

TO SECURE BENEFITS.

By Paying 50 Cents a Month Sons of Veterans Will Get $5 a Week When Sick.

A special meeting of John Hand Camp, No. 28, Sons of Veterans, was held last Monday for the purpose of taking steps to make the camp a benefical organization. The committee appointed to draft by-laws providing for this chance reported, and the by-laws submitted were adopted unanimously by sections on the first reading.

Next Monday evening another special meeting will be held to adopt the by laws on the second reading, and on the following Tuesday evening there will be a meeting of the camp, when they will be read for the third time and adopted as a whole. Then the members will be benefitted, at least those who signify their desire to join and pay the extra amount as dues which will be 50 cents. This will give $5 a week sick benefits and $250 at death.

BROKE HORSE'S BACK.

Dump Cart Fell into Green Brook, Dragging Horse With It—Animal Had to be Shot.

While carting dirt and refuse from the streets for the city, a horse and cart belonging to Thomas Brennan, of Arlington avenue, tumbled into Green brook near the Watchung avenue bridge Tuesday. The horse's back was broken and it had to be shot, while the cart was wrecked.

Brennan, with his horse and cart, is employed by the street department to collect and cart the refuse to the dumping grounds near Watchung avenue along the brook. In backing the cart into position he went too near the edge and the cart turned over, throwing the horse into the brook. Patrolman Flanagan was summoned and finding the horse's back broken shot the animal to end its sufferings.

To Establish Factory in Germany.

Irving H. Brown, of Central avenue, returned Saturday on the American liner New York, after a business trip abroad. Mr. Brown visited Germany to make arrangements to establish a factory there, where the Welsbach light burners will be made for foreign trade. His trip was a successful one.

UNDERGROUND WIRES IN THE BOROUGH, TOO

Telephone Company Will Build Conduits Along Various Streets in the Borough.

CITY ORDINANCE A MODEL.

IT IS EQUITABLE TO COMPANY AND MUNICIPALITY, TOO.

Draft of Proposed Ordinance is Now in Hands of Senator Reed and Will be Presented to the Borough Council.

Another year is likely to see the wires of the New York and New Jersey Telephone Company underground in the borough as well as in the city. A draft of an ordinance providing for the laying of underground conduits for the telephone wires in Somerset street and the other principal thoroughfares of the borough has been prepared by representatives and is now in the hands of Borough Counsel Charles A. Reed. It is likely to be presented at the meeting of the Borough Council next week.

This present agitation in favor of underground wires in the borough is one of the results of the proposed plan of widening Somerset street. When Mayor N. B. Smalley first considered the matter he interviewed Manager Charles W. Runyon, of the telephone company, and the matter was referred to headquarters. As a result the draft of an ordinance was prepared on the same lines as the one adopted some time ago by the Plainfield Council. This is not the first time that the Plainfield ordinance has been used as an ideal one by the company. The ordinance was originally prepared by the company's legal representatives and then revised by Corporation Counsel Marsh. It is considered a model ordinance in giving equitable rights to city and to corporation.

The company proposes, in the ordinance submitted to the borough, to put the wires underground on Somerset street as far as the improvements are made, which is likely to be Jackson avenue or further. Another line of conduits will carry the numerous wires that are distributed through Washington Park. There will be two two-inch lines of miles of ur derground conduits laid to start with. Later the company hopes to extend its underground line in the borough as well as in the city.

FUNERAL OF WILLIAM CORTRIGHT.

Services Attended by Members of Carpenters' Union in a Body.

The funeral services of the late William Cortright were held Monday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock from the house corner of West Fifth and New streets, and was very largely attended. The members of the Carpenters' Union, of which the deceased was a member, attended in a body and they gave a beautiful floral pillow. There were many other floral tributes.

Rev. Dr. D. J. Yerkes, pastor of the First Baptist church, officiated, and spoke commendatory words concerning the departed. During the service "Nearer My God to Thee," was sung effectively. The interment took place in Hillside cemetery, and those who acted as bearers were from the Carpenters' Union.

Literary Note from The Century Co

The famous "man-milliner," Worth, is brought to life again in Richard Whiteing's "Fashionable Paris," in the April Century. Mr. Whiteing once interviewed the great modiste on the subject of starting the fashions. Under the Republic, said M. Worth, "the fashions were not started at all; they simply occurred." But under the Empire, it was simple enough. "He hit upon an idea, and submitted it to two or three ladies of taste in the court of the Empress. They liked it, or did not like it, and taking counsel with them, they finally shaped it into some thing they might feel justified in laying before the throne. It was then further modified on its way to perfection. At length came the great day, say the opening of the spring races, when one or two of them imposed it on the mass of womankind as a sort of edict from above. With that it started on its travels round the world."

DR. YERKES ON SHELDON

VENERABLE MINISTER DOES NOT THINK MUCH OF EXPERIMENT.

He Does Not Believe That if Christ Was on Earth He Would Edit a Newspaper.

Sunday morning at the First Baptist church the pastor, Rev. Dr. D. J. Yerkes, delivered a very interesting sermon in which he referred to Rev. Mr. Sheldon and his recent work of editing a paper as Christ would if He were on earth. He characterized the incident as a passing one, soon to be forgotten, although it might accomplish the purpose for which it was intended. The speaker believed that anyone who followed in Christ's steps would do as He does. He also said that Christ would only do those things which are right. He was sure that He would not open a saloon, establish a gambling house, a race-course, or take a job as a political boss. If He was in business He would deal honestly. He would not make a corner in the market and crowd out everyone else.

In reply to the question as "How would Christ edit a newspaper?" Dr. Yerkes said that he was not sure that Christ would conduct a newspaper if He was on earth. If He did the paper would contain nothing but truth, righteousness and morality, and it would be the best paper ever published whether the people bought it or not, and he doubted if they would patronize it. He contended that the people cannot tell whether Christ would reject this advertisement or that piece of news, because the minds of the people are too small to conceive it. He thought the attempt to conduct a paper as Christ would showed a lack of apprehension of the fitness of things, with all due respect to the motive of the person who was making the attempt.

"It would be presumptious for me to ask God when to sow seed or how to build a house, when He has given us judgment and capacity to judge for ourselves," said Dr. Yerkes. "The fact that Sheldon rejected or accepted certain advertisements was in accordance with his thought, and he believed that Christ would think the same. Christ wants our lives to be governed by Christian principle, and whether its a newspaper or any other kind of work it should be done according to Christian principle. We should imitate Christ by Christian principle, virtue, and do all in the name of Christ, giving thanks to Him, and then we will follow 'In His Steps.'" zens who would be well fitted for the place and there would be no difficulty in finding a candidate should Plainfield be given the opportunity of naming the man to succeed Congressman Fowler.

FOWLER CANDIDATE TURNED DOWN.

Frank Bergen's Friends Win a Victory at Elizabeth Primaries.

Elizabeth, March 28—There was a warm contest Monday night at the Republican primary in the Eleventh ward, the banner stronghold of the party in this city. This is the ward where Congressman Fowler and Frank Bergen both live, and their supporters lined up for a test of strength over the nomination of an Assessor of Taxes.

W. W. Ackerman, the most pronounced champion of Mr. Fowler in the city, who is regarded as the Congressman's right bower, opposed the renomination of Assessor Caleb O. Pollard, who for a dozen years has held the place, and pitted against him Edward P. Edwards, president of the Elizabeth Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals. All the Bergen men arrayed themselves under the Pollard banner, while the Fowlerites lined up in support of Mr. Ackerman's candidate. The result was the biggest vote ever cast at a primary in the ward—405 votes being polled in fifty minutes.

The outcome was an overwhelming victory for the Pollard ticket, which won by 120 majority. A telegram was sent late Monday night to Congressman Fowler at Washington, informing him of the defeat.

NOT TO PURCHASE ORGAN.

All Souls Officials Will Not Take the Grace P. E. Instrument.

The officers of All Souls' church, Park avenue, have decided not to purchase the organ for their church which is now owned and in use by Grace P. E. church. It is found to be too large for the Unitarian church and for that reason would be useless. Other arrangements for securing an organ will be made soon. The members have about raised the amount of money needed for the purchase of an organ, but it will be impossible to have the organ for use by Easter Sunday as intended.

William Hand, of Park avenue, is gradually recovering from the effects of a recent accident when a heavy weight fell on his foot. Fortunately no bones were broken.

$13,000 NEEDED FOR NEW HOSPITAL SITE.

Board of Governors Decide to Try and Raise That Amount of Money.

THEY HAVE A SITE IN VIEW.

BUT WON'T DIVULGE IT TILL MONEY IS PLEDGED.

Committee of Nine Members to Undertake the Work—Routine Work Transacted at Board Meeting Monday Evening.

The new quarters for the Muhlenberg Hospital is in sight. Steps have been taken toward the raising of $13,000 for the purchase of the site for the new hospital buildings. The board of governors of the hospital decline to make public as yet the proposed location except to state that the site in view is eminently suited for the purpose. As soon as the funds are forthcoming, the lot will be purchased and the movement started for the new buildings.

The regular meeting of the board of governors was held last Monday and there was a lengthy discussion of the proposed new hospital and its site The committee appointed some months ago to select a site and look into the financial end of the question reported progress. The committee was continued and instructed to see if the necessary $13,000 to purchase a lot for the new hospital could be raised. The committee will proceed immediately.

The old committee was composed of five members, George W. Goddard, chairman; Charles J. Fisk, Ernest R. Ackerman, H. P. Reynolds and W. B. Cock. It was decided to increase the committee to nine. The four extra members will be appointed by J Evarts Tracy, who acted as chairman pro tem of the meeting.

Then there was the usual amount of routine business to be transacted by the board. The financial report of the month showed that the hospital is being conducted on a very economical basis. For the month the receipts from the usual sources were within $40 of the expenditures, which is an excellent record.

BRIDGES ARE NEEDED; WHO'LL BUILD THEM?

Street Department and Freeholders Want Information on That Subject.

LAW IS NOT QUITE CLEAR.

COMPELLED TO FORD CEDAR BROOK AT JACKSON AND MIDWAY AVENUES.

Culvert at Netherwood Avenue is Too Small to Provide for Freholders—Residents Petitioned Street Department for Aid.

Bridges are needed at Jackson and Midway avenues over Cedar brook, while the present bridge at Netherwood avenue over the same stream needs a successor. Meanwhile the city street department and the Union County Board of Freeholders are trying to find out just which one must bear the expense of these bridges.

Cedar brook is a peculiar sort of a stream. During most of the summer there isn't any water in the brook at all, only a dry water course. In the winter, especially after a thaw, there is a fair-sized stream. When a heavy thaw sets in or a big storm comes along, the brook occasionally becomes so large that the banks are overflowed.

At Netherwood avenue there is a small culvert to allow the water to pass under the thoroughfare. It is amply sufficient on ordinary occasions but several times this winter the water has been blocked there and overflowed the roadway to the depth of nearly two feet. There are no bridges on Jackson and Midway avenues at all. It is a case of wade when there is any water in the brook. Now that that section of the city is building up, such a state of affairs is very unpleasant.

There isn't any doubt but that bridges are needed. The residents of that section brought the matter before the street department by petitioning that a twenty-four inch iron pipe be laid to carry the water under the road-way. Such a pipe would be very expensive and by no means adequate in case of a freshet. The street department saw the force of the request for some kind of a bridge, but thought that the Freeholders built the bridges.

The matter was called to the attention of the Board of Freeholders but, as the stream was not a live one all the year round, the Board argued that it was the duty of the city to build the bridges. Had it been a live stream or outside of the city, it was admitted as part of the duty of the Board.

Director Hubbard, of the Board of Freeholders, has promised to visit the place and look over the situation. If he reports favorably the Board will undoubtedly reconsider its action and build the bridges. The street department is willing to build the bridges if the law is clear on that point but not unless. If the Board refuses the matter will be brought to the attention of the Council and information asked from the Corporation Counsel.

OLD CONTRACTOR DEAD.

William Corrright Passed Away at His Home Friday Morning at the Age of Seventy-five Years.

William Corrright, aged seventy-five years, died Friday morning at his home corner of West Fifth and New streets, after an illness of some days. He was born in Sussex county, this State, and at an early age learned the trade of a carpenter. He went to Cairo, Ill., where he was employed along the Mississippi river. He then went to Rochester, Minn., and from there he went to Ripon, Wis., where he bought a farm. He was married there.

After spending a few years at that place he came back to New Jersey and bought a farm at Somerville, where he remained for sometime. He then took up his residence at Scotch Plains. In 1869 he came to Plainfield and here followed his profession up to a few years ago. His wife died two years ago. His illness resulting in death lasted about three weeks. He was a man of much wealth, and only Thursday he made his will.

Won Prizes Playing Euchre.

The Thursday Evening Euchre Club was entertained pleasantly Thursday by Miss May MacLoughlin, of Somerset street, when the members enjoyed the usual good time. There were five tables. Owing to the fact that Mr. and Mrs. Will F. Williams could not attend, there places were taken by Mrs. Carrie Colfax, of Bloomfield, and John Steiner, of the borough. The contest for honors was close. Miss Lillian A. Force and Mrs. Herbert Taylor were awarded first and second for the ladies, while Theodore Mantz and H. C. VanEmburgh won the first and second honors for the men. After the games dancing was enjoyed and before the members departed for home supper was served. The next meeting of the club will be the last for the season.

HIS DEATH UNEXPECTED.

GEORGE W. F. RANDOLPH PASSED AWAY SUDDENLY SATURDAY.

Had Been Ill for Sometime, But Was Thought to be Improving—Always Lived in Plainfield.

George W. F. Randolph, a well known citizen of the West End, died suddenly Saturday at his home, 909 West Front street, after an illness of about three weeks.

About the middle of last June Mr. Randolph sustained a paralytic stroke and at the time his life was considered to be in danger. Through the skill of Dr. Bedloott, the family physician, Mr. Randolph partially recovered though he continued in a feeble condition. His illness compelled him to remain inactive since last July, when he temporarily resigned his position in the Quartermaster's office in New York.

Three weeks ago Mr. Randolph was afflicted with the grip and was for several days a very sick man. He revived somewhat, however, from this illness and his family believed him to be on the way to recovery. Friday Mr. Randolph's condition grew so bad as to greatly alarm his wife and daughter. Mrs. Randolph was so much concerned about her husband that she remained with him until late in the night. She then went to take a short rest just before daylight leaving her daughter to keep watch of the sufferer.

It was about 5:20 o'clock when Mrs. Groendyke, Mr. Randolph's daughter, noticed a change in her father's condition. Mrs. Groendyke immediately summoned her mother and husband. The members were gathered about the bedside when Mr. Randolph breathed his last.

The death of George W. F. Randolph has removed a well-known citizen. He was born forty years ago in a house opposite the home in which he died on West Front street. The deceased was a son of Ira F. and Sarah Pond Randolph. His father was a hatter by trade and for several years carried on the hat business in a shop on West Front street. George was the oldest son. His early life was passed in New York city where at the age of 16 he became identified with the late William R. Clarkson in the flour and feed business on Front street. He was also at one time in the employ of Thomas A. Edison.

Mr. Randolph is best remembered, however, as a member of the Board of Freeholders of Union county, a position of trust to which he was elected for several successive terms. At one time he was identified with the street department, being street commissioner for a term or two under the administration of Mayor Stillman.

About the period in Mr. Randolph's business career he was also interested in contracts with the firm of Spottswood & Co., which did much of the early macadamizing of certain streets, principally Park avenue and Somerset street.

For the past fifteen years, however, Mr. Randolph has been a faithful employe in the Quartermaster's Department, located in the Armory building on Whitehall street, New York. His efficiency in the particular line of work to which he was assigned was recognized by his superiors, and he was held in respect by his colleagues for his untiring devotion and his painstaking efforts to satisfactorily perform cheerfully the arduous duties he was intrusted with. His last work was done in July when he was compelled to leave the office owing to his shattered health.

In early life Mr. Randolph married Mary A. Keller, of Norwalk, Ohio, who with one daughter, Mrs. John Groendyke, their only child, survives. Mr. Randolph came of Quaker stock and his characteristics were those so proverbial in this class of people. Being of a mild disposition and a man of exemplary habit traits that endeared him to many friends, the death of Mr. Randolph will cause expressions of general sympathy to be extended by his many friends in this city and New York toward the afflicted wife and daughter. Although not a member of any church denomination, Mr. Randolph displayed a truly Christian spirit in dealing with his fellow man. His friends were legion and those who knew him best loved him for the many excellent characteristics of an exemplary life.

Shot a Deer.

Kenneth Anderson, of this city, who has been at Lake Placid, in the Adirondacks, for the benefit of his health, had great luck a week ago in shooting a large deer. He sent the skin home to his sister and it will be made into a rug. A letter accompanied the prize which tells of the capture. Mr. Anderson is greatly improved in health and is enjoying life immensely.

Realty Changes.

The following real estate transfers have been recorded from North Plainfield during the past week in the Somerset County Clerk's office:

Wm. H. Brokaw to Evalyn P. Dyer, $100; John T. Case to Irma G. Hummer, $1,000; Annie E. Blackford and husband to Mary E. Blackford, $1,000; Henry Harrington, Jr., to Wm. Brown, $2,000; Philip C. Miles to F. A. Nelson, $2,000.

THE SUDANESE FEVER.

It Makes Those It Attacks "See Red" and Drives Them Into Violent Insanity.

Much attention has been called to the number of men in the army serving in the Philippines who have gone insane, says a New York paper. The government has sent a special commission out there to investigate the matter, and there has been talk of a mysterious disease called the "Sudanese fever."

It is believed by some that this disease is peculiar to Egyptian and African tropics; that it was this which caused Dr. Peters to get into trouble for killing Africans, and made the

MALAY RUNNING AMUCK.
(Terrible Effects of the Disease Known as Sudanese Fever.)

French officers in the interior of Africa recently slay other officers sent to their relief, is one theory. Everybody has heard of the Malay who runs amuck and, frenzied, kills right and left until he himself is killed. The word "amuck" is a corruption of the Javanese word "amuk," to kill. There seems to be no doubt that the Malay occasionally goes crazy through an overindulgence in opium or hasheesh, and, springing from his "shack," runs naked through the streets of his village, killing all whom he may meet.

When in a Malay village the cry "amuck" is raised, it is like the cry of "mad dog!" in an American village, and the populace turn out with long bamboo spears to kill the man as soon as they can. But the "Sudanese fever," if it exists, is another thing apparently. It may be that the disease which has afflicted white men in the Philippines and in equatorial Africa is only a variation of apoplexy, brought on by indulgence in heating and stimulating foods.

The London Lancet recently had something about the alleged disease. People who had been afflicted with it and had recovered said that they had a sudden sensation of a desire to kill, and that they "saw red." A sudden afflux of blood to the head and the bursting of a blood vessel would produce insanity or coma. In northern climates it more usually results in coma; in the tropics it seems to result in insanity.

All the soldiers of our army in the Philippines who have been sent back to hospitals have been violent. As a matter of fact, only 37 men who served in the Philippines went crazy and were brought back to the United States. Of these 11 recovered and were discharged.

This "seeing red" seems to be a peculiarity of the Asiatic when he is excited violently. The Sikhs and the Gourkhas, the best fighters in the native Indian army, describe their feeling when in the charge in the frenzy of battle as "seeing red." It is probably due to an afflux of blood to the head, which congests the small veins of the eyeball.

TO SUCCEED WATSON.

Admiral George C. Remey Appointed Commander of the Asiatic Station of the Navy.

Admiral George C. Remey, who has been assigned to succeed Admiral Watson as commander of the Asiatic station, is an old sailor who served in the union navy during the civil war and who was very useful to the department during the recent war with Spain. He is an Iowa man and was appointed from that state to the naval academy at Annapolis in 1858. When the civil war began he was commissioned a lieutenant of the gunboat Marblehead in the South Atlantic blockading squadron. He was present at the siege of Yorktown and took several occasions, engaged the batteries at long range. His ship was disabled just before the battle at West Point, Va., and the lieutenant was forced to witness the action as a mere looker-on. He fought at Sullivan's Island, Battery Wagner, Fort Sumter and Fort Trygg. After the war the customary shifting life of the naval officer in times of peace fell to his lot. In 1898 he was made a captain and placed in charge of the Charleston squadron of evolution. The Spanish war and the many changes in the navy that followed it brought Remey up to the rank of Admiral.

ADMIRAL GEORGE C. REMEY.
(Just Assigned to the Command of the Asiatic Station.)

LEGISLATURE ENDED ITS WORK FRIDAY.

The Wind-up Came Near Midnight and the Assemblymen Indulged in Wild Antics.

BRUSH ON A RAILROAD BILL.

MR. BENNY PAYS HIS RESPECTS TO THE "THIRD HOUSE."

Presentations Made to the Officers of Both Houses—Not Little Important Legislation Has Been Enacted During the Session.

It was nearly midnight when the 124th session of the New Jersey Legislature came to an end and the wind-up was in the midst of singing, flying public documents and boisterous shouts. The horse play began in the House a little past 10 o'clock when the House calendars were cleared. Assemblyman Meeker was called to the chair and he had no sooner picked up the gavel than he was bombarded with books until he was obliged to retreat to the Speaker's room.

In the afternoon, Leader Benny, of the Democratic forces, presented, on behalf of the members of the House, a gold watch and chain to Speaker Jones. Bill Clerk Powell was given a diamond ring, and Sergeant-at-Arms Tantum a gold watch and chain, and charm studded with diamonds. Assemblyman Wright, of Burlington county, who stood with the Hudson County Democrats for the abolishment of capital punishment, was presented with a gold watch chain by Assemblyman Carroll, spokesman for the Hudson county delegation. Sergeant-at Arms of the Senate Garwood was presented with a gold-headed cane.

The session has lasted ten weeks and in that period the weary law makers have filled in about 90 total working hours, or ten 9 hour days. Their pay is $1500 for the session so that they get about $4.35 per hour for their arduous duties.

There has been little really important legislation enacted at this session, but the work has been carefully done and it has been many years since the calendars were as clear on the closing day as the presiding officers of the Senate and House found them this morning.

Assemblyman Benny, of Hudson, and Bradley, of Camden, locked horns yesterday morning on House bill No. 7, which provides that no locomotive with Wootton or similar firebox shall be run without two firemen. It was the same bill that Benny undertook to get through the House last winter and failed. It was endorsed, he said, by 60,000 railroad employes and was in the interest of patrons of the railroad. The Pennsylvania Company had adopted the plan. Benny said that he was sure that this was his last year in the Legislature, and he warned the members that the State was on the brink of a precipice that would prove its ruin if it was not avoided. The lobbyists, he thought, were slowly but surely pushing the majority toward the edge of the chasm.

Assemblyman Bradley took exceptions to what he thought was an insinuation that he had been influenced by lobbyists. He said that he had never been guilty of a dishonest action since he became a member of the Legislature. The bill, he thought, was a bad one because it forced the rail roads to employ extra and unnecessary help which would add an expense of upward of $90,000 a year to the running expenses of the Erie Railroad alone.

The bill was one on which a good many members of the House did not want to vote on and they quietly disappeared until after the vote had been announced. Not enough votes were cast to either pass or defeat the bill, and Benny changed from the affirmative to the negative so that he might later in the day move a reconsideration. It availed him nothing, however, for when he undertook to have the vote reconsidered he failed and the measure fell by the way, while the active members of the "third house" smiled broadly.

Senator McDermott, Democrat, introduced a resolution in the Senate asking that sympathy be expressed for the Boers in their struggle to maintain their independence. The resolution declared that, whatever the excuse for the war at the start, the Boers had sued for peace, which had been refused them, and Great Britain must now be considered in the light of an aggressor. The members of the Senate did not take kindly to the resolution, and, on motion, it was referred to the committee on federal relations.

Killing Too Many Fish.

The Fish and Game Commission have stopped the pumping of water from the gas mains into the river at Cranford. It is claimed that the water from the pipes was killing the young fish.

HOW THE DOCTOR GOT THERE

Had Always an Easy Trip; for a Maine Physician to Reach His Patients.

The other day a country physician received a call to go from his place into a lumber camp in the far Brassua region, and it was such a call as a doctor cannot well refuse. So he went to West Cove on Moosehead with a big coat and wearing leggins and moccasins, as the low moosealnx are called.

A lumberman was there and this man had made arrangements to carry the doctor up as far as West Outlet on a handcar on the Canadian Pacific road. They had to step once and unload the handcar on to their backs in a gully so that a freight train could go past.

Above West Outlet a certain portion of the lake surface was free of snow and the doctor and the woodsman guide strapped on their skates and started. There were numerous "wrinkles," huge bulging rifts in the ice where the moving of the mighty surface had met and made ruin. When they came to one of these wrinkles the woodsman went ahead and prodded and poked until he found a place where they could cross.

It is possible that more men have been drowned in the rivers of Moosehead by carelessness in crossing wrinkles than by any other cause.

By the time they got to the mouth of Moose river the doctor was obliged to own to his sturdy companion that he was tired indeed. The man had a moose sled there in the bushes. He had left it when he had come out after the doctor. He piled the medicine man on with his case, wrapped him in blankets and set away along the tote road. There was no snow, for there was much uncertainty as to when the doctor would be able to get along.

When he could he walked. The rest of the time he rode. The tough little man of the woods seemed in no wise disturbed. He told the doctor that it was easy enough to make those kind of trips when one was toughened to it.

In the camp was one of the bosses who had been caught in a snub line and who had had most of the flesh on the calf of his leg rasped off by the cruel cable.

The doctor did what he could for the sufferer. Before he finished his labors there a messenger came from a camp ten miles above, they had learned that a physician was in the section and they wanted him. Ten men were down with grip and colds and two had pneumonia. So the doctor went up to that camp. There was nothing else to do. If he had not done it they would, he guesses they would have loaded him on a sled willynilly and would have taken him along. He came out after six days in the woods.—Lewiston Journal.

VIADUCT TO BE TAKEN DOWN.

An Immense Work of Engineering in Pennsylvania Will Soon Be Destroyed.

It is authoritatively stated that the famous Kinzua viaduct, the gigantic iron girder and trestle bridge in McKean county, Pennsylvania, south of Bradford, is to be replaced at an early date by a new and wholly different structure. Two views of this famous bridge are given. The work on it was begun on May 5, 1882, and it was completed and opened for traffic less than four months later, on August 29, 1882. It is 301 feet high at the highest point, and until the completion of the Garabit viaduct was the highest bridge in the world. The Garabit spans the Truyere in the south of France, is 1,849 feet long and at the highest point the rail level is 401 feet above the river. It was designed by M. Eiffel, builder of the famous tower, and was completed in 1884.

The Kinzua bridge is 2,060 feet long. It was built by the Keystone Company of Phoenixville, Pa. Its completion gave to the New York, Lake Erie & Western railroad direct communication with the coal fields of western Pennsylvania. The Buffalo, Rochester & Pittsburgh has a traffic arrangement with the Erie for the use of the bridge. The valley of the Kinzua, which this great trestle spans, is 14 miles south of Bradford and one of the wildest regions yet left in western Pennsylvania. Until recently, perhaps even yet, bear plentiful and deer occasionally found in this valley.

The Kinzua viaduct has been a point of excursion and an object of curiosity for sightseers ever since it was built. Gen. Grant was taken there on one occasion.—Chicago Chronicle.

The Middle Ear.

This story is told of Prof. Pritchard, who recently opened the sixth international otological congress. Reviewing the progress of the last 10 years, the professor referred to "chronic nonsuppurative disease of the middle ear" as being the supreme mystery at present to students of otology. "What is this middle ear?" a lady asked a sage policeman. Madam," he replied, "it is the ear with which we do not listen." In other words, the nose.—N. E. Home Magazine.

Curious Wanderings of Smoke.

During the volcanic eruption in the Hawaiian islands last summer the smoke rose to a height of between five and six miles and then drifted away to the northeast. At a distance of 600 miles from Hawaii it settled upon the surface of the sea, and was then carried back by the northeast wind to its place of origin, where it remained all night after its original departure, and covered the entire group of islands with its heavy pall.—Youth's Companion.

TRIBUTE TO THE DEAD

IMPRESSIVE SERVICES AT FUNERAL OF LATE MRS. GILBERT.

Large Attendance of Mourners—Life of the Deceased Eulogized by Rev. Dr. Yerkes.

The love and respect in which the late Mrs. Louise Fitz Randolph, wife of Former Mayor Alexander Gilbert, was held by the entire community was evidenced Friday afternoon when the Gilbert residence on West Eighth street was crowded with Plainfield's most prominent residents who came to do honor to the memory of their well beloved friend.

The casket was set in the library, elaborately banked in flowers, in mass and set pieces. White roses, carnations and lilies made a beautiful effect. Rev. Dr. Yerkes, pastor of the First Baptist church, of which Mrs. Gilbert was a member, conducted the solemn and impressive service.

He spoke feelingly of his long acquaintance with Mrs. Gilbert and his profound respect for her and her bright Christian character. She was a joy, he said, not only to her household but to the coterie of friends that always surrounded her. Her happy greeting and genial smile would never be forgotten. The home, he declared, had been a veritable temple of domestic happiness. The evidences of her handiwork and the graces and tastes of her soul were visible in the various works of arts that decorated her home. However beautiful, this was really the least feature of that life. Her beautiful Christian character and many virtues were an adornment through which and by which the world was made better by her life now ended on earth.

A quartette, composed of Mrs. J. K. Myers, Mrs. Irving Brown, C. W. McCutchen and D. E. Titsworth, sang effectively.

Mayor George W. Bockfeller, several Councilmen and a number of others prominent in municipal affairs were in attendance, besides a number of other well-known Plainfielders. A delegation from the Fulton and Market National Bank, of New York, of which Mr. Gilbert is president, was present.

The interment at Hillside cemetery followed immediately after the service.

ENDEAVOR WORKERS.

Committees Appointed by the First Baptist Church Society.

The executive committee of the Christian Endeavor Society of the First Baptist church, comprising the officers and chairmen of the various committees, met Thursday for the first at the home of the president, Geo F. Brown, Grove street, when plans for the coming year's work were discussed. It was unanimously decided that if possible to promote more sociability among the members of the society and the church and thus secure the interest of persons who are not brought to the front by attending the meetings. After a discussion of plans announcement was made of the following, who will compose the committees:

Lookout committee, Mrs. M. Pierce, chairman; Miss Carrie V. Drake, Miss Mary French, Miss Jessie Saxton, Charles Conover, Robert Barnes; prayer meeting committee, Miss H.O. Mattison, chairman; Mrs. H. Y. Flanders, Miss Alice Woodland, J Herbert Case, Dr. W. K. Browning, D. R. Douglas: social committee, Dr. W. K. Browning, chairman; Miss Bertha Needham, Miss Susie Woodland, Miss Margaret Harold, Clifford Braider, John G. MacLaughlin; music committee, Clifford Braider, chairman; Mrs. Tennyson, Miss Florence Marsh, Miss Margaret Harold, L. H. Biglow, Jr., Harold Serrell: flower committee, Miss Susie Woodland, chairman; Miss Della Grant, Miss L. C. Harrold, Miss Florence Carver, Miss Grace Van Ryck, N. Douglass Drake: welcome and press committee, N. Douglass Drake, chairman; Miss May Serrell, Miss Alice Woodland, Miss Carrie V. Drake, J. Henry Crane, D. R. Douglas.

CARELESS DRIVING.

Member of the Salvation Army Knocked Off His Wheel on Front Street.

An exhibition of careless driving was seen about 10:30 o'clock Friday morning at the corner of Park avenue and Front street. A man driving a spirited horse, attached to a buckboard wagon, dashed out of Somerset street, going at a rapid rate of speed. At the corner of Park avenue and Front street the rig collided with a young man riding a wheel. The bicyclist was run down and the handle bars of his wheel smashed. When the young man picked himself up one of his hands were bleeding from a severe wound. The driver of the vehicle did not stop to ascertain what damage had been done, but kept on up Park avenue.

The young man who was run down refused to give his name. He was dressed in the uniform of the Salvation Army. The name of the driver of the rig is said to be Bimms and lives at Washingtonville.

SCHEME OF THE CENTRAL

PROJECT TO EXTEND THE LINE TO ELLIS INLAND.

Is This Way Immigrants Could be Handled Direct—Way Eventually Touch Staten Island.

A well-defined rumor is current that the Central Railroad will endeavor to increase its facilities in a remarkable manner. It is said that it has a plan which for largeness and utility outshines that of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company. It is proposed, it is said, to extend its line out from the Communipaw shore to the immigrant station at Ellis Island.

The Central Railroad handles a large number of immigrants (it carried 400 west last night), and if this plan were carried out it could take them direct from the island and save extra transportation and the confusion which arises from many shiftings of the immigrants. This, however, would be but the first step in the great scheme contemplated, which is no less than to run the Central Railroad all the way across New York Bay to Staten Island.

There is a well defined ridge of rock known as Oyster Reef, from Bedloe's Island to Robbin's Reef light. This is part of the riparian land of the State. The Riparian Board in 1891 had a plan for utilizing this land, but the plan was vetoed by the United States Government at the time.

It is said that the plan will be revived and a strong effort made to get the sanction of the War Department to its adoption. If permission is given the State to utilize the reef and Jersey flats, the Central Railroad and its connections will, it is said, acquire the entire strip. The plan is to make a road-bed reclaimed from Jersey City to Ellis Island, to Bedlow's Island to two artificial islands contemplated, where immense wharves and storage warehouses will be built, to Robbin's Reef, and so on over by trestle and drawbridge to Staten Island. Between each of the islands there would be, under the plans proposed, a wide passage for navigation, which would be crossed by drawbridge.

FOR SELF PROTECTION.

Machinery Manufacturers Organized so as to be Ready for a Strike if it Comes.

C. E Vail, acting secretary of the New York and New Jersey Machinery Manufacturers' Association, says that there is no truth in the report that his association would reinstate with a lockout should the Machinists' Union order a general strike. Notwithstanding such denials, it is well known that the threat of the western leaders of organized labor to tie up machine shops throughout the country unless the nine hour day is granted to all employes has carried such weight with local members of the National Metal Trade Association as to cause them to take immediate steps toward organizing for their own protection. The new association is nearly partially formed, but when completed will include the machine manufacturers of New York and adjacent towns, including Plainfield.

KING'S DAUGHTERS' MUSICALE.

Given for Benefit of Nurse, and Was a Financial Success.

The Bright Side Circle, King's Daughters, gave a musicale Thursday at the home of Mrs. J. A. Powlison, 203 Somerset street, for the benefit of Miss Delaney, the city nurse. There were about forty-five persons present and the financial success was very gratifying to those who were in charge.

The programme was a select one and thoroughly enjoyed. It included piano duets by Dr. and Mrs. J Hervey Buchanan; piano solos by Miss Cairns; recitations by Miss May Serrell; whistling solos by C. M. Evans; instrumental trios by the Misses LaBoyteaux and Martin. The musical selections were by well-known composers and the recitations were by standard writers. Miss VanFleet was the accompanist for the evening. After the rendition of the programme a social time was spent and refreshments were served.

James McFadden Dead.

James McFadden died at his home on West Fourth street Thursday afternoon after an illness lasting only a few days. He was seventy-seven years of age and had lived in Plainfield many years. He was born in Ireland. For several years he has been an employe of the street department, and was a familiar character about the city streets in the business section. He leaves several children. The funeral was held from St. Mary's church Sunday afternoon at 2 o'clock.

To Macadamize a Road.

As soon as the weather permits it is the intention of the Essex County Board of Freeholders to begin the work of macadamizing Parsonage avenue in Milburn, which was recently made a county road. This thoroughfare is three and one half miles in length and extends from the Old Short Hills road to the Chatham turnpike in White Oak Ridge. George W. Reeve, of White Oak Ridge, will be appointed by the Freeholders to supervise the work.

TROUBLE ON CENTRAL HAS BEEN FIXED UP

Differences Between the Company and Its Men Adjusted at a Conference.

RULES FULLY EXPLAINED.

OFFICIALS AND DELEGATES COME TO MUTUAL UNDERSTANDING.

Superintendent Ohausen Says Trouble Arose Chiefly From a Misapprehension as to the Application of Certain Rules.

A committee of thirty employes of the New Jersey Central Railroad, representing all branches of the service, called on General Superintendent Ohausen Thursday by appointment at 1 o'clock in the Commonhouse for the purpose of laying some grievances before him. They were cordially received by the superintendent, who had with him nine of his associates, including the division superintendents.

The conference lasted four hours and at its conclusion it was announced that the officials and the delegates were mutually satisfied. Each attendant at the conference was pledged to secrecy. The delegates refused to talk about it beyond saying that they were satisfied.

It is understood that the grievances complained of by the men referred to certain new rules which have been put in force. The rules were fully explained to the delegates and they withdrew their complaint. The strike which was talked of for several days is evidently off.

Superintendent Ohausen said: "Everything has been adjusted to the satisfaction of all concerned. The trouble arose chiefly from a misapprehension on the part of the men as to the application of certain rules. This has been explained and fully settled."

FINE MUSIC HEARD.

Successful Concert Arranged by William Holmes Given in Dunellen Thursday.

The first concert given by the Choral Union of Dunellen and New Market, in the M.E. church, Dunellen, Thursday, under the direction of William Holmes, of this city, was a success in every particular. The soloists were Miss Luella C Harris, George E. Smith and Mr. Holmes of the First Baptist church choir. Mrs. F. M. Ward expected to sing, but owing to a sudden heavy cold she could not appear, and Mr. Holmes had to take the place on the programme which was rendered almost as published Tuesday.

Every selection was a gem and honors were divided between the chorus and soloists. The chorus showed a high degree of efficiency under the able training of Mr. Holmes, and the audience was liberal in its applause. Concerning the work of the soloists too much cannot be said in praise. Each one was in fine voice and the renditions were given with finish and style. Miss Harris and Mr. Holmes sang together, as did also Mr. Holmes and Mr. Smith. So much of the accompaniste Miss Irene Day and How ard Case was perfect and assisted materially in making the concert a success. The church was crowded to the doors with an appreciative audience, among which was a number of music loving people from this city and other nearby places. During the evening the soloists and Miss Day, the accompanist, received handsome bouquets.

IMPRESSIONS OF ENGLAND

Dr. Snodgrass Delivered a Lecture on the Trip He Made Abroad Last Summer.

Rev. Dr. W. C. Snodgrass, pastor of the First M. E. church, gave an interesting lecture on "My Impressions of England," at Vincent chapel Thursday. Previous to the lecture and following it, Charles L. Lewis sang a solo, accompanied by Mrs. Lewis.

Dr. Snodgrass told in an interesting way the things that most impressed him during his trip through England. The great crowds that were to be found in all parts of the city particularly impressed him. Then he noticed the remarkable absence of the suburban towns so common in this country.

The rage of the country, as evidenced on every side by relics and rules of centuries before, was one of the noticeable features of that land, particularly to a foreigner. He told of the extreme politeness of the English and some of his own laughable experiences that arose from it.

The people of England, he said, had their customs and it was almost impossible to persuade them to make the slightest change in them. There was, however, a great element of safety in their conservatism that prevented many of the evils that often occur on this side of the Atlantic.

Basket Factory at Colton.

A party of local capitalists have started a large basket factory at Colton, Hunterdon county, and employment will be given to fifty hands.

RUSHED THE SEASON

LAWN PARTY AND PICNIC HELD IN TRINITY CHURCH.

Young Men Bought Luncheon at Auction and Ate With Girls Who Prepared Them.

Only a little imagination was needed to complete the illusion of the "lawn party" and picnic held in the lecture room of Trinity Reformed church last Thursday by the Christian Endeavor Society of the church. A rustic summer house was surrounded by rustic chairs and tables while evergreen trees grew temporarily around the pillars. Many of the guests came in summer attire. A little imagination supplied the grass and the affair was complete.

It was something new in the line of a sociable and attracted many of the young people. An informal programme included a solo by Miss Charlotte Messersmith, accompanied by Miss Achsah Holmes, and several well-rendered instrumental trios by W. C. Townsend, mandolin; Ernest Wilcox, flute, and Harry Stewart, piano.

Each young man was supplied with a handful of beans. These were utilized at the auction sale of lunch boxes that followed. E. E. Anthony acting as auctioneer. The boxes were put up without any clue as to their contents or owner. The purchaser who bid the most beans took the box and ate the contents in company with the young woman who prepared it. The auction and the subsequent picnic was found to be a delightful feature of the social.

For those who were not supplied with lunch boxes, cake and cocoa were served. The guests sat about on the rustic benches and in the summer house and enjoyed an hour of sociability.

The affair was in charge of the social committee of the Endeavor Society and consisted of Miss Edith Du Bois, chairman; Mrs. E. E. Anthony, Mrs. Bertha Richards and Miss Nellie Fenner. The committee was greatly assisted by J. E. Townsend, who brought them the decorations, summer house and all. The summer house with the other rustic features were loaned by Charles Kiederling, of East Front street.

BELL SCARED HORSE.

Thrilling Runaway of Dr. Adams' Horse by Which the Buggy Was Completely Wrecked.

Thursday about 7 o'clock while Dr. D. C. Adams was about to go to his carriage to make his evening calls, a hurried call came to his office. His servant thinking he had about started rang a large hand bell to attract his attention. The sound of the bell so frightened the horse that before the doctor could get near him it gave a sudden spring which broke the lead. Then away he bounded down the lane into Duer street crossing over the walks and lawns and around the cherry trees of John H. Carney. The rear wheels struck one of the large trees, upsetting the buggy. The frightened animal went on with overturned buggy, scattering blankets, etc, upon the street. When opposite the residence of the late Jacob Long the buggy top was left, while the horse and front wheels continued on their mad journey down Craig place. Again crossing side walks it entered the vacant lot on the corner of Grove street and Prospect place.

By the plucky efforts of Messrs. Phillips and Barkelow the horse was brought to a standstill. Fortunately the only damage done was the wrecking of the buggy.

TICKET AGENTS WORK HARD.

They are Allowed on Sunday Hours To Position for One Sunday Out Each Month.

Before the present management of the Jersey Central Railroad took charge of affairs it was the custom for the ticket agents to have one Sunday off every month. This worked satisfactorily and the men were willing to work the other three Sundays in the month.

Under the present regime the agents are compelled to work every Sunday. This they consider too much, especially so for the reason that they do not get paid for Sunday work. A petition has been drafted and is now being signed by all the ticket agents along the Jersey Central requesting the company to pay them for Sunday work.

Just what success the petition will have cannot be stated, but the men think they should either get one day off in four or else get paid for the Sunday work. The petition will be presented April 1st.

Given a Long Furlough.

B. Mortimer Chilton, of Putnam avenue, who is a member of the Seventh Regiment of the New York National Guard, has been given a furlough from duty until next fall. Last fall Chilton accidentally shot himself through the hand and the injury has been such that he has been unable to go through the manual of arms since that time. So the regimental authorities gave him the furlough.

NOTES OF THE FASHIONS.

New House Gowns with Pretty Collars—Jacket Model That Is Popular.

Applique effects and cut work are always in vogue when braiding is fashionable. Laid over rich satin, velvet or ladies' cloth, the elegant pieces of lace or silk passementeries applique show to distinct advantage, but it seems a pity to see these handsome patterns laid over gowns or jackets of inferior fabric when any apparent reason. This is always so beautiful that it seems a waste to utilize it for many of the everyday uses, for which any amount of it is ruthlessly applied this winter.

Nearly all the new house gowns have soft, pretty colors covered with silk muslin ruches, the hands cut much higher on the sides or at the back than in front. In the holiday exhibit of fancy neckwear, net, in various dainty weaves and meshes, is quite as fashionable as chiffon or mousseline de soie, and while there are many very elaborate and expensive styles shown, there are likewise some fascinating little creations which do much in transforming a plain waist into a smart and more becoming one. Bows of very narrow white or tinted satin or velvet ribbon (in black particularly), bordering frills, ruches and scalloped edges, are very easily applied. They are extremely effective, and moreover, they are quite as fashionable as ever.

Caroline Rehoux, one of the noted milliners of Paris, uses on green, gray, brown and black velvet round hats, ruches of satin ribbon in several colors on one crown and notch into large bows of the velvet. These rosettes are especially liked in rose pink, ivy green, russet brown and cherry red, the rosettes looking like gay flowers in their setting of dark velvet.

A little jacket model used with many of the plain tailor costumes has rather wide revers scalloped at the edge and strapped and stitched, turning back from the line of the bust to the shoulders and tapering to a point at the waist. The fronts fit snugly, but are not fastened together. Fancy waistcoats of various kinds are worn with these jackets. The regular French vest is much used, but there are pretty gilets in soft yellow silk, trimmed with yellow ruching and fine tucks; those of red taffeta silk with rather wide stripes of black velvet ribbon; and white silk models, covered with satin straps edged with gilt cord and studded with trimmings with rows of tiny gold buttons. The straps lie flat, and curve from the shoulders to the braid-edged belt.—N. Y. Post.

HE WOULD OBEY ORDERS.

An Applicant for Railroad Work Who Thoroughly Understood His Business.

A young man with a decidedly seedy appearance entered the superintendent's office and, pleading but a rudimentary knowledge of the superintendent's shoulder, accosted him thus:

"Boss, can you gimme a job?"

"What department?"

"Either brakin' or firin'."

"Do you know the book of rules?"

"Some."

"Well, let me see how well you are posted. We will suppose you were firing a train that was running from Jersey City to Philadelphia; the engineer would get killed and you would take his place. You would find on his clip that the train had orders to take the sidetrack for another train somewhere in the woods where there was no telegraph office, but suppose that train did not arrive there for, say, 12 hours, what would you do?"

"That would be the affair of the conductor, not mine."

"I will take your name and if we have anything nowhere we will send for you. Good day."

The next applicant to enter seated himself back of the superintendent and waited for him to break the silence, which he did, shortly.

"Well, sir, what can I do for you?"

"I would like to have a job, boss."

"In what department?"

"Train service."

"Are you familiar with the book of rules?"

"A little."

The superintendent then asked him the same question as the first.

The fellow scratched his head, then looking the superintendent squarely in the eye replied: "Boss, if the orders looked good and were positive I would stay on that sidetrack until hades froze over."

"Go down and report to Mr. —— the trainmaster, for duty."—Philadelphia Inquirer.

Apple a la Niagara.

Pare and cut in quarters four large apples, place them in a saucepan with half cupful of water, cover and cook till tender, rub them through a colander, sweeten with three tablespoonfuls sugar. When the apples are nearly cold beat whites of three eggs to a stiff froth, slowly add the apple sauce while beating constantly. Continue to beat for half hour; heap it on a glass dish, set lady fingers divided in two all around the dish of currant jelly between, and serve with vanilla sauce, made as follows: Put the yolks of three eggs in a double boiler, add one pint milk, one-half teaspoonful cornstarch, two tablespoonfuls sugar, stir till hot, about to boil, remove; add one teaspoonful vanilla and serve when cold.—Brooklyn Eagle.

A Poor Lesson.

There can be no poorer soil for a child-plant to grow in, or to attempt to grow in, than the soil of pretense. To learn to conceal is a sorrowful lesson indeed for a child. To learn to conceal honest poverty, as though ashamed of it, is the most sorrowful of the sorrowful lessons in this line, for it is but little purposeful is necessary afterward.—Ladies' Home Journal.

WANT LESS MONEY FOR STREET WORK

Street Committee Decided to Reduce Appropriations This Year.

RECEIVED BIDS FOR STONE.

IMPORTANT MEETING OF STREET COMMITTEE OF COUNCIL.

A. J. & N. B. Smalley Lowest Bidders for City's Supply of Crushed Stone—George White Wants Gravel Ave. and Widened—Flagging Notices.

Bids for the year's supplies of the city street department were received at the meeting of the street committee of the Common Council Thursday. Then there were other matters of interest that were discussed and many of them acted upon. It was the most important street committee meeting of the season.

Bids for crushed stone, curbstone and flagstone were advertised for. They were received and opened and the results will be reported to the Council. There were two bids for crushed stone, J. H. Wilson & Co. offered to furnish it for $1.10 a ton, and A. J. & N. B. Smalley for $1.05 a ton. The price last year was $1 a ton.

W. E. Bartle and A. Kane were the bidders for the supply of curb and flag stone. Bartle offered to supply the cut-wet coven for 60 cents a square foot, Kane's price was 55 cents. The 16-inch curbing Bartle offered for 30 cents a lineal foot. Kane's price was 28½ cents. For 20-inch curbing Bartle wanted 36 cents and Kane 34½.

In bidding for the crosswalks, Bartle offered the stone with rough edges for 32 cents a lineal foot, and with Belgin edges 37 cents a lineal foot. Kane's price for the former was 40 cents and for the latter 56 cents.

The committee will recommend the acceptance of Smalley's bid, but the others will be looked into further.

George White appeared before the committee and asked that the city widen Girsud avenue. The property owners would give the necessary land if the city would make the improvement. His reason was, he explained, that the Board of Freeholders refused to build a new bridge there while the street in the city remains as narrow as it is at present. Girsud avenue is 50 feet wide in the borough and 33½ feet wide in the city. The committee promised to consider the matter.

The appropriation for the street department was discussed. Last year the street department received $24 000. The appropriation asked for this year will be less than that but the committee has not yet decided just how much less.

The old question of flagging the sidewalks in certain streets came up and many of the notices that were not complied with last year were ordered re-issued. The committee decided to omit a few streets, but to see that the notices that were issued were obeyed. At the request of part of the interested property owners, notices were issued that sidewalks should be flagged on Elmwood place, New street and Berckman street, between Front and Second street.

The improvements in the neighborhood of Jackson and Netherwood avenues were discussed, and will be investigated.

POLICE CHANGES MADE.

CHIEF GRANT'S OFFICE WILL BE LOCATED AT POLICE STATION.

It was Also Decided to Have an Officer Located at the Station All Night Hereafter.

At the meeting of the police board of this city Thursday it was decided to remove the office of the Chief of Police from the old quarters in the Mayor's office in the Coward building, Park avenue, and establish it at police headquarters. When the old "rookery" was in use it was not to be expected that the Chief should stay there but the new quarters are warm and clean and the board decided that it would be to the interests of the force to unite the Chief's office and police headquarters.

Further, the board decided to keep one man on duty at the Olympia so that the police could be reached without delay. In the past there has sometimes been difficulty in finding any policeman when his presence was needed badly. One of the older patrolmen will do duty at headquarters at night. Should it be necessary to put one of the night men on duty there, there will be no great difficulty in covering two of the smaller beats with one officer mounted on a wheel.

Mother Soon Followed Daughter.

Following closely upon the death of Mrs. Phillip Swain, of Craig place, comes that of her mother, Mrs. S. S. Bozart, of Belvidere, in the 77th year of her age, which occurred Thursday. The funeral services were held from the residence of Phillip Swain, 21 Craig place, Saturday afternoon at 1:30 o'clock.

THE BUDDHIST RELIGION.

It Contains Many of the Great Lessons That Are Taught by the Christian Faith.

Dr. Maurice Bloomfield, of Johns Hopkins university, who has been lecturing on the "Sacred Literature of Eastern Religions" before the Ethical society of Philadelphia, spoke recently on "The Sacred Literature of the Buddhist."

"The Buddhist literature contains as many of the great teachings of the Christian religion and so many of those familiar stories of fable and fairy tale that are known to the western races from childhood that we are much impressed by the striking analogy. It pieces out the theory that we must go back for all our greater inspirations to that dim, mystical east, out of which the life of Europe and our own country has come.

"The Buddhists form a branch of that religious revolution which is connected with the name of Buddha and which is entitled to a prominent place in the history of worship and sect. At a period which is even now, with our modern methods of scholastic research, uncertain, Buddhism sprung into being as an opponent to Brahmism. It maintained itself against it a long series of bloody contests, which contributed at least to give a new impulse to philosophical activity.

"The documents of this religion that have been collected are large or less fragmentary, and are not entitled to a complete degree of confidence. Much of the modern opinion is formed from the testimony of their Brahmin opponents.

"There are two schools of Buddhism that have in some unknown way diverged from the original teaching of the great founder. One school holds that everything is vacuum or nonbeing and is the direct opposite of the Vedanta. The germs of nonbeing its doctrine has appeared to many oriental philosophers as a mere tissue of extravagances.

"It admits no other existence than that of mind or spirit, an existence which is limited to a few moments. It is a system of idealism and spiritualism.

"In the opposite extreme is another school. It professes sensualism and materialism. Its starting point is sensation, and it operates upon sensation by induction.

"There is a third school, which admits of no other existence than that of self. The entire Buddhist sect conceives salvation as the chief end, and it is attained by a state of complete apathy, where all thought is extinguished. This is, in brief, the structure of their theology.

"The philosophical opinions of the Buddhists do not agree more than those of other Hindu doctrines with the system professed in Europe in modern times. The spiritualism of the first school resembles very much that of Berkley and the individual pantheism has been represented in Germany by Fichte.

"The story of Buddha in some of its features resembles that of Christ. He exhalts for the sect as the redemption. He sacrificed himself for their sacrifice. The haven and end of life to the Brahmins, the early sect from which the Buddhists are an offshoot, was Nirvana, where the soul joined the universal soul. He had to pass through many births and to undergo many trials on the divine rest. Buddha refused to enter Nirvana and continued his round of existences. This was regarded as a great renunciation.

"The legend of Buddha sets before us a figure of profound splendor—gentle and benevolent. He was the son of a small ruler and, like Socrates, searched out the noblest type of man and concentrated himself to the pursuance of such a conference, with the idea of uplifting his people.

"He marked out for their guidance the eightfold page which the devout Buddhist must follow. He must uphold right livelihood, right doctrine, right effort, right speech, right conduct, right aspirations, right meditations, right raptures, right memory.

"These are the ethics of the Buddhist. They know no such thing as immortality nor do they conceive a unity with a universal self. Absolute peace, repose, freedom from life is their theory of the after death. It is reserved and vague—an absolute negative."—Chicago Chronicle.

Dots Insured for French Girls.

The dot or dowry is as much a part of the marriage arrangements in France as the bridal veil. A woman marries as seldom without the one as without the other. French novels contain many allusions to the thrift and toil with which the parents lay by a suitable dot for their daughters. One man and wife in Zola's "Fecondite" laid by nearly half of their earnings for this purpose in the hope that she would make a match that would raise the family in the social scale. A company has been formed to furnish temporary dotales." The plan is for the father to make annual payments during his lifetime, and at his death no more premiums need be paid. Thus a father 40 years of age pays 331 francs a year, and on her majority the daughter receives 10,000 francs. Should the girl die, the company returns the payments to the parents. There are no statistics at hand as to the prosperity of the system, but it is well advertised in the French magazines, and probably will be a success.—Chicago Tribune.

Saved from the Enemy.

From Bensburg, in Cape Colony, comes the news that a train loaded with supplies and without any escort or guard started out a dozen miles within the British lines and was headed for the Boer lines. It was seen to be impossible to stop the train, so rather than have the supplies reach the Boers, the British runners disabled their guns on the cars and destroyed them and their contents.—Chicago Tribune.

FUNERAL OF A JUNIOR

AMERICAN MECHANICS AT THE BIER OF LATE H. C. ACKERMAN.

Services Held in Monroe Avenue Church March 31st and Largely Attended by Friends.

The funeral services of the late Harry C. Ackerman, who died last week at the home of his father, Cornelius Ackerman, Clinton avenue, were held Monday afternoon at 3 o'clock and were conducted by the pastor, Rev. W. C. O'Donnell.

There was a very large attendance of relatives and friends, including about fifty members of Franklin Council, No. 41, Jr. O. U. A. M., and the Independent Fife and Drum Corps. The latter organization appeared in full uniform with instruments, and they played a funeral march from the church to the burial place in the Methodist cemetery. While the remains were being carried into the church "Nearer My God to Thee" was played by the Corps.

Rev. Mr. O'Donnell read appropriate Scripture selections and made a few remarks concerning the upright and manly life which the departed lived, and of his devotion to his home and family. He also pointed all to Christ as the salvation of the world. He also drew many helpful lessons and spoke words of comfort and consolation to the bereaved ones.

After Mr. O'Donnell's remarks George Bolsterli, councilor of Franklin Council, conducted the service of the order, which was ritualistic. There was a handsome display of floral tributes, including five large pillows. One of these was from the Juniors, another from the Fife and Drum Corps and the others were from friends and the family.

Those who served as pall-bearers were from Franklin Council as follows: Ephraim Compton, Harvey B. Thorn, F. A. Long, J. J. Stahl, Theodore Martin and Henry Sender. Chas. C. Davis and G. S. Martin served as marshals.

NOT WHOLLY SATISFIED.

Borough Firemen Would Have Liked a More Experienced Man for Their Chief.

There is not a unanimous feeling of approval among the borough firemen over the appointment of Wm. Debele as fire chief by Mayor Smalley. Not that they have anything against Mr. Debele, for there is the best feeling for him, but they think the Mayor should have appointed a person who has served longer in the department. However, the firemen will accept the appointment with good grace and work in harmony. There is not a single firemen who would be willing to cause dissension over the appointment. Many think that the Mayor did the very best he could under the circumstances.

LITERARY.

"An Easter Offering," in colors, and "Christ is Risen," the cover and frontispiece of the April issue of The American Queen, are beautiful and appropriate as are the fashion illustrations, 40 in number, by Alice May Gillam. There are four completed stories, and all the usual departments, instructive and interesting. Also an article on the bicycle from a health point of view, by Mary Easton, M. D. The magazine is rather beyond its usual plane of excellence.

"RUM BILLS" IN JERSEY.

Storekeepers the Courts Have Not Been Appealed to Collect Them.

An interesting complication of affairs has arisen over the arrest of A. D. Alfonso, a New Brunswick saloonkeeper. He was arrested on complaint of a wholesale liquor dealer, Captain Norton, of the same city, who charged him with larceny. Alfonso was arrested in Newark and taken back to the Middlesex county jail, where he was locked up.

Alfonso ordered some goods, and Morton charges him with selling them and not paying him. If the court establishes a rule that a liquor dealer, wholesale or retail, can invoke the aid of the law in collecting "rum bills" it is very probable that a score of cases against others will crop up and the court will be kept busy for sometime to come.

It is a generally accepted rule in New Jersey that a "rum bill" cannot be collected, and the case will give the chance, long looked for, to test it.

Jersey Postal Changes.

The postal guide for March gives the following postoffice changes in New Jersey: New offices established at Watchung, Somerset county; two sub stations at Paterson, and offices discontinued at South Park and Stonebarber. Money order changes noted are two sub-stations at Camden, established at Elberon, two sub-stations at Jersey City, two sub-stations at Paterson, Maurice River and Money Hill, and the money order offices at Cramer Hill, North Cramer Hill and Glendola discontinued. It is also announced that the books of postage stamps will be issued about May JERSEY CENTRAL TO BUILD NEW SHOPS.

They Will be Erected This Year Probably at Or Near Elizabethport.

ADDITIONS TO EQUIPMENT.

TWENTY-FIVE NEW LOCOMOTIVES TO ARRIVE NEXT MONTH.

Five New Passenger Engines Just Put Into Service—Are the Fastest in the World—Extra Coal Cars are Being Built.

Since the new management of the Jersey Central Railroad assumed control a year ago, there have been a number of changes in the railroad. One of the aims of the new management has been to improve the general equipment of the road and bring it up to a high standard. As a result new locomotives, new cars for freight and coal cars have been put into use. This year one of the principal aims of the management will be to establish new shops for the company that will cost over half a million dollars and will give employment to 1,000 men.

The Jersey Central Railroad outgrew its shops years ago. The present one at Jersey City are too small to meet the requirements of such a large railroad system. The past year has made this particularly evident. The new coal engines are too large to be admitted into the repair shops.

For years the railroad officials planned to establish shops at Elizabethport. The land was even staked out, but that was as far as the scheme ever went. The new management has found the great need of new shops and has decided to build them this year. They will undoubtedly be located at Elizabethport and will be constructed on the most modern ideas.

Another of the improvements of the management was the addition of the passenger locomotive service. Six engines were built at the Baldwin Locomotive Works and were put into service on the Central a month ago. They are the fastest locomotives in the world and are capable of running 90 miles an hour with a train weighing 500 tons, which is equal to ten heavy Pullman coaches. They are now running between Jersey City and Philadelphia, Jersey City and Atlantic City, and Jersey City and Lakewood. They are numbered from 380 to 387.

The middle of next month will see the arrival of a batch of twenty-five other locomotives from the Brooks Locomotive Works at Dunkirk, N. Y. Fifteen of them will be the heavy type for drawing coal trains. There are now twenty-five of these same locomotives in service and this addition will make forty in all. They are claimed to be the largest and most powerful engines built.

The other ten engines that will arrive next month will be of the fast freight type. There are a number of others of this same kind now running.

More freight cars have been ordered as well as 500 of the 80,000 pound capacity coal cars. There will then be 2,000 of the latter type in use. They have taken the place of the coal "jimmies" that were so extensively used on this road and which are now seldom seen. Many of them have been retired.

SALE OF "SAPHO" STOPPED.

News Company Orders Its Agents to Return Unsold Copies.

Orders have been sent out by the Union News Company to all its agents along all railroad and steamboat lines to stop selling the book "Sapho" and to return at once all unsold copies.

It is understood that the company has been informed by many of the municipalities and railroad and boat owners that the sale of the book was distasteful to them and the patrons of the boats and trains.

PRISONERS PAY A GRUDGE.

Charles Gardiner Fiercely Attacked in Middlesex Jail.

While Jailer Messler, of the Middlesex county jail, in New Brunswick, was at dinner at noon Thursday the prisoners were left to exercise in the corridor. Charles R. Gardiner, of North Amboy, a "tramp," was in the hall with a number of men. Michael Pierson, Richard Beach and John Keaney, who had a grudge against Gardiner because he would not let them smuggle whiskey into the jail, knocked him down and kicked him. Beach bit Gardiner's head and wrists.

The other prisoners were afraid and made little effort to save Gardiner. Jailer Messler and Constables Grimland and Holmes ran into the corridor, stopped the fight and probably saved Gardiner's life. His three assailants were pushed into cells.

Balance in the Treasury.

A most gratifying state of affairs now exist in North Plainfield township. The treasury has a balance of $1 210, something very unusual in that township. The affairs are in good shape and the township was never in a more healthy condition every way.

MARCONNIER UNDER THE WING OF TRINITY

Official Adoption of the Oak Tree Society Completed by Church Officers.

HISTORY OF THE CHAPEL.

ITS MEMBERS ACCEPTED IN THE OLDER RELIGIOUS FOLD.

Rev. Cornelius Schenck in Charge of the Service, Which Were Very Impressive—Mrs. Schwenk Given a Bible.

One of the most important changes in religious circles in this vicinity took place Sunday afternoon, when the members of Marconnier chapel and the property as well became a branch of Trinity Reformed church in this city. It was an event of more than passing interest and it conveyed happiness not only to Trinity church but to the members of the chapel at Oak Tree, where such a good work has been carried on for some time past.

This change has been in preparation for some time and its complete consummation yesterday promises great er usefulness in the future. A large delegation from Trinity church went to Oak Tree, where exercises appropriate to the occasion were held. The official transfer of the property to the church was made, members were received into the chapel and the Lord's Supper observed. The chapel was filled with worshippers and the services throughout were very impressive. The members had everything in readiness for the services, which took place at 4 o'clock. A pleasing decoration of flowers added to the attractiveness of the place of worship.

Rev. Cornelius Schenck, Ph.D., pastor of Trinity Reformed church, was in charge and opened the services. After the singing of a hymn he read appropriate Scripture selections from a Bible which was presented by he members of the Sunday-school to Mrs. Schwenk, one of the very earnest workers, as a slight token of their love for her and in recognition of her many years of faithful services. This was followed with prayer by Pastor Schenck, after which Rev. Henry T. Jones, formerly pastor of the chapel, presented a short history of the chapel. In doing this he transferred the papers to Mr. Schenck, which gives to Trinity Reformed church the property.

The history is brief as follows: "In December, 1893, Miss Helen Vail extended an invitation to the children of the neighborhood to meet at her residence every Sunday afternoon where Sunday-school services were held. Mrs. Mal Marconnier Schwenk was a coadjutor in this work, and when in January, 1891, owing to serious illness, Miss Vail was obliged to give up the work, Mrs. Schwenk took charge, and the Sunday-school met at her home, Holly Grove Farm. Interest having grown and numbers increased it was thought best to organize a Sunday-school and hold the sessions in the Oak Tree schoolhouse. Then the Marconnier Union Sunday-school was organized and the first meeting was held in the schoolhouse April 12th, 1891. The following officers were elected: Superintendent, D. W. DeForest; assistant superintendent, Charles W. Sargent; treasurer, Mrs. Mal Marconnier Schwenk; secretary, W. E. VanCourt; librarian, Edward Morris.

"In May, 1891, the trustees requested the Sunday-school to vacate the schoolhouse, and after that up to October 11th, 1891, the sessions were held at Mrs. Schwenk's home. After that sessions were held in the waiting room of the Lehigh Valley Railroad station at Oak Tree until April 24, 1892, when the school returned again to Mrs. Schwenk's home.

"This constant changing about led to a desire to have a chapel, and through earnest efforts the present chapel was erected and July 21, 1895, the Marconnier Union chapel was dedicated. The Christian Endeavor Society was organized at the home of Mrs. Schwenk April 20, 1894, with four active and eleven associate members. February 2, 1896, W. D. DeForest resigned as superintendent, and Rev. Henry T. Jones, of Bayonne, was chosen for the place. He remained in that position until April 30, 1899, when he resigned. A. E. Metler then took charge. In January, 1900, an application was made to the Trinity Reformed church, of this city, for adoption. February, 4, 1900, a committee, consisting of Horace J. Martin, F. E. Smith and A. L. Forse, from the consistory of said church, visited the chapel and recommended its adoption. February 11th, of the present year, the same committee, accompanied by Rev. Cornelius Schenck, Ph.D., called during the session of the Sunday-school and formally announced the acceptance of the chapel to be known as the Marconnier chapel of the Trinity Reformed church, of Plainfield."

According to the agreements the chapel is to be under the control and guidance of Trinity church, until such a time as the membership grows and they feel able to support themselves. When that time arrives the church is then to be known as the Marconnier Reformed church of Oak Tree.

Mr. Jones in giving the history made some very pleasant remarks. He spoke of the hard struggle, the many prayers and sacrifices made to get the chapel and maintain it. He spoke of the children who had come in and out since the chapel was built, and of the seed sown which will bear fruit. To him under the present change it seemed as though a great cable had been stretched from the chapel to a stronger organization, which makes the members feel as though their anchorage is more sure and safe. He then turned the papers over to Mr. Schenck.

In accepting the papers, Pastor Schenck said that he and the members of the church knew something of the sufferings and trials attendant upon the building of the chapel, and they were not unmindful of them. He referred to the hard, laborious work of digging the cellar, carting the materials for construction, etc., but assured all that anything done for Christ was never lost. He told the members that Trinity church had come to help share with them in this work. He hoped that all would feel the call to duty in a stronger sense, and he wanted them to feel as though he was their pastor, and that the elders of the church stood willing to help them at all times. He then received the papers on behalf of the church.

This part of the service was followed by the baptism of those members who had been received and who had not observed that rite. Rev. Mr. Jones performed this rite and read the service. Those who were baptized were Miss Ida May Bowers, Miss Julia Burns, Miss Eveline Randolph, Miss Leonora VanCourt, Miss Emeline Giles and Stephen Augustus Stover.

Rev. Mr. Schenck then took charge and delivered the address of welcome to all of the members. These included the above mentioned and the following who were received by letter: S. E. Schwenk, Mrs Mal Marconnier Schwenk, Mrs Esther L. Giles, W. E. VanCourt, E. P. VanCourt and W. H. Randolph. In addition to the above mentioned who were baptized the following were received on confession of faith: Manley J. Giles, Miss Mary S. VanCourt and Mrs. Esther Giles, making a total of fifteen, nine on confession, six by letter.

After the reception of members the Lord's Supper was observed, and Pastor Schenck was assisted by Rev. Henry T. Jones and Rev. W. T. Griffin, of this city. The elders and deacons from Trinity Reformed church were also present and officiated in their customary capacity. After the communion service a few words of congratulation and encouragement were spoken by Mr. Schenck. The benediction was pronounced by Rev. Mr. Griffin.

A pleasing and helpful part of the service was the singing of two solos by Mrs. Rose Marconnier Fleury, of Jamaica, L. I., accompanied by Miss Genevive Brown, of the same place. Mrs. Fleury is a sister of Mrs. Schwenk. Rev. George T. Cain, pastor of the M. E. church at Dover, again assisted in the services by presiding at the piano for the congregational singing. At the close of the services all remained and became acquainted with each other and a general season of thanksgiving was enjoyed.

The finest Gabler piano used for the occasion is the old Marconnier family piano, and was many years ago bought by the late Alexandre Marconnier, of Evansville, Indiana, father of Mrs. Schwenk and Mrs. Fleury. It was taken to the chapel for the Christmas entertainment and has since remained there.

A marble top pulpit that was used in the Sunday-school of Trinity church for many years, but which was abandoned when the church was altered two years ago, was presented to the chapel and used for the first time Sunday.

POSTAGE STAMP BOOKS.

Convenient Device Issued by the U. S Mail Department.

Ever since a postoffice was established in this city, those in charge have been more or less bothered by patrons coming to them complaining that postage stamps they purchased had become stuck together, and asking that these stamps, of practically no use to the purchasers, be redeemed by others, a request which could not be granted.

The postoffice in this city was not the only one bothered by such complaints. Every office in the United States had to listen to them. Various expedients to prevent the stamps adhering to each other, such as rubbing the sticky side of the stamps on one's hair, or of placing the stamps between sheets of oiled paper, were suggested, but none has proved as satisfactory as could be desired.

For this reason the United States Government has decided to place on sale, on and after May 1st, in all post offices in this country, books containing small quantities of 2 cent postage stamps, so arranged that it will be impossible for them to stick together.

There will be three sizes of books issued. One will have 12 2 cent stamps, the next 24 2 cent stamps, and the third 48 2 cent stamps. The first book will sell for 25 cents, the second for 49 cents, and the third for 97 cents. The extra penny charged over cost of stamps will pay the cost of binding.

Ingenious Inventors.

Patents issued to Jersey men are as follows: Gate, J. M. Adams, Dockertown; sewing machine hemmer (two patents), E. B. Allen, Elizabeth; binder for documents, S. D. Barnett, Newark; loom, H. W. Cray, May's Landing; feeding mechanism for sewing machines, P. Hiehl, Elizabeth; gas producer, J. W. Gayner, Salem; sewing machine, F. F. Meyer, Newark; chain-stitch sewing machine, A. Rontke, Elizabeth; corn cobble cutter, J. H. Sharp, Columbus; duplicate whist apparatus, W. E. Watkins, Montclair; octospearated telescope, O Weise, Jersey City; (design), clasp, H. Conlan, Newark.

In Dr. Schenck's Pulpit.

Rev. Daniel Rapelje, of 61 Fairview avenue, occupied the pulpit in Trinity Reformed church last Sunday and delivered a very practical sermon on the sending out by Christ of the twelve apostles, as found in the tenth chapter of Matthew, basing his remarks on the thirty-second and thirty-third verses.

OPEN TROLLEY CARS.

PLAINFIELD ROAD TO BE WELL EQUIPPED WITH THEM.

New and Large Cars Have Been Ordered for Use on the Various Lines.

According to Superintendent John Adelmann, the local trolley system and the Elizabeth-Plainfield line is to be well equipped for the summer traffic. This equipment is to be ready in May, he says, and the people of Plainfield will not have to wait at all. All of which is very pleasant news, if it only comes up to the expectations of Superintendent Adelmann.

The Elizabeth and Westfield Street Railway Company has, he says, ordered enough double truck open cars to run for all the through traffic. They are to be thirty-four feet long, six and eight feet longer than the present cars and are to be of the most improved pattern.

A number of bodies for open cars have been purchased and they will be used with the trucks and motors of the second hand brown cars now in use. The present rolling stock of the Plainfield company is large enough to supply the city lines with cars that are in fairly good condition. The extra open cars with the trucks and motors of the "brown" cars will be used on the Rahway branch and on the Arlington avenue extension.

The new double track cars and the bodies for the others will be here, Superintendent Adelmann says, in May and the system will then be entirely equipped for summer traffic.

HIGH WORDS.

They Attracted Patrolman Myers and He Arrested Disputants, Who Were Fined $5 Each.

High words and shouting attracted Patrolman Myers to Liberty street Saturday night. He found James Saunderson and Michael Crowley clinching. They broke away when the policeman came. Myers says several blows were struck. Both men were locked up.

Both men were arraigned before City Judge Runyon Monday morning. Crowley didn't remember much about it but was willing to abide by the officer's statement. Saunderson claimed that Crowley was responsible for all the trouble while Myers divided the blame. The Judge took the latter view and fined the men $3 each. Crowley and his friends paid both fines.

CHARLES SEBRING ELECTED.

The Vote in North Plainfield Decided in His Favor.

A meeting of the North Plainfield Township Committee was held Saturday afternoon last when Charles P. Sebring was elected a third member of the Committee. It will be remembered that Mr. Sebring and Goldson each received the same number of votes at election, and it lay in the power of the two members elected to chose the third member. He could only be elected for one year, and at the end of that time a general election will be necessary according to law.

Funeral of Late James McFadden.

The funeral services of the late James McFadden were held Sunday afternoon at 2 o'clock from St. Mary's church, Rev. Father Smyth officiating. There was a very large attendance of relatives and friends. Inasmuch as mass could not be held yesterday afternoon one was held this morning at 8 o'clock at the church. The interment took place in St. Mary's cemetery, and those who acted as bearers were Frank Burke, William Tobin, David Barry, James Muldowney, George Butscher and Daniel Reagan.

A Prize Thought.

A teacher of music in one of the public schools of the south desired to impress the pupils with the meaning of the signs "f" and "ff" in a song they were about to sing. After explaining that "f" meant forte, he said: "Now, children, if "f" means forte, what does "ff" mean?"

Silence reigned for a moment, and then he was astonished to hear a bright little fellow shout:

"Eighty!"—"New Lippincott" for April.

Freak Calf Dead.

The freak calf, which belonged to E. M. Van Buren, of Central avenue, died Saturday after a career of two months. The calf possessed two heads, three eyes and four nostrils. Mr. Van-Buren has presented the remains to Edward Campbell who is going to have the animal stuffed as a curi osity.

Sermon to Colored Fraternity.

Pastor Johnson, of the Pilmore Baptist church, delivered the annual sermon last Sunday to the members of Goodwill Lodge, No. 8, K. of P., and there was a large crowd present. L. L. Croom assisted in the services.

Henry Rogge Elected Chairman.

The first meeting of the new officers of Warren township was held Saturday afternoon when Henry Rogge was elected chairman of the township committee. No other business came before the meeting.

GYPSY LEADER DEAD.

James Harrison Died at Frenchtown One of Best Judges of Horse Flesh in the Country.

James Harrison, the oldest member of the Harrison family of gypsies in America, died near Frenchtown, N. J., March 6th, last, after an illness with Bright's disease and heart trouble. Several of the best-known physicians in this State were summoned to treat him, but nothing could be done for him. The funeral was held near the place he died and his remains were interred in a cemetery at Washington, where he owned considerable property. It is said that his remains were placed in one of the handsomest and most costly caskets that money could purchase.

Mr. Harrison was about 68 years of age and was considered one of the best judges of horseflesh in this country. He was born in England, and has lived in this country about forty years. Years ago he sold the celebrated horse "Gypsy Queen" to the late William Moore. He was very wealthy and during his life has owned some of the best bred trotting and pacing horses in the country.

He leaves several sons and a daughter, the latter now being Queen of the tribes of gypsies. This honor was bestowed on her last summer when the tribe was near Netherwood. At present the tribe is camping out on Mountain avenue, in the borough, where they will remain for several days.

MARRIED TEN YEARS.

Pleasant Surprise Tendered to Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Moore.

A pleasant surprise was tendered last Thursday to Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Moore, of Westcott avenue, in honor of the tenth anniversary of their marriage. The party met at the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Startup and from there proceeded to the home of the surprised couple, where a most enjoyable time was had by everyone. Sociability was the feature and Mr. and Mrs. Moore received the hearty congratulations of all, who wished them many happy returns of the day. During the evening a pleasant repast was served and at a reasonable hour the guests departed for their homes.

Those present included Mr. and Mrs. C. Frank French, Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Startup, Mr. and Mrs. W. F. Oliver, Mr. and Mrs. H. W. Marshall, Mr. and Mrs. J. C. VanDyke, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Cooley, Mr. and Mrs. P. A. VanFleet, Mr. and Mrs. Bingaman, Miss Mary L. VanEps, Miss Evelyn Searing, Miss Horton, Miss Emma Hantsch and E. Burroughs.

OFFICERS RE-ELECTED.

S. St. John McCutchen Will be Chairman of the Borough Board of Education.

The Borough Board of Education met last Monday for the purpose of organizing for the coming year. S. St. John McCutchen was re-elected president, as was also Robert M. Fountain as district clerk. There was little of business of importance to come before the Board. A committee will be appointed soon to arrange for the plans to be presented at the special school meeting when the Board will ask for money to install a new heating apparatus in the Somerset Street School. A few bills were paid and the other business transacted was of a routine nature.

NEWARK TO HAVE A SHOW.

Business Men Favor an Industrial Exposition in 1902.

The Newark Board of Trade at a largely attended meeting has decided that Newark should have an industrial exposition in 1902. The entire State will take part, and outsiders will be invited to send exhibits. Nearly all the representative business men of the city have expressed themselves as heartily in favor of the show.

President R. O. Jenkinson has been authorized to appoint a committee on scope and finance. This committee will call a meeting of Mayors and representatives of Boards of Trade throughout the State to co-operate.

Red Men Had a Good Time.

After the regular meeting of Minatonomo Tribe of Red Men Friday evening, the good and welfare committee provided an entertainment and collation. The entertainment included phonograph selections under charge of Whitney Frazee; buck dancing and club swinging by brother Edward Galbraith; phonoharp, with harmonica accompaniment, by brother James Townsend; Highland fling, Past Sachem Siorah; vocal duet by brothers Galbraith and Allen; talk by Great Sachem Newcorn and Past Sachems Holstein and Allen. Great Sachem Newcorn then delivered an address on the order into the phonograph and the address was immediately reproduced.

Ward Reports Made.

The semi-annual business meeting of the Y. P. S. C. E. of the Congregational church will be held in the church parlors Friday evening. A large attendance is desired, and chairmen of committees are requested to bring written reports of the half-year's work.

REV. CHARLES P. ANDERSON.
(Recently Elected Coadjutor of the Episcopal Diocese of Chicago.)

given charge of the parish at Beechwood, Ont. After several years of hard work the parish had grown beyond the care of one priest and Mr. Anderson was given the aid of three clergymen. He was in this parish when the call was issued to him to take the Grace church parish at Oak Park, a Chicago suburb, in the early part of May, 1891. At the end of the month the new priest was established in his parish.

The little brick church at Ontario street and Forest avenue was soon outgrown and Mr. Anderson set about to erect a modern building, more suitable to his parish and surroundings. In June, 1896, the first stone was laid for the foundation of the new building in Lake street, between Kenilworth and Forest avenues.

The parish at this time had not much of a building fund, but had the spirit of willingness to wait and build only as the money accumulated. The foundation was completed and it was then decided to defer the building of the remainder of the church until the funds were in hand. The foundation was roofed over and since November, 1898, the parishioners have attended service in the basement of their new building.

The vestry now has $25,000 on hand and will finish the building in the spring at a cost of $60,000. Under the careful business management of Rector Anderson the church has cleared off all indebtedness on the old church property and owned a lot free from incumbrance at Euclid avenue and Ontario street. There are 600 members of Grace church parish and 450 communicants.

On September 4, 1899, Mr. Anderson was married to Miss Janet Glass in Belleville, Canada.

THE TUA-TUA PLANT.

Venezuelan Shrub Which Is Said to Be a Sovereign Remedy and Cure for Leprosy.

Two dozen specimens of the Venezuelan plant, known as the tua-tua, have been sent from Washington to Hawaii for the purpose of making a test of its alleged wonderful power as a cure for leprosy. The plant will be tested at the leprosy hospitals there, where the 1,073 lepers will afford every facility for a thorough trial. Surgeon D. A. Carmichael, of the Marine hospital, has also sent half a dozen bottles of the liquid preparation to Molokai, and this will be used for immediate tests, while the plants will be set out and cultivated, with the purpose of providing a supply of fresh material for further use, says an exchange.

Wonderful stories are current in Venezuela about the marvelous curative properties of tua-tua when applied to leprosy, and the government physicians attach considerable importance to the evidence given them. It is proposed also to test it in the Island of Guam, that they speak of Pacific land that came into with our other Spanish war acquisitions.

Shoemakers Right Teachers Think.

We wear away two inches of shoe leather in a year. A pair of shoes that would "last a lifetime" would, consequently, have to be provided with soles from eight to nine feet thick.

CHASING AGUINALDO IN THE PHILIPPINES

Dr. Simpson's Thrilling Experiences in the Army in the Mountains of Luzon.

NEAR DEATH MANY TIMES.

TALKING WITH A MAN WHOSE HEAD WAS SHOT OFF.

Was Critically Ill and Fell Unconscious by the Wayside—Now in Best of Health and Expects to Rejoin His Command.

Advices have just been received here from Dr. M. S. Simpson, formerly of Plainfield, who, during the Spanish War, was the surgeon of the New Jersey Naval Reserves, Battalion of the East, but who is now an army surgeon in the Philippine Islands, stating that he is now the surgeon in charge of the famous "Macabebee Scouts," and is hot on the trail of Aguinaldo, the President of the Insurgent Government. Dr. Simpson writes that the "Scouts" have had some very thrilling experiences in chasing the Filipino leader, and several times have been so close to him in the mountains of northern Luzon that they almost captured him. Continuing the doctor writes:

"We had some very severe fights. My dear friend, Lieut. Bouteile, was killed by my side in one fight after he had killed eight of the enemy and captured a captain and a lieutenant. We lost several men—one having his head shot off while I was talking with him. Our commander, Lieut. Batson, was shot in another fight and while I was dressing his wound I was nearly hit. General Young has given me honorable mention for dressing wounds in the midst of the hottest fighting.

"Following this, I fell, but I had to go on and in the next fight I was in a high fever. I had to swim my horse back and forth across the river to get the wounded away, and the next day followed over the mountain with the sick till 1 o'clock in the morning, when I again had to swim a river. I lay ill in the grass all night. The next day we came to the sea coast and here at San Ferando I was so ill that I fell from my horse unconscious and was not missed till later an officer found me and removed me to the house of the Spanish Governor of the Province when a spanish surgeon took care of me. I was reported dead at Manila, and as soon as I learned this I proceeded to prove this was not so by reporting for duty. I went to Manapacan, Province de la Union, and established a camp hospital and am now well and hearty. I expect soon to advance with all the soldiers under my care and join the command again."

FOURTEEN BAPTIZED.

Candidates for Membership in First Baptist Church Immersed by Rev. Dr. Yerkes.

There were fourteen persons baptized last Sunday at the First Baptist church by the pastor, Rev. Dr. Yerkes, and a congregation that completely filled the large edifice assembled to witness the observance of this rite. Prior to the baptism Dr. Yerkes preached a short but impressive discourse regarding the duty of being baptized. Those who were baptized were: John Cator, Lewis Drake, Rudolph Burgerlue, Miss Gershall, Miss Florence Carver, Miss Julia Burgerlue, Miss Mildred Everitt, Miss Lena Moffett, Miss Edna Moffett, Miss Ursula Krewson, Miss Minnie Eagle, Miss Nettie Wise, Miss Florence Winn and Miss Grace Adams.

OLD POLITICIAN'S BIRTHDAY.

George W. Sayre Has Passed His Sixty-Seventh Milestone in Life.

Many of George W. Sayer's friends met at his home near Mt. Bethel Friday evening to celebrate his sixty-seventh birthday. The celebration of his birthday is one of the festival days in the calendar of Warren township, looked forward to and observed with delight by those who know him. For many years he was a political light in Newark, in the bitter fights and palmiest days of Mayors Ling and Haynes. But the struggles of today are too quiet for so old a veteran who voted for Fremont.

George Washington Sayre lives on his farm near Mt. Bethel where his friends partook of his hospitality. Tables were loaded with good things to which everybody helped themselves. Letters of regret were read from United States Senator Sewell and State Senator Charles A. Reed who were unable to be present.

Violin Recital.

A violin recital is to be given at Hope chapel next Friday evening. Frederick Spencer, the artist, is favorably known throughout the west as the soloist for five successive seasons at the Illinois Chautauquas, at Wabasca, near Chicago. Mr. Spencer made his residence in Plainfield for a few months last winter, and has appeared before a Plainfield audience in the chapel of the Crescent Avenue church.

THE CONSTITUTIONALIST.

PUBLIC HEARING ON CITY HALL PROJECT.

Both Sides Are Preparing to Marshal Forces for That Occasion.

MORE TROUBLE OVER SITE.

SEVERAL COUNCILMEN ADVOCATE THE DURLACH PROPERTY.

Split in Majority of Six Favoring Gardner Property May Bring Balance of Power to Advocates of Park Avenue Site.

The opposition to the City Hall project will use every effort to rally its forces for the public hearing that the Common Council will hold Monday evening. So it behooves the advocates of that scheme to go and do likewise. While a public hearing does not by any means perfectly reflect public opinion, it gives both sides an opportunity. There are many who do not care to rise up in public and express themselves. Nevertheless it will serve as an excellent opportunity to see if the opposition is anywhere near as strong as it claims to be.

The anti City Hall forces have only one view and that is that a City Hall of any kind or cost should not be built. The advocates of the new municipal building are at present, sadly split up in their opinions They all want a City Hall but the question of the proper site has not yet been satisfactorily settled to all parties.

A few days ago the Councilmen favoring the City Hall were divided between the Park avenue site and the Gardner property on East Front street. Now a disposition has been shown on the part of several of the latter faction to favor another property on the same street, the Durlach property. If the advocates of an East Front street site manage to split up between the two, it will leave no majority for any of the sites.

Naturally after all the talk about a City Hall, the Councilmen have tried to get an expression of opinion from most of the residents and property owners in the ward they represent. In conversation with a Press reporter a majority of the Councilmen have said that they believe the people want a City Hall. Mayor Bockfollow said the same thing. He explained that he had conversed with citizens from all wards of the city and a vast majority had declared themselves in favor of the immediate erection of a City Hall.

A week ago it looked as if the Gardner property would surely be chosen as the site for the City Hall. Six out the eleven Councilmen were understood to favor it. Now, however, the advocacy of the Durlach property may lead to a different result.

The advocates of the Park avenue site have been very strongly in favor of their choice. It has even been rumored that several of them might refuse to vote in favor of a City Hall at all unless it was located there. They deem it a central location and think it an unwise policy to put a municipal building on any of the other sites mentioned.

Councilman Frank H. Smith, president of the Council, has been one of the strongest supporters of the Gardner site. He is now outspoken in his opposition to the Durlach property. The price of the latter, it will be remembered, is $30,000, and Mr. Smith considers that entirely too much to pay when lots answering the purpose just as well are to be had at a much more reasonable figure.

If there is any strong attempt on part of the Council to secure the purchase of the Durlach property, it may result in the other two factions uniting forces and selecting the Park avenue site, the price of which is $20,000, for the entire block of Park avenue, between Fifth and Sixth streets.

To Sell Motor Stock.

There will be an auction sale at Campbell's Hotel next week Tuesday at 12 o'clock noon, when Auctioneer Wm. N. Pangborn will sell for Mrs. E. A. Campbell the entire contents of the hotel including all the household furniture, dishes, carpets, stoves, bedroom suits, and many things too numerous to mention. There will also be sold the sorrel horse "Prince Edward," sired by Bayonne Prince and a gentleman's roadster, together, with wagons, harness, etc. Terms will be cash. Anyone seeking bargains should not fail to attend this sale.

Cleaning Up.

Several teams were put to work Monday morning on the Westfield and Elizabeth Street Railway, cleaning up and grading. The general work will not be commenced on the extensions until next week.

GOLF CLUB REORGANIZED

THE PARK PLAYERS MAKE IMPORTANT CHANGES.

Charles McCutchen Chosen President—Changes Made About Membership, Too.

The Park Golf Club abrogated its alliance with the Park Club and generally overhauled and improved its organization at the annual meeting of that club last Tuesday. The meeting was held at the Park Clubhouse and was largely attended.

The financial situation showed the need of more revenue.

Under the old order of things the Park Club had an important voice in the management of the Golf Club. The new constitution turned that power over entirely to a board of seven trustees.

The new constitution provides for active, associate, junior associate, non-resident, summer and honorary members. The active members are the same as before, but pay $15 dues Members of active members' families, sixteen years or under, can become junior associate members on payment of $3 a year. Members of active members' families over sixteen, including sons and brothers up to twenty-one y ars, are eligible to associate membership with annual dues of $5. Non-resident members, those not living within a radius of ten miles of the club, simply pay $15 a year without initiation fee. Summer members, coming to Plainfield for the summer months, have the privileges of the club for four months for $10. The active membership of the club is limited to 150, and the non-resident to 50. The annual meeting will be held the first Tuesday in March.

Charles W. McCutchen announced at the meeting that as soon as the membership of the club would warrant it, Charles Hyde was ready to give the land necessary for nine additional holes.

The election of trustees was then held and the following were chosen: Charles W. McCutchen, S. St. John McCutchen, William J. Buttfield, Walter M. McGee, Gifford W. Cooley, Meredith Dryden and George T. Rogers.

The trustees organized immediately and selected the following officers and committees: President, Charles W. McCutchen; vice-president, George T. Rogers; secretary, Meredith Dryden; treasurer, Gifford W. Cooley; greens committee, George T. Rogers, chairman, S. St. John McCutchen, H. D. Hibbard and G. W. Cooley. House committee, Meredith Dryden, chairman, Mrs. Charles A. Reed, Mrs. Walter M. McGee and one other active member.

JURORS FOR MAY TERM.

Thirty of the Fifty-four are From Elizabeth—Three Women From Plainfield.

Elizabeth, April 4—The list of Petit Jurors to serve in the Court of Special Sessions during the continuance of the May Grand Jury indictments was announced yesterday morning. They are 54 in number of which this city has 30.

The following were drawn from Plainfield and neighboring towns:

Plainfield — Frederick S. Moore, Hugh McDonald, Frank P. Shepard, Kahmer Rottbery, Jacob Blimm, Daniel Galbraith, William Clemmons.

Scotch—William L. Ganzel, Chas. F. Conant, William Schoonover.

Fanwood—Robert Walpole.

Union—Jule A. West, John McAdams.

Linden—Smith F. Roll, Henry D. Huston.

New Providence—John R Burnet, Sr. Cranford—Joseph P. Peer.

ON DIFFERENT NIGHTS.

Commencement Exercises of City and Borough Do Not Conflict.

For the first time in many years the commencements of the Plainfield High School and the North Plainfield High School will be held on different nights. Both commencement exercises will be held in Music Hall, and arrangements have been completed by the two Boards for the hiring of the hall. The Plainfield High School commencement exercises will be held on the evening of Thursday, June 21st. The North Plainfield High School will hold its graduation exercises on the next evening, Friday, June 22d.

Somerville Wants New Firehouse.

The firemen of Somerville are getting ready to have the law recently passed permitting the bonding of the town for the erection of a firehouse submitted to a vote of the people as required. They want to have a double house erected for the use of the engine company and the truck, with a meeting room for the Board of Commissioners above.

SONS OF OLD NASSAU GATHERED TOGETHER

Annual Banquet of Union County Princetonians Held in This City.

BRILLIANT TOASTS HEARD.

DR. E. W. HODGES PRESIDED IN PLACE OF JUDGE MAGIE.

Dr. S. VanD. Hodges Elected President of the Club for Ensuing Year—Senator Reed in Happy Vein on Politics.

The annual dinner of the Princeton Club, of Union county, was held last Tuesday at the Park Avenue Hotel, and was a delightful affair. There were about thirty members present, including a few guests. The club met at the hotel about 7:30 o'clock, and a short business session was held in the parlors. At this meeting officers for the coming year were chosen. It was regretted that Chief Justice Magie, the president, could not be present, as court duties kept him away. Dr. P. VanD. Hodges, '88, of this city, was chosen president; G. S. Thomas, of Elizabeth, was made vice-president, and Conover Engliish, '99, of Elizabeth, was chosen secretary. There was no other business and the members adjourned to the dining room.

Here a pleasing sight greeted the Princetonians. The room was elaborately and prettily decorated in orange and black. Streamers filled in the space between the pillars, which were completely covered with the college colors. The electric light bulbs were covered with orange colored paper and the effect was very pretty. John D. Baily, manager of the hotel, looked after the decorations and he deserves credit for the result.

The tables were arranged in "T" fashion, with the presiding officer and the guests at the head of it. For nearly two hours "The Sons of Old Nassau" enjoyed a delightful menu. By the time the diners reached their coffee, a goodly number of women had arrived, and were escorted to the dining room where by invitation they enjoyed the "feast of reason and flow of soul."

Dr E. W. Hodges, in the absence of Judge Magie and the new president, Dr. B. VanD. Hodges, presided, and his happy remarks put everyone in the best of humor from the start. He referred affectionately to Dr. Murray, who, he said, was an important factor on the local and State Boards of Health. He said that the good member had the public in a tremor and they vertily believed that they could not raise a microbe in their yard. He then referred to the glee club from Princeton that had been engaged to sing, but could not attend for various reasons. He also referred to Judge Magie in his absence. "Notwithstanding all," he said, "we have several lights present concerning less brilliant," at this time he introduced Prof. Harper, of the Woodhull chair of m-dern languages at Princeton. He related many things of interest about the colleges town and its people. His principal thought, however, was that during the past two years a new spirit had invaded Princeton college and better work is being done. He expressed the opinion that the time had come when the country wants men of fixed purpose to guide its affairs. All together he considered the present year the most successful Princeton has had for many years.

The next speaker was Rev. Henry Elliott Mott, of Elizabeth, who spoke of "The Scholar in Society." He said that he had prepared a long solemn discourse, but he had always been taught not to presume too much on the intelligence of his audience, and he would refrain from delivering it. He then rehearsed at some length in a semi-humorous manner affairs at Princeton, and compared her with other colleges.

Rev. Dr. W. B. Richards, the next speaker, had for his subject "Intercollegiate Comity." He spoke of Yale as the mother of American colleges, and said that he was glad to welcome her first born—Princeton. He thought that both colleges stood for the same idea. He then referred to Harvard as the grandmother of American colleges, an institution that had gone off on her own tack. He mentioned President Elliott's decree that the intercollegiate games should cease for awhile, as the victories for Harvard were monotonous. Dr. Richards thought the result of the games must be weary to Harvard. "If he is sincere," said Dr. Richards, "let him arrange a series of games with Princeton."

Senator Reed, a graduate of Rutgers, was the next speaker, and his

CAST IN "A NIGHT OFF."

AMATEUR THEATRICAL PERFORMANCE MAY 1ST.

W. L. Saunders in General Charge—Dramatic Talent Coached by Alfred Young.

Augustin Daly's amusing comedy "A Night Off" will be produced at Music Hall, Tuesday night, May 1st, by a cast of local amateurs. The great success that has invariably met the efforts of Plainfield society folk in the histrionic art, promises to be repeated on this occasion. The proceeds of the performance, as those of "Diplomacy" last year, will be devoted to the worthy local charities. The net receipts of the play of "Diplomacy" amounted to nearly $400 last year, and that sum was distributed among the charitable societies of this city.

"A Night Off" is one of the best of American comedies. It is full of fun and with a continuance of action that leaves not a dull moment in the whole play. There will be several new faces in the cast, but those prominent in past amateur theatrical performances will appear again this year. Alfred Young, whose work as coach was demonstrated to be so satisfactory last year, is again in charge and under his intelligent direction a play is expected to give an entertainment that will be eminently satisfactory to all.

The sale of seats will begin Saturday afternoon at 3 o'clock at Armstrong's pharmacy, corner of Park and North avenues. Private boxes may be had by applying to W. L. Saunders.

The makeup of the cast has just been announced. It is as follows:

Justavius Babbitt, Professor of Ancient History in the Canytown University.
W. L. Saunders

Harry Damask, his son-in-law. W. T. Pollister

Jack Mulberry, in pursuit of fortune, under name of Chandler. Alfred W. Tredell

Lord Mulberry, in pursuit of Jack.
Fred W. Goddard

Marcus Brutus Bean, in pursuit of fame and fortune, under nom-de-plume. W. B. Cook

Prowl, usher at the University. Harry Curtis

Mrs. Xantippe Babbitt, Professor of Compulsory Management in the Professor's household.
Mrs. F. W. Tredell

Nicko, the youngest "imp" of the household.
Mrs. W. L. Saunders

Angelica Damask, (the eldest.
Miss Grace M. Kelley

Susan, the "bracelet."
Miss Mary Anderson Batchelor

The business end of the performance is under the direction of Former Mayor William L. Saunders, who plays one of the leading roles. Mr. Saunders is largely responsible for the great success of his department on past occasions and he is making every effort to make "A Night Off" equally pleasant from the view of the management and the box-office.

METHODIST CONFERENCE

FIRST SESSION CONVENED IN PATERSON THIS MORNING.

Bishop Vincent to Presiding—Candidates for Delegates to the General Conference.

Paterson, April 4.—The forty-third annual conference of the Methodist Episcopal churches of the Newark district convened in the Market Street Methodist church this morning at 9 o'clock, the first event on the programme being the service of Holy Communion. After this the roll call and organization was carried out. Bishop John H. Vincent is the presiding officer of the conference. The candidates are the Revs. H. Spellmyer, H. A. Butts, J. A. Gutteridge, John Krantz and A. H. Tuttle, from the clergy, and William H. Murphy and R. B. Doherty from the laity. As important legislation will be enacted and new bishops and church officers elected, the conference will send its best men. Four bishops were formerly members of it, and it would not be surprising if another from this conference is chosen for the same office.

As to "placing the preachers," few have been fixed for the year. The Rev. W. P. Ferguson, it is said, will go to St. Luke's, Newark, taking the place of the Rev. A. H. Tuttle, resigned. He may be appointed presiding elder of the Newark district.

The Hackettstown Seminary will be rebuilt, $130,000 having been obtained for it. Dr. George H. Whitney, of Plainfield, once its president, has been made a trustee.

Miss Myers, of Liberty street, is confined to her home with illness.

WOMEN MEET TO TALK OF WORK IN MISSIONS

Delegates Present Representing Various Churches in the Classis of Newark.

NEWARK WOMAN PRESIDING

ADDRESS OF WELCOME MADE BY MRS CORNELIUS SCHENCK.

Reports of Various Committees Show That Excellent Work is Being Done—Lunch Served by Ladies of Home Church.

The seventeenth annual meeting of the Women's Missionary Union, Classis of Newark, was held yesterday in Trinity Reformed church, of this city. Morning and afternoon sessions were held.

The church was decorated with cut flowers, potted plants and palms, while a large "Welcome" in green and white was hung upon the front of the organ. A large number of delegates, representing nearly every church in the classis, were present.

The morning session opened at 10:30, the president of the Union, Mrs. J. S. Allen, of Newark, being in the chair. Devotional exercises were conducted by Mrs. D. H. Martin, of Newark, who offered prayer, read a brief Scripture lesson and sang a few helpful words. This part of the programme closed with prayer by several delegates, and the singing of a hymn.

The address of welcome was delivered by Mrs. Cornelius Schenck, wife of the pastor of the convention church. The warm words of welcome were cordially responded to by Mrs. J. S Allen, who expressed the hope that the meeting might be a most helpful one, and extended a welcome to the delegates.

The minutes of the last meeting were read by the secretary of the union, Mrs. C. B. VanDeventer, of Netley, after which the roll of societies was called, the delegates from each society rising and responding with a verse of Scripture.

The secretary then read the report of the treasurer, Mrs. A. Delano, of Newark, who was prevented by illness from being present. She also called upon the societies for their benevolences. These reports showed a large amount given for both home and foreign missions, and much practical missionary work done. Miss M. D. Duryee, of Newark, reported for the classical committee of the Woman's Board of Foreign Missions. She said that there was an increased and more intelligent interest in the work shown at present by the societies of the union, and that the younger societies were especially growing. The classical committee of the Home Missionary Society was represented by Mrs. A. Ward, of Newark.

The first address of the morning was by Mrs. I. W. Gowen, of the Hackensack classis. Mrs. Gowen gave a very vivid and entertaining account of a journey made into the western states in the interest of missions. The description of her amusing experiences, her warm welcome by the people of the western Reformed churches, the bright girls making great sacrifices to obtain their education in a little western college, the inspiring meetings held, the fine work done, left the audience in the power of her listeners from the first word till the last. Mrs. Gowen was a very bright and easy speaker, and told many humorous or pathetic incidents. She closed with an appeal to the women before her to work for other women who had not Jesus Christ for their Saviour and Friend.

A worker from the foreign mission field is sure of a warm welcome from an audience, and much interest was felt in the second address of the morning, Mrs. H. Y. S. Peeke, of Japan. The condition of the women in Japan, the slight education obtainable by girls, the difficulty of learning the language, the home customs, the forms of religions, and the lines of work taken up by woman missionaries, were among the topics upon which she spoke. The whole address was of unusual interest, and told many facts about Japan not usually known.

Mrs. Kipp, a missionary just returned from China, said a few words concerning the work done in that field, and gave encouragement to do all possible in behalf of missions.

Mrs. Bapalje, another missionary, also spoke briefly.

At the close of the morning session the delegates adjourned to the Sunday-school room, where special arrangements had been made by the Ladies' Christian Work Society for serving a "basket luncheon." Spoons were taken for each delegation had been provided, and during the interval between sessions a pleasant time was enjoyed by those in attendance.

DIED AWAY FROM HOME.

MRS. CLARA POTTER'S FATAL ILLNESS AT MARION, N. C.

She Had Been Ordered South for Her Health—Interment at Rahway Yesterday Afternoon.

Mrs. Clara Potter, wife of Reuben Potter, formerly of Mt. Pleasant, died Tuesday morning at Marion, N. C., where she went for the benefit of her health. Her death was due to pneumonia. Several months ago Mrs. Potter went to New Haven to visit her daughter, Mrs. Howard Dayton. While there she had an attack of malaria, and a physician decided that she should spend the winter in the south. She was accompanied by her husband. Her condition did not improve as her family hoped it would, and recently it was made worse by an attack of pneumonia. Mrs. Potter realized that she was no better and two weeks ago a letter was received by her son, Harry Potter, telling him that she would soon be home to spend her remaining days. She grew rapidly worse and her death was sudden.

The young daughter of Mrs. Potter's daughter, Mrs. Dayton, was also ordered south for her health a short time before Mrs. Potter's death. The daughter and granddaughter were with the latter during her illness and to the time of her death. The remains arrived in Jersey City yesterday at 1:45 o'clock, and were taken to Rahway, the native home of the deceased, where the funeral services were held at 4 o'clock in the afternoon. Rev. Charles E. Herring, of this city, officiated, and interment was in Hazelwood Cemetery.

It was to be regretted that the funeral had to be held so soon, but circumstances made this imperative. Mrs. Potter was formerly Miss Clara Brown, of Rahway. For many years she lived with her family on the farm at Mt. Pleasant. One son, Harry Potter, and two daughters, Mrs. Howard Dayton, of New Haven, and Mrs. Harry Edgar, of Lowell, Mass., survive her. Her husband also survives her. She was a faithful member of the First Presbyterian church, this city.

QUIET HOME WEDDING.

Miss Ella May Bonner Becomes Mrs. Henry Angerbauer—Ceremony Performed Tuesday.

A quiet home wedding took place last Tuesday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Angerbauer, East Third street, when their youngest son, Henry Angerbauer, and Miss Ella May Bonner, daughter of Jacob Bonner, of Dunr street, were united in marriage by Rev. George Hansee, pastor of the German Reformed church. The guests included just the immediate relatives of the contracting parties.

The bride was gowned in white mull and carried a shower bouquet of bridal roses, and her attendant, Miss Eva Perry, was gowned the same and carried pink roses. The best man was Morris Sorenson, of this city. After the marriage a reception was tendered to the bride and groom and they received the best wishes of all. They also received a great many handsome and useful presents from their relatives. They will take up their residence for the present at the home of the groom's parents and in the fall they will go to housekeeping.

The groom is an employe of the Atlantic and Pacific Tea Company, on West Front street, and both he and his wife have a large number of friends who wish them success in their married life. Music for dancing was furnished by Eugene O'Reilly.

MUST GET LICENSES.

Board of Health Decides That Garbage Collectors Must Conform Strictly by With the Law.

The provisions of the health ordinance concerning the collectors of garbage are to be strictly enforced hereafter. So it was decided at the monthly meeting of the Plainfield Board of Health Tuesday. The fact that only one of the collectors had conformed to the letter with the provisions of the ordinance was brought to the attention of the Board at the last month's meeting. Many collectors have neglected to get licenses at all.

It will now be necessary for all to secure licenses which will not be granted unless the collectors have the proper kind of cans and wagons for the collection of the garbage. The rest of the business transacted at the meeting was of a routine nature.

Received Master Mason's Degree.

At the meeting of Jerusalem Lodge, No. 96, F. and A. M., Amos Andrews received the master mason's degree. There was a large attendance at the meeting.

Mrs. Gardner, wife of Rev. G. W. Gardner, of Park place, is suffering with an attack of the grip.

MRS. CATT URGES A VOTE FOR THE WOMEN.

Suffragist Leader Spoke to a Large Audience of Plainfield Women.

THOROUGHLY IN EARNEST.

POINTED OUT GOOD WORK DONE IN WESTERN STATES.

Incidentally She Argued Against the Idea of Voting Being Made a Compulsory Matter by Enactment of Law.

Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt, president of the National Women's Suffrage Association, interested a large number of women Tuesday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Samuel Huntington, 224 Franklin place, when she delivered an address on "The Ideal Republic." The response to Mrs. Huntington's invitations were so numerous that the parlors at the home of the patroness were taxed to accommodate the many who desired to listen to this celebrated woman.

Mrs. Catt is a woman of charming personality and much executive ability. She is thoroughly in earnest in her work and believes most devoutly in the truth and justice of her course.

While Mrs. Catt did not advance anything particularly new along the lines of woman suffrage, which the so-variously advances, she nevertheless impressed those who listened to her candid statements with the idea that she is sincere and that the devotion she evinces but voices the sentiments of her heart.

Mrs. Catt said she did not believe that any man or woman was too ignorant to be denied the privilege of expressing an opinion at the ballot box. Neither did she believe in having a law to compel either men or women to vote, as had been suggested by certain well-known champions of the suffrage act. In short there was no justice or common sense in giving to men a privilege that is denied to women. The laws regarding voting should be elastic. If would be a curse if the law compelled a man or a woman to vote when they did not choose to exercise that right. In Colorado, Utah, Idaho and Wyoming where the suffrage is extended to women, it has been tried and to work successfully. In those States it has been demonstrated that the women were the more intelligent voters. In Colorado there are 30,000 less women than men, yet fifty-one per cent. of the vote was cast by women at the last Presidential election.

Mrs. Catt maintained that the enfranchisement of women meant a higher development of womanhood just as man has been benefitted by the use of the suffrage.

In closing she took occasion to refer to the needs of greater self-reliance among the women. They should be independent thinkers and rely more upon their own judgment. The real woman has no cause to hide her real talents under a bushel. Many women were too vain and many hold in utter contempt those of their sex who seek to develop their womanhood.

The speaker said that every State that denied enfranchisement rode it of women. It is not claimed that every woman will vote at all times for what is right any more than do the men. It may take some years to educate the women in the proper use of the ballot, but though the movement may be slow and gradual it will surely prove beneficial and the result will be the elevation of the women and the consequent bettering of conditions generally in the way of electing to office men and women of higher and nobler ideas.

Mrs. Catt's address was interspersed with frequent anecdotes to illustrate and emphasize her theories that served to relieve its monotony.

After the address a business meeting was held and light refreshments served by Mrs. Huntington.

Judge Bartine's Last Court.

Somerville, April 4.—Judge Bartine held court today for the last time to close up some unfinished business. He refused licenses to William Greisheimer, South Bound Brook Hotel, and to Nicholas Depasia, Raritan, saloon. An application for a new trial in the case of Philip W. Bockaw against Clinton Cornell was refused, and judgment was rendered defendant for $45 and interest. In the case of Kay against Wagoner judgment was rendered defendant.

Engagement Announced.

The engagement is announced of Miss May Davis Thompson, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. D. Thompson, of Belvidere avenue, to E. Frank Vail, elder son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph T. Vail, of Lafayette avenue.

THE DOMESTIC DOMAIN.

Odd Items of Information for the Perusal of the Young Housekeeper.

A nurse fertile in expedients for the entertainment of her patients when they reach that most trying of periods, convalescence, makes ice cream by the following recipe, mentioned, and attention is also called to "the foolish expenditure of physical power on the part of the best housekeepers which might easily be conserved. What is the use of standing to perform tasks which might be done quite as well sitting? Dressing one's hair, usually a tiresome process, regulating bureau drawers and boxes, mixing cake, even washing dishes and ironing, can all be done satisfactorily in a sitting posture. Going up and down stairs is far more fatiguing than necessary; if only women would practice attending properly, that is, at a moderate gait, with chest erect and the foot planted squarely on each stir. By a little attention to these details women can do much to lessen the daily waste of tissue and prevent physical breakdowns." Surely this is a suggestion worthy of consideration. The world's busiest and most efficient men do their work while sitting.—Congregationalist.

Oyster Pottpie.

Put the oysters into a vessel having a tight cover. Season generously with butter, pepper and salt, crush a few biscuits made of either very light-raised dough or a light baking powder dough, and cook (tightly covered) ten minutes. A little thickening should be added to the oysters after the first boiling. Another way to make potpie is this: Drain the oysters, and to the liquor add an equal quantity of veal stock, season as above, add a little thickening, and drop in the biscuits and oysters. Cook for a few minutes. Heat the drained oysters in another saucepan just long enough to curl their beards, add them to the finished biscuits and liquor or sauce and serve at once.—Chicago Evening News.

The Rich First Ward and Some Other Things in CHICAGO

One of the First Ward Sights.

In political circles in Chicago the business district, that portion of the city bounded on the north and west by the river, on the east by Lake Michigan and on the south by the Twelfth street viaduct, is known as the First ward.

It is a comparatively small tract of the city, the smallest ward in all the 34 of which the city is composed, but it probably represents more wealth than any similar tract of land in the world. There is very close to $500,000,000 tied up in its valuable real estate, in its sky-scraping office buildings, in its magnificent hotels, in its palatial clubhouses, in its churches, in its stores, in its manufacturing institutions, in its homes, in its theaters, in its schools, in its stocks of merchandise, in its bank vaults, in its stocks and bonds, in its saloons and in its dens of vice of every kind.

All of these are there in picturesque array. The hovel stands beside the towering office building, the saloon door opens beside that of the church; the big department store and the cobbler shop stand side by side, and the bank and the pawnbroker occupy the same building.

It is a city within a city; it is the heart which both supplies and saps the life blood of the municipality. Its industries give employment to hundreds of thousands of people, and its dives wreck thousands of promising lives each year. In it are located the homes of both rich and poor, the just and the unjust. As its industries provide the work, so do its theaters and other places of amusement provide the play for the 2,000,000 people of Chicago. In many things the First ward is Chicago.

A Place of Residence.

When one looks at this vast aggregation of tall office buildings and hovels, of churches, of theaters, of stores, of banks, of everything that tends to make the business center, one thinks of it only as the business district of Chicago. One never looks upon such as the abiding place, but the workshop, the counting room and factory of a great city. But while it has all these, it has also homes. Homes of all classes, from the palatial residence of the millionaire to the rickety tenement of the toiler and the vagrant.

Another of the First Ward Sights.

There are enough people living in the square mile of Chicago known as the First ward to make a fair-sized city. The coming census will show not far from 50,000 human beings whose place of residence lies within the boundary lines of this ward, and of these people the registration lists of Chicago show that more than 10,000 are registered voters.

In the First ward's wealthy business and professional men have their permanent homes; along the lake front on Michigan avenue others of the same class reside in the beautiful homes. Young men in town find apartment houses in the clubhouses and the outcasts and the criminals live year after year in the filthy lodging houses of the levee district.

Foreigners from all the nations of Europe and Asia find in this ward a Swedish place, Clark street abounds in the dens of the Chinese, while among the railroad tracks but a block further west are hundreds of Italians, of Portuguese, of Hungarians, and scarcely from southern Europe in particular.

In the First ward the police catch the pickpocket, and the detective looks for the absconding cashier. As the places of vice in this ward give the life beats to Chicago, so its places of crime give the death blows.

First Ward Aldermen.

It is the First ward that sends to the Chicago city council as its representatives "Bath house" Coughlin and "Hinky Dink" Michael Kenna. Both men are characters in the city, and both have been born and raised. Both are natives of the ward in which they have won their fame. Both men made much of the money which they possess in the saloon business, and by the aid of the same business won the confidence of the class of voters upon whom they depend for their elections. Kenna is in the saloon business to-day and Coughlin but recently left it to engage in the more presentable calling of broker and banker.

The "Glad Hand" for All.

While the Civic Federation or the Municipal Voters' league will indorse neither of these two men, they are practically as sure of election to the Chicago city council as they wish to hold the place as the elections are sure to come. Nor is it a question of party politics that keeps them there, but it is their firm hold upon the voters of the ward.

Both men know personally thousands of the voters upon whose suffrage they must depend. They made voters of the foreigners eligible to the privileges of citizenship by securing for them their naturalization papers. They see to it that these men are properly registered, and that they are present at the voting places on election day.

With this class of voters they are "good fellows." They sign their bail bonds when an offense against the law sends them to the police station; they secure positions for them when that is possible; they speak to them wherever they meet them; they treat them as equals, and in return they get their votes on election day.

The Snows of Winter.

The blinding blizzards of the winter season are practically over, and Chicago is glad of it.

The people of this outside can hardly realize what a 12-inch fall of snow means to the people in a great city. Such a fall of "beautiful" is a calamity that it takes thousands of dollars to remedy — more thousands than Chicago has ever spent for such a purpose.

Miss Chicago Thinks About It.

The last heavy fall of snow in New York cost that city $150,000 to reopen traffic in the streets and remove the blockades. The last heavy fall in Chicago cost that city half as much and a little more to think about removing it, and then the sun and weather did such of the work as was done.

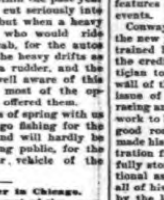
But though Chicago did little more than think about the removal of the snow, about 5,000 men were employed to assist in that process. True, an enormous quantity of snow was carted to the lake front and dumped into the water, but it was an infinitesimal quantity when compared with the great amount that fell, and much of that was removed by private firms around their own business houses.

But there are those in a great city to whom the snow was not an unmixed blessing. One such class were the cab drivers. Within the past year the automobile has cut seriously into "cabbie" business, but when a heavy snow comes those who would ride must do so in a cab, for the autos are as helpless in the heavy drifts as is a ship without a rudder, and the cab drivers were well aware of this and so made the most of the opportunity that was offered them.

But with the days of spring with us again cabbie may go fishing for the next six months and will hardly be missed by the riding public, for the auto is the popular vehicle of the day.

Sheldon's Paper in Chicago.

Chicago, like the rest of the country, raved more or less over the Sheldon edition of the Topeka Capital. There was a great demand for the preacher-editor's paper for the first day or two at least, and the managers of the daily made the most of so golden an opportunity, and, while the editor might not have approved, sold hundreds of copies for several times the regular price. Something like 20,000 copies of the first issue reached Chicago on Tuesday evening after the business district had been deserted. Every enterprising newsboy in the city knew what train they were coming on, and each had accumulated all the capital available for the purchase of a supply. The boys are in a way close students of human nature, and they knew that they could readily dispose of every copy they could get at a good profit to themselves.



"Here's Yer 'Peka Capital.

Ten minutes after the arrival of the train bearing the papers they were being sold all over the downtown district, and it took but a few minutes longer for the boys to spread to the residence portions of the city.

But the newsboys were somewhat mixed as to the purposes of the paper. They had heard something of "What would Jesus do," and had gotten the Saviour entangled with Pastor Sheldon. For while many people of the city were much surprised to hear the clear, shrill voices of the little fellows calling:

"Here's yer 'Peka Capital by Jesus Christ!"

It may, or may not, have been the boys' announcement of their wares, but the papers sold easily at big prices.

New and Mysterious Friendship of the L. A. W. and N. C. A.

WHAT is the cycling position now? What manner of miracle has been wrought that brings the former bitter enemies, the League of American Wheelmen members and the adherents of the National Cycling association, into the same camp? Why do they fraternize? The reason is not apparent to critics, unless they have made a study of the complete revolution that has just taken place in the bicycle world. The time came when the league had to yield to the inevitable, and it did so gracefully. At the recent national assembly it threw overboard the costly business of race control and its former enemy, the N. C. A.—always called an outlaw organization previous to this meeting—picked up full control of cycling. The N. C. A. had had a year of somewhat marked success with the "outlaws." Now there are no outlaws, there is no acrimonious debate—or even worse than that—and the spectacle will be seen in Milwaukee during the week of July 10 of the league leaders acting as officers at the national cycle meet of the former opposition body, while the N. C. A. people will be the loudest at the banquet to respond to the toast of "good highways and cycle paths." What is more, the N. C. A. will obtain from the council of the Cream city a permit to hold motor cycle races on Grand boulevard, and L. A. W. officials will act as judges. The bond of fraternity is a solid one. It has for its object the promotion of cycling sport and cycling as a racing business, and the promulgation of the propaganda of good roads among the agricultural masses. The national meet of the L. A. W. to be held simultaneously with the national race meet of the N. C. A. will abound in harmony. The L. A. W. will conduct the social features and the N. C. A. the racing events.

Conway W. Sams, of Baltimore, Md., the new president of the L. A. W., is a trained lawyer, and he is entitled to the credit of being enough of a politician to see the handwriting on the wall of the L. A. W., and to force the issue of the dropping of control of racing and the vesting of the league's work to legislation for cyclists and for good roads and social features. He made his platform, ousted the administration from its trenches, and successfully stormed the redoubts at the national assembly. He was elected and all of his suggestions were carried out by the league.

John A. Blaurock, the new president of the N. C. A., is an old timer in eastern athletics. He is a member of the Atlantic Athletic association, and recently acted as the representative of cycling in America—or in the United States, to be more explicit—at the International Cycling association annual meeting in Paris, June. Mr. Blaurock has large ideas about the reorganization of cycling racing for this year. He is an optimist on the matter and thinks that the cycle trust will sell so many wheels this year that the owners cannot help expressing enthusiasm for racing. The scheme of reverting to the old plan of engaging crack riders to ride certain makes of wheels, he thinks, will give an impetus to cycle racing. Thousands of dollars were hung up in purses last season by the N. C. A. for the outlaw riders to race for, and the N. C. A. saw that nearly every purse offered was paid to the racers. The N. C. A. expects to have 2,500 professionals registered with its board of control, and sets no limit on the number of amateurs. The leaders would not be surprised if 5,000 racing amateurs were to be registered before the season is six months old. While in Paris—if I make no mistake Mr. Blaurock will not sail for home until late in April—the new president not only impressed the L. C. A. officials and delegates with the importance of the N. C. A. and its legal moral and just right to succeed to the membership formerly held in the international body of the L. A. W., but he saw automobiles of motor cycles and partially arranged for an invasion of the United States by the crack machine pilots of France.

JOHN A. BLAUROCK,
President of the National Cycling Association.

There is no more enthusiastic man about the prospects for cycle racing this year than George G. Greenburg, the N. C. A. man who will have exclusive charge of cycling in the western department. He acted as chairman of the annual meeting of the N. C. A. and might have been put into the office of chief executive had he wished the honor. He was at one time one of the hardest working L. A. W. leaders, and when his colleagues started a campaign of invective against the N. C. A. "outlaws" at beginning to make themselves prominent, he advised moderation. Mr. Greenburg saw the inevitable and knew that the L. A. W. would one day gracefully yield to its lusty rival. When he became the western leader of the N. C. A. he chose to use the L. A. W. as an aid rather than to fight it. Hence his power among the racing men is undimmed.

Chairman A. G. Batchelder, of the N. C. A., board of control, told me recently that he expected great good to come from the handling of cycling by one organization. "The L. A. W. has clarified the air," he continued. "The N. C. A. will use every opportunity to improve the sport and keep the wheat from the chaff—to keep the line of demarkation between the amateur and the professional as distinct as it can be—and be ready at all times to sit in adjudication between the cycling bodies or clubs that promote meets and the financial men in advance the funds necessary to equip parks and tracks with appliances for races.

"To insure an impartial administration and one that cannot be impeached, the N. C. A. has put a board of appeals above the board of control. The board of appeals shall be like a supreme court—a place of last resort, and its actions will be final. The rider, the club or the track will get justice with both bodies, and so cycle racing must prosper. The board of appeals for this year consists of G. A. Needham, chairman, the old Brooklyn cycling man; S. A. Miles, the veteran Chicagoan who once published two cycling papers simultaneously in London, England, and in Chicago; A. Fiebing, Jr., of Wisconsin; W. B. Curtis, New York, and Horace Fogel, Philadelphia. The L. A. W. racing board did not always carry with it the assurance that cycling men were given justice. The partiality and prejudice that crept into the board's deliberations often caused severe criticism and the wheel riders became rebellious. Had the national assembly of the league provided a final board of appeals that could sit in hearing at any time on any case in dispute, the troubles of the L. A. W. might never have caused the loss of the control of racing.

OTTO DORNER.

If the L. A. W. is to be successful in getting good roads and cycle paths, Otto Dorner, the veteran legislative member of the league, should become prominent. Much depends upon the enthusiasm which he can keep alive in the cause.

Every division of the L. A. W. in the United States, except that of south California, according to the report of Secretary Bassett, just sent to me, shows a loss in membership. In most cases the losses are about 20 per cent., but in some states, notably Indiana, with a shrinkage of over 31 per cent.; South Carolina, with 47; Tennessee, with 71; Delaware, with 47; Wisconsin, with 46; Illinois, with 38, etc., the diminishing of the workers was carried on so that it caused apprehension of what direction the league would be made for 40,000 members, but there will be further losses. Two years ago the league was booming with over 100,000 members.

Some Facts, Figures and Fiction of the Footlights

Comparative Box Office Receipts Seem to Favor the Clean Play

IN the spring a young man's fancy turns to thoughts of new clothes perhaps quite as often as to thoughts of love. In the spring, just as surely as the wanton lagwing gets himself another crest, just as surely the young woman's linings are filled with visions of gay headgear and fresh apparel. Even the old feel the incongruity of bright spring days and shabby attire, and endeavor to bring their raiment in harmony with the season. And so when all the world is agog on the question of clothes, a word about one of the best-dressed actresses of the day may not be amiss.

Miss Annie Russell, who has added considerably to her reputation as a charming actress in her season's play, "Miss Hobbs," has delighted her audiences not only with her artistic work but with her artistic gowns. And such a number of gowns as there are. First the cream cloth costume with Eton jacket, white taffeta waist, pale blue taffeta toque trimmed only with a big knot of black velvet, is beautifully simple as well as simply beautiful. The dress of automobile crepe is aesthetically soft and clinging, but modish to a degree. Another automobile crepe, this one of pastel blue, with yellow lace and filmy white mull, is almost as dainty and exquisite as a fringed gentian. A creation of blue gauze and yellow Brussels lace, with a rose-colored ribbon to intensify the blue, is a dream. An all-black gown of crepe de chine and lace; an all-white gown of satin and tulle; a white net over pink, adorned with pink-berribboned white taffeta frills, suggest that this man-hater, contrary to the popular opinion in regard to women of that class, possesses and indulges in a love for dress.

"When We Were Twenty-One" is the name of a new play in which Mr. Goodwin and Miss Elliott have lately appeared. It deals with four old bachelors who endeavor to keep a young friend of theirs in the straight and narrow way, out of remembrance for the day when they were 21. But the young man escapes to the broad road, and marries a woman who has a past, a present, and is to have a future, not of a sort to add a youth to a return to the path of virtue. The spoiled boy, the elderly advisers, Miss Elliott's part, but especially the senior guardian, Mr. Goodwin's role, are very well played. "When We Were Twenty-One" is bright, clever, real and bids fair to have a wide popularity.

We are told repeatedly the public are responsible for the vicious plays, that the manager, just to protect himself, dare not offer anything that is not in it a considerable dash of fast life. To be sure, Olga Nethersole with the widely advertised wickedness of her play did in Chicago take in $12,000 for the best week's business, and Mrs. Leslie Carter's production of "Zaza" were $29,000 for two weeks; but last year Maud Adams, with nothing more corrupt than "The Little Minister," averaged $12,800 for eight weeks, and one week the receipts were $15,000. Other artists who have their work profitable are Mansfield, Sothern, Goodwin, William Gillette, Viola Allen and William Crane. The musicians, some of them, have decided financial success. Paderewski's net profits for the season of 1897-98 were $200,000, enough to enable him to indulge in matrimony, country places and various other extravagances. When Irving was over here in 1881 the receipts for the season's tour were $400,000. Sir Henry's gains in his recent three weeks' engagement in Chicago were $75,000, a neat little sum towards building up his finances.

Mrs. Minnie Maddern Fiske is an actor-ing an artist as one often sees, and never more so than this season when she portrays the life of that world renowned adventuress, Becky Sharp. It was a brave thing to do, to attempt the staging of a Thackeray novel, but Mrs. Fiske is a brave woman, a woman whose courage has been tried by adversity and not infrequent failures. Her present high place on the ladder of fame was not reached by repeated ascendings, but rungs were lost and gone over many a time. The gift of continuance belongs to this lady, as well as many other gifts helpful in the attainment of ambition, and we applaud all the more enthusiastically a race won by strenuous and persistent effort.

When a little mite of a girl Minnie Maddern ran away from her sleeping nurse out into the dark night to look for her mother, who was playing at a theater some distance from the hotel, and succeeded in reaching the playhouse, the stage and her mother's arms. Very soon after this adventure she took children's parts in various plays and began a long apprenticeship in the theater. Now, with a finished art and a practical knowledge of stage requirements, she is able to snap her fingers at the theatrical trust, start out with a company of her own and put on the stage that well-known classic, "Vanity Fair," whose stage name is "Becky Sharp."

The Fifth Avenue theater in New York with Mrs. Fiske and "Becky Sharp" had the greatest success it has had in years, and "Becky Sharp's" Chicago engagement has crowded the Grand opera house night after night to its full capacity. Langdon Mitchell, in adapting "Vanity Fair" for the stage, essayed a very difficult piece of work, but Mrs. Fiske and he together have given us a character study that will not soon be forgotten. Becky, penniless, ambitious, attractive, clever and unscrupulous, but who—as she puts it—"could have been virtuous on five thousand a year." The five thousand was lacking; Becky hastily married young Rawdon Crawley and repents at leisure that she didn't marry the older and richer man. Rawdon is clumsy and poor and stupid, and the wife must make the most of her wits to achieve and hold place in the world that she aspires to. Lord Steyn, that wretched old rake, appears on the scene, and Becky apparently falls a victim to the marquis' wiles—each thinks himself the charmer; and while submitting to the attentions of the latter Becky is surprised by the entrance of her husband, who may be stupid and clumsy, but is able to knock a man down when occasion demands. Later, Becky takes her besmirched life into obscurity, and she is next heard of as the wife of Jos, the means finds there has been brought about no success, nothing but dreary, miserable failure and exile. We leave the theater with something of pity in our hearts for this girl who felt herself forced to make her woman's way in the big, hard world by tricks of deceit and subterfuge.

Mrs. Fiske's "Becky Sharp" is adjudged one of if not the most important dramatic events of the year.

EVENING GOWNS.

The Princess Form Preferred—Styles of Decolletage.

The princess form of gown is that which is considered the most elegant for reception, dinner, evening and wedding gowns. It is certainly more becoming to the figure than any other, and the rich materials at present employed for the wardrobe—cloths of exquisite quality, velvet, silk and satin—are peculiarly suited to this type of costume.

The extreme of decolletage is never elegant. The moment the off of a bodice reaches a point where it attracts undue notice the limit of good taste has been passed. A low cut bodice is the accepted rule for evening functions of any prominence, and it has become a thing past question, that it is never carried to excess by well dressed and well bred women. The simpler the material of the gown is the slighter is the decolletage. A fully low cut corsage must be of very rich goods in order to seem harmonious.

Link bracelets, especially those made of connected medallions or square tablets set with jewels, are used as epaulets for evening bodices and are also used to hold up the slight drapery which often forms the sleeve.

The evening gown illustrated has a skirt of dull green taffeta, with numerous small ruffles; over this is a pointed tunic of heavy cord Irish guipure. The bodice of green taffeta is laid in horizontal plaits across the top of the decolletage, the remainder being covered with guipure which is a little loose at the waist in front. A puffing of green taffeta passes over the right shoulder and a garland of red roses with foliage across the left. The whole is held together in front with a bow and jeweled clasp.

VARIOUS NOTES.

Accessories and Trimmings of the Fashionable Costume.

A recent novelty is a tight, high collar to be worn with a low cut evening bodice. It harmonizes with the color of the gown or with its trimmings and may be of shirred mousseline de soie or velvet surfaced with cabochons or motifs in jewels or metals.

Diagonal flower garlands are again in vogue for decorating evening bodices. The garland is carried from the right shoulder to the waist and is usually of immense roses spangled with dewdrops.

Another idea in floral decoration is a large bouquet of orchids, placed at the foot of the skirt at the left of the tablier, a bow of ribbon serving to fasten it in place. A similar bouquet, much smaller, is arranged at the waist and another in the hair. These flower trimmings appear in greatest advantage on a simple gown. Violets are greatly employed for such ornamentation.

The illustration given today shows a bridal gown of white satin. The skirt has a long train, which consists of two box plaits expanding toward the foot. The rest of the skirt is laid in large side plaits, which are stitched down to within about a foot of the hem. The tight bodice is fastened at the side under a drapery of mousseline de soie which also encircles the yoke of point de venise and is carried around the waist to form a soft belt. A bouquet of orange blossoms is placed at the side of the bosom and another at the waist. Long, fringed scarf ends of the mousseline fall at the left side of the skirt. The plain, tight sleeves flare at the wrists. The collar is of plaited satin, the veil of illusion.

SPRING MILLINERY.

New Ideas For Materials and Trimmings For Hats and Bonnets.

Tulle, silk net and lace compose a vast number of spring hats, with the addition of flowers, especially violets, primroses and roses. Toques entirely of flowers are seen and are of generous size, two kinds of flowers offering appearing in them, as forgetmenots and small pink rosebuds, violets and convolvulus. Some toques are composed entirely of grapes and foliage, and grapes are largely used also as part of the trimming of hats and bonnets, being one of the most noticeable novelties of the spring. Berries, foliage of all kinds, moss and twigs are among the most important millinery trimmings.

Hats of taffeta are simple, pretty and new. They are made with bias folds or are plaited or shirred and are trimmed with drapery and a cluster of flowers.

Among the daintiest of novelties is the toque of mousseline de soie of different colors delicately graded. Sometimes there are different shades of the same color, sometimes delicate tints of different colors. Chous of the mousseline and flowers are the decoration.

An illustration is given which shows a bodice of cream surah, tucked all over very closely and finely. It has a collar of turquoise grosgrain, which forms a plastron in front, and is finished with a bias edge of cream satin. Six crystal buttons fasten the plastron. The outer part of the sleeve is of turquoise grosgrain edged with satin and adorned with crystal buttons; the under part is of tucked surah. The collar is of turquoise grosgrain, trimmed like the sleeves.

ORNAMENTAL FABRICS.

Spangled and Beaded Goods, and How to Use Them.

Trimmings and materials which are beaded and spangled gain in favor instead of retrograding. Entire gowns are composed of fabrics of this class as well as bodices, sleeves and yokes. As the material is always rather delicate, it requires to be carefully arranged, with a view to keeping it in good condition as long as possible. When it is to be used for transparent sleeves and yokes, it should be provided with a plain lining of strong mousseline de soie, white or flesh colored, which will not be perceived beneath it, but will keep it in shape and add to its strength.

In cutting embroidery or lace a flower or motif should never be divided, but should be cut around, and when the parts are sewed together this overlapping motif, fastened down, will aid in concealing the junction, which should always be kept as little apparent as possible. In the case of a spangled motif it is better to pick out the portion which is not required and carefully fasten the ends of thread, as otherwise the spangles will all loosen and fall off.

The attractive bodice illustrated today is of red surah. It is tight at the back, but the point is laid in fine, stitched plaits at the shoulders and waist, the shoulder plaits passing over and forming a V shaped plastron at the back. The collar and plastron are of pompadour silk, trimmed with black chenille, and there is a little vest of tucked cream surah. The upper half of the sleeve is tucked diagonally, and the wrists are trimmed to match the plastron. The belt is of gold ribbon, with an enameled buckle.

WHAT TO WEAR.

Items Concerning the Wardrobe of the Immediate Future.

Velvet is a highly fashionable material, but is contemporaneously little used in the heavy, rich varieties. Thin, soft velvet, which lends itself well to draping, plaiting and other full arrangements, is preferred.

For modest wardrobes where a new gown is seldom added one of cloth is at present the most useful, cloth being a material which is worn upon elegant occasions as well as upon ordinary ones. A well made cloth gown may have two or three vests, cravats, etc., which, used interchangeably, will allow it to answer many purposes.

Bouquets of violets are still as much worn as ever. Often they are artificial, but are so skillfully made as to appear like nature. Natural flowers are, of course, the more elegant for the corsage, especially for the street. A new idea is to have the bodice composed of the same variety as the flowers which trim the hat.

The cut illustrates a gown of pastel blue satin cloth. The skirt has three graduated tunics, which are pointed in front and lose themselves at the back under a large box plait. The tunics are edged with stitching and a fold of yellow silk. The tight bodice is trimmed with tiny bands of yellow silk arranged in scallops, and the tops and wrists of the sleeves are decorated in the same way. The vest is of yellow silk laid in box plaits, with metal buttons down the front. The cravat is of white tulle. The hat of pastel blue grosgrain silk is trimmed with yellow irises.

FASHIONABLE FABRICS.

New Materials Shown For Warm Weather Wear.

Broche bengalines in simple designs is much used for bridesmaids' costumes, and faille in garlanded patterns of the Louis Quinze order is also employed.

Blue is seen in many shades—pastel, periwinkle, sevres, sky, turquoise and tones of the vaguer order. Gray is also displayed in variety—grays which are almost white, others tinged with blue, green, yellow or pink, pearl grays and those of a more confirmed tone. Beige, green and violet are other fashionable colors.

A novelty appears in the guise of plaid goods, the ground being a light mastic or beige, the bars of a variety of colors.

Embroidered batistes are in great force among summer materials. Many have artful effects. Others are embroidered in detached designs on a plain ground. Dotted muslins are shown and the same style of muslin in which tiny borderings or other figures are substituted for dots.

An illustration is given which shows one of the new spring models for walking gowns. It is of tricot cloth, and the skirt is quite tight and laid in corded plaits back and front. A pointed yoke of black velvet is bordered with a knotted fringe of black silk, and there is a valois of black velvet at the wrists, and the belt is of black velvet, with an ornamented buckle at the back and front. The hat of gray straw is trimmed with an ostrich plume, a bow of black velvet and a jeweled ornament.

AFRICAN WAR INCIDENTS

Account of an Escape From Ladysmith.

EXPERIENCES OF AN ENGLISHMAN.

One of Reuter's Correspondents Tells of His Adventurous Journey on the Way to Durban—How He Passed the Tugela and Incidents of the Attack on Spion Kop.

Mr. Hamon, one of Reuter's war correspondents, has arrived here, having escaped from Ladysmith, which he left on the 10th inst., writes the London Times correspondent at Durban under date of Feb. 14. He gives the following account of his experiences:

"After the failure of General Buller's third attempt to reach Ladysmith I determined to endeavor to effect my escape. Having got the necessary permission from General White, I set out on foot at half past 7 in the evening of Feb. 10, accompanied by a native guide, bound for Chieveley. We got along without difficulty until we reached a point two miles east of the base of Cæsar's camp, where we came across a Boer picket, to which we got too near. They challenged, and we promptly fell on our stomachs behind some big rocks. Three bullets immediately came whistling through the air, but fortunately above our heads. We lay quiet for 30 minutes and then cautiously crawled on our hands and knees for over half a mile, expecting every moment to be followed by a volley of Mauser bullets. But all was quiet save for the distant hum of conversation, which could be heard in the stillness of the night proceeding from the direction of the enemy's lines. At last we rose and made for Pieter's station over most terrible country, up and down tremendously steep hills covered with stones. We kept closely to the kaffir paths. Our progress was naturally slow. At 2 o'clock we reached Pieter's station, where there were two Boer camps. Here we had a most anxious time. We were again challenged and again had to crawl over rocks and stones for more than a mile until we were quite clear of the enemy.

"We had now reached slightly better country, though thickly studded with thorn bushes, and made good progress. At 6 o'clock we arrived at a friendly Kaffir's hut, two miles from the Tugela, completely exhausted, having crawled and walked a distance of 22 miles. Here I lay hidden inside the hut the whole of Sunday, as the Boers could be seen in every direction from the plain through which I had passed the previous night. I left the hut at 7 o'clock on Sunday evening and arrived at a friendly kraal on the banks of the Tugela, where I was told that it was not safe to go on, as the Dutchmen had been inquiring farther up the river for the Englishman who had left Ladysmith. I remained concealed inside a kraal for 24 hours. By peeping through the door I could see the enemy shooting buck on an adjacent hill. To make matters still worse, three or them rode straight for the kraal where I was hiding. My native guide ran away, but just covered me up with blankets, and there I lay expecting every moment to hear the Boers asking for me. They stopped outside the hut and demanded milk, which they got. They then rode quietly away.

"At 7 o'clock on Monday night I crept silently down to the Tugela, and, with the help of a small bundle of rushes twisted together into a shape somewhat resembling that of a torpedo, swam across the river. After dressing, I again moved on through swampy ground swarming with snakes and other reptiles until a big hill overlooking the Tugela was reached. Once on the top I could see in the bright moonlight, away in the distance, a hill overlooking our destination. From kraal to kraal we traveled, continually having to take long circuitous routes to avoid the enemy. When day broke, it was a great relief to see the guide point to a hill and say: 'There is Chieveley. Shall be there in three hours.' I arrived at Chieveley at 7 o'clock on the morning of the 13th. After reporting myself to Colonel Sandbach and Major Jones of the intelligence department, I took the 10 o'clock train for Durban."

Winston Churchill relates the following incident in the London Morning Post:

"The day before the attack on Spion kop I chanced to ride across the pontoon bridge. I heard my name called and saw the cheery face of a boy I had known at Harrow, a smart, clean looking young gentleman, quite the right material for irregular horse. He had just arrived and pushed his way to the front and began to ask, I said, to get a job. This morning they told me that an unauthorized press correspondent had been found among the killed on the summit. At least they thought so. But it was a press correspondent, for no one seemed to know him. A man had been found leaning forward on his rifle, dead. A broken pair of field-glasses, shattered by the same shell that had killed their owner, bore the name of 'McConquodale.' The name and the fact flew together in my mind. It was the last joined subaltern of Thorneycroft's mounted infantry—joined in the evening, shot at dawn.

"I hear the young gentleman smiled! He had seen 'got his Job.' The great sacrifice had been required of the queen's latest recruit."

SPRING WRAPS.

The Newest Models in Outside Garments.

The straight sack has undeniably obtained recognition during the winter and is apparently destined to be worn still with frequency. The idea of converting it into an elaborate dress wrap has been practically discussed on imperishable and it takes almost always the artful tailor made character, being made of cloth and finished with stitching and straps. It is not a graceful garment and is highly substantial in full dress, while it has the disadvantage of concealing a pretty one. It is chiefly appropriate for half grown girls and for two-piece women, who are benefited by its amplitude.

The long redingote is still in vogue, the short coat and the bolero, and a few capes are seen. There are also a number of little nondescript wraps, half cape and half jacket, which are made chiefly in silk or of material matching the rest of the costume.

For the carriage the long, straight wrap like a man's overcoat is preferred. This comes to the edge of the gown, has a double front and a high collar and is excellent for the purpose for which it is meant, but not by any means for walking.

Today's picture shows a single breasted jacket of mastic cloth. It is adorned with many rows of stitching which follow the edges, outline the pockets and revers, indicate the seams and form patterns on the sleeves. The roller revers top of the sleeves and cuffs have an application of white panne with a brown design. The yoke is of brown panne cloth. The jacket, which is lined with satin, is closed by three stitched straps and gold buckles.

THE MODE.

Materials and Trimmings For the Coming Season.

Taffeta continues to be immensely worn and will be much used for elegant gowns during warm weather. Many fancy weaves are seen in which dots, stripes and checks appear in a brocaded effect. For young women and girls this material is particularly liked, and in the case of the latter mousseline de soie composes almost the entire decoration. For others point de venise and guipure d'art are greatly employed as trimming.

Passementeries and rich embroideries are only seen on plain goods, such as bengaline and cloth, which alone can display them to their fullest advantage.

There are many attractive liberty fabrics in which vague effects appear in the tones of the same color. There are, likewise, plaids in which satin bars are shown on a taffeta ground.

A new material for bridal gowns is a luminous moire with silvery metallic reflections. It is made only in white. Satin, however, continues to be the favorite for the costume for the wedding costume.

The picture illustrates an attractive costume for a young woman. It is of pink crepe de chine, the skirt being arranged in wide, perpendicular plaits and having two rows of plaited flounces, all bordered with narrow black velvet ribbon. The bodice is also plaited and has a yoke outlined with black velvet ornamented with jeweled buttons. The plastron and collar are of black velvet, the revers of guipure ornamented with velvet. The cravat is of pink silk. The sleeves are plaited horizontally and have a black velvet band down the outside. The hat is of pink flowers, with foliage.

FASHION NOTES.

Methods of Making and Keeping the Figure Slender.

The present style of dress demands a perfect figure, and, while this forms may be padded out, corsets must be worn and trained down by heroic measures. Swedish massage, gymnastics, exercise and regular baths are all used in regulation, and where the excess of flesh is caused by any unwholesome condition of the system this sort of treatment is often highly beneficial to the general health.

The arrangement of the underwear is also altered so that it may take up as little room as possible. Many women adopt tights and abandon the petticoat altogether, the place of the latter being taken by many frills of silk placed on the inside of the lower half of the skirt. When the petticoat is retained, it is fitted closely at the top without plaits or a band, and all the decoration and fullness are confined to the part below the knee.

A pretty idea is to cover the entire lining of the skirt half way up with tiny plaited ruffles and shirrings or puffings of taffeta.

The cut shows a fine tailor made costume of nickel gray satin cloth. The skirt is as decorated as to simulate three crossed tunics, each edged with stitching and a band of white cloth. The tight bodice has a short basque and is adorned with stitching and bands of white cloth, which outline a plastron and trim the top of the sleeves and the cuffs. Tiny rows of pearl buttons fasten the bodice, and there is a single revers of white cloth with applications of ecru guipure. The turned over collar is lined with white cloth. The hat of nickel gray straw is trimmed with a drapery of gray tulle, gray plumes and a pearl buckle.

JUDIC CHOLLEY.

THE FASHION.

Skirts Continue to Cling Closely to the Figure.

The tight skirt is now generally accepted and is worn by almost everybody, but to how few is it really becoming! Too stout or too thin a figure appears at a great disadvantage in so little drapery, and all defects become obvious. To conceal too extreme slenderness there are all sorts of pads and similar contrivances for building out the form, but there is no way of disposing of superfluous flesh.

VISITING GOWN.

Full figures therefore strongly recommend a certain amplitude in the skirt and folds which allow it to fall in long lines.

A new idea for skirt decoration is an adaptation of the scarf which oriental women wear around the hips. This is extremely pretty for slender figures.

The illustration shows a costume having a skirt of violine plaid de soie, which is laid in wide perpendicular flat plaits across the knee, below which they are allowed to fall free. The bolero is of violet velvet bordered with applications of gold passementerie. The fronts are caught with two satin tabs and silver buttons. The sleeves are of elbow length and are of plaited nets de soie, with applications of guipure laces down their front. Beneath the bolero is a bodice of white satin with fine horizontal plaits. The cravat is of white lace, the belt of black satin with a silver buckle. The toque is composed entirely of violets, is trimmed with a bow of black satin and a steel buckle.

OUT OF DOOR STYLES.

Something About the New Hats and Veils.

The crown of the new hats is high and narrow. Many of the brims are rolled or bordered, which is a contrast to rather pinching. Hats in general are rather large this small and must be worn over a low flat coiffure to look well.

Spangled tulle and braided chenille still hold their own, but are not by any means novel. Something which is novel, however, is an indistinct outside braided used for decorating toques of mousseline de soie. The plume is of mousseline de soie, and the fronts are of delicate foliage curled to represent feathers and contrasted by puffings of the mousseline underneath.

There is a decided change in veils. They have suddenly become small and are again worn like a mask, leaving the mouth uncovered. The fabric of the new veils is of the finest, the design very delicate. Of course, for large hats the ample veil is still necessary, as the short one is only in keeping with small headgear, such as toques and bonnets.

The picture shows a jacket of navy blue cloth. It has a short basque and is tight at the back and is cut in scallops at all the edges, which are applied with stitching upon a border of light blue cloth. Large revers are so arranged that they may be fastened back by gold buttons and are lined or folded back for extra warmth. There are a pelerine collar and a high, flaring one, which, like the revers of the sleeves, are scalloped and stitched like the body of the jacket. The lining is of satin.

FASHION HINTS.

Favor Shown in Plain Skirts—Children's Styles.

The plain skirt promises to continue to hold the first place. The double skirts and those slightly draped ones, which were introduced have not succeeded in shaking the favored fancy by long sweeping, unbroken lines, which are so graceful. The fashion of plaiting and tucking skirts horizontally does not change this effect, as they are made longer and longer until the train is now usual.

The fashions for little girls follow those for women. Tight sleeves with epaulets or tucks at the top and close skirts flaring at the edge and plain or finished with a circular ruffle are the rule. A soft sash belt tying with long ends at the back or a scarf sash falling at the side is often seen.

Round, pointed and sailor collars of Irish guipure are greatly liked for children, both boys and girls.

A charming model of an attractive spring walking costume. It has a skirt of nickel gray cloth, which is laid in pastbe, bottoming over with small stone tints as far down as the knee. Below that there are plaits let in, and the skirt falls free. The double bordered vest is of the same material and has two rows of steel buttons and revers of broche pompadour silk. The plaited chemisette and the collar and cravat are of cream surah. The hat which is trimmed with gray straw is of black cloth, with revers and a drooping collar trimmed with narrow black velvet. The hat is draped nickel gray grosgrain, with wings at the side and a cluster of pink primroses.

In Retrospect.

Just in the way of retrospect it is interesting to observe that while the Common Council did not think it necessary to hold a public hearing on the question of appropriating so large a sum as $160 000 for a new High School building—or even to permit the people to know of the project in any way till it had been consummated—the members of that august body decide that at the first opportunity a public hearing on the City Hall project is necessary for the best interests of good government.

We heartily agree with the Councilmen in the desire to secure an expression of opinion from the people of the city on the question of expending as large a sum of money as will be required for a City Hall. But in holding this view we also find it difficult to understand why the Council, when it was contemplated to spend a greater sum of money on another improvement about which there was difference of opinion, too, did not think it necessary to consult the wishes of its constituents then.

The deliberate action which the Council is taking with reference to the City Hall project—and it should proceed in no other manner—puts it in a most peculiar position when the High School proposition is remembered.

Cost of Federal Commissions.

Speaking of the cost of Federal commissions a Washingtonian gives the following figures:

The Cuban and Porto Rico Evacuation Commission cost $50 000.

Comparatively cheap was the cost of the commission that represented the United States in the Peace Congress at The Hague, for the bills amount to only $25,000.

The Samoan Commission cost $50,000.

Less expensive was the Hawaiian Commission to report on a code of laws for the islands, still it cost $30,000

Up to date the Joint High Commission to make a treaty with Canada has cost $100,000, and it is still drawing money, with the end not in sight.

The most expensive commission thus far is that appointed to investigate the Nicaragua Canal It has spent $250,000 and discovered that while the canal can be built for $118,000,000, it should not be built just yet.

There is an insular commission, appointed at the request of Senator Allison of Iowa, Senator Mark Hanna and Senator McMillan, that may have done something beside spending $50 000.

Robert P. Porter received $10,000 for going to Cuba as a tariff commissioner.

Now the President has placed Judge William H. Taft, of Cincinnati, at the head of a second Philippine Commission that is likely to cost another $200,000.

No Harmony in Somerset.

The Jersey City News says that the Republican hatchet appears not to have been buried so deep in Somerset after all, for there is a prospect of another lively row between those two bitterest of enemies, Senator Charles A. Reed and Clerk in Chancery Lewis A. Thompson.

The News' version of the approaching fight is this:

This time the trouble is over the delegates to the Republican conventions to meet from the Third Congressional district. Both Senator Reed and Clerk Thompson insist upon having the honor, and both are living so their followers are ready to fight to a finish.

The fact that victory heretofore has perched upon the banner of Senator Reed will in no way diminish from the interest in the contest. It is a long time until next November, and neither or either we expect to see Mr. Thompson shouting on his rival's prostrate body.

Never in the memory of man has the field so freely as ever. There are many among the members of the truly good party are a contribution to the enjoyment of life.

After a great deal of trouble and a waste of much energy the Democrats of Elizabeth Monday succeeded in getting a candidate for Mayor to head their municipal ticket. He is City Attorney James Connelly. Even though the canvass of the Democrats for this office has been impaired by the difficulty and uncertainty of getting a standard bearer, Mr. Connelly will probably prove a strong candidate to oppose the re-election of Mayor Mack. For several years he has been closely identified with the municipal affairs of the city, thus bringing at once to the candidacy an official record that is capable and satisfactory. At the same time he is well-known throughout the city and personally very popular. Had his nomination been accomplished at the convention instead of at the last moment allowed by the law for the filing of party nominations, Mr. Connolly's candidacy would have been wonderfully strengthened. As an aggressive partisan, however, he will probably make a run that will astonish his opponents.

DOES COFFEE AGREE WITH YOU?

If not, drink Grain-O—made from pure grains. A lady writes: "The first time I made Grain-O I did not like it but after using it for some week nothing would induce me to go back to coffee. It nourishes and builds the system, and we can drink it freely with great benefit. It is the strengthening principle of the grain, and a package may today from your grocer, follow the directions in making it and you will have a delicious and healthful beverage for old and young. 15c. and 25c.

Resignation Accepted.

The resignation of so prominent an official as Webster Davis, who filled the position of Assistant Secretary of the Interior, in order that he may become more active in his desire to stir up sentiment for the strangling and heroic Boers, was one of the important incidents in National affairs yesterday. Every since Mr. Davis visited the scene of the war in South Africa, and received extraordinary favors at the hands of Oom Paul, a storm has been brewing over his head. The British sympathizers in Washington are influential and prominent and probably Mr. Davis decided that the best time for him to retire was the first opportunity—and that came Monday.

Every time Bunion's postmastership aspirations are referred to it hits him in a delicate spot, but like the coarse bully who struts around showing off his black eye received in a street brawl—believing that a forced bravado will lessen the mental anguish it causes him—Bunion republishes in his own paper the stinging allusions to the matter, thus trying to pooh-pooh the statement. But it is bitter truth for him.

The majority sentiment of Plainfield is unquestionably in favor of a City Hall to be built at once. Now let the advocates of the project turn out en masse and make a display of forces at the hearing to be given by the Common Council. It can be depended upon that the few objectors will be on hand.

There isn't a man in Plainfield who can advance a reason for the city to borrow $160 000 in order to build a City Hall.—The News.

The files of the News will show lots of them.

TAKEN ILL SAYING MASS.

Rev. Father Brennan Overcome on the Altar in the Stony Hill Church Sunday Morning.

Rev. Father Brennan, assistant rector at St. Joseph's R C. church in North Plainfield, was taken suddenly ill while conducting the 8 a m. mass at the Stony Hill church Sunday, and was compelled to suspend the rest of the service and dismiss the congregation. The incident caused considerable excitement and the condition of the priest caused a good deal of apprehension till Dr. Zeglio, of Somerset street, could arrive at his side. After giving him temporary treatment, Father Brennan was brought to the parish house on Manning avenue, where he is now confined. His illness is not critical, but he will be compelled to take a rest from his pastoral duties.

CLAIM THERE IS FRAUD.

Insurance Company to Contest the Claim of Agnes Collins.

Saturday papers were filed at New Brunswick by Lawyer Irving L. Brady, of this city, in the case of Agnes Collins against The German-American Insurance Company, of New York. Mr. Brady represents the Insurance Company, and ex-Senator Robert Adrain is Mrs. Collins' counsel.

The case involves the effect of misrepresentation and false swearing as to value and ownership of the goods upon the power to collect under the policy for damages by fire. The plaintiff's goods were later consumed by fire and she now seeks to recover therefore, but the insurance company claims that her fraud vitiated the policy.

Why the Bell Was Not Rung.

Henry P. Seader, of Lincoln place, is the latest victim of that miserable plague, the mumps. Mr. Seader is sexton of Trinity Reformed church and was not able to attend to his duties yesterday, although his position was very ably filled by Mr. Lafre, chairman of the wardens of the church, assisted by Chas. Benson, and the church was nicely heated and ventilated. The only thing left undone was the ringing of the church bell for the various services. A conference between Mr. Lafre and Mr. Benson proved that the former was too large to climb the ladder and go through the opening leading to the belfry, and the latter was too small to ring the bell, therefore the bell remained silent Sunday.

Kids of Dr. Yerkes' Golden Wedding.

The New Jersey Baptist Bulletin for April, with a picture and biographical sketch of Rev. Dr. Yerkes, quotes an interesting forecast from Dr. Bright in the New York Examiner, at the time of Dr. Yerkes' settlement here in 1868. "We expect our friend Yerkes will, if his life is spared, be the Plainfield pastor long enough to become one of the Baptist prattiarchs of New Jersey." The Bulletin adds, "This prophecy has been fulfilled. No other minister of the denomination in the State is preaching now, as active pastor, who had charge of a Baptist church in 1868."

BUILDING LAST LINK.

WORK ON THE RIKER TROLLEY COMMENCED IN ELIZABETH.

Next Friday Operations on the Arlington Avenue Extension Will Also be Started.

H. C. VanEmburg, civil engineer for the Westfield and Elizabeth Street Railway Company, set a gang of men to work last Tuesday on Jersey avenue in Elizabeth staking out the line of the trolley which the Riker-Hine syndicate will build over that thoroughfare from the city limits to connect with the North Jersey Traction Company's present line which ends at the intersection of West Jersey street with Jersey avenue in Elizabeth.

This is the first definite step that the Riker-Hine syndicate has taken towards making the connecting link in Elizabeth under the franchise granted by that city after a long and bitter fight. A large gang of men will be put to work to-morrow excavating for the tracks, and it is expected to have the line in operation within a month. The franchise is 2 600 feet. It is expected that when it is completed cars will run direct from Plainfield to the depots in Elizabeth.

Work was also started actively last Tuesday on the construction of the cross county line from Westfield to Rahway, operations from Westfield to Springfield having started yesterday.

Next Friday the Plainfield Street Railway Company, which is part of the Riker-Hine syndicate, will commence the work of building the Arlington avenue extension of their line, which will run to the city limits at the edge of Middlesex county This line will be in operation by July 1st.

HACKMEN IN COURT.

Three John Charged With Violating City Ordinances.

Roundsman Flynn had a little group of hackmen before City Judge Runyon this morning on the charge of violating the hack ordinance by soliciting passengers from the side walk. They were William Callahan, John Martin and Henry Hankinson. The hackmen explained that they had been standing on the sidewalk in front of the station when several passengers had appeared. Callahan and Hankinson rushed to their horse's heads. Then the passengers summoned Callahan to drive them to their destination.

The Judge said that he thought the officer had been deceived by appearances and discharged the prisoners.

Landlord Wouldn't Submit.

Dispossession papers having been issued by Justice Mosher in favor of Bernard Guttman, Constable Mattox Monday afternoon evicted Mrs. Carry Gunter and her two children from apartments familiarly known as the "Waldorf Sats" on Watchung avenue. While the constable was engaged in setting the unfortunate woman's household effects upon the sidewalk, two benevolent citizens who happened to be passing offered to advance the money to pay the rent. Mr. Guttman, the landlord, declined to receive it, however.

Mr. Frazee was trying to take a bone away from the dog when the latter snapped at his master and caught his hand. In taking his hand away the flesh was torn from one of the fingers. Mr. Frazee call on Dr. Boone and had the wound cauterized. He is now off duty for a few days.

Penned an Opponent.

A full grown opposum was found in the yard to the residence of Mrs. Charlotte DeMess, of West Second street, Monday morning. Herman Hinneman was the first to discover the animal. He chased the 'possum on the run and thought he killed it. John DeMess came along later to find the creature still alive. He gave it to a colored man who speedily despatched it and departed with the body.

BUILDING IS GOING ON.

SEVERAL COSTLY HOUSES WILL BE PUT UP THIS SUMMER.

Returns the Idea That Because Some Materials Have Increased in Price Work is to Stop.

It is simply ridiculous for anyone to imagine that because some building materials have taken a jump in price that all building is going to stop, and that it should be a reason for the Common Council to give up the City Hall project. There is going to be plenty of building this year, and large contracts already have been given out.

C. VanHerwerden will soon commence the erection of three new residences on Woodland avenue near LaGrande avenue. Manning & Runyon will soon commence the erection of a handsome house on Belvidere avenue. In addition to these new houses, arrangements are rapidly being completed to build a large iron factory in the east end of the city, where fully one hundred men will be employed. Contracts will soon be given out for the new safe factory that is to be built in the west end of the city. These are some of the more recent improvements that are to be made.

Beside the above it might be mentioned that Otto Arens has started the erection of his elegant new home that will cost about $40,000, and D. H. Rowland is soon to build a residence that will cost fully $8 000 These facts do not signify that the building business will be quiet, but on the other hand it gives unmistakable evidence that it will be brisk. It sometimes happens that the person who cries the loudest against a public improvement is the man who pays the least tax This is true of the proposed widening of Somerset street in the borough, and is also true in this city as regards the erection of a City Hall.

NEW YORK'S GREAT CIRCUS.

The Adam Forepaugh and Sells Brothers' Season at Madison Square Garden.

Inasmuch as no big tented show is booked to visit us this year, those of our readers to whom the circus is a "thing of beauty and a joy for ever," and who may chance to visit New York city at any time from the 4th to the 21st of April, may add greatly to the pleasure of the trip by bearing in mind and acting upon the fact, during the time covered by the dates named, the great Adam Forepaugh and Sells Broth-rs' aggregation of menagerie, circuses and hippodromes will make their afternoons and evenings at Madison Square Garden glad and glorious, with the manifold attractions and boundless mirth of what immense audiences and the press last year declared to be the biggest and best show ever seen there. There was not a dissenting voice in the opinion that it a good deal more than filled the vast and aching void left by the departure of the Barnum show, and though it came as a stranger, within a week it was adopted by acclamation as a genuine metropolitan institution. That it will repeat its former victory triumphs is a foregone conclusion, and its efforts to surpass even itself in magnitude and merit may be classed as heroic. Its colossal muster roll includes more than a thousand artist and animal entertainers; notable additions to its unequalled collection of rare wild beasts; scores of new faces in new and thrilling acts, both on the earth and in the air, and more that would have made Ben Hur's hair stand on end.

Beauty in Blood Boots.

Would be a Big Improvement.

If Somerset street is widened as proposed it will mean that the buildings along the line will be brought up uniformity on the line and that alone is well worth the cost of doing the work. The improvement would be of great value to both city and borough.

OLD FIRM DISSOLVES.

Spicer & Hubbard No Longer Partners—Mr. Spicer Continues Business.

One of the oldest firms in the city, Spicer & Hubbard, have dissolved partnership by mutual consent. J. D. Spicer will continue the business and collect and pay all bills, while Joseph A Hubbard will retire. This firm has always held the highest respect and esteem of every business man, and their business has been conducted along strict lines of honesty and integrity. For many years the firm did a large business and the industry has been one of the leading ones of the city. For various reasons Mr. Hubbard has decided to retire from the business and devote his time to other things.

Donated Fifty Bibles.

The members of Matsonaehor chapel and Sunday-school were made happy Sunday by the gift of a Bible to every member. The money to purchase 50 Bibles was collected by H. W. Marshall, and the American Bible Society from whom they were purchased, generously donated fifty Bibles so that everyone could have a copy. The Bibles were presented yesterday.

Big Colored Convention.

A convention of colored Baptists will be held in this city in June, and it is expected that over 500 delegates will be present. Delegates will attend from all parts of the United States. The sessions will be held at the Mt. Olive Baptist church. Some of the other colored churches will assist in entertaining the delegates.

Changes in Police Force.

Commencing with today there was a general turn around of the members of police department. All the men have been changed. Roundsman Flynn returns to day duty, while Roundsman Frederickson will do night duty.

Prize Choristers.

The prize choristers of Grace church for March were Masters V. Miner, H. Smith and R. Bingerman, and the Misses B. Miner and M. Ulrich.

$88,000 IS NEEDED TO RUN THE CITY.

Budget of Appropriations Fixed by the Common Council Monday Night.

NO INCREASE IN TAX RATE.

HEARING ARRANGED FOR CITY HALL PROJECT.

Next Monday People Will Have a Chance to be Heard—Ruling H monstrance Against Granting Mortimer License.

The chief topic of importance considered at the regular meeting of the Common Council Monday was that regarding the amount of money to be raised for the city's expense during 1900. Although the total sum required is $88,000, a trifle more than last year, the chances are that the tax rate will be the same, $2.55, and it is possible that it may be a trifle less. For the general fund, which includes the police, the sum of $38,000 is wanted. The street department wants $22,000 which is $4,000 less than last year. For lighting the city the sum of $12,400 is asked, an increase of $400 over last year. The principal on bonds, etc., is fixed at $6,600, which is $1,600 more than last year, while the interest on obligations is the same, $5,000. The appropriation for the poor is fixed at $1,800, $1,500 less than last year. The appropriation for the public library is fixed at $4,000, which is $1,800 less than last year, and the fire department asks for $20,500, which is an increase of $2,500.

Mr. VanHerwerden introduced an ordinance incorporating the above accounts, and it was adopted on the first and second readings, and then ordered advertised. Although the tax rate has not yet been officially announced it can be stated with reasonable certainty that it will not be any more than last year.

A petition was received asking that West Second street, between Central avenue and Liberty street, be macadamized, but as the petition was not signed it was ordered returned. J. F. MacDonald petitioned for the right to raise the roof on his building at the East Front street corner for improvements. Residents of Centre and East Sixth streets petitioned for two lights on the above streets. The Electric Light Company notified the Council that a light had been placed under the Grant avenue bridge. Mr. Lee stated, however, that it was on the wrong side of the street, and the committee will see that it is changed.

The City Hall committee submitted a report in which they stated that fourteen sites had been offered to them. Of that number they presented five as the most desirable. They are the Gardner property, $15,000; Thos. McDonald property, $19,500; J. F. MacDonald property, $25,000; Durlach property, $20,000; property corner of Fifth street and Park avenue, $20,000. The committee then recommended that a special meeting be held next Monday evening when a public hearing can be given for and against the project.

John Ross petitioned for the privilege of erecting a fruit stand near the Love building on Watchung avenue. The stand to be 4x12 and seven feet high. The matter was referred to the street committee, and later in the evening was denied. Charles Hyde and others asked for a fire hydrant on Berkley avenue. Mayor Rockfellow nominated Thomas Manson as a special policeman and the appointment was confirmed.

City Judge Runyon's quarterly report showed that 58 prisoners had been before him and $138.00 was collected in fines. Building Inspector Doane reported that eight permits were granted during March.

Mr. VanHerwerden offered three resolutions. The first transferred $1 000 from the general to the fire fund; the second provided for the retirement of $3,000 street improvement bonds with interest, and the third resolution designated Collector Martin as collector of delinquent taxes for 1900 taxes, and provides that City Judge Runyon execute warrants for the collections, after which he shall make returns to Collector Martin.

Mr. Tolles reported that the bids of A. L. and M. B. Smalley for furnishing crushed stone, and A. Kane for culverts and crosswalks, were the lowest and he recomended that they be accepted and the City Clerk be authorized to execute the necessary bonds for contracts. Mr. Mellick recommended the granting of two lights on Leland avenue and one on East Third street, in front of S. R. Hope's residence.

Mr. Glosk presented a request from John Mortimer to withdraw his application for a wholesale liquor license, and immediately afterward Mr. Glosk presented another application from the same person. The former application was faulty and a correct application was submitted in its place. It was referred to the license committee. At this time W. A. Coddington, on behalf of a number of residents, presented a remonstrance against the granting of the license. It was signed by nearly everyone on Park and North avenues, Front street and a number of other streets. The remonstrance says that there are a sufficient number of saloons, that the applicant is not an experienced man in the business, that there a sufficient number of saloons in the immediate vicinity of Park avenue, and that there is no general demand for the new saloon. The remonstrance was referred to the license committee.

Mr. Buckle recommended that the appointment by the Mayor of J. B. Young as call man in the fire department be confirmed. He also made a motion that when the Council adjourn it be to meet next Monday evening when a hearing will be given on the City Hall matter. In connection with this Mr. Dumont urged that as much publicity as possible be given to the meeting next Monday evening so that the citizens will thoroughly understand that there is to be a public hearing to get a concensus of opinion regarding the proposed City Hall. Council then adjourned.

FARMER BURROUGHS DIES.

Fourth Member of the Washington Valley Family to Die Within a Week.

Lewis Burroughs, the aged farmer of Washington Valley, whose wife and two sons died last week of pneumonia, also succumbed to the ailment Sunday.

Like the other members of the family, he was conscious to the last, and ordered all arrangements for his funeral, saying he was happy and glad to join those gone before.

The married daughter, who was also very ill, is convalescent.

Sunday-school Officers.

The annual meeting of the Sabbath-school of the Seventh-Day Baptist church was held Sunday evening, at which the following officers were elected: Superintendent, D. E. Titsworth; assistant superintendents, H. M. Maxson and Asa F. Randolph; secretary, Miss Ida Randolph; treasurer, Miss Matie Green; librarian, Miss Luella Clawson; precentor, D E. Titsworth; pianist, Miss Cornelia Miller. The reports showed an excellent condition of affairs.

Police Duty at Station House.

The new order of things at the police station provide that Sergeant Kiely shall remain on duty there during the night, and the night roundsman is supposed to look after his own territory and that of the sergeant. How long this will be the rule cannot be told. It was the intention of the police board to have either Patrolman Flanagan or Patrolman McCue do day duty or night duty there and change off every month.

Webster Davis Invited to Speak Here.

The "Farmer Orator" James E. Martine was so pleased when he heard that Webster Davis, the assistant Secretary of the Interior, had resigned his official position to devote his time to informing the people of the facts of the case in South Africa, that he has invited Mr. Davis to address a meeting in this city at some date to be arranged in the future, and to be his guest at Cedar Brook Farm.

A Graduate Nurse.

Miss Ella Conover, of Elmwood place, has completed a course of three months at the sloane Maternity Hospital, New York, and has received her diploma. She returned to her home Sunday evening and will now devote her time to following her profession, that of trained nurse. She received the highest recommendations for proficiency at the New York Institution.

Borough Graduation Exercises.

The annual graduation exercises of the Borough Public High School will be held this year in Music Hall and the date fixed is June 22d. It has been determined that the Y. M. C. A. Hall is not large enough to accommodate all who wish to attend. A prominent speaker will be engaged for the occasion. The class this year numbers sixteen members.

In College Dramatics.

Orville T. Waring, of Willow avenue, a student at the University of Pennsylvania, has been elected to membership in the Mask and Wig, the dramatic club at that university. The club takes a trip every spring to Baltimore and Washington where its play is given. Waring will take part in the play this year.

A Lenten Lecture.

A lecture on "Egypt under the Khedives and the English" was given Monday morning at the residence of Mrs. Harlot Burton Ford, of Watchung avenue, by Miss Dorothy Wilberforce Lyon, Ph. D., of Elizabeth. This lecture was the fourth in a series on "Europe in Africa in the Nineteenth Century."

CHURCH DEBT PAID OFF.

FIRST CHURCH OF CHRIST FREE OF ENCUMBRANCES.

Enterprise Mission Will Hereafter Look Out for the Struggling Society.

The First Church of Christ is feeling happy because of a very pleasant incident which took place Sunday evening. The church has been struggling along for several months, as is generally known, under the burden of a heavy debt and the members had about despaired of meeting it. With the close of 1899 Rev. J. B. Cleaver, the first pastor of the church, retired from the pulpit, and it looked very much as though the new year would be anything but happy for the people. On the first Sunday in January, however, the Disciples' Mission arranged to hold evening services in return for the use of the church Sunday mornings. This arrangement has continued three months and commencing Sunday the mission accepted the call of the church to take full charge. This plan was agreed to by a majority of the membership.

One not recently regular in attendance became of ill health was President Huffman of the board of trustees. Sunday evening he was present, and after listening to a Bible reading by the superintendent of the mission, he conferred with Treasurer John Goodwin, and after learning the exact amount of the encumbrances, then and there placed in the treasurer's hands the entire sum needed to pay the debts, thus clearing the church of its burden.

The mission will now work with free hands, and all of the Christian people of Plainfield will rejoice to known that the church is renewing its youth under such pleasant circumstances. This mission is engaged in religious work in other parts of the State, and is accomplishing great good in undenominational work, and especially in Scripture reading and teachings.

KNIGHTS TEMPLAR OFFICERS.

Election in Trinity Commandery Was Held Monday Night.

Trinity Commandery, No. 17, K. T., held a regular conclave last Monday when officers for the ensuing year were elected and installed as follows: Eminent Commander, Asa Collier; generalissimo, Walter A. Freeman; captain general, H. W. Marshall; prelate, C. C. Howard; treasurer, C. H. Rugg; secretary, F. K. VanAuken; senior warden, S. Bingaman; junior warden, R. A. Meeker; warder, H. A. Smith; standard bearer, Garret T. Dunham; sword bearer, Clarence Goss; tyler, Caspar Bolsterie; trustees, D. G. Adams, Henry Woodsided and Nelson Y. Duncan.

Seventh-Day Baptist Affairs.

The annual meeting of the Seventh-Day Baptist church was held Sunday afternoon. The reports showed the church in an excellent financial condition. The election of officers followed. D. E. Titsworth was chosen to fill the unexpired term of the late Charles Potter as trustee. J. Frank Hubbard was re-elected trustee for five years. J. D. Spicer was chosen clerk; G. E. Stillman assistant treasurer; A. L. Titsworth and C. H. Dunham auditors and Miss Jessie Utter organist.

Building Sets Over the Line.

Mrs Hannah Durbach, owner of the property corner of East Front street and Watchung avenue, will receive a notice this week from the city authorities to remove her building back six feet. It has been discovered that her building extends that many feet over the line and the officials do not want to establish any precedents in this way by allowing persons to encroach on property that they do not own.

A "Clipping" Meeting.

The April meeting of the Young Women's Mission Band will be held Friday afternoon at 3 o'clock. It is requested that all the members bring their scissors as it will be a "clipping meeting." Mr. Mettler will also give a talk on the lumber camps.

Cocking Main on Oak Tree.

Birds from Metuchen and Oak Tree met at an exciting cocking main near Oak Tree Saturday evening. It was the best three out of five, the Oak Tree birds winning. A number of sports from this city were present.

An Approaching Marriage.

Invitations are out for the coming marriage of Susan Hunt Bone and Louis Mulford Hummer, which will occur Wednesday, April 11th, at the residence of the bride's parents, 45 Craig place.

Exchanged Pulpits.

Rev. Hobart Clark, of West New Brighton, S. I., formerly pastor of the Unitarian church, Park avenue, exchanged pulpits Sunday with Rev. A. C. Nickerson, the present pastor.

ARCHITECTS CHANCE ON NEW HIGH SCHOOL

All Will Be Given an Opportunity In Submitting Designs for the Building.

PRIZES FIXED FOR THE BEST.

TAX RATE FOR SCHOOL EXPENSE A POINT LESS THAN LAST YEAR.

Abram Anglemon Appointed to Take the School Census—Medical Examinations of Pupils—Music Hall for Commencement.

Every member of the Board of Education was present at Monday night's meeting when President Prospero rapped for order. Previous to the admission of the newspaper reporters the members discussed behind closed doors matters which the public can not be enlightened upon by The Daily Press.

The most important business transacted, and in which the taxpayers are most interested, was regarding the building of the proposed new High School. Mr. Abbett, chairman of the committee on sites, said his committee had nothing to report but progress. Not so, however, with Mr. Lounsbury, chairman of the committee on architects. That gentleman submitted a resolution which was adopted to the effect that a list of architects should be made up and submitted to the Board. Resident architects are also to be allowed to present plans. The prizes to be offered are: First prize, the acceptance of the plan offered in competition; $200 for the second prize and $100 for the third prize.

The Board is also to select a competent person to act in the capacity of professional adviser to the Board while the new building is being erected. All local architects who desire to present plans in competition are "given permission," as one of the members expressed it, to compete for the prize.

The next business of importance brought up was the adoption of a resolution offered by Mr. Lounsbury making the annual requisition for the necessary funds for school purposes, the assessment on the taxable valuation of real estate being placed at 50-1/9 per cent and for the purchase of text books and supplies at 4-100 per cent. Mr. Lounsbury explained that the total rate asked this year, beginning September next, was one point lower than last year.

The routine business transacted consisted in appointing Abram Anglemon to take the annual school census; granting permission for the High School pupils to plant a class ivy on Arbor Day, near the High School building. The secretary said that the medical inspector had examined 25 pupils during March and $765 49 had been received from taxes and placed in the City Bank to the credit of the Board. There had also been received from the state appropriation $1,492.

The Clerk was authorized to engage Music Hall to be used for the High School commencement exercises, Thursday, June 21.

Supt. Maxson said he had notified Dr. Edward H. Riggs of the Board's desire to have him deliver an address before the graduation class. Dr. Riggs is at the head of the department of ethics of the Leland Stanford Jr. University of California.

Mr. Lounsbury called attention to an apparatus at present being experimented with at the Whittier building, which it is claimed, produces a saving in the amount of coal and also provides a greater volume of heat. Permission was granted to try the contrivance on the furnace at the Irving building, no expense being charged for its use.

Then the Board again resolved itself into executive session.

Death of a Young Man.

The death of T. Perry Risley, aged 21 years, a former resident of this city, occurred last week Wednesday at his home, Glen Gardner, where he and his mother took up their residence a year and a half ago. The funeral services were held last Sunday and were very largely attended. The deceased was a member of the Jr. O. U. A. M., and I. O. R. M., of Hich Bridge, and the Patriotic Order Sons of America, of Glen Gardner, and the organizations turned out in a body. Mr. Risley was employed in the Taylor Iron Works, where he was highly esteemed by everyone.

Verdict for Plaintiff.

In the action of Peter Zimmerman of Bound Brook, against Dr. J. S. Cooley, of this city, tried last Thursday before Justice Brempton to recover $50 alleged to be due in payment for an engine, the court has rendered a verdict in favor of the plaintiff for the sum claimed. W. H. Augleman is for plaintiff and Peter Zimmerman for defendant.

Two New Members.

The Lord's Supper was observed at Warren chapel Sunday morning at which time twelve persons were received to membership. It was a day of rejoicing for pastor and people.

subject was "The Collegiate Man in Politics." The Senator in his usual happy manner told in detail how a man can be successful in politics. He urged him to attend the primaries, learn the needs of the people of his town or city, and study each voter. He considered politics the science of government.

The last speaker was McCready Sykes, of Scotch Plains, whose subject was "Does a College Education Help in the Scramble for Cash?" Mr. Sykes was very humorous. He kept his fellows continually in laughter. He concluded by reciting an original poem of much merit.

CRESCENT CHURCH CHOIR.

Names of Those Who Will Furnish Music During the Year.

Former Mayor Charles Place, of the borough, who is president of the board of trustees of the Crescent Avenue church, has announced the names of the following persons who will furnish the music at the church during the year 1900: Miss Jennie V. Finlay, soprano; Miss Magdalena S. Perry contralto; Gilbert K. Harroun, Jr., tenor; Harry Clifford Lott, bass; Ward Stevens, organist. In the item which appeared Monday, regarding the quartette, one mistake was made. Miss Perry is to remain and Mrs. Marion VanDuyne is not engaged as stated. They will assume their positions May 1st.

Petit Jurors.

The following borough jurors have been selected to serve on the petit jury at Somerville: P. C. Bonnell, L. M. VanDyke, George R. Schlereth, Joseph B. Bennett, Sylvester B. Scribner, Michael Duffy, Wm. N. Pangborn has been chosen as constable. The court will open Tuesday, April 17th. The Grand Jurors have also been chosen but their names have not yet been made known.

Chicken Thieves Around.

Letter-carrier Phillip Geise, of Westervelt avenue, who had several chickens stolen from his place recently, is again suffering from the loss of more hens. He now has two roosters left. These he keeps in his cellar every night, and from 12 o'clock midnight till the time they crow are constantly. Verily, the life of a man who would keep chickens or roosters is a hard one.

Willard V. Sutton and family, have moved from East Third street to Elizabeth, where Mr. Sutton has secured an excellent position.

HEARTY WELCOME TO BISHOP VINCENT.

Venerable Minister Received by His Former Methodist Parishioners Here.

HELD IN VINCENT CHAPEL.

SINCERE WORDS OF WELCOME GIVEN TO THE BISHOP.

An Interesting Feature Was the Part That the Little People Played in It—Appreciative Words Said by the Guest.

It was, indeed, a cordial welcome that the Methodists of this city, together with their many friends, extended to Bishop Vincent, of Topeka, Kan., in Vincent chapel, last Friday. The occasion was marked by many pleasant tries that made it an auspicious one. Bishop Vincent is to preside at the Newark Conference to be held at Paterson next week, and this afforded an opportunity for him to visit his former home, and meet his many friends.

The pretty chapel that bears the bishop's name, was lavishly decorated with potted plants, palms, smilax and roses. Seated on this platform was Bishop, and beside him were Rev. Dr. Snodgrass, pastor of the church, and J. W. Jackson, for many years superintendent of the Sunday-school. At the right of the platform was an orchestra in charge of Gerens Bogen.

The chapel was well filled with parishioners and many people from other churches, as well as nearly all of the local pastors and those who have been pastors of the First M. E church, all of whom united in giving the Bishop a warm and hearty welcome. J. W. Jackson was in charge of the affair, and after a few remarks by way of explanation of the bishop's visit, he introduced Dr. Snodgrass, who welcomed the distinguished guest in behalf of the church. He related his experience when first he met Bishop Vincent in a far away western town, and told of the inspiration he received from him. He welcomed him back to his old home, and remarked that the chapel which bore his name would always be called Vincent chapel. He declared that Mr. Vincent was in very truth a bishop of the church of God, and that in Sunday-school work especially was the church open much to him.

Dr. Snodgrass hailed him as being an apostle of the church and remarked the fact that many of his old friends were present to greet him. He regretted the fact that Mrs. Vincent could not be present, but desired her husband to convey to her the warmest expression of thought and love.

The bishop was then bid welcome on behalf of the Sunday-school, by May Doscher, Cleo Knight, Ethel VanNest, Edna Kennedy and Gertrude Geiser, young girls dressed in white, who sang a pretty selection. Gertrude Geiser then stepped forward and made a little speech, welcoming the bishop. She expressed the love of the children for him and said that they did not expect him to recognize them, for they were not yet born when he was in this city. She also referred tenderly to the bishop's picture in the chapel and of his great work in Sunday-school matters. She then presented him with a handsome bouquet of flowers, the girls were in charge of Mrs. Meredith, and the little speech recited was composed by J. R. Joy.

This was the occasion for a speech from the Bishop, and he responded in a happy manner. He greeted all warmly and said that his remarks would be brief. He spoke of the length of time he spent in this city from 1866 to 1868. He referred to the group of earnest men that assisted him in his church work, and said that he loved Plainfield for her contribution to Sunday school work. He dwelt on the perfection of Christian unity found here, and as years go by all grow at the Spirit of God leads. He urged all to put on light and strength for the world beyond. He considered the development of personal character the chief aim in life, "that the Man of God may be furnished unto every good work." He said he cared less for organization, form and external movements, and more for personal motive as power for work. He then referred tenderly to his wife, and said she regretted that she could not be present, but the change in climate would not permit. In conclusion he urged all to cultivate more of the ideal church unity obtained through denominational loyalty, and to all he spoke a thousand thanks for the welcome extended.

An opportunity was then given all to greet the bishop and shake hands with him. During this reception the orchestra furnished pleasing music and refreshments were served under the direction of the Ladies' Aid Society. It was nearly 10 o'clock when the affair terminated, and all bid Bishop Vincent an affectionate farewell and wished him Godspeed.

Site for High School.

So far as can be learned the majority of the people favor the site opposite the First Presbyterian church for the new High School, and the Board of Education are reported as favoring that site above all others.

HOPE CHAPEL AFFAIRS.

ANNUAL MEETING SHOWED EVERYTHING PROSPEROUS.

Reports From Various Societies Receive the New Chapel Cost $45 More Than Estimated.

The annual meeting of Hope Chapel was held on Thursday, with the pastor, Rev. G. Kennedy Newell, presiding. The attendance was large and the meeting unusually interesting because the reports covered the period during which the new chapel was erected. Mr. McGuire was elected secretary.

The report of the treasurer of the Sunday school showed receipts of $460 and disbursements of an equal amount.

John Young, secretary of the Sunday-school, reported an enrollment of eight officers, 35 teachers and an average attendance of 228 scholars.

For the relief committe Henry A. Pearce reported total receipts from various sources of $94.45, and disbursements amounting to $92.24.

The missionary committee of the Sunday school had received $68 29 in special offerings, and had appropriated the entire sum for missions at home and abroad, Muhlenburg Hospital, etc.

In the superintendent's report for Hope Chapel, H. C. Squires dwelt with peculiar emphasis upon the promising character of the work done in the large infant department. As a whole the school had grown not only in numbers but also in spirituality.

The Ladies' Aid Society reported officers as follows: Mrs. Hangiter, president; Mrs. W. Gray, vice-president; Mrs. Sweeney, secretary, and Mrs. Webber, treasurer. Through festivals, entertainments and dues a total of $281.76 had been raised. Among the disbursements were $50 to the extension fund, and $200 for the carpet for the new chapel.

The officers of the Ladies' Missionary Society were reported as Mrs. Newell, president; Mrs. Fenton, vice-president; Mrs. Head, secretary, and Mrs. Wharton, treasurer. The membership is 32. Their treasurer's report showed $46 received and $44 expended in appropriations for missions.

The Christian Endeavor Society reported a membership of 48 and an average attendance of 20. Through pledges of 2 cents a week $54 99 had been raised and all devoted to missions. The total receipts were $63.55 and expenditures, $63 61.

The Junior Endeavor Society started with a membership of 17, with a present attendance of twice that number. Walter Foster is president. The 2 cents a week pledge has yielded them about $10, the last dollar of which was recently appropriated toward the purchase of the new site for Muhlenberg Hospital.

The Children's Endeavor Society has an enrollment of 101, with an average attendance of 35.

The Young Men's Association, organized within a month, reported fifteen charter members.

In reporting for the building committee for the new chapel, Mr. Squires said that it had been planned to build the chapel for $7,000, and that the committee had actually expended for the completed structure $7,045. In addition to this sum $445 had been raised for furnishings by the classes of J. D. Miller, Mr. Yerkes, Mr. Travell, and by the Ladies' Aid Society.

The church treasurer, Mr. Leigh, said that $723 10 had been received in collections and applied toward the expenses of the church. A further sum of $122 had been received to apply to interest and principal of the $2,600 mortgage on the new chapel.

Rev. G. Kennedy Newell spoke briefly of the prosperous condition of the chapel. During the past thirty-five had been added to the church membership, with a net gain of twenty-nine. The present membership is 293.

Mr. Leigh was elected treasurer for the ensuing year, with Thos. Henry, John Young and William Hangiter as assistants.

In conclusion Dr. Richards spoke with enthusiasm of the splendid work of the chapel shown by the various reports, and wished for its continuance and increasing usefulness.

Friendly Move for a Rector.

Vice-Chancellor Pitney, in Jersey City, Thursday appointed Robert Kellogg, of Metuchen, receiver of the P. Cass Lumber Company, of Metuchen. The application was made by Charles S. Edgar, a creditor. The company has a factory, at Metuchen for the manufacture of rubber substitute. Edgar supplied the clay used in the process. It is understood that the receivership proceedings were friendly and for the purpose of effecting a reorganization of the company. The factory, it is said, is making money, but the company is handicapped by past management.

How to Better Negro Race.

An entertainment was given at the Pilmoyr Avenue Baptist church last Thursday night. It was largely attended and very successful. The feature of the evening was the debate of the question "How to Better the Condition of the Colored Race." The question was debated by Rev. Mr. Cooper, Rev. J. W. Mitchell, Rev. David Rice and Rev. Mr. Robinson, of Philadelphia. The affair netted $17.45.

SIR ALFRED MILNER.

British High Commissioner for South Africa.

A Remarkably Able Man Who Has Cultivated Confidence in Himself —Stood By Forster Kruger to Go to War.

Sir Alfred Milner, governor of Cape Colony and the queen's high commissioner for South Africa, has occupied these two positions for only three years, yet he has endowed them—prominent as they have always been—with an importance which they have never had before. It was largely the vigorous policy of Sir Alfred which led President Kruger, step by step, up to that determination which precipitated the war with England. The British had been massing troops on the very borders of the Transvaal—and this had been the result of Milner's provision. The depot at Ladysmith had been enlarged to portentous dimensions. The forces of Great Britain had been regularly increased and the governor's reins of policy had been drawn more tightly as the time for decisive action. It was this hint of Milner's which drew from Kruger his ultimatum of last October and the subsequent declaration of war and insolent invasion of Natal.

The governor of the Cape is a remarkably able man in a variety of ways. He was educated in Germany and Oxford and was once pronounced by the dean of St. Paul's to be "the finest flower of human culture which had been reared in the university in this generation." At 44 (he is now but 47) he had risen to high eminence in British politics. For five years he was the national taxgatherer of Great Britain, at the end of which time he was appointed to his present lofty post—an office to which is attached a salary very nearly as large as that which is paid to the president of the United States.

Sir Alfred can speak German and Dutch fluently. The latter language he acquired since his service as high commissioner began in South Africa. He has succeeded admirably with the native blacks, and his influence over the African chiefs has been greater than that of any other official.

Milner's political career began a few years ago when he was appointed to the position of private secretary to Mr. Goshen, who was then the chancellor of the exchequer. Before that time he had been engaged in journalism, notably with William T. Stead in the conduct of the Pall Mall Gazette. His fine, limpid literary style had not departed in this period of his life. As a writer he appears at his best in his book, "England and Egypt." This work has been criticised in terms of the highest praise by Mr. Gladstone, who has no superlative he cannot apply to the writer's English. In much of what he describes in the book—that is, concerning Egyptian progress—Sir Alfred was an important participant.

Some Old Wedding Customs.

The wedding cake is the remains of a custom whereby a Roman bride held in her left hand three wheat ears, and many centuries later, an English bride wore a chaplet of wheat. The bridemaids threw grains of corn or small bits of cake upon the heads of the newly married, and the guests picked up the pieces and ate them. The wedding cake did not come into general use until the last century, and was then composed of solid blocks laid together, iced all over, so that when the outer crust was broken over the bride's head, the cakes inside fell on the floor and were distributed among the guests. Bridal favors are of Danish origin. The five love knots used are designated by Danish hearts and derived its designation from the Danish true love—"I plight my troth."

Various Uses for Borax.

The washerwoman of Holland and Belgium, so proverbially clean, and who get up their linen so beautifully white, use borax instead of a washing powder, instead of soda, in the proportion of one large handful of borax powder to about ten gallons of boiling water; they save in soap nearly half. All the large washing establishments adopt the same mode. Yarn, laces, cotton, brics, etc., an extra quantity of the powder is used and for crinoline (requiring to be made stiff) a strong solution is necessary. Borax being a neutral salt, does not in the slightest degree injure the texture of the linen; its effect is to soften the hardest water, and therefore, it should be kept on every toilet table.

VALUABLE PROPERTY UNDER THE HAMMER

Martin Act Sale Carried Out by the City Friday Afternoon.

SOME SPIRITED BIDDING.

TOTAL VALUE OF PROPERTY SOLD ESTIMATED AT $100,000.

About $12,000 Made in Sales, One-half of Which the City Took—Sale to be Continued in Three Weeks.

The city of Plainfield has gone into the real estate business. Under the provisions of the Martin Act, ninety-three properties were sold by the city for back taxes Friday afternoon, the city proving itself its own best customer. The amount due the city for taxes, assessments and interest on the property disposed of will reach $9,000. The sales reached a total value of $10,000, while the actual value of the real estate involved must be well up to $100,000 if not more. There is still as much more to be disposed of but three weeks was allowed those who asked for it in which to clear away these financial troubles from around their property.

Several days have been set in the past for the sale but for various reasons it was adjourned until Friday afternoon at the office of Tax Collector James Martin in the Coward building, Park avenue. The hour set for the sale was 2 o'clock, and at that hour a score or more citizens assembled. A few women were also present. The sale was conducted by Collector Martin to whom the role of auctioneer was somewhat new. A little coaching from the Corporation Counsel, however, soon started him right. Corporation Counsel C. A. Marsh and City Treasurer W. F. Arnold were present in behalf of the city.

Since the Martin Act Commissioners completed their duties and the report was approved by the courts, a number of the owners of property affected by the report have settled the claims against them. Others asked for more time and the sale of the properties of the latter was adjourned for three weeks. The remainder, it was announced, would positively be sold to the lowest bidder. In each case, the city entered a bid for the amount of its claim and bought the property if no one else cared to go as high. In every case, however, the property was worth many times as much as the city's claim against it.

Out of the 93 disposed of, the city bid in 23 of them. The other principal bidders were R. D. Crocker, attorney for Thomas Crocker, a retired merchant living in South Orange, and who thought the opportunity a good one to make a profitable investment, and Elston M. French, of this city, who purchased in the interests of a number of his patrons. Crocker purchased 26 properties and French 21.

The sale began ten minutes later than the appointed time. Collector Martin read the terms of the sale. The purchasers were required to pay 20 per cent. cash and the remainder was to be paid by April 19, when certificates of sale would be issued. Six months later, the deeds would be given to the purchasers.

The first six properties on the printed list of those to be sold were not considered. These had been paid or there was a prospect that they would be. The first property put up was No. 7 on the list, located in the First ward on East Front street and belonging to Geo. W. Rose. The city's claim amounted to $30 90. Crocker bid that amount. Nobody else had anything to say and so the property was sold to him.

Then came a rather dramatic interruption. "Count" John K. VanNess hurried into the Collector's office waving a handful of bills. He caught the eye of the Corporation Counsel just in time to prevent his property from being put up at auction. It was a narrow escape for the "Count."

The next property offered was also on East Front street, owner unknown. There wasn't a bid except that of the city to cover the claim of $34.11. The Franklin Wiley property on the same street went to the city in a like manner for $2,304.42. The property of Leonard S. Rue on East Second street was sold to John M. Mann for $415, a trifle better than the city's offer. The bidding was decidedly slack for a few moments, Crocker and the city being the only bidders.

When a property on North Front street, owned by M. F. Marcley, was offered, the city's bid of $47 21 was raised to $100 by Crocker and French. Crocker offered $100 and took the lot.

The bidding for the house and lot on Norwood avenue, owned by B. T. Barnes, was also lively. The city's offer of $21 of was eventually raised to $110. R. D. Draper being the successful bidder. E. M. French bought the properties of Helen Broderick, Aaron F. Carpenter and an unknown owner on Jackson avenue, while Crocker took one belonging to Nelson E. Bond. The same bidders divided the Archer Wood avenue properties of Nelson E. Bond, Mary Weston and Thomas S. Fisher after a brisk contest. Properties on Watson and Leland avenues were not attractive to the bidders and the city gathered them in. Crocker took a property on Raymond avenue, part of the H. W. Smith estate, which ended the First ward group.

It was known that much of the property of the Martine estate in the Second ward was included, but when Collector Martin started to put the first of it up at auction, Mr. Marsh said its sale had been adjourned three weeks pending settlement.

The first of the Second ward properties to go was that of Elizabeth Mosher on East Fourth street. Crocker bid it in for $77. The city took some owners' own property on South avenue, after which W. M. Stillman was the only bidder for the East Sixth street property of Maggie Richardson. E. M. French took a fair lot on LaGrande avenue while the city acquired another on Putnam avenue, of which David Eastman was the owner.

Properties on Webster place, former ly J. P. Humble's; on Lake street formerly Jennere Martine's; on Radcliffe place, formerly A. L. Smith's, and on Leland avenue, formerly W. W. Owens were divided between Crocker and French. French and the city took the four lots back of Belvidere avenue at the same amount of the lien.

The Third ward group opened with W. H. Manning's property on West Fourth street which went to Crocker for $95 after some hot bidding. The city stood for a lien of $1,399.38 on a West Fifth street property belonging to Mrs. Experience Moe. The next property of Walter S. Pound on the same street went to Crocker for $150, after a contest with French. French was high man next for the William Corrtright property, bidding $260. Properties of a Taylor and Mrs. E. McLoughlin, also on Fifth street, went to Crocker.

The two Sixth street properties of Mrs. Michael O'Keefe, Sigmund T. Myer, Mr. Field and W. B. Wells were sold to French and Crocker.

The city bid in the property of Mrs. Caroline M. Hunter on West Seventh street for $218 89. That of S. A. B. Green on West Eighth street went to B. H. Depew after a contest. The city took a lot belonging Mrs. O. B. Leonard on Arlington avenue while an adjoining property of the estate of A. J. Bonnell was sold to F. E. Kinsman for $90. A lot on Central avenue, the owner of which is not known, was bid in by French. A. E. Hall's property on Plainfield avenue went to the city.

One of the largest properties to be sold was the Leonard farm bounded by Plainfield, Sherman and Grantanye nues and East Ninth street. The city's lien amounted to $2 106.37. Wm. M. Stillman bought it for that price without opposition.

A group of small properties were disposed of at the first bid. French took two on Elm street, those of James Brennan and John H. C. Green. The city was the only bidder on the other Elm street property owned by Abram Smith. On Essex street, Crocker bid in a lot from the Home Building and Loan Association. Elizabeth street had several. The city took a property of the estate of E. W. Bunyon, Postmaster R. H. Bird, another of the estate of A. V. Blake for $23 96, J. A. Hubbard two belonging to Mrs. C. J. Ott and French one owned by Jane Bundy. Another of the Blake estate on Field avenue was bid in by French. A stray lot on Pemberton avenue was sold to F. E Kinsman for $27. A bid for E. B. M. Sprague of $48 19 took the last of the Third ward properties, one on Randolph road owned by W. H. Smith.

The sale of the Fourth ward properties did not develop much lively bidding. Most of them went at the price of the indebtedness on the property. A property belonging to Mrs. Elizabeth Leonard on West Front street was the first to go from that ward. The city was the only bidder. Crocker bought up a loton the same street owned by Joseph C. Bilmes. The city carried off another of which Timothy McCarthy was the owner. A. J. Brenjon was the only bidder for T. R. Outbell's properties. The city took the last of the West Front street group, one of Wm. Madden's.

In the estate of E. F. Randolph, on West Second street, went to the city. Crocker captured two South Second street properties, those of Joseph Galbraith and Patrick McNamara, after some lively bidding. Properties of Mrs. E. W. Bunyon and Margaret Hoppock, both on that street, were bought by French. One of Patrick J. Flanagan's went to the city.

A little interest was aroused when 124 lots in block No. 262, on South Second street, belonging to Chapot & Sons, was put up at auction to cover $262 19 due the city. It passed into the hands of the city without opposition.

Crocker and the city divided the West Third street properties of Chas. McCann, Mrs. Bridget Burk, William H. Harding, Patrick Nugent and the estate of Jane Wyckoff. There was a sudden dearth of bids and the city gathered in a small bunch, including properties of the Jeremiah Van Winkle heirs, Mary Muldoon and Charles McCarty.

Six lots on Liberty street, owned and occupied by the Mt. Olive Baptist church and parsonage, were auctioned off to cover a lien of $18.03. The city was the only bidder. Mrs. Kate A. Burke's property on Plainfield avenue and that of children of Margaret Odam on Evona avenue were sold to French. Crocker took a part of the William Sutton estate on North Clinton avenue, and J. A. Hubbard a lot on the same thoroughfare of the Darling estate.

The sale ended with the purchase of five properties of Edward E. Brown on Dunellen avenue by the city.

The borough of North Plainfield acquired some property at a delicious tax sale and is now collecting rents. The city will now begin a similar course. There will still be an opportunity, however, for the former owners of property bought in by the city to get possession once more by settling for the amount of the lien and interest and some of it is likely to be thus disposed of. Some will, however, undoubtedly remain in the hands of the city and the Tax Collector will have its management after its welfare until it can be disposed of at a figure profitable to the city.

AN AFTERNOON WEDDING

NUPTIALS OF MISS EMMA J. THORN AND IRVING L. BRADY CELEBRATED.

Ceremony Performed at Home of Rev. D. J. Yerkes—Reception Was Held Afterwards.

The marriage of Miss Emma J. Thorn, of Somerset street, and Irving L. Brady, counselor at law, of Grove street, took place Thursday afternoon at the home of Rev. Dr. David J. Yerkes, West Seventh street, in the presence of the relatives of the contracting and a few near friends. The ceremony took place at 4:30 o'clock and was performed by Dr. Yerkes, pastor of the bride and groom.

The bride was gowned in fawn color cloth, trimmed with white lace, and wore a hat to match. Miss Francis Margaret Thorn, sister of the bride, of Hoboken, was bridesmaid. She wore a gown of grey fular silk, with lace and rose trimmings. She also wore a hat to match. The best man was Thomas Cuming, of this city. The ceremony was performed with a ring

The bridal party left at once for the home of Mr. and Mrs. Lorenz Townley, of Somerset street, where a reception was held and a wedding supper served. Mr. and Mrs. Brady received a costly selection of presents of cut glass and silverware. The Fidelity and Casualty Company, of New York, for whom Miss Thorn worked, presented her with two costly oriental vases.

After the reception and supper Mr. and Mrs. Brady left the city to enjoy a wedding trip. They returned home Monday and went to housekeeping at once in a newly furnished house, 126 Westervelt avenue. Both are very popular young people, having been workers at the East Third Street Mission for years.

NEW COURSE AT YALE.

Sophomores No Longer Required to Study Classics and Mathematics.

Announcement is made of the revised curriculum for the sophomore class at Yale for the coming year, which represents one of the greatest advance steps taken by the university in the last two decades. The main feature of the change, according to a New Haven dispatch to the New York World, is the sweeping aside of the traditional idea that Greek and mathematics are the most important parts of a student's education and the substitution for them of the modern languages and history.

Two years ago the first step toward broadening the academic course by providing that the two upper classes should not be obliged to study the old curriculum. No change was made at that time in the requirements of students in the lower classes to study Greek, Latin and mathematics.

Sophomores up to this time have been obliged to take five out of six courses, choosing from Greek, Latin, mathematics, French, German and English literature. In this way a student was forced to take at least one of the ancient languages, and he could not take both of the modern languages. In the new course the sophomore is allowed to take both French and German, and he may take two courses in mathematics. Under the new arrangement a student may omit the classics and mathematics altogether in his second year.

International Sunshine Society.

Articles of incorporation of the International Sunshine Society, with principal office in New York city, were filed recently with the secretary of state at Albany. The society is formed "to invite its members to the performance of kind and helpful deeds and to the bring sunshine of happiness into the greatest possible number of hearts and homes, says the New York Sun. The incorporators include Cynthia Westover Alden, Dr. Sara Williams Vanderbeck, Mrs. Phoebe P. Knapp, Mrs. Bertha Roberts and others of New York city.

Subscriptions For Crosby's Sword.

Subscriptions in Paris are closed for the sword for General Crosby, says the New York Telegram. Nearly 12,000 francs has been collected.

STEEL SAFE INDUSTRY IS COMING HERE

Hibbard-Rodman-Ely Safe Company Will Build Factory at Clinton Avenue.

TO BREAK GROUND AT ONCE

THE NEW FIRM HAS VERY STRONG FINANCIAL BACKING.

H. D. Hibbard, of This City, is One of the Principal Stockholders—Company Will Make Manganese Steel Burglar-Proof Safes.

A deal was completed Friday whereby a factory for the manufacture of manganese steel safes will be located near the Clinton Avenue station. The Hibbard-Rodman-Ely Safe Company, of which H. D. Hibbard, of this city, is one of the largest stockholders, has been looking for a factory site in Bound Brook, Dunellen and Plainfield. It is a new firm recently incorporated, but has the best of financial backing. Among its principal stockholders are the owners of the High Bridge Steel Works.

The deal completed yesterday was with the Central New Jersey Land Improvement Company for a tract of land 1400 feet long, west of Clinton avenue on the south side of the Jersey Central Railroad tracks. Work will be started at once on the new plant as the company is overwhelmed with orders. It is hoped to have the factory in operation early this summer. At the start, 100 men will be employed but that number will be increased as rapidly as the facilities will permit.

Most of the special steel work will be done at the High Bridge steel works. The safes are of a new pattern and are made of manganese steel. They are claimed to be the most perfect burglar proof safes on the market.

$90,000 NEEDED.

Appeal for Funds for the Re-building of the Centenary Collegiate Institute.

Rev. Dr. George H. Whitney, of 928 First place, former president of the Centenary Collegiate Institute, has issued a circular letter to the students of the Ipestitute from 1878 to 1888, in which he asks on behalf of the Institute subscriptions toward the rebuilding of the institution. The letter states that for the plans adopted the sum of $250,000 will be needed. This will include furnishing and equipment. The trustees now have in hand $116,000 from the insurance. At a recent meeting of the trustees $51 850 was pledged, and the sum of $90,000 more is needed. This will permit the erection of such buildings that will be ample and a credit to the Methodist church. Dr. Whitney makes a strong appeal to the large "Alumni and Student Fund," and no doubt the responses will be most liberal. All remittances should be made to Dr. Whitney, 928 First place, Plainfield.

Funeral of Late James L. Slevin.

The funeral services of the late James L. Slevin were held Saturday at 10 o'clock from St. Mary's R. C. church, and the large edifice was filled with sorrowing relatives and friends. A very large number of people were present from New York and Jersey City, as well as several other places. There were also many employes of the firm of which Mr. Slevin was a member that were present. Rev. Father Smyth, pastor of the church officiated. Appropriate music was rendered by the church choir. Colored porters carried the remains into and from the church. Interment was in Hillside cemetery.

Dance Held After Twenty Years.

John DeCamp, son of Hiram DeCamp, who for many years was overseer for I. W. Leland's hotel, when the Babcock building now stands, was in Plainfield for a few hours Thursday, calling on friends and acquaintances. Mr. DeCamp is a resident and business man at Seattle, Washington. He left Plainfield about twenty years ago. He thinks Plainfield is making rapid strides in the way of improvement, but still he is loud in his praise of that flourishing city, Seattle.

Trustees of East Third Street Chapel.

Charles W. McCutchen and H. E. Needham were re-elected trustees for three years of the East Third street chapel at a business meeting held in the chapel last Thursday. I. W. Randolph, who presided, spoke very enthusiastically of the excellent condition of the chapel, now free from debt.

Former Plainfield Woman Dead.

Mrs. Ostia Eitchby, in her seventy-sixth year, died Thursday night at the residence of her daughter, Mrs. Philip Corell, 29 Grove street, New York. Mrs. Eitchby was for some years a resident of North Plainfield.

In Memory of J. Newton Voorhees.

Mrs. Hannah Voorhees, of Flemington, has presented the Whitehouse Reformed church with a handsome organ in memory of her husband, the late J. Newton Voorhees.

TO SELECT DELEGATES.

REPUBLICAN CONGRESSIONAL CONVENTION APRIL 18TH.

It Will be Held in Belleville—Former Mayor Fisk Likely to be One of the District Delegates.

Mayor Charles B. Holmes, of Rahway, as chairman of the Eighth Congressional Republican committee, has issued a call for the convention, which is to be held at Belleville, Essex county, Wednesday, April 18th, at 3 p. m., for the purpose of electing two delegates and two alternates to the National Republican convention, to be held at Philadelphia in June next. The basis of representation to the Belleville convention will be one delegate to every 100 votes cast at the last Congressional convention, and one delegate for every fraction thereof. Primaries to choose the delegates will be held at the call of the county chairmen.

The leaders of the Eighth district are looking around for two good men to send to the National Republican convention. It is thought that Union county will select Former Mayor Fisk, of this city, and the other man come from that part of Essex county which is in the Eighth district. The Republicans in Jersey City want Supreme Court Clerk William Riker, to be their representative, and it is generally said that Mr. Riker will get the honor. Over in the Bayonne end of the district Colonel Charles W. Fuller is considered by a large number of his friends. He was an alternate at the St. Louis convention four years ago, and his friends think he is entitled to go as delegate this time.

TO CONDEMN LAND.

Middle Brook Railroad Company Bound to Get Necessary Right-of-Way.

Application has been made before Chief Justice Magie by the Middle Brook Railroad Company for permission to take condemnation proceedings to secure the right-of way over certain property owned by John Brown and John McGloyn, and lying along the proposed route of this road, which is to run from Finderne to the main line of the D., L. and W. road, and which will open up the immense deposite of lime stone in the vicinity of Peapack. A commission, consisting of Lifort C. Waldron, of Martinsville; Peter J. Staats, of Bound Brook, and Calvin Corle, of Neshanic, has been appointed to look into the matter. The commission will meet at the Berkley House, in Bound Brook next Friday. Farmer Judge William A. Coddington of the firm of Reed & Coddington, represents Mr. Brown and the Hon. James J Bergen, of Somerville, Mr. McGloyn.

COMMITTEES NAMED.

President McCutchen, of Board of Education, Names His Aids.

There will be three changes in the teaching department of the borough public schools this year. They will be announced later. The Board of Education will soon adopt new rules and regulations respecting the employment and promotion of teachers. These will be drafted to conform to the new State school law.

President McCutchen has announced the committees for the year as follows: Finance, Messrs. McGee, Hallock, Fountain; teachers and text books, Messrs. McCutchen, Honeyman, McGee; supplies, Messrs. Fountain, Overton, Cooley; grievances, Messrs. Cooley, Van Winkle, Honeyman; auditing, Messrs. Waring, Hallock; building and grounds, Messrs. Waring, Cooley, Overton.

Railway Wants a Soldiers' Monument.

There has been a movement by many of Railway's best citizens to see a soldiers' monument erected in Rahway, in keeping with the large number of ex-soldiers who went to the front from there. Matters looking towards the accomplishment of the affair seem to be shaping themselves rapidly. Prominent residents of the city are taking up the idea in a business like way, and eligible sites are being sought. A committee, fully authorized and equipped, will probably soon be in the field, and the enterprise will be pushed rapidly forward to completion.

Mrs Cosgrove Thankful.

The women composing the auxiliary to the board of governors of Muhlenberg Hospital, have received a letter from Mrs. M. Cosgrove, her daughters and brothers, of SanFrancisco, thanking them and all the people of this city who assisted Mrs. Cosgrove's son, William, who was injured here and was sent to his home recently. She conveys her heartfelt thanks and everlasting gratitude for that done in behalf of her son.

Entertained at Euchre.

The last meeting of the season of the Thursday Evening Euchre Club was held last Thursday at the home of Miss Ernestine Smith, of Madison avenue. There were five tables. The prizes were won by Miss Lillian A. Force and Councilman Frank H. Smith. Music and refreshments followed. All the members expressed their regret that the very successful season was at a close.

JAMES L. SLEVIN DEAD.

WAS A PARTNER OF EUGENE A. GROSS, WHO DIED THREE WEEKS AGO.

He Was a Life-long Democrat and Had Resided in Plainfield for Past Twenty Years.

A second great sorrow has come to the family of James L. Slevin, of 320 Franklin place. Two weeks ago Mrs. Slevin's brother, Eugene A. Gross of West Seventh street, passed away after a brief illness. Thursday Mr. Slevin died after a lingering illness. Death was caused by consumption, from which he has been suffering for several months. For the last month he has been very ill and his family realized that the end was at hand. Wednesday he began to sink slowly and passed quietly away during Thursday morning.

Mr. Slevin was the son of the late John Slevin, of Cincinnati, O. He was born in that city sixty years ago. He spent his boyhood there and began a merchantile career which was very successful. He married the sister of Eugene A. Gross and then moved to this city twenty years ago. Since his residence in Plainfield, he was in partnership with Mr. Gross in the manufacture of candles. The factory was at Jersey City but the firm's offices were in New York.

During his residence in Plainfield, Mr. Slevin made many friends. He had a pleasant greeting for all. He was a kind father and a loving husband and was particularly attached to his home life. He was a member and regular attendant at St. Mary's church.

Mr. Slevin was a lifelong Democrat and during several campaigns took an active part. He never held public office in this city, however.

He leaves a widow and two children, Miss Annie Slevin and John Slevin. His other son died several years ago.

The funeral was held from St. Mary's church Saturday morning at 10 o'clock.

REAL ESTATE ACTIVITY.

New Yorker Has Purchased Handsome House on West Seventh Street.

The Plainfield Real Estate Company have recently sold one of their hand some colonial houses on West Seventh street, near Monroe avenue, to Clarence N. Fowler, of New York city. Mr. Fowler will remove his family to this city and take possession at once. The same enterprising company can also record the following sales: To Henry Whitney, of East Berkley line e, in Bound Brook next Friday. Farmer Judge William A. Coddington of the firm of Reed & Coddington, represents Mr. Brown and the Hon. James J Bergen, of Somerville, Mr. McGloyn.

COMMITTEES NAMED.

HE IS EMBARRASSED.

Turkish Minister at Washington is a Peck of Trouble.

He Does Not Know What to Do with His Wife—Vulgar Curiosity Has Upset All of His Excellency's Domestic Plans.

Ali Ferrouh Bey, the Turkish minister, who has announced his intention of taking his wife out of Washington to the seclusion of a high-walled suburban home, is not the only Turk whose mission abroad has been rendered painful through the religious and social customs of Moslems concerning women. Sheriff Pasha, the porte's minister to Sweden, was unusually fortunate in that his wife was an Egyptian princess who was not bound by the inexorable laws of the harem. But Saadullah Pasha, the Ottoman ambassador to Vienna, found the yoke of Moslem bitter indeed, for this poor man was driven to suicide by separation from his family; and a Mohammedan's family is his dearest possession in this earthly life.

Saadullah Pasha had been the sultan's representative at the court of Vienna for 20 years. In all that time he had seen his wife and children only now and then. The prohibition of the sultan forbidding his diplomatic servants to take their wives with them was carried to extremes in his case. The spouse of Saadullah was taken ill and it was feared she would die. The husband asked for leave of absence to go to Constantinople. Permission was withheld, and Saadullah's heart was broken. He put an end to his life and his troubles at one blow.

This tragedy was not without effect on the heart of the sultan. Hence, when Ali Ferrouh Bey requested Abdul Hamid to permit the ministerial wife to come to Washington, the request was granted, but only after Ali Ferrouh

ALI FERROUH BEY.
(Minister of the Sublime Porte at Washington, D. C.)

Bey had registered a solemn promise that the change of residence would not in any way infringe the sanctity of the custom pertaining to the invisibility of the Turkish woman's face. Washington rejoiced over the prospect of having a real Turkish harem, especially as it was understood that the oriental lady would receive members of her sex in the harem. The arrival of the harem was looked for with keen anticipation.

But with all his other troubles the polished Turkish diplomat did not count on vulgar American curiosity. He found that if his wife was to live at all under the restrictions of her home custom every blind in the house would have to be drawn. This was particularly unfortunate, because the lady is not in the best of health and perfectly requires a little air and sunshine. But there was found to be no hope of these without risk of the camera fend and of being stared at by the rude eyes of the vulgar.

Such are the causes which have moved the minister to try to secure some quiet suburban home, around whose grounds he can erect a high wall, behind which his wife can take a garden walk and catch a glimpse of the blessed sky. He is having an exceedingly difficult time of it, however, as people who have houses to lease are averse to high walls being built around them. It will be fortunate for Ali Ferrouh Bey if the sultan does not hear of his quandary and order him to return the madame to her comfortable and secluded home in Stamboul.

Fruit for Brain Power.

According to a recent health report, blanched almonds give the brain the muscle food, and the man who wishes to keep his mental power up would do well to begin on it in his daily bill of fare. Juicy fruits develop more or less the higher nerve or brain, and are eaten by all men whose living depends on their clearheadedness. Apples supply the brain with phosphorus and is a proof against nervousness, but are not muscle feeding. At the same time it has been proved that fruits do not have the same effect on everybody. Some people have never been able to eat apples without suffering from that kind of indigestion; to others strawberries are like poison.

Wonderful German Enterprise.

German is the business language of the Balkans. Russian diplomacy complains that Constantinople is becoming as German as Berlin. Asia Minor is slowly being converted into a German colony; and when the Bagdad railway will carry the same influence 2,000 miles onward to the Persian gulf, placing the greatest military power of the world upon the most direct of all roads to India. Even the old English scheme of a Euphrates railway is at last in German hands.

Five Men to Take Out.

FIRST BAPTISTS ARE PROSPEROUS.

Annual Meeting of the Society Held in the Church March 28th.

OVER 400 IN THE SCHOOL.

TOTAL MEMBERSHIP OF THE CHURCH IS NOW 847.

Financial Reports From the Various Societies Show That Large Sums of Money Have Been Put to Most Worthy Uses.

The annual meeting of the First Baptist church was held March 28th in the Sunday-school room. Rev. Dr. D. J. Yerkes, pastor, presided, and there was a large attendance of the members to hear the encouraging reports read from the various departments of the church.

O. B. Leonard, the church clerk, was present and read some of the reports, the first of which was that of the beneficence committee. This showed the receipts to be $2,036.47, and a balance of $6.86 on hand. Out of these receipts there was the appropriation for foreign missions. The Ladies' Aid Society reported receipts to the amount of $113.01, and a balance of $34.01. The church contributed $304 to the Home for the Aged at Roseville last year, which goes toward the support of two of its members now in the home.

Superintendent George H. Batchelor presented the report for the Sunday school. This showed a total membership of over 400, with an average attendance in main school of 119; intermediate 61, and primary 40. The report of Frank Jones, treasurer, showed the receipts to be $1,374.36 with a balance of $408 99.

Miss Velma Oakley reported for the Christian Endeavor Society. During the year eight associate and four honorary members were added. The total membership is 113.

L. W. Bandolph, superintendent of the East Third Street mission, presented one of the most encouraging reports, showing that over $1,000 had been raised during the year, thus enabling the members to clear a debt of $750 on the chapel. There is a membership of 125 in the Sunday school with an average attendance of 80. A complete library of 300 volumes is also established. It is estimated that $350 is needed for the coming year for current expenses.

Superintendent M. O. Dobbins, of the Mt. Olive Baptist church Sunday school, presented a verbal report showing that there had been thirty-two conversions during the year.

For the Woman's Home Missionary Society G. H. Batchelor presented the report for Mrs. Batchelor, who could not be present. It showed the receipts to be $413 51, and a balance of $351 12 The reports of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society and the Young Ladies' Missionary Society were presented by Miss Ida Yerkes and Miss Edith Dubois.

R. W. Barnes, for the Temple Builders, presented a report showing the receipts to be $144.72, and the disbursements $90 22. In the report of the poor committee it was shown that about $350 had been used during the year.

Mr. Leonard, the clerk, gave a review of the membership of the church. It shows that during the year five persons were received by letter from other churches and twenty-three on confession of faith. There were fifteen dismissed to join other Baptist churches elsewhere, and there have occurred fifteen deaths, leaving the total membership at present just two more than it was one year ago, which is 847.

LITERARY.

In sureness and variety of attraction, it would be hard to surpass McClure's Magazine for April. The account of the interior of China, especially with reference to its rich promises as a market for America, written by W. B. Parsons, chief engineer of the American-China Development Company, from observations made on his own journeys, and illustrated by fully fifty photographs taken by him; the account of Professor Huxley's life in London between his twenty-sixth and thirtieth year, when he was having a terrific struggle to maintain himself by purely scientific work, with its self revealing passages from his unpublished correspondence and its new portrait of him; and the account of the Russian ship Ermack, the marvelous new ice-breaker that gives promise of being able to cut a passage for herself to the Pole—these are all, in their several ways, articles of the strongest interest and the highest value.

Presented With a Watch Charm.

At the meeting of Franklin Council, No. 41, Jr. O. U. A. M., last Thursday, John V. Beekman was presented with a handsome watch charm as a token of esteem for faithful services rendered as warden for several years. E. Bert N. Clark made the presentation with a few happy remarks.

GEM OF THE PACIFIC.

That Is What Our New Samoan Island Has Been Called.

Government Is Now Building a Wharf and Coal Sheds at Pango Pango —The Resources and Inhabitants of Tutuila.

Pango Pango harbor on this island of Tutuila, one of the Samoan group, is a possession of great value to a power like the United States with world-wide commerce and increasing interests and responsibilities in diversified. Though surpassed in extent by some of the harbors of Australia and China, there is not one whose advantages are greater and where the safety of a fleet from storms or attack is so assured or so easily provided for. The island itself is volcanic and the harbor originally a crater. The dimensions of Tutuila is about 13 miles in extreme length and is one vast range of mountains, some of them 1,500 feet high.

The harbor is an ideal one with a narrow and deep entrance about one-third of a mile in width. Its dimensions are one by one-fourth miles, and throughout its entire extent a depth of 40 fathoms can be found. It is now rounded by high hills and the most violent storms of that latitude do not affect it.

The United States intrusted to a San Francisco firm the construction of a wharf 200 feet in length with a face of 400 feet, to be built of steel, which is now under way and will be completed in September. In addition coal sheds of corrugated steel capable of storing 6,000 tons are being erected and will be completed at the same time. The work is making rapid progress.

The inhabitants of Samoa are said to be delighted at the prospect of becoming attached to the United States. The more intelligent among them realizing the advantages of being protected by a powerful nation. They are all naturally Christians, though not all of one sect. Most of them follow the English missionaries, though a few are Catholics. A good many heathen superstitions and customs survive. The women are the most chaste class in the world, though their marriage customs seem to more civilized nations somewhat lax. The marriage relation endures only so long as mutually agreeable, when a separation is at once granted. Several of the workmen who are constructing the wharves have formed alliances with the natives, who make good wives and are extremely proud of their white husbands. They are industrious and make good housekeepers. There are many chiefs among the natives and they are accorded certain privileges and great deference, but the paramount chief over all is Mounga, a magnificent specimen of physical strength, who stands six feet two inches in his bare feet. His wife is considered a fair type of an island beauty.

The island is productive and yields ample supplies of bread fruit, taro and cocoanut. Several of the world's commercial articles of food consumption. The waters also abound in fish, and the natives are very expert in catching them.

Besides the natives raise quantities of pigs and fowls, which they sell to passing vessels. The community is a happy one, and quarrels are infrequent. The climate is very warm and enervating, though the workmen employed at the wharf-building enjoy excellent health.

The distance from Apia to Pango Pango is 82 miles, though the two islands are only separated by a narrow strait.

Educated in Print Shops.

It is interesting to note the number of eminent men of the present day whose education began in a printing office. William Dean Howells learned the trade in Hamilton, O.; Amos J. Cummins has set type in nearly every state of the union; Congressman Joseph V. Brigham, editor of the Fort Wayne (Ind.) Daily News; Richard Watson Gilder, the poet-editor of the Century Magazine, once set type and did the press work on the St. Thomas Register at Flushing, L. I.; William P. Hepburn, of Iowa, used to be a compositor, and a fast and accurate one. So were Charles B. Landis, of Indiana; William H. Hinrichsen, of Illinois; George D. Perkins, of Iowa, and a host of other prominent men in the country.

WED AT HOPE CHAPEL.

MARRIAGE OF MISS HACKETT TO JAMES D. BROWN MARCH 28TH.

After Pretty Ceremony in Church, Few Relatives and Friends Gathered at New Home on One Flat.

Hope chapel was crowded Wednesday with the friends of the young couple who plighted their troth. The bride was Miss Elizabeth Hackett and the groom was James D. Brown, both of this city and members of Hope chapel. The ceremony took place at 7:30 o'clock and was performed by Rev. G. Kennedy Newell, pastor of the chapel.

Previous to the service the guests were seated by the ushers, John C. and Alex. Muir. Owing to the fact that the young couple are popular in the chapel and have a host of other friends as well there were many who wished to witness the ceremony. The floral decorations were simple but pretty.

The bride was becomingly gowned and was attended by a single bridesmaid, Miss Annie Clark. The best man was Thomas F. Brown, the brother of the groom.

After the service the couple were driven to their home, 308 Lee place, where they will reside hereafter. A few relatives and intimate friends were received there and all partook of a collation.

The groom is an employe at the Pont Machine Tool Works and stands high in the esteem of his employers.

PASTOR'S BIRTHDAY.

Mt. Olive Baptist Church People Tendered a Reception to Rev. E. E. Jackson.

Rev. E. E. Jackson, pastor of the Mt. Olive Baptist church, has reason today to be proud of his popularity which was demonstrated Thursday on the occasion of the celebration of his birthday. Many of the members of his congregation were present to congratulate him on the good work he has been doing. A feature of the entertainment provided was the singing of "Black Hattie" who was received with liberal applause. Prof. J. H. Hamlin also sang two base solos. Remarks were made by Nathan J. Pollard and Trustee John Scott in which they extolled the Christian spirit of the pastor and the excellent success he has had in building up the church. After the executed a reception committee consisting Pastor Jackson by the following committee of ladies: Mrs. F. Gordon, chairmes; Mrs. R. Yetman, Mrs. Lulu Dempey, Mrs. R. W. Fields, Mrs. H. Kingslow, Mrs. T. J. Banks, Mrs. Martha Yetman, Mrs. J. W. Reed, Mrs. Lulu Reed. The company was seated around a long table at the head of which presided Pastor Jackson, surrounded by his deacons and trustees. Deacon Albert Wilson invoked the divine blessing before the festivities began. In the course of the table rested an immense bouquet, sent from Philadelphia by Miss Addie Ragsdale, one of the pastor's dear friends. From New York, Philadelphia and Connecticut were received envelopes containing various sums of money, an amount sufficient to gladden the heart of the beloved pastor.

"Black Hattie" has made arrangements to afford the members of Pastor Jackson's church another opportunity to hear her sing Easter Sunday evening.

END OF THE STAR COURSE

Clever Entertainment by Mozart Comedy Quartette in Y. M. C. A. Hall Thursday.

The superb singing of the Mozart Comedy Quartette and the handsome pictures shown by means of the Edison projectoscope at the Y. M. C. A. auditorium Thursday gave the best of satisfaction to a fair-sized audience. This was an extra event in the Star Course of the local association. It is safe to say that the entertainment was equal in many respects to those previously given. The voices of the quartette, Messrs. Thomsen, Henschel, Bennett and Oetzi, blended finely, and their volume filled the cosy hall with a melody that was pleasing to the ear. The bass solos of Mr. Oetzi, who rendered in excellent voice "Asleep in the Deep" and the "Holy City," were features of the musical portion of the programme much appreciated by the audience. Many of the moving pictures were very good, some interesting and some very amusing, particularly the humorous scenes of "Eating Dinner Under Difficulties" and the "Trip to the Moon, or the "Astronomer's Dream." One of the best of the pictures of recent events was the Dewey parade. Prof. Bennett's musical specialties on the crystal and Swiss chimes were also well received and not the least of the excellent features provided.

Attending Librarian Conference.

Miss Emma Adams, librarian at the Public Library; Miss Thiers, of East Second street and Miss Adele Kirby, of Grandview avenue, have been attending the annual meeting of the Library Association at Washington, a two days' session. While at the Capitol they stopped at Willard's Hotel. Mrs. Green and J. R. Green, of Westfield, were also in attendance.

CITIZENS' LEAGUE FULL OF FIGHT.

Scotch Plains Reformers Issue a Letter Defining Their Present Attitude.

TO OPPOSE ALL LICENSES

SIGNERS OF APPLICANTS WILL BE CALLED IN COURT.

In Order to Avoid Such a Result Ordeal the League Gives Notice of the Action That It Proposes to Take.

After remaining in the background for the last few months, the Citizens' League, headed by the aggressive Rev. Gideon M. Shott, pastor of the Baptist church, has again come to the front and announces it determination to oppose the granting of licenses for barrooms in Scotch Plains, Fanwood or vicinity. The first gun in renewing the campaign against the barrooms was fired Thursday when the following letter was sent to the freeholders of Fanwood township:

You are already aware of some of the work of the League in the suppression of the sale of intoxicating liquor. It is absolutely true that if Fanwood is to be free from the curse of rum sell, now in the liquor business in this community would be obliged to retire from it.

The influence of Sunday drinking is infamous to the good name, health and morals of the community. Law-abiding men seeking homes for their families will not purchase property where they and their families will be subjected to the annoyance of drunken men who come here from other towns to drink. We trust that you will not sign an application for license and thus enable these dealers to break the law and debauch our people.

We are persuaded that the better class of our citizens are made convinced, and thoughtless victims by the drink class, who are not only for the money they can make, but who do not care for the interests of the community, and only seek some place to gratify their appetites.

Many who sign license applications are non-residents, and by so doing injure those of us who live and own property here. For these and many other well known reasons, we ask you not to have men and your children not to sign any application for a license to sell intoxication liquor at any place in or near Scotch Plains or Fanwood. The future of children who have purchased property here and are earning their living in lawful and honorable callings and who have been the victims of the saloon, and for whom we have the rule of men in both body and soul, have come to a place where they will avail themselves of every agency of the law that it is possible to secure for the protection of the community. We make an earnest and righteous request that you will not sign any of these applications.

In order that our word has gone we have secured evidence and instruments for Sunday as long, and we have many witnesses ready to prove beyond question that this law has been systematically violated. We have no prohibition and then the applicant sells on Sunday, you deliberately assist in the breaking of the law. We therefore insist that you are morally responsible for the sale and debauchery and other objectionable features of a business which could not exist without your signatures.

If however possible, we shall require the signatures of those who sign applications to come to prove the facts to which they swear in the application, and if the applicant sells even then the League will.

Not wishing to put anyone to this severe ordeal, we kindly notify you beforehand so that there may be no mistake understanding.

We are in behalf of the church, morality, virtue and hapiness we beg you not to sign, and thus involve the helpless victims may more.

Respectfully,
Executive Committee of the Citizens' League of Fanwood Town ship and Borough.

PATROLMAN SHOT AT.

Officer Saffron a Target for a Man Who Was Driving Fast Last Thursday.

Patrolman Saffron was under fire Thursday. He wasn't hurt, however and his unknown assailant escaped. Saffron is on duty at night in the extreme western end of the city. He was patroling West Front street near the Eight Row Thursday at 9:30 p. m. when he heard a horse and buggy approaching from the direction of Plainfield. The horse was on the gallop.

The officer stepped out into the street to stop it and save the trouble. The buggy went whirling by, and as it passed a man leaned out of the vehicle, pointed a revolver at the officer and fired. The bullet flew wide of its mark.

In the darkness Saffron was unable to see the man's face. He was accompanied by a small boy. It may have been that he did not see that Saffron was an officer and thought it an attempt at holdup. Saffron believes that the assailant was intoxicated and did not realize what he was doing.

MARRIED TWENTY YEARS.

Pleasant Anniversary Celebrated by Mr. and Mrs. A. D. Pope.

Mr. and Mrs. A. D. Pope, of Dorr street, celebrated the twentieth anniversary of their marriage Thursday in a pleasant manner. There were about forty guests present from Newark, Plainfield, Somerville, and other places nearby. Music for dancing, which was the feature, was furnished by the Ladies' Orchestra. During the evening several guests gave a cake walk, and the successful contestants were Miss Mamie Kohler and George Pope. Mr. and Mrs. Pope received a handsome collection of presents.

Among those present were many that attended Mr. and Mrs. Pope's wedding twenty years ago in the M. E. church, Dunellen, where Mrs. Pope was the organist for fourteen years.

DR. SCHENCK AGAINST PORTO RICAN TARIFF

Vigorous and Earnest Words Heard From Trinity Church Pulpit.

PERVERSIONS OF JUSTICE.

MANY CIVIL WRONGS WERE TOUCHED UPON.

Deprecated the Use of a Political "Pull" in Court and Scored the Trust Business in New Jersey.

Those who had the pleasure of listening to Rev Cornelius Schenck, Ph. D., pastor of the Trinity Reformed church, last Sunday, were well repaid. The earnestness of Dr. Schenck and the style in which he handled a subject of much interest and of vast importance to all citizens, held the close attention of the congregation.

Dr. Schenck's theme was "Some Modern Perversions of Justice." He chose the words of his text from Ecclesiastes 5:8.

The speaker began his discourse by the statement that he believed the poor to be greatly oppressed by reason of the unequal taxation that is forced upon them. The people as a whole were taxed too much and the time was approaching when they will rise in their indignation and resent this unjust taxation, even to the extent, as in olden times, of causing blood to flow. Dr. Schenck said he believed the plan of assessment as now in vogue was altogether radically wrong and manifestly unfair. He said he did not have reference to Plainfield. The Assessors of this city he considered did their duty in an impartial manner and he had heard no complaint.

In this connection Dr. Schenck took occasion to refer to the poll tax and the fact that there were 81,700 of uncollected poll taxes that were due the city from a class of men who evidently had either neglected or evaded the payment of the same. Out of 3,000 voters, he said, but about 1,300 had paid their poll tax. He believed it might be a good idea to publish the list of delinquents, thereby letting the citizens know just who are the men who have not the manliness to come forward and show their appreciation of citizenship by paying up.

Dr. Schenck also referred to the perverseness of justice as is noticeable in certain courts of the State. Particularly was that true he said with regard to the granting of liquor licenses. The ward heeler had often too much influence with the magistrates of courts and frequently nine men out of twelve who were arrested received but a reprimand while but three went to jail, though possibly all deserved severe punishment.

With regard to the great monopolies and trusts Dr. Schenck had considerable to say that was interesting. He referred to the recent act of the Standard Oil Co., which had been able to declare a dividend of more than twenty-seven millions of dollars, all brought about by the increase of kerosene oil. The steel trust, the lumber trust, and the newspaper trust also come in for a share of the speaker's attention. He said that New Jersey was the home of trusts that was working great injustice to the people of this State. Syndicates that were refused recognition in the State of New York had but to cross over to New Jersey to become incorporated and were then in a position to prey upon the people. This he considered one of the great injustices of modern times, and should be checked at once.

In closing Dr. Schenck referred to the Porto Rican troubles and the wrong being done those people by imposing a tax upon them. All goods to that country ought of a right to be free of duty. He said he spoke not as a politician but as a citizen and as a minister of God, who would certainly condemn in unmeasured terms the persecution that was being attempted by Congress toward these half-starved people.

Before bringing to a close his most interesting discourse, Dr. Schenck briefly called attention to the introduction in the Philippines of the American saloon and its baneful influence. He believed it would in time reflect to the discredit of the United States government and might eventually result in bringing about a plague among the soldiers and inhabitants that would cause a dire calamity. The fact that since the saloon had been established in the Philippines, soldiers of the United States Army had been seen upon the streets of Manila and other cities in a drunken condition, was one to cause shame to suffuse the cheek of every citizen who loved Christianity and believed in sobriety and an abstemious life.

The speaker said he considered it the duty of every citizen to do what he could to create a sentiment against the pernicious evils spoken of and thereby assist in doing away with them entirely.

FUNERAL OF MISS HOWARD.

Loyal Temperance Legion Members Attended the Obsequies.

The funeral services of Miss Amelia Howard were held Sunday afternoon from Hope chapel, and were very largely attended by the many young friends of the deceased, including the members of the Loyal Temperance Legion, of which Miss Howard was a member. The legion took part in the services by singing a favorite hymn.

Rev G. Kennedy Newell, pastor of the chapel, officiated, and he spoke tenderly and affectionately regarding the young life so suddenly called away. His words to the bereaved ones were affecting and full of consolation.

The floral tributes were many and beautiful, one set piece coming from the Loyal Temperance Legion. After all had viewed the remains, interment took place in the cemetery on Plainfield avenue.

Trip To Washington.

The Honeyman excursion to Washington will be just as pleasant as the many others given heretofore. The party will leave April 19th. A trip of three days, including everything, will cost $15 50, and a five days' trip will cost $21. The trip will include Mt. Vernon and other nearby points of interest. Anyone wishing to join the party should signify so at once by communicating with Mr. Honeyman.

BASEBALL SEASON OPEN

LEAL'S AND NORTH PLAINFIELD HIGH SCHOOL TEAMS PLAYED.

Game was Called on Account of the Sun, but Will be Continued at a Later Date.

The baseball game that was begun on the Washington avenue grounds Saturday afternoon between the Leal School and the North Plainfield High School teams will be continued at a later date. For a time both nines claimed the game, but friendly counsels prevailed and the match will be finished some other day. The trouble was with the sun. It was very dispiriting and insulting on shining directly in the eyes of the catcher and batsman. That happened in the beginning of the seventh inning. The Leal's School team was ahead, but the North Plainfielders were at bat, had two men on bases and none out. Naturally the High School boys wanted to continue. Umpire Guinee called the game, but the captains agreed to complete it later.

Both teams played fairly well but showed a need of more practice. The match opened the season for both teams and they will improve after a game or two. The batting order of the teams was as follows: Leal's School, Tilney, c.; McGee, c. f.; Dupee, p. and 3b; R Schoonmaker, 3b. and p; Stewart, l. f.; Millar, 3b.; W. Schoonmaker, r. f.; Brown, 1. b. North Plainfield High School, Overton, l. f.; Jacot, 1b.; Blatz, 2b.; Schuck, 3b.; Hamilton, s. s.; Crite, p.; McCollough, c. f.; McLoughlin, l. f.; George, c. Guinee and Thompson were the umpires and C. M. Smith and T. Pond the scorers.

The score by innings up to the time the game was as follows:

North Plainfield	1 1 0 0 1 0 2—6
Leals	0 1 2 0 4 0 —8

A PLAINFIELDER'S WORK.

Ernest A. Lowe Designed a Fine Electric Light Plant in Big New York Firm's Store.

An electric lighting and power plant has just been established in the store of James McCreery & Co., Broadway, New York, that is unsurpassed in that city at present. A young Plainfielder, Ernest A. Lowe, of 67 Fairview avenue, is the designer of this plant, which has attracted much attention in electrical and engineering circles. The installation of the plant was contracted by Lowe & Leveridge, of New York.

The plant consists of two American Ball direct current generators, directly connected to American Ball duplex compound engines, supplying lighting and power to the entire building. The lighting system comprises about 125-150 hour 1,200 candle power inclosed arc lamps and about 1,200 to 1,500 incandescent lamps, besides several motors supplying power throughout the building.

In the generating apparatus and its accessories for this installation there are many novel improvements of particular interest, not only to the enthusiast, but to the commercial man. The first departure from the beaten track is that of compound duplex engines; a radical change from all previous types of compound engines.

There are some twenty-five switches distributed on the surface of the switchboard, ranging from fifty amperes to four thousand light capacity. One of the prominent features of this installation is the extreme flexibility and convenience for the quick handling of the various circuits leading throughout the building.

CAROLINE SUYDAM DEAD.

Her Death Recalls Murder of Her Husband in New Brunswick in 1840.

In the death at New Brunswick of Mrs. Caroline E. Suydam, at the age of ninety-one years, the most notable murder in the history of Middlesex county is recalled. It was the sensation, in 1840, of her husband, Abraham Suydam, a man known from one end of New Jersey to the other.

Mrs. Suydam died from old age at her home in Clifton avenue. She leaves a daughter, Mrs. D. Randall, and a granddaughter, Mrs. Theodore S. Boorem, the wife of a prominent New Brunswick lawyer.

Abraham Suydam was president of the Farmers and Mechanics' Bank at New Brunswick. With James Lorimer Graham he was joint owner of nearly all the land west of George street. He was very wealthy, and was prominently identified with many business interests.

He was murdered while sitting in a chair by a window, and for months the community was searched for his murderer. Peter Robinson was finally arrested and convicted, and his execution was attended by scores of persons now living.

New Quartette Choir.

Ward Sweden, who will assume the position of organist at the Crescent Avenue church May 1st, will have an entirely new quartette. He, together with the music committee of the church, has selected Miss Jessie Finlay, of Syracuse; Mrs. Marian Van-Duyne, G. K. Harrison and Harry C. Lott, of New York.

INTO ARCTIC REGIONS.

Lieutenant Peary's Plans to Reach the Pole.

GREAT PREPARATIONS MADE.

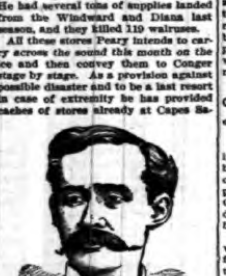
Intrepid Arctic Explorer Has Stored Supplies For His Final Dash to the North—Has Cleared a Road to Fort Conger—Will Reduce His Party.

During this month Lieutenant Peary, if all has gone well with him since he severed his connection with civilization last August by sending his depot ship Windward home, will be organizing his little band of whites and Eskimos for what his friends believe will be his last daring attempt to reach the north pole.

The sun refrains to gladden the eye of the Greenland wayfarer on Feb. 21, and it is followed by a week or two of widest obscurity, usually succeeded by a period of fine weather. Peary's intention is to utilize this period for a land march to Fort Conger, and thence, after a rest and organization of his expedition, to push on to Cape Joseph Henry and from that over the unbroken ice floe of the polar basin to the pole itself, if he can reach there, and, if not, to as high a latitude as he can make his way, says the St. John's (N. F.) correspondent of the Chicago Times-Herald.

From Cape Sabine, which is 23 miles across Smith sound from Etah, Peary has cleared a post road by means of crowbars, dynamite and hard work right to Fort Conger, following the coast line. Peary might have remained at Conger all this winter and thus have escaped all the hardships incident to a winter march over such a stretch, but by falling back to Etah he was able to resume the general direction of the preliminary work among the natives. He had several tons of supplies landed from the Windward and Diana last season, and they killed 119 walruses.

All these stores Peary intends to carry across the sound this month on the ice and then convey them to Conger stage by stage. As a provision against possible disaster and to be a last resort in case of extremity he has provided caches of stores already at Capes Sabine, Durville, Napoleon, Fraser, Shaw and Lawrence, the most prominent headlands along the route. At Fort Conger, he has the bulk of his stores, besides the remainder of the Greely outfit, and he has also a boat there and one at Durville.



LIEUTENANT PEARY.

These caches will not be disturbed by Peary if he can avoid doing so. He will depend for the maintenance of himself and party as well as of the Eskimo colony which accompanies him upon the stores they bring and upon the musk ox they can secure along the route. That these are fairly plentiful is instanced by the fact that last winter Peary and those with him secured 28. If the weather favors him, Peary should have all his supplies stored at Conger by the end of March and be able to advance in April.

From among the several families he will select 10 or 12 whose heads are strong, sturdy workmen, dog drivers and traveling experts, and with these and all the available dogs he will push on to Cape Joseph Henry, at the northern extremity of land, so far as is known, in that section of the polar circle, where he will establish an advance base, set up camps for the women and children and leave the party to their use and that of the selected party of the pole attacking expedition.

These will consist of Peary and his two assistants, Dedrick and Henson, and ten picked natives, each man driving a team of 8 to 12 dogs, the sledges being laden with stores for 40 to 50 days. The trip will be something like that of Nansen and Johannsen, the principle underlying it—that of reaching the pole by successive relays—the same, though the Norwegians' experience has enabled Peary to improve upon their plans.

On leaving the camp at Cape Joseph Henry all in the party will begin to eat off one sledge, the contents of the others being kept untouched. When that is exhausted, all the best dogs in the team will be taken from it and distributed among the other relays, and the Eskimos themselves, each man driving with enough stores to carry him there and a couple of the poorest dogs to haul his empty sledge, and so on until three sledges, with the very best dogs in the whole pack, remain, any of the animals which weaken being killed and their comrades fed with the flesh.

Having advanced, as he hopes, some hundreds of miles by this time and sent home his Eskimos, Peary will divide all the remaining stores among the three sledges, and the three Americans will then grapple with the final stage of the journey, that of making a record for the "farthest north" even if unfortunately brought to be unable to reach the pole. From Cape Joseph Henry to the pole is about 500 miles.

GOOD USE FOR TREES.

Many of Them Will Be Planted In the Conemaugh Valley.

The Johnstown flood of May 31, 1889, will probably soon be recalled to the public by an attempt to reforest a large portion of the Conemaugh watershed to prevent further damage from freshets, says the Washington correspondent of the Chicago Inter Ocean. The Johnstown Water company, which controls 5,000 acres of mountain land, has asked the division of forestry to devise a plan by which the area can be covered with timber and the too rapid run off of the rainfall prevented.

The region is peculiarly liable to freshets, owing to its geological character and the removal of its timber. The now historic catastrophe, which swept away $10,000,000 in property and half as many lives as the battle of Gettysburg, was but an exaggerated instance of many similar floods. This tendency has been increased by logging off the timber and clearing numerous farms, so that the rainfall flows quickly from the surface, causing high water at one time and the drying up of springs later.

The Johnstown Water company has bought up many of these farms and torn down their buildings and now wishes to expedite their return to the forest. The tract is in a subalpine region, much broken, with valleys averaging 250 feet in depth. The timber consists of hemlock, oak, locust and ash, with some beech and poplar. The openings are from 20 to 50 acres.

As soon as the weather permits J. W. Toumey, superintendent of tree planting, and another working plan expert of the division of forestry will examine the region and decide on a plan of reforestation. In this decision "no planting will be required. An attempt will probably be made to increase the stand over the whole area by skillfully assisting natural reproduction. Protection from fire and cattle will also be required. The expense will be shared by the government and the water company, the former furnishing the expert work and possibly some of the material for planting.

OLD GLORY IN PHILIPPINES.

Gift of Flags From a Grand Army Post Greatly Appreciated.

The flags for the schools of the Philippine Islands which were forwarded by Lafayette post, No. 140, department of New York, Grand Army of the Republic, in November last to the care of General Otis for distribution under orders from the war department have been heard from.

It was in the line of the patriotic work of this active post that these flags were sent and, in connection with the 600 bunting flags, 4 by 6, taken to Porto Rico by Commander Allan C. Bakewell and the 100 sent to Hawaii more recently, complete the outfit for all the schools of the three colonial possessions recently acquired by the United States.

Two hundred of these bunting flags, together with an equal number of silk flags for the salutation exercises of the schools, sent to the Philippines to be distributed by Colonel J. W. French of the Twenty-second infantry, a member of Lafayette post on duty at Candaba, Luzon, have been acknowledged by George P. Anderson, superintendent of public instruction at Manila, who says in a letter dated Jan. 23: "I desire to extend the thanks of the teachers, pupils and myself of this city for the flags received through your benevolence. I can state that for the rest of the islands wherever the flags are placed there will be grateful Americans. As for the native people, they may not at present appreciate the great kindness of your post, but in a few years, with better and gain their confidence more fully and understand each other's speech better they shall learn to appreciate this gift as we do.

"The school work is progressing as well as might be expected under the circumstances, and as I make my daily rounds I shall enjoy saluting Old Glory as I enter the school buildings and feel my work to be now in the full-est sense American."

EXHIBITION OF PICTURES.

A Scheme to Have a Yearly Display at Washington.

A plan, already well formulated, to have a yearly display of pictures in Washington on the lines of the Paris salon is now under consideration, and the first exhibit will begin the 15th of April at the Corcoran Art gallery, says the Philadelphia Public Ledger. The movement is the outgrowth of a number of leading society women, prominent among whom are Mrs. F. D. McGuire and Mrs. John B. Henderson. Only works of Washington artists will be admitted this year, but it is hoped that in another year the exhibit will include all American artists. In addition to pictures, there will be miniatures on ivory, of which Washington can boast an unusually large and fine collection.

Twelve competent persons will pass judgment upon the pictures before they are admitted, and every effort will be made to keep the standard up to the highest degree of excellence. The directors of the Corcoran Art gallery are greatly interested in the movement and already have taken action upon the matter. This step will go far toward proving that the national capital is alive to the necessity of developing its artistic side, which has been thought by many to be less advanced than in other large American cities. That it will be a success if properly managed is almost certain, and the plan is meeting with much interest on all sides and great enthusiasm among artists, to whom it will be an especial boon.

AMERICAN GRAIN TRADE

How It Has Developed Since Colonial Times.

FLOURING INDUSTRY'S GROWTH.

Expectation is This Branch Growing Despite Adverse Foreign Legislation—United States the World's Chief Wheat Producing Country. Effect of Railways on the Grain Carrying Business.

"The Grain Trade of the United States" is the title of a monograph just published by the treasury bureau of statistics. It is the outcome of a series of studies upon the production and transportation of the great staples and upon the internal commerce of the country. The development of the grain production and trade is traced from the early times in the opening up of the Mississippi route by the purchase of Louisiana, when the shallow barges and later the steamboats descended the Mississippi and New Orleans shipped grain to New York and Boston.

After the completion of the Erie canal in 1825 and the settling of the Lake Michigan territory the great bulk of the western grain traffic moved eastward over the lakes and the canal, and New York became the great grain shipping port of the country. The discussion shows how from Chicago a network of railways radiated to all points and acted as tributaries to the lake and later how the unified and amalgamated railways competed with the lakes for the east bound traffic.

The traffic in corn and flour was diverted from the lakes to the railroads, and while the lakes regained part of this lost traffic later the Erie canal was unable to compete with the railroads from Buffalo, and grain which formerly reached tidewater at New York is now largely diverted to Philadelphia, Baltimore and more southerly ports. The struggles of the railroads and of the ports among themselves are described, and a history of the existing differentials is given.

The monograph also represents what appear as the two most recent developments of the grain trade of the United States. Firstly, the partial diversion of the wheat and flour trade from Lake Michigan to Lake Superior ports and the rise of a great milling industry at Minneapolis and Duluth-Superior; secondly, the increased movement of grain, and notably of corn, to the gulf ports, partly by river, to a greater extent by rail from St. Louis and nearby points and to an ever growing extent by direct rail routes from cities in the southwestern corn belt.

The report, which is quite comprehensive, contains a series of tables dealing with the rise and development of the grain trade at various collecting and distributing points, the efforts of the several railroads to control and effect the ever increasing transportation of grain and the distribution of the traffic among the various routes. A great amount of information is furnished for the year 1891, and covers freight rates, about the production, distribution and consumption of cereals, and a special paragraph is devoted to the subject of the foreign market for American grain. The monograph includes a number of tables regarding acreage, production, imports, exports, consumption, prices and rates of duty for wheat in all the principal countries of the earth, as well as a map showing in general outline the present wheat area of the world.

The statistics contained in this report throw light upon the present grain and more especially wheat, situation of the United States. They show that the exportation of grain is increasing with great rapidity, and that both the production and exportation of corn are assuming a greater volume and that a constantly growing portion of our wheat is exported in the form of flour. During the last 12 years the amount of grain produced has increased from 968,-000,000 to 1,924,000,000 bushels, an increase of 122 per cent, while the exports of this cereal increased from 16,-000,000 to 177,000,000 bushels, or over 1,000 per cent. During the same period our production of wheat increased from 152,000,000 to 675,000,000 bushels, a gain of 344 per cent, while our exports increased from 12,000,000 to 222,000,-000 bushels, or almost eighteenfold, and the ratio of exports to grain increased at a still more rapid rate.

From this report it also appears that since 1875, and notably since 1880, an ever increasing proportion of our wheat exports has been in the form of flour and that in this important branch of manufacture Americans have been able to compete with European millers even in the face of adverse legislation abroad. In 1880 only 15.68 per cent of our wheat was exported in the form of the manufactured article, but in 1891 in 1889 the proportion was 37.39 per cent and in 1896 52.68 per cent. In 1876 less than 4,000,000 barrels of flour and in 1890 over 18,000,000 barrels were exported from this country.

The year 1891 found the United States to be easily the first wheat producing country of the world, our production amounting to 675,000,000 bushels, or nearly one-fourth (23.4 per cent) of that of the whole world. Russia (both European and Asiatic) is second with 17.3 per cent, then France with 12.9 per cent, British India with 8.4 per cent and Austria-Hungary with 5.9 per cent. Our precedence in wheat production is largely due to our immense tracts of available fertile land, our admirable transportation facilities, the remarkable system of handling the grain, both physically and commercially, and the exceedingly low freight rates which obtain on our railroads and lakes.

SUPERVISOR MIDDLE CLEARED.

John Bodine Re-Elected Over the Head of the Late J. N Voorhees Who Stood For.

The New Brunswick Home News says that the muddle over the appointment of a road supervisor for the road from that city to Millstone has been settled. Road Commissioner Budd appointing John Stothoff, a well-known farmer, as a supervisor. Somerset county will macadamize this road. Commissioner Budd first appointed Charles Welsh, of East Millstone, as the supervisor. Pressure was brought to bear upon him by Senator Reed and others and he revoked the appointment of Mr. Welsh and gave it to J. Newton Voorhees, of Middlebush.

Mr. Voorhees died soon afterwards. Messrs. Welsh and Voorhees had been the only contestants for the position, and it looked for a time as if Mr. Welsh would get the office after all, but Mr. Reed's opposition to him was so strong that the Commissioner would not appoint him, naming Mr. Stothoff in his place.

This road is an important one, connecting New Brunswick with Middlebush and Millstone, and running through a beautiful stretch of country.

A Quiet Wedding.

A very quiet wedding took place Thursday evening of last week when Mrs. Elizabeth Tuxson, of 317 Park avenue, and Tobias Fishler, a ship carpenter of Trenton, were married by Rev Cornelius Schenck, Ph. D., at his home, West End Park. The bride and groom took up their residence at Trenton the next day. Mrs. Tuxson made her home for some time past with Mr. and Mrs. Alex. Manning, and she is a most estimable person. She is a member of Trinity Reformed church. Mr. Fishler is well-known at Trenton, where he has an excellent business, and is highly esteemed by his fellow-townsmen.

His Farewell Sermon.

Rev. William C. O'Donnell preached his last sermon at the Monroe Avenue M. E. church Sunday before his departure for his new charge at Flemington. He reviewed the five years he had spent in Plainfield and thanked the congregation for the loyal support they had given him during that period. At the close of the service Rev. Mr. and Mrs. O'Donnell were surrounded by the members of the congregation to say good-bye.

Barn Burned Near Dunellen.

A small barn on the Batchelder place near "the tanks" southwest of Dunellen, was destroyed by fire about 10 o'clock Sunday night. The building was entirely destroyed together with its contents. The place had been leased by Lawrence Reedy. The barn is thought to have caught fire from a brush fire in the woods near by. The loss will be about $600. The Dunellen fire department did not turn out owing to the great distance and cross lots.

Burning Brush.

The burning of a large quantity of brush back of the house on Orchard place in the borough formerly occupied by Edward White, caused a still alarm to be sent in Sunday about 5 o'clock. The department responded promptly and soon extinguished the fire. It was necessary to lay about fifteen lengths of hose from the nearest hydrant.

At the Military Show.

Among the many visitors at the Military Tournament at Madison Square Garden, New York, Saturday evening, were Thomas J. Walsh and John King, of this city, both formerly of the Fifth U. S. Artillery. The evening was spent very pleasantly renewing old acquaintances made in Washington, D. C., and Ft. Myer, Va.

Railway Teacher Retires.

Miss Ella Hazard, who has been a teacher in Railway's public schools for over fifty years, has been retired on a pension of $300 per year, from the State Retirement Fund. Miss Hazard has been on half-pay for two years, acting as substitute teacher. She will send in her resignation as such in a short time.

To Extend a Street.

An application is to be made this spring to open Elmer street, Westfield, through from Sussex street to the new street on the Ripley farm, where the Westfield and Elizabeth Street Railway branches off from Westfield to Rahway.

Kane Wants Damages.

James Kane, who fell over a hill board of the Plainfield Bill Posting Company and, as alleged, hurt himself, has engaged Lawyer Hetfield to secure damages for him. It is understood that the case has been offered $250 to settle the claim, but refuses to accept it. William Law, of the Employer's Liability Assurance Company, represents the Bill Posting Company.

Big Pay Roll.

The pay-roll of the Taylor Iron and Steel Company at High Bridge, now average more than $6,000 per week.

THE CONSTITUTIONALIST.

VOL. XXXIII. PLAINFIELD, N. J., THURSDAY, APRIL 12, 1900. NO. 15.

"Support the Constitution, Which is the Cement of the Union, as Well in Its Limitations as in Its Authorities."—Madison.

REPUBLICANS WHO MAY BE DELEGATES.

It is Expected That There Will Be But Little Contest For District Honors.

WHAT WILL MR. REED DO?

SOME THINK HE WILL LET THOMPSON BE A DELEGATE.

In The War It is Thought That the Factional Trouble in Somerset County Might Possibly Be Smoothed Over.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Trenton, April 11.—There is not much of a contest this year among the Republicans for the selection of delegates to the National Convention, which will be held in Philadelphia, June 19th. A Republican State Convention will be held in this city the 19th of the present month for the purpose of choosing four delegates-at-large and two for each Congressional district, making twenty altogether. The big four, who will head the list, will probably be General Sewell, Senator Kean, Franklin Murphy and Barker Gummere. That seems to be the slate and doubtless it will be ratified without opposition.

It is hard telling who the district delegates will be. Candidates are scarce and so far there are no contests. The cause of this indifference must be attributed to the fact that it is conceded all around that President McKinley will be renominated and consequently the National Convention will be a very tame affair. And besides the place for holding the convention being so near at home makes the attendance upon it on the part of the New Jersey delegates devoid of the interest and excitement of travel. Former Republican conventions, those for the last 30 years or so, were all held in western cities, and as in most all of them there were exciting contests for the Presidential nomination it was considered a great honor to be a delegate. It is an honor yet, but then not so much of an honor in the opinion of the politicians as if it was conferred after an exciting contest.

The men mentioned for delegates in the First district are Assemblyman Bradley, of Camden, and John M. Moon, of Clayton. In the Second district it looks as if State Comptroller Hancock and Samuel W. Beldon, of Bordentown, will be named. In the Third district Congressman Howell is mentioned as well as Senator Reed and former Senator Thompson. An effort is being made to adjust the quarrels of the Republican factions in Somerset county, and it is suggested that a good way to begin that work would be to reach an agreement by which Mr. Thompson should go as a delegate to the Philadelphia convention. Senator Reed, of course, is ambitious, but then for the sake of peace in his party he may make the concession by which his old rival for leadership may receive the honor which is desired for him by his friends. Then, perhaps, the Republicans of Somerset could settle themselves down as a happy family.

The Fourth district delegates will probably be Senator Pitney and John I. Blair Rider. Congressman Stewart and Sheffield Phelps would like to represent the Fifth, and Congressman Parker and Col. Harry E. Potter the Sixth. The Seventh district, Col. Samuel Dickinson's own, he would like to have to himself, and for a colleague, Fravel Magee. The Eighth district will probably choose Congressman Fowler and Chas. N. Fisk, of Plainfield. It is noticeable that the New Jersey delegation will probably be made up in part of the two United States Senators and five Congressmen, all of whom are among the leading Republicans of the State.

A Dangerous Crossing.

Rahway Borough Council considers that the crossing for the Westfield and Elizabeth Street Railway over the Lehigh Valley tracks at Aldene is dangerous to horses and carriages, the iron being laid in such a manner that horses are liable to get their hoofs caught between the rails and guards, and carriage wheels liable to get jammed. Several members of the Council visited the crossing and freely expressed their disapproval. The crossing was made according to plans made by the engineers of the railroad, and under their supervision, and was put down by the railroad men, the company not allowing the street railway people to have anything to do with it.

—Mrs. L. J. Denton, the West Front street florist, was in charge of the decorations at the Stelle Sutphen wedding Tuesday afternoon.

A QUIET HOME WEDDING.

NUPTIALS OF MISS MAY STELLE AND D. K. SUTPHEN CELEBRATED.

Ceremony Performed at the Home of the Bride's Parents—Some Presents Witnessed by Company.

A quiet home wedding was that of last Tuesday, when Miss May Stelle, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John P. Stelle, of 426 Madison avenue, and David K. Sutphen, eldest son of Mr. Fannie A. Sutphen and the late Dr. Sutphen, of West Second street, were united in marriage in the presence of the relatives of the couple and their friends.

The event took place at 5:30 o'clock at the home of the bride's parents, Rev. Dr. D. J. Yerkes, pastor of the First Baptist church, officiated. The home was prettily decorated for the occasion. In the parlor the prevailing colors were green and white, and in the dining room pink and green. In the front of the parlor, where the ceremony was performed, there was a bank of flowers and palms artistically arranged, while smilax encircled the rooms and was caught up here and there with white ribbon.

The bride wore a gown of ivory satin, with chiffon Duchesse lace trimmings. She was unattended. John Sutphen, brother of the groom, was the best man. During the early part of the evening Mr. and Mrs. Sutphen left Plainfield to enjoy a honeymoon. Upon their return they will reside in this city. The groom is an employe of the Farmers' Loan and Trust Company, of New York. Mrs. Surphen is also a popular young woman very highly esteemed by a host of friends. Many valuable and useful presents were received as tokens of esteem.

There were guests present at the wedding from New York, Brooklyn, Morristown, Newark, Jersey City, Dunellen, New Market and this city, many of whom were relatives. Mr. and Mrs. Sutphen will be at home to their friends after April 15th at 426 Madison avenue.

BAPTIST AFFAIRS.

Martin I. Cooley Elected a New Member of the Board of Trustees for the First Church.

The annual parish meeting was held last Tuesday at the First Baptist church. Rev. Dr. Yerkes presided and there was a good attendance of the members of the church and congregation. The principal business was the election of two trustees, as the terms of Alex. Gilbert and Harold Serrell have expired. The election resulted in Mr. Gilbert being continued in his position, and Martin I. Cooley was elected trustee in place of Harold Serrell. The board now stands as follows: L. V. F. Randolph, S. St. John McCutchen, Alex Gilbert, T. S. Armstrong, John D. Runyon, M.I. Cooley. A meeting will be held the first of May when an organization will be effected.

In addition to the above the report of the treasurer was presented showing the church finances to be in excellent condition, and a balance was reported in the treasury. There are a few obligations to be taken care of, but these will be attended to in a short time.

THE CHANCELLORSHIP.

Chancellor McGill's Retirement and the Selection of His Successor.

Trenton, April 11—While Chancellor McGill has not yet resigned, it is probable that he will do so in a few days, and will probably never again act in court. He health is completely gone, and he may not long survive. The talk of his successor, in view of his probable resignation, has been pretty active of late. There is, of course, much ambition to hold the office, which is at the head of courts and bar of the State. Governor Voorhees will make the appointment. If Chief Justice Wm. J. McGee were younger he would undoubtedly be the man, but his health is not good, and he is too far advanced in years for the heavy duties of this office. The men toward whom attention is directed are Justices Wm. S. Gummere and Gilbert Collins, of the Supreme Court. Vice-Chancellor John R. Emery is also mentioned. Of course, a Republican would be chosen, and those named belong to that party. Lawyers say that either of those mentioned would be satisfactory from a professional point of view.

Post-Lenten Society Affairs.

The Cotillion Club will resume its activity after Easter. The next meeting of the club will be at the residence of Councilman J. B. Dumont, of East Seventh street, Friday evening of Easter week.

—For several nights past the electric light on Madison avenue, near Fifth street, has been taking a vacation.

MAYOR MACK WINS EASY IN ELIZABETH.

City Attorney Connolly, Democratic Candidate, Defeated by 1,263 Majority.

SEYMOUR WON IN NEWARK.

MIXED RESULTS IN MANY OTHER JERSEY TOWNS.

Summit, New Brunswick and Jersey City Democratic—Trenton Republican—Elizabeth City Council is Democratic.

Elizabeth, April 11.—The municipal election held here yesterday resulted in the re-election of Mayor W. A. M. Mack, Rep., by 1,263 plurality. Patrick J. Ryan, Dem., is re-elected Alderman-at-Large by about 534 majority.

Mayor Mack's plurality two years ago was 762.

The Aldermen elected are Martin Kensely, Dem., Second ward, by nearly 200 majority; George A. Ford, Dem., Fourth ward, 73 majority; Dennis F. Collins, Dem., Sixth ward, 184 majority; Harry A. Roth, Rep., Eighth ward, 11 majority; Edward S. Coyne, Rep., Tenth ward, 150 majority; Kimber C. Taylor, Rep., Twelfth ward, 18 majority. This will make the next Board of Aldermen stand, Republicans, 5; Democrats, 8.

The fight over the election of four Freeholders resulted in the Democrats electing three of them—McCandless, Bruckhacker and Gerstung. This will give the Republicans a majority of one sure on the Board, and possibly two if Freeholder Adams, who was chosen as a Citizen in Cranford, should vote with them.

Jersey City, April 11—The Democrats made almost a clean sweep at the election in Jersey City yesterday. Only one Republican Alderman was elected, Snell, in the Ninth ward, and his plurality was only fourteen. The next Board will consist of twenty-three Democrats and two Republicans. Hauck and Nolan, Democrats, were re-elected to the Street and Water Board by about 4,000 majority. The Teachers' Salary act and Freeholders' act were ratified by large majorities. The vote was light. The total was 21,435; the total registry 35,086.

Newark, April 11.—The personal popularity of Mayor James M. Seymour obtained his re-election yesterday as Mayor of Newark by a plurality of 2,663 votes. His Republican opponent, Richard C. Jenkinson, was scratched badly all over the city. For Board of Works, Winton Garrison and Joseph S. Vinson, Republicans, were victorious over Charles F. Herr and William Dimond, Democrats by an average plurality of about 1,900. The Republicans elect their Aldermen and a majority on the Board. They were also successful in the election of members of Board of Education. They get a controlling voice in the board by electing ten out of fifteen candidates.

Summit, April 11—The Democrats were successful in this city. Both wards were carried by them. Only 747 votes were cast in the city out of a registry of 1,350. In the First ward John E. Sayre, Jr., Democrat, for Council, was elected by 6 majority over John Brewer, his Republican opponent. In the Second ward Geo. W. Baldwin, Democrat, for Council, received 169 majority over E. C. Holmes, the Republican nominee. This does not change the complexion of the new Council. The new Board will stand four Republicans and three Democrats. The Democrats elected the Commissioners of Appeals, the only city ticket in the field. The Prohibitionists cast thirty votes.

Rahway, April 11—The election here was quiet and only about 60 per cent of the voters came out. The city remains Republican, and in the Board of Education the Republicans gain one member, their candidate-at-large having been elected to replace the former Democratic member-at-large.

Paterson, April 11—The municipal election here resulted in the election of four Republicans and four Democrats to the Common Council. This makes that body a tie, and is a gain of one for the Democrats. The board will stand 8 to 8. The vote was light.

Trenton, N. J., April 11.—In the municipal election the Republicans elected ten of the thirteen candidates for Councilmen. The new board will stand 19 Republicans and 7 Democrats. The last board contained 12 Democrats.

New Brunswick, April 11.—The Republicans gained one Alderman in yesterday's charter election, electing two out of six. On the city ticket, however, the Democrats elected everything. Woodbury, Democrat, was elected Alderman at-Large by 1,000 majority; Florence, Democrat, City Collector by 1,200, and Dunn, Democrat, City Assessor, without opposition.

Bayonne, April 11.—The Democrats carried Bayonne by about 1,200 majority and gave an immense majority for the new Freeholder law.

THE RULES CHANGED.

ONLY A HALF HOUR FOR THE SELECTION OF DELEGATES.

Hot in Making Nominations for Officers the Old Mixup System Will Continue in Use.

A slight modification was made to the primary rules, prepared by Roger F. Murray, at the meeting of the Republican city executive committee last Tuesday. The Murray system has been in force a year and has proved its usefulness and fairness. It was designed to prevent a "packed" primary and to give all factions an equal opportunity. The ballot box has been used and the polls of the primary kept open from 5 to 9 o'clock. The amendment to the rules reduces the time in the cases were delegates to the Congressional and State conventions are elected.

It is seldom that there is any fight over the delegates to the State and Congressional conventions. The amendment provides that at all primaries where delegates to county or city conventions are elected, the polls shall be open from 6 to 9 o'clock.

At other primaries the polls are to remain open from 6 until 6:30 o'clock. In both cases the business session is to begin at 8 o'clock.

The change in the rules will affect the Republican primaries in this city Monday evening when delegates to the Congressional and State conventions will be elected. Nominations for delegates will have to be in the hands of the ward clerks by Saturday evening to be posted for the primaries.

At the meeting last Tuesday the city committee also adopted a constitution and by-laws. Heretofore, the committee has been governed chiefly by precedent and it was deemed best to put the rulings in proper form. The sub-committee on constitution reported and the report was adopted with but little debate.

FOR BETTER STUDY.

High School Students Will Have More Advantages in Using the Public Library.

A new plan was put into operation at the Plainfield High School Tuesday whereby the pupils were given an opportunity to learn the practical help offered by the Public Library in reference work. Through the co-operation of the faculty of the High School and Miss Adams, librarian of the Public Library, the pupils will be given instruction in the way to utilize the reference helps. Yesterday the pupils of one of the higher grammar grades went to the Library for the first period in the morning and Miss Adams explained to them the best methods for using the various indexes and cyclopedias. The members of the senior class assembled at the Library this morning for similar instruction.

MONUMENT TO MRS. A. A. PHILO.

It Was Unveiled Sunday in the Oheb Shalom Cemetery.

Newark, April 11—In the Oheb Shalom Cemetery in South Orange avenue at 2:30 o'clock Sunday afternoon there was unveiled with appropriate ceremony a monument erected in memory of Mrs Rose Philo, wife of A. A. Philo, of Keyport, N. J. Mrs. Philo was Miss Rose Fleecher prior to her marriage in 1896. Her entire life had been spent in Plainfield and Newark, and in both places she had many friends and enjoyed an unusual degree of popularity. Her sudden death March 18th of last year, after a little less than a year of a particularly happy life, was a severe shock to all who knew her.

Bargain for the Borough.

The street committee from the Borough Council believe that they will be able to get a bargain on two watering wagons with which to sprinkle the streets of the borough, and the chances are that the prices quoted at the last meeting will be reduced considerably.

Lost One Finger.

James Greenhalge, aged 31 years, married, and a resident of Stebbins place, injured his hand Tuesday afternoon while at work in one of the local machine shops. This morning one finger had to be amputated at the hospital, where the man was taken for treatment.

THINGS NEEDED FOR THE "RUMMAGE SALE"

Everything of Little Value to Present Owners is Wanted for the Event.

NO MATTER IF OLD OR WORN

FIFTY VOLUNTEERS HAVE BEEN SECURED AS SALESWOMEN.

The Patrons Will Get Good Bargains and at the Same Time a Fair Profit Will be Made for the Benefit of the Hospital.

A host of young women are now making the rounds of the Plainfield residents soliciting articles for the "rummage sale," to be given for the joint benefit of the Muhlenberg Hospital and the Plainfield Relief Association. They are after everything that is of no particular value to the present owners. In particular, they want anything in furniture, china, bric-a-brac, even if somewhat broken, wearing apparel for men, women or child, although somewhat worn or old-fashioned, shoes, gloves, neckties, ribbons, hats, paper-covered novels, books, magazines, in fact they say anything will not come amiss.

This "rummage sale" is to be conducted somewhat on the same lines as the weekly sales of the Relief Association, which have proved such a success. Those in charge have been very fortunate in securing the large store on the Madison avenue side of the Jackson building. If it is not rented before that time James W. Jackson, owner of the building, has offered it free of charge. Otherwise the sale will be held in the Schepflin or Stillman buildings on West Front street. It is expected, however, that the Jackson building location will be used.

It is intended to have the sale begin on the morning of Wednesday, April 25th and continue for ten days at least and longer if necessary. The store will open in the morning at 10 o'clock and close at 6 except Saturdays and Saturdays, when it will be open in the evening as well.

A meeting of the women interested was held in the parlors of the Crescent Avenue church Monday morning when some fifty volunteers were secured for saleswomen at the sale. As many more will be chosen at a meeting of the young women to be held in the same place next Monday morning.

Nearly a week before the opening of the sale the various articles will be gathered at the store, classified and a price affixed. Special arrangements will be made to collect such articles as are not sent to the store.

By the sale it is hoped not only to benefit the organizations so needing assistance but everyone who buys, as the articles are to be sold so cheaply that every purchaser will surely get a bargain.

MONEY FOR ATHLETES.

Young Women Arranged an Entertainment to Raise Money for School Athletic Association.

The assembly hall of the Borough Public High School was well-filled last Tuesday, when a pleasing entertainment was given for the benefit of the Athletic Association of the school, to assist in purchasing uniforms and defraying expenses during the season. To Miss Sydenham and Miss Clara VanFleet is credit due for the success of the affair.

After the opening selection, consisting of instrumental music, a chorus rendered several selections. These were interspersed with a vocal trio by the Misses Katharine Dwight, Bessie Martin, Emma LaBoyteaux; vocal solos, Miss Ethel Reynolds and Miss Agnes LaBoyteaux; duet, Miss Edna MacDonald and Miss Florence Bickert, and violin solos by G. C. M. Smith, accompanied by Miss E. Vorsmeier.

Part second consisted of a festival of flowers. A number of the smaller children appeared, representing various flowers, and each one made an appropriate speech. After all had assembled on the platform the little folks danced a minuet. The various steps were gone through with a delightful grace.

The Athletic Association will realize about $65 from the entertainment.

Too Much Dust.

It is the opinion of most everyone in Plainfield, except the management of the Trolley Company, that it is about time the Board of Health took a hand regarding the great amount of dust that is permitted to fly about the streets, particularly along the line of the trolley. This thing is beyond a doubt unhealthy and the matter should be attended to.

SECTION HAND KILLED.

ITALIAN MET DEATH IN A TRAGIC MANNER THIS MORNING.

Struck on the Head by Point of Locomotive Wood of Motherwood Station Yesterday.

The pilot to the Jersey Central locomotive No. 307, attached to the Philadelphia express, No 113, due in Plainfield at 9:14 o'clock, struck and instantly killed an Italian laborer just west of the Motherwood station yesterday. The Italian was employed in the section gang, of which James Higgins is foreman.

Repairs were being made to the fourth track by the section gang this morning. Foreman Higgins had lifted one end of a rail and told one of the gang, named Luigi Climeli, to clear away a stone beneath the rail. Climeli did so and then stepped back. Higgins shouted to him to beware of the approaching train on track No. 3, but Climeli did not heed the warning. He was so close to the passenger track that the projecting pilot of the locomotive struck the back of his head. The skull was fractured and the Italian fell to the ground. He was dead when his fellow workmen reached him. The train came to a sudden stop, backed up to the scene of the accident and took the body of the unfortunate man to the baggage car and brought it to Plainfield.

Luigi Climeli, usually called Louis, has been in the employ of the railroad for two months. He was forty-five years old. He left a wife and several children in Italy. The accident occurred east of Berckman street, opposite the plant of the Hygeia Ice Company.

The body was taken to Cole's undertaking establishment later in the morning where it is held, pending the completion of arrangements for funeral and interment. Climeli boarded with a family in Netherwood since he came to this city.

WEALTHY FARMER GONE.

Henry Mellick, of Oak Tree, Died Last Evening—Lived Very Plainly Despite His Great Wealth.

Henry Mellick, who was reported to be one of the wealthiest farmers in the vicinity of Avon Park, died at his home late last evening. He was seventy years old. He has been failing slowly for a long time and it was realized that the end was close at hand. A general wearing out of his system was the cause of death.

While Mellick had wealth far beyond that of most of his neighbors, he lived very plainly and without much regard for anything except the bare necessities of life. Through his severely plain habits, he acquired the reputation of hoarding his money. He and his brother, who died several years ago, lived all alone in the old homestead which is surrounded by a farm of 100 acres. His fortune is valued at over $100,000.

Clever Musicians.

The entertainment given by the Glee and Mandolin Clubs of the Brooklyn Boys' High School in the chapel of the Crescent Avenue church last Tuesday attracted a large audience. The programme displayed the talent of the boys well and won much commendation for William Howell Edwards, who trained the clubs in such a satisfactory manner. The selections by the Mandolin Club were worthy of any of the college organizations. The players were all young, but played with a snap and unity that was very pleasing. The Glee Club did creditable work. William Dallas Campbell, concert whistler, showed much talent.

Two Years in Succession.

John Powers, the Somerset street druggist celebrated the second anniversary of his business career for himself Tuesday, and his many friends are showering him with congratulations. Since Mr. Powers started in business he has constantly and steadily won the confidence and patronage of the people. He has studied to please and at the same time has served his customers efficiently and accurately.

Easter Service to Hold Training Athletes.

The social committee of the Christian Endeavor Society of the Congregational church has planned for an outdoor outing for the members and their friends Saturday afternoon. It is the intention of the committee to have the party go awheel to Bonhamtown, two miles south of Metuchen, after trailing arbutus. The party will gather at the church at 2:30 o'clock.

Manufacturer to Visit Trinity.

At the Sunday evening Easter service in Trinity Reformed church a portion of the church will be reserved for the members of the Y. M. C. A. connected Sunday-school, who are expected to attend in a body.

Mrs. F. W. Cooley is confined to her home, 16 Duer street, by an attack of the grip.

METHODISTS OPPOSE TIME LIMIT SYSTEM.

Newark Conference Adopts Resolutions Opposing Pastorates to Five Years.

PROVOKES SHARP DEBATE.

REV. G. W. SMITH PRESIDING ELDER OF ELIZABETH DISTRICT.

Bishop Vincent's Twenty-Sixth Quadrennial Episcopal Address to Which Presiding Elders Listened.

Paterson, April 11.—There was a spontaneous outburst of enthusiasm at the close of the forty-third session of the Newark Methodist Episcopal Conference yesterday. It was a tribute accorded Bishop Vincent, the presiding officer, whose tact, eloquence and unbounded geniality were thus recognized when the time came to pass the farewell vote of thanks accorded by the assembled brethren.

Bishop Vincent, with his cabinet, had returned to announce the appointments for the year, and another disappointment was in store for the wise conclave. Interest had centered in the contest for the presiding eldership of the Newark district. Dr. Hammond, the incumbent, had served six years, and was not eligible for reappointment. Speculation in regard to those prominently mentioned had pointed to Rev. J. M. Meeker, of the Market Street church, Paterson, but a surprise was in store. Bishop Vincent naming Rev. Dr. Warren L. Hoagland, of Jersey City.

Presiding Elders John Krantz, of the Paterson district; George W. Smith, of the Elizabeth district, and J. R. Wright, of the Jersey City district, were reappointed. Rev. Dr. Hammond was assigned to a pastorate at Haverstraw, N. Y. Rev. Dr. A. H. Tuttle, of St. Luke's church, Newark, declined preferment for presiding elder, and will serve at Calvary church, East Orange. Dr. W. P. Ferguson, formerly president of the Hackettstown Institute, will officiate at St. Luke's.

The appointments for the Elizabeth district were as follows:

G. W. Smith, presiding elder.

Bound Brook, F. L. Rounds; Dunellen, S. E. Doolittle; Elizabeth, Fulton Street, J. H. Howard; Park church, G. Bloom; St. James, G. E. Wilding; Flemington, W. C. O'Donnell; High Bridge, J. I. Boswell; Metuchen, Albert Cole; Perth Amboy, S. T. Jackson; Plainfield, First church, W. C. Snodgrass; Grace, G. W. Gardner; Monroe Avenue, John McMurray; Quakertown, S. D. Decker; Rahway, First church, F. O. Mooney; Trinity, W. S. Galloway; Raritan, E. S. Jones; Roselle, R. W. Risley; Scotch Plains, C. G. Woodruff; Somerville, J. R. Bryan.

Bishop Vincent, in his farewell address, said he would always cherish memories of the conference then about to close. The Newark district had, in fact, always been associated with pleasant reminiscences. The early days of his ministry had been passed at the Newark City Mission in 1858, and later at Franklin and Dunellen, now Irvington, in 1866.

"I know many of the older men here then," added the Bishop smilingly. "They were not old men then, and they do not seem to know enough to be old men even now. It is wonderful the power and dominion of the spirit over the body. I sincerely trust that the outcome of this conference may be to profit of the church and satisfaction to the preachers."

During the morning session the resolutions petitioning the general conference to abolish the five year time limit of pastorate and to revive the present system of itinerary were again taken up and provoked another lively debate. Rev. Dr. Bryan, who had championed the movement for the annual revision, declined to accept the substitute referendum offered by Dr. Faler, requesting the general body to submit the decision to the clergy and the laity. Dr. Bryan said his own measure met the emergency, and would let the new system adjust itself naturally to the existing conditions.

Rev. Dr. Boswell protested against the substitute on the ground that there were many members of the laity who had given no thought to the subject and ought not be called upon to render the final decision.

The final vote showed a majority for the referendum amendment, but later a resolution was passed memorializing the general conference to take up the time limit question at an early stage, so that it might be given due consideration.

GUTTA-PERCHA RICHES.

A New Source of Wealth Discovered in the Philippines Intends by a German Scientist.

Rich as the Philippines were known to be, it is in one product that they promise to be of the greatest value. In a monograph just published in Germany it is shown that the Philippines are among the few places on earth in which the trees from which gutta-percha is procured will flourish. The value of this statement is not to be underrated, for two reasons: One is that gutta-percha is an indispensable material for the making of submarine cables and golf balls; the other is that the trees in Sumatra and Borneo, from which the chief supply has hitherto been drawn, are almost entirely exhausted. The cause of this destruction lies in the primitive and destructive methods which were formerly employed for gathering this valuable commodity. The natives, who never have any thought for the morrow, have ruthlessly cut down whole forests of trees, so that they might scrape the gut.a-percha, which is nothing but the sap, from inside the bark. This wholesale destruction, carried on for years, has greatly lessened the annual crop, but the discovery that these trees grow and can be successfully cultivated in the Philippines offers hope that a new mine of wealth has been found for American enterprise as soon as the islands are pacified.

The discovery of gutta-percha goes back to the year 1847, when Sir William Jackson Hooker and Dr. Ernest Werner von Siemens announced not only the discovery of this valuable product, but that it was adapted to the insulation of wires along which electric currents were to pass. When it is considered that without gutta-percha all of the progress of the last half century in drawing the ends of the earth together by the lightning's flash would have been impossible, the importance of this discovery is easily appreciated.

While the chief use of gutta-percha is, of course, for the insulating covering of electric wires, a large quantity is used for the manufacture of golf balls, for which no other material seems so well adapted. Its hardness, after having been submitted to the proper pressure, and its toughness make it the only golf ball material yet discovered. The amount of cable laid since 1856 is some 41,853 knots, representing a cost for the cables alone of millions of pounds sterling, and as the prospects are that during the next 50 years many more cables will be required and laid, the demand for gutta-percha is almost unlimited. The wealth which gutta-percha in the Philippines holds out to American enterprise is in proportion to this demand.—Cincinnati Commercial Tribune.

NOVEL INSOMNIA CURE.

It Is Certainly Worth Trying, Although It Seems Too Simple to Prove Effective.

A novel remedy for insomnia is to try to picture another person asleep. It is claimed that the more clearly the other person's sleep is pictured the stronger becomes the subjective feeling of drowsiness.

Give up trying to sleep. Nine times out of ten the blessings strives for in vain will come unsought, and that almost immediately, so that in looking back the next morning the last thing you remember will be your determination to lie awake. Directly you cease to strive for sleep—to wish ardently for it—the strain will be taken off the brain, the body will rest, because the mind is no longer preventing it, and sleep will be the happy result.

It is the anxiety for sleep and the worrying about its absence, far more than sleeplessness itself, that causes the feeling of prostration which follows a sleepless night. The man whose duty or occupation forced him to go without a single night's rest is in far better condition the next day than the man who has spent a restless night in the vain and weary search for sleep.—N. Y. Journal.

Hunting by Automobile.

Among the hunting grounds of Maine for some weeks recently Mr. F. O. Stanley has been making the best possible use of his automobile. It takes him to and from his hotel on his hunting trips, or from one hotel to his next stopping place. This is not a use to which our continental friends hold the exclusive right, although we haven't a story equal to that told of M. Rene de Knyff, who is said to make 60 miles on his automobile to a shooting lodge, put in a long day's shooting and then return for dinner.

Statistical and Historical Data Bearing on the News of the Day from Foreign Lands

Railroad Construction in Asia Minor.

European newspapers report that the controversy in regard to railroad construction in Asia Minor has been settled for the present by a concession granted to the Anatolia Railway company. This German company, it is understood, will extend its present line, which terminates at Konieh, via Mzrash and Bagdad to Bassorah. The opposition of the French company owning the Smyrna-Kassaba road, which extends east as far as Afion Kara Hissar, was removed by granting this company 40 per cent. of the shares in the extension, and the local objection was obviated by a provision in the concession giving the Turkish government the right to purchase the line at any time.

Few railroad lines can be of greater prospective importance than this 2,000 miles of railroad uniting the Persian gulf with Europe, forming a rapid transit to and from the east, opening up large tracts of agricultural country and paving the way for German commercial supremacy in Asia Minor and Mesopotamia.

It is not difficult to see how Germany, with preferential rates for goods on German lines, will be able to control the chief markets of Asia Minor and invade the east. A reference to the accompanying map will show how Germany is acquiring commercial supremacy in Asia Minor. Germans purchased the Constantinople-Ismid railroad from an English company and extended it to Angora. They also checkmated the French and English by extending their line from Eski-Sher to Konieh, thus preventing extension of both the Smyrna-Afion Karahissar and the Smyrna-Aidin-Dinair roads.

The two great distributing points—Constantinople and Smyrna—are thus controlled by Germans, and German goods may enter the interior of Asia Minor and the great valley of the Tigris and Euphrates on German-controlled roads at a decided advantage. Germans have obtained the right to build roads and warehouses at Haifa Pearl, the terminus of the Anatolian railroads; and with through rates for German goods on German lines, German freight cars may be sent across the Bosphorus and travel to Mesopotamia and the confines of India and Persia without change. Goods from other countries will have to be transhipped at Constantinople or Smyrna, and will be consequently at a disadvantage.

But water transport is always, mile for mile, cheaper than rail transport, and one scheme of competition remains for other countries in Mesopotamia and southern Anatolia. Let the proposed line from Damascus (or Sidon) to Sivas, Diarbekir and Bagdad be built and a country vastly superior in agricultural products will be opened up, giving more local traffic than the German line from Konieh to Bagdad, which must traverse barren and sparsely inhabited land.

Navigation Congress in Paris.

One of the most important conventions that will meet in Paris during the coming summer will be the eighth international congress of navigation, to be held at Paris from July 28 to August 3, 1900. Members will consist of delegates of the French government and of foreign governments; delegates accredited by chambers of commerce, cities, navigation and towing societies, railroad and

It is not difficult to see how Germany, with preferential rates for goods on German lines, will be able to control transportation companies; technical, scientific and industrial societies and syndicates; and individuals who have signified to the organizing committee, before the opening of the session, their intention of becoming members. The programme comprises the following:

FIRST SECTION.—INLAND NAVIGATION, WORKS.

First Question.—Effect of regulating works upon the regime of rivers. (To treat especially the effect of these works upon inundations.)

Second Question.—Progress made in mechanical applications in the operation of navigable waterways.

SECOND SECTION.—INLAND NAVIGATION, OPERATION.

Third Question.—Utilization of natural navigable waterways of restricted depth above their maritime section. (Methods of operation and kinds of boats of light draft of water, such as are specially susceptible of application to the colonies).

Fourth Question.—Progress made in mechanical applications in the operation of navigable waterways. Hydraulic traction companies.

Fifth Question.—Institutions to perfect and instruct the personnel of the boat crews.

THIRD SECTION.—MARITIME NAVIGATION.

Sixth Question.—The latest improvements in lighting and buoying coasts and harbor entrances.

Seventh Question.—The most recently constructed works of the principal coast-wise or maritime ports.

FOURTH SECTION.—MARITIME NAVIGATION, OPERATIONS.

Eighth Question.—Facilities to be given to ports to meet the demands of oceaning ships. (Dimensions to be given to the principal works and the general navigating conditions required.)

Ninth Question.—Progress in mechanical applications to the plants and other facilities of the ports.

Women Doctors Have Invaded Russia.

Russian conservatism is breaking down in many places. The following translated extract from an article written by Dr. Kaillmeyer, of St. Petersburg, and published in the German Medical Weekly, will be of interest in this country:

Women physicians have established themselves all over Russia, and even their opponents must admit that they have achieved a respected position. Part of them are employed by the government, and after last year are entitled to a pension. They occupy positions as county physicians, school physicians, physicians for the poor and the municipal ambulance system, etc. A Mrs. Dr. C. Schulz, in the St. Petersburg Institute for experimental medicine, is one of the foremost experts in bacteriology, and her lectures are well attended by physicians of both sexes. Miss Dr. Lavroshaja, of the city hospital of Obuchow, and a few other female physicians have been long with the expedition which went to Turkestan under the personal guidance of the prince of Oldenburg to combat the pest. They all returned in good health, but their conduct shows a spirit of heroism worthy to be remembered. Dr. Pavloskaya has immortalized herself in another direction. At the right time and in the right manner she succeeded in interesting St. Petersburg society in the establishment of a sanitarium for consumptives, and through donations from private sources and the Imperial treasury the establishment in Taltzi, near St. Petersburg, is in operation.

Dr. Schabanova has gained distinction for the erection of a sanitarium for children on the Baltic sea coast.

ART IN ARCHITECTURE.

DESIGNED AND WRITTEN SPECIALLY FOR THIS PAPER.

THE design and plan here given are different from any heretofore shown. They represent a double house, which can be erected at a reasonable price.

If one wishes the advantages of a detached house at a low cost, this is an excellent plan to adopt.

The cost is $2,800, including plumbing and heating and pool foundation.

There are seven rooms to each house. The size of the rooms is as follows: Parlors, 10x16 feet; sitting room, 11½x12 feet; dining-rooms, 10½ feet by 13 feet; kitchens, 10x16 feet. The chambers have large closets, and all rooms are well ventilated.

The halls are fitted up with mantels, beamed ceilings, and stairways which lead from the halls to the second floors. The parlors have one end of the

THE COIFFURE.

Prevailing Methods of Arranging the Hair.

The fashionable coiffure continues to be wavy and negligent in appearance. There is no exact style prescribed, the general style being adapted to the particular face, but the Greek and the Louis Quinze fashions predominate. Rice powder, especially in the daytime, is the bugaboo. Elaborate methods of dressing the hair always make a young woman look more mature and moreover suggest the wax figures in hairdressers' windows.

For very young women the coiffure most frequently performed is that in which the hair is waved and drawn back from the face so lightly as to form an aureole. It is arranged in a soft Greek knot at the back of the head.

The Botticelli bandeaux, so charming when they are becoming, are extremely unfavorable to the majority of faces.

GIRL'S COSTUME.

They demand small, regular features and a madonnalike aspect and should be sedulously avoided by women of other types.

An illustration is given which shows a party dress for a girl. The skirt is of pink taffeta, plaited from the waist half way down, over this is a tunic of pompadour silk, bordered with an application of guipure. The bodice of pompadour silk is edged with guipure application and appears in front over a chemisette of pink taffeta draped diagonally. The sleeves of elbow length are finished by folds of pink silk, with fringed ends, and a fringed pink sash is worn. A large bow of pink silk is placed at the left shoulder.

VARIOUS NOTES.

Present Fashions and Those Which Are Coming.

Fall skirts are threatened, and as they are particularly well suited to thin fabrics are likely to come to the front when warm weather arrives. The models which have appeared so far have been gathered at the waist, all around or at the back and sides only. They are made over a plain skirt of the regulation clinging form, however, so the general shape continues to be the same.

The skirt of ball gowns intended for dance is long, but without a train—that is, it rests upon the floor, as all skirts now do, but is not decidedly trailing. All other costumes of ceremony have a marked train, however, and the richer the goods the longer the train.

Artificial flowers are much used for the decoration of evening gowns, but only the best quality of flowers is employed. They are used as epaulets and are placed at the left side of the bodice and appear in long garlands on the skirt.

The picture illustrates a gown of willow green voile. The skirt is ornamented in front with a wide embroidery, and around the foot is an accordion plaiting, with two lines of puffing and an embroidered hem. The bodice is draped in front and has embroidered sleeves. The collar and plastron are of white embroidery, as are the close sleeves. There is a soft belt of pink panne, tied in front in a large bow without ends, and on the bow on is another still larger bow of pink panne. The same model may be charmingly carried out in pale gray or any of the fashionable shades which are just off white.

WOMEN AS COLONISTS.

Some of the Opportunities Open to Them in Our New Possessions.

BY GERTRUDE HALL FORBES.

Much that has been accomplished in colonization during recent years has been the result of woman's exertion. Women have not hesitated to go into new fields and take up the burdens of husband or brother and in some instances they have even competed with men in agriculture and other industrial enterprises.

Since women have become a recognized factor in the struggle for existence money making has become as great an ambition with them as with men, and new countries have offered to them opportunities which they have not neglected.

With the opening up of new territory in Cuba and the Philippines women have found fresh fields for colonization. It is generally conceded that in whatever line of occupation they may be especially qualified their work will have a good influence with the natives and will be an incentive to more useful lives.

The American woman, although the last to fall into the line of colonists, will probably make a better colonist than any of her foreign sisters who have entered the field before her. She is better adapted physically, she is used to traveling and to change of place, and is at home in any corner of the earth. She is dauntless and unrestricted by continental traditions and conventionalities. She has adaptability and inventive genius and will bring them to bear upon the difficult problems of life under new conditions and strange environment.

Some ambitious women who are going to South Africa will establish poultry farms. The native Kaffirs make good servants and are very faithful if treated with kindness. With the thousand acres of land, to be had at small purchase price, farms will prove fruitful and profitable investments.

It is to be hoped that our American women will show themselves strong and noble and prove a real prop to the colonists. Boers and Uitlander women who are independent and able to care for themselves, so very much so that they are able to hold their own among them without any difficulty. The field of the female doctor has not yet been invaded. A female doctor is also an labors horror for the man of pills and doses, and it would seem as though this field would be a profitable one for the gentler sex, inasmuch as she could win her way by means of her natural gentleness of manner and the favor with which she is received.

Banking could be undertaken there with no mean result. At present in the Transvaal the Boer places his gold in an iron bound box and stows it under his bed. Many millions lie idle which could be turned to profitable interest if only the proper women with the proper amount or progressiveness would undertake the problem.

To undertake with success ability is more essentially requisite than actual experience in manual labor. Women have succeeded both in trades and in commerce and have made comfortable livings easily and honorably.

Of the women who have ventured to Porto Rico many have contributed largely to the prosperity of the country. The cultivation of spices is one of the productive fields which have been largely developed by a woman. The plantation which has been a great success under her management; also a cattle ranch. The pasture lands in the northern and eastern parts are very superior.

A great advantage that women have enjoyed in the Philippines is the rapidity with which land can be made profitable. Rice grows very quickly, and by planting a portion of her ground with this staple article she has been able to give the commercial proper time for developing other products. Plantations given over to the cultivation of fruits and vegetables introduced from more temperate regions grow well and are a profitable production. A fruit canning establishment started on a small basis would prove the nucleus of a large factory. Cattle and poultry raising is another way in which parts of a plantation can be utilized. Women whose husbands occupy themselves in the commercial world might direct agricultural and industrial enterprises.

For other women who seek employment that might be considered more suitable for her sex the field of military dressmaking is open. Both in our new possessions and in South Africa comparatively little attention has heretofore been paid to bodily adornment. It is to be supposed that coming in closer contact with European fashions will necessitate new customs and manners among these peoples. The most radical changes will probably be noticed in their costuming. Clever women who are endowed with energy and tact should be able to carve out brilliant futures for themselves and their posterity in any of our new colonies.

SCOUTING IN PHILIPPINES.

Chicago Boy Tells of Conditions Prevailing in the Campaign.

In a letter recently received by Mr. and Mrs. E. D. McArdle of Chicago from their son, J. A. McArdle, a member of Company K, Fourth United States infantry, the life of a soldier in the Philippines is described. The letter is dated Feb. 4 and was written at Imus, says the Chicago Record. In part it is as follows:

"I am on detached duty in what is known as 'Way's Invincible Fourth infantry scouts.' The life of a scout is hazardous. When we start out, we do not know where we are going or when we are coming back. We may be gone for two months or a few days. Clothing, blankets, haversacks, canteens and rations are all left behind. We carry nothing but a gun and 200 rounds of cartridges. We live on the country and sleep in the grass and have plenty of room and fresh air. This is the first time I have been in civilization since last September. We have been in at least 60 small battles and skirmishes; but, strange to say, only a few men have been killed or wounded.

"We arrived at Imus on the night of Jan. 6. On the following morning General Bates sent us south of the town to reconnoiter. We ran on the enemy all intrenched, about 500 all told. The 60 of us charged the trenches from the rear and put them utterly to rout. Just at daybreak we came back to town and reported our find to General Bates, who sent the Twenty-eighth, Thirty-eighth and Forty-fifth volunteers out. The scouts held the right of the line, and a third battalion of the Twenty-eighth volunteers came up on the front of the trenches. They almost refused to fight, and two companies dropped out of sight. The scouts swung around, executing their dash movement, and put the enemy to flight. So, you see, it took three regiments of volunteers who had never been under fire before to do what 60 veterans of the Fourth infantry had done only three hours before.

"For the last five months I have been living on raw chickens, raw hogs and native rice. As to the drinking water, sometimes it is mud and sometimes worse. Of course I shall be very glad when the day comes for us to be ordered aboard ship for the Golden Gate and for Chicago, the center of civilization, as we boys think it."

VOLUNTEERS FOR BOERS.

How They Reach South Africa Without Exciting Suspicion.

How do French and other volunteers contrive to reach South Africa en route for the Boer forces without exciting suspicion? The explanation is given in a telegram from Marseilles, which announces the departure from that port, in the Madagascar mail steamer on Feb. 7, of a goodly number of individuals who intend to fight the British. The friends of the two republics, it is set forth, seize every opportunity to dispatch assistance to them in vessels proceeding to Mozambique, says the Paris correspondent of the London Telegraph. In order to escape from indiscretions and political formalities the volunteers start without stating the object of their voyage. They style themselves commercial travelers or emigrants, and they embark incognito. The volunteers, it is added, have been warned that English spies teem in the steamers of the South African lines about to be started in search of strangers who may put questions to them about the number and organization of the volunteers, the precise purpose of their journey and, above all, about the position of the people who have proposed the overthrow of combatants in the Boer cause. "We consider it useful," this telegram concludes, "to give publicity to this caution, so that the vulgar ruses of John Bull may not have been a great success."

So this is how the trick is played, and thus are well founded suspicions confirmed. Marseilles, as is frankly proclaimed, is sending off hosts of French volunteers for the Boer forces at reduced fares in steamers sanctioned by the state. It cannot possibly be argued that these facts are unknown to the French government, which is kept so well informed about everything that goes on in this country.

The year is ended. What a year!
Who could have prophesied its end—
Who could have dreamed it?
The misery and distress that rend
The hearts of thousands of our land,
Of thousands there and thousands here.
Whilst all our eyes we bleu thy hand,
Submissive, Lord, to thy decree.

The ways are to our feeble sense
Incomprehensible, O Lord;
In them, O Lord, is our defence,
Ourselves we humble in the dust,
And worship Thee in reverence.

That we have sinned and gone astray,
But, Lord of Hosts, in my distress
We plead for grace and mercy this day.

The broken spirit and contrite heart
Thou never dost despise, O Lord!
Yea, just and merciful thou art
To hear the humble prayer.
Who, suppliant, in thy presence weep
And bow themselves before thy throne—
Oh, do not Thou Thy face from them
For we have sinn'd 'gainst Thee alone.

Have mercy, then, O Lord, we pray,
And make an end to this dread war!
Oh, grant that peace may shine the day
When peace shall reign and strife be o'er!
All sorrow be buried deep!
As once in Bethlehem of yore,
So, grant us now that peaceful life
When we shall come to mourn and weep

The Doors of the Far East Opening Wider

American Trade With Japan, China and Hong Kong is Growing Rapidly

ONE of the most striking features of the foreign trade growth recently enjoyed by the United States has been the wonderful development of the commerce with Japan and China. During the fiscal year 1899 the value of the merchandise exchanged with these two countries, including the port of Hong-Kong, reached as high as $87,305,688. These figures were decidedly in excess of any previous record. The value for 1899, ten years before, was little more than half as large, amounting to only $46,294,167. The four years following 1889 witnessed a steady increase that finally culminated in 1899 with a record of $87,305,688, the highest up to that time. In the fiscal year 1894, during which our importations were greatly curtailed as a result of the prevailing financial depression, the trade dropped to $31,913,249. During 1895 there was a recovery to $37,509,859, and for each subsequent year the returns showed an important increase. The value amounted in 1896 to $68,291,983, in 1897 to $76,277,419 and in 1898 to $82,940,077, while in 1899 the record-breaking figures already quoted were reported.

Of the $87,305,688 valuation placed upon our trade with Japan, China and Hong-Kong during 1899, $47,815,038 represented the imports into the United States and $39,490,653 the exports from this country. The excess of imports over exports amounted to $8,326,382. Formerly the excess was much larger, as, for instance, in 1889, when the imports were valued at $25,196,670 and the exports at $11,097,497, a difference of $24,099,173.

By comparing the figures for 1899 and 1899 it will be seen that the exports have increased much more rapidly than the imports. In the decade ending with 1899 there was a gain of $28,393,156, or 256 per cent., in exportation, while the increase in importation amounted to only $12,618,365, or 36 per cent. During the last few years, says the Paris correspondent of the London Telegraph, in order to escape from indiscretions and political formalities the volunteers start without stating the object of their voyage. They style themselves commercial travelers or emigrants, and they embark incognito. The volunteers, it is added, have been warned that English spies teem in the steamers of the South African lines about to be started in search of strangers who may put questions to them about the number and organization of the volunteers, the precise purpose of their journey and, above all, about the position of the people who have proposed the overthrow of combatants in the Boer cause. JAPAN OFFERS A GOOD MARKET FOR AMERICAN COTTON.

$11,790, a considerable portion should undoubtedly be credited to China. The value of the direct trade with China was $33,132,708.

During the years 1899-1899 our trade with Japan showed an increase of $22,673,204. The imports advanced from $16,687,992 to $26,716,493, and the exports from $4,419,963 to $17,264,688. In the last few years there was a remarkable growth of exports. From $7,497,806 in 1895, the value of exported merchandise rose to $12,253,478 in 1897, and to $20,288,420 in 1898. The value for 1899, $17,264,688, although somewhat less than that for 1898, was larger than any previous year's record.

In our commerce with China during 1899-1899 there was a gain of $13,293,168. The increase occurred almost entirely in the export trade, which advanced from $8,793,138 in 1899 to $14,486,306 in 1899. Our imports for 1899, amounting to $18,819,208, were only slightly larger than in 1899, when a value of $17,525,413 was reported. The exports to China, like those to Japan, showed an exceptional growth in 1897. From 1894 to 1899, the records for these years being $11,934,437, $9,902,894 and $14,493,440, respectively.

Our trade with the port of Hong-Kong, although less important than that credited directly to China, was nearly doubled during 1899-1899, making a gain of $5,045,149. The exports for 1899 had a value of $7,722,525, as compared with only $3,682,364 for 1899. The imports were considerably smaller, and although they showed a gain in 1899 they were valued at $1,460,268, but these figures were not equaled again until 1899, when a value of $2,470,274 was recorded.

Of the domestic merchandise shipped from the United States to Japan, China and Hong-Kong during the fiscal year 1899, nearly 40 per cent. consisted of agricultural products. In 1899, the first year of the decade, products of the farm constituted only about 25 per cent. Proportionately the agricultural exports have increased even more rapidly than the nonagricultural. In 1899 they attained a value of $14,356,614, as against $2,782,914 in 1899. This remarkable growth occurred chiefly during the last five years 1894-1899. The value for 1894 was only $3,601,160.

Statistics show that the principal gain in agricultural exports occurred in the shipments to Japan, which advanced from $300,609 in 1899 to $8,968,818 in 1898. The sum quoted for the former year constituted only 6.5 per cent. of the value of the total exports to Japan, while that for 1898 formed about 44 per cent.

The agricultural exports to China, although much smaller than those to Japan, likewise made a noticeable gain during the decade, the value for 1898 amounting to $695,549,* as compared with only $108,757 for 1899. The part of our total shipments to China formed by products of the farm was proportionate, averaging less than five per cent. for the ten years. During the latter half of the decade, however, the percentage of agricultural exports showed a material increase.

In the exports to Hong-Kong farm products comprised the principal part, forming about 65 per cent. of the total in 1899, and increasing to 75 per cent. in 1898. The value advanced from $1,372,548 in the former year to $4,681,249 in the latter.

Our exports to Japan, China and Hong-Kong consist largely of five leading items—cotton, cotton manufactures, kerosene oil, wheat flour and manufactures of iron and steel. In 1898 these five items formed nearly 80 per cent. of the total exports to the three destinations mentioned, their combined value amounting to $28,859,525. Of this sum $14,927,571 represented the shipments to Japan, $3,899,974 those to China and $5,986,980 those to Hong-Kong.

Of cotton we shipped to these countries a total value of $7,870,896, and of this amount Japan took $7,428,226. Of export on the other cotton shipped to these countries a total value of $5,307,252, and of this China took $2,892,427. Both Japan and China bought liberally of our kerosene oil, our total sales to these two countries and to Hong-Kong having $7,398,449, and of this amount Japan took $3,992,587 and China $2,839,345. Hong-Kong is the principal eastern purchaser of our wheat flour. Out of a total of $4,889,071 sold to the three countries, Hong-Kong took $2,835,727. Of iron and steel products we sold to the three $3,713,967 worth, and of this amount Japan took $3,195,152.

Right Word Still Missing.

Now that bicycles, motor tricycles and motor cars are jumping into popularity, one of the difficulties is to find a comprehensive word applicable to horseless vehicles. We Americans, who are ever sharp in this sort of thing, have reached our brains and started in diligence to find something. Our series of words for selection, though some of them is particularly pleasant-sounding, are: "Horseless," "stheedless," "shipper," "mobile," "mobi," "dynamo-cycle," "dynamotor," "velarieties," "velariette," "locomotor," "machine car," "loke," "sponto-mobile," "sponto-carette," "spontocycle," "sponter" and many others.

A DOMESTIC CRISIS.

How Mrs. Elaine's Eight Hour Servants' Day Rule Would Work.

A system of household service which is receiving practical demonstration in the home of Mrs. Emmons Blaine of Chicago is causing serious discussion among householders of less wealth. Professor Patrick Geddes of Edinburgh, who recently lectured in Chicago, suggested that there was a chance of improving the condition of household servants by regulating their labor to an eight hour schedule. So well did Mrs. Blaine receive the idea that she resolved at once to adopt it in her own home.

The system necessitated the dividing of forces into watches, like sailors on shipboard, and cooks, maids, butlers, laundresses, coachmen and grooms have been so classified that they now labor only eight hours a day.

That the attempt to regulate the servant's social condition must end disastrously seems almost inevitable. The domestic service problem is already so complicated that it was to be hoped that the kitchen would still remain our own and that labor regulations would not be required in them. But in the face of such a venture as this it becomes necessary to meet the problem squarely.

In modest households where only one, two or even three servants are kept the greatest difficulty will be encountered. Rules should certainly be made that will meet the demands of the many households and not for those where relays of servants can be had and where a number of assistant housekeepers simplify the duties of the managing head.

The case of domestic service cannot be considered parallel with factory or office duties where life is apart from the labor done and where activity begins and ends at a regular hour.

It would seem as though the dangers of such a scheme would be innumerable. Servants are already demanding many concessions which are very exacting for modest households. What their demands would amount to under this eight hour system we cannot even guess at, but they would probably make the situation unbearable.

MRS. EMMONS BLAINE.

There is one feature of the case that may be relied upon, the production of specialties in the field of labor. There will be a distinctive line drawn between the duties of chambermaid and waitress, laundress and chambermaid, etc. The result will be that many mistresses will be obliged to "learn the" the old custom of attending to their household duties themselves, or they will have to employ inferior service at exorbitant prices.

Much of the dissatisfaction among servants arises from improper management. The fault lies with the mistresses themselves, who are either too indifferent or too lazy to teach the servants or else because they are unacquainted with household duties. Where the mistress is fully acquainted with the duties that devolve upon each servant the work is easily arranged so as to make it lighter for all concerned.

The old plan of housekeeping has proved a great success, especially where the mistress is reasonable and sensible. Servants have seemed happy, and the result has been satisfactory, though this is true only where there has been much consideration between mistress and servants and between the servants themselves.

How the system is to be managed where one servant is kept is a distinctly new problem.

Other difficulties that present themselves even to the wealthy is the matter of housing so many servants as would be required for a large household. The largest houses are arranged to accommodate from 10 to 20 servants. With the new regulation three times as many will have to be provided for.

That domestic service will have to undergo the same process of crystallization and specialization as other trades in order to obtain systematic results seems feasible enough, but how any well regulated house can operate smoothly and irontag, the entertainment of guests and any extra labor on the eight hour system remains to be shown.

The servant problem is so difficult that it requires careful thought for its adjustment. The present solution seems very impertinent and almost impossible with but two servants. And it seems doubtful if an attempt is made to bring the complex workings of the household within the regulations of a labor schedule that anything but disorder will result.

HOUSECLEANING HINTS.

A Few Don'ts For This Period of Domestic Disturbance.

With the approach of spring housekeepers anticipate the annual housecleaning with no little uneasiness. An old and experienced mistress of the home loving kind suggests a few simple rules which, if borne in mind during that period of family upheaval, will tend to alleviate much of the discomfort which generally attends the process.

Before touching a room make out a plan and let the first note on your mental tablet be order. Prepare for the work by cleaning this part of the house first. It will save a great deal of labor in the end and much annoyance. Then attack the garret. Begin by removing any summer draperies that have been packed away. Dust and brush all that is to remain in trunks and boxes, clear the room of all rubbish that has accumulated during the winter and properly sweep, dust and scrub.

With such a beginning housecleaning is half accomplished. Next proceed to the least occupied room on the floor below. Remove all draperies.

While the carpet or matting is undergoing cleaning have the walls brushed and any painting or papering done that is necessary. When that is not required, wipe the walls with clean, old cloths and wash all paint with warm water in which a small quantity of ammonia has been diluted. Scrub the floor and open the windows to properly dry and air the room. Relay the carpet, arrange the draperies and the furniture. When everything is in order proceed to the next room.

Unless extensive alterations are to be made the rooms started in the morning should be completed by evening. If each room is taken in succession and finished before another is begun little confusion will result. Indeed, some members of the family will scarcely realize that the renovations have been taking place excepting for the results, which of course will be very appreciated.

The hall should be left until the last. Nothing makes a home seem more deserted and upset than when this part of the house is dismantled.

Here are some "don'ts" that should be observed:

Don't permit your husband to remain away from his business because "we're housecleaning."

Don't expect the housemaid to relieve you from all care of housecleaning. She is able to do the work under your supervision, with your assistance or that of some one equally capable, but she is not able to do it properly while you stand on the piano. The music disturbs her.

If you should chance to see a friend directing her steps toward your door, retire from the watchtower. She may discover you, and in that case you would only beg excuse because of a sick headache.

Don't meet your husband on the porch with hammer and tacks in hand. Of course he is glad to have you watch for his return in the day's work, but he is tired and wants a hard day's work in a cool, comfortable office in town, and it annoys him to see you looking so unsettled up.

Don't think that because you are able to iron up the woodwork in your bed chambers that you will be equally successful in painting the front door. Let your husband attend to that. He's a better judge of color, and he thinks he knows more about such things than you do. Humor him once in awhile. He'll be more willing to walk the floor nights with his favorite infant son.

Don't employ tramps to dust your carpets. They are apt to dust out with them.

REAL GOLDEN GIRL.

Statue of Miss Maude Adams Cast In Precious Metal.

An interesting feature of the Paris exposition will be the gold model of Miss Maude Adams, which will occupy a prominent place in the Palais de Pottique and will stand as the representative of the American girl.

The statue weighs 715 pounds and was cast in the bronze founderies of Henry Bonnard in New York city. The figure stands six feet high and portrays Miss Adams as the typical American girl. The pose is simple and erect, with hands close to the sides. The plain crushed dress is devoid of trimming save for a little lace at the throat. The hair is arranged loosely after the fashion that has recently been in vogue and which is characteristic of Miss Adams' style of acting.

The idea originated with the American Gold Statue company. A number of representative artists were selected by them, and they in turn decided upon Miss Adams as the model.

It is said that not a few ladies bid for the new honor, some even offering as much as $25,000 for the privilege of having their forms portrayed in gold for the admiring gaze of Paris and the world.

Though the statue is not solid, it is estimated that $187,000 of metal is in it. Miss Beede Potter, the sculptor, required 25 sittings for the model, and the work has occupied all her time since early last summer.

Dewey Not the Man for President.

In the face of the momentous problems that now confront this country—questions that are perplexing the best and most astute minds of men who have been in a position to study them constantly and who have arrived at definite ideas in respect to them, arraigning the mass of American people with either one or the other of the great political parties as a consequence—the announcement of Admiral Dewey that he will become a candidate for President seems preposterous. Especially is this so when in making the formal announcement of his ambition the Admiral fails to state where he stands on the great National questions or to which political party his sympathies are attached. The approaching Presidential campaign is one of the most serious ones that this country has ever entered upon, and the people will demand the candidacy of men for the highest office in the gift of the country whose principles and party affiliations are more decided and logical to a practical situation of affairs than Admiral Dewey offers in his personality.

Admiral Dewey has a great and glorious war record, but the people of this country are not now in a mood to elevate a man to the office of President simply because of this. The Admiral is loved and applauded for his achievements in the Philippines, but the work he accomplished in planning and directing the battle of Manila does not constitute qualifications for the responsible and intricate duties of chief magistrate of the country. His training and experience are not such as to appeal to the voters of the country to put him at the head of the government.

Take up any of the great questions—the currency, the tariff, the treatment of Porto Rico and the Philippines, the trusts—and no one knows where Admiral Dewey stands in respect to the issues which will line up the voters on election day next November. No one knows whether he is a Democrat, Republican, Prohibitionist or Populist. He says that his platform is the American flag. Every other man who aspires to any very political party that hopes to win makes the same claim about the Stars and Stripes, but in addition to that they present some tangible, living issues as an argument to prove the claim. And that is what the people want.

In Admiral Dewey we have a man whom every citizen of the Republic points to with pride, but he is not the man fitted to be President of the United States.

City Hall Needed and Wanted.

Plainfield needs and wants a City Hall. The sentiment of the majority of the people of Plainfield is favorable to this project now the same as it has been ever since the enterprise has been under consideration, which covers a period of four years. The great majority of citizens who desire to see this improvement made expect to see a slight increase in the tax rate as a result, but it is something which they realize will be worth all and more than what it will cost, inasmuch as the expense will be spread over a long period of years. Improvements of this kinds cost money, but giving them practical, honest consideration the expense is either favored or opposed by the degree of service and benefit which will accrue to the city. In this case it is favored because the demands and needs of the public are satisfied and served by it.

Those who are against the consummation of the City Hall idea in the immediate future do not deny the claim that such a building will be of advantage to the city, but they quibble and falter over a nominal expense that will be so moderate that it will scarcely be felt while it is being liquidated. Many of the obstructionists, however, are not fair or just in their attitude. Selfish interests are inducing the lead their influence to block the improvement. For instance, we believe that were the chances favorable for the proposed municipal building being located on the south side of the railroad tracks much of the present opposition would be dissipated at once. This class of obstructionists are not looking to see that the interests of the whole community are conserved and benefitted, but are figuring to direct the expenditure of public money so that it will be of close benefit to them. The position of the News is this. Up till the time it was practically assured that if the City Hall was built it would be located on Front street the News was for it in earnest. When Buxton realized that the building would probably not be located on Park avenue he commenced his opposition, and the reasons that have induced his change of position are the same as are urging on the majority of the other opponents.

The majority of the Common Council should not give such influence as that much consideration.

Hearing Was a Failure.

The public hearing on the proposition of building a City Hall in the immediate future, given by the Common Council Monday, was a disappointment. In the first place it attracted a very insignificant number of citizens in comparison to what such a subject vitally interests. In the second place out of the hundreds of men in the city known to be advocates of the municipal building, only one took occasion to use his sentiments.

In the third place many of the points made by the few who appeared in opposition to the idea were violently opposed to the true and practical condition of affairs that confront the city. And in the fourth place, Mr. Buckle, the Councilman who has been at the head of the committee in charge of the preliminary details up to the present time, made a grevious mistake in taking the floor and proceeding to catechise the citizens who had come there to be heard as to what they should say and what they should not say.

In a public hearing such as that was intended to be last night it ought to be and is the privilege of citizens to express not only their sentiment in reference to the proposed expenditure of money, but to also dwell upon the points of what they believe will be the financial side of the question—a view that Mr. Buckle's conduct runs contrary to.

Considered as a true guide for Councilmanic action, the hearing failed of its purpose. It was far from being a representative of the city at large, and leaves the Council in as much doubt as before as to the real desires of its constituents.

It is recognized that the majority of the Councilmen—as well as almost all the other city officials—who have studied the City Hall question in its various phases, are favorable to the project, but they are averse to undertaking an improvement involving such an expenditure of money without first being convinced, positively, that the majority of the people approve of such action.

The hearing having resulted in a fizzle, it is now left to the Council to determine a method by which they will be justified in going forward with the project. What the outcome will be cannot be told.

The Democrats of Union county have been really wondering if Thomas Lane, editor of the Summit Record, was going to Kentucky to accept that title of Colonel which Governor Beckham was reported to have conferred upon him, but from what Mr. Lane says in the last issue of the Record it looks as though there was more gossip than truth in his news sent out from Kentucky that he is to his himself to the blue grass region as a permanent fixture of the militia. Quoting the editorial comments of The Daily Press about the prospect of the Summit editor leaving New Jersey, Mr. Lane adds the following:

> While we appreciate the friendly spirit that actuated our esteemed contemporary in his remarks as set forth in the above, we cannot refrain from observing that he seems altogether too willing to accelerate the speed of our departure from New Jersey. We find life in this state of ours quite endurable, the associations have been too pleasant to permit us to think of turning our back on the home and friendships of a lifetime.

WANTS MORE LIBRARIES.

SUGGESTIONS MADE BY STATE SUPERINTENDENT OF SCHOOLS.

He Urges That Children Should Be Directed and Trained to Read Good Books.

State School Superintendent Baxter, who resides in this city, is making special efforts to interest the educational authorities of the State in two objects that he has warmly at heart. First, the establishment of closer relations between the public schools and public libraries. This is a National movement inaugurated by the National Educational Association, and outlined in a recent report of a committee of that association on that subject. The idea is that children should be trained and directed in their reading, and especially to read and love good literature. The formation in school of a correct reading habit, it is urged, is the most important work the school does. It lays the foundation of future development and places the pupil on the right road.

Superintendent Baxter has laid this matter before the county superintendents. He urges that these officials labor to secure the establishment of public libraries and to bring these and the schools in close touch with each other. The teachers should know the library, what it contains and what use the public can make of it. The librarian should also know the school, its work and its needs. They should be in close touch. The movement is taken hold of with enthusiasm, and will probably result in a great many new public libraries in this State. The State gives aid in the formation of these libraries, and also offers facilities in the same direction through the new traveling library system.

The other object Mr. Baxter has at heart is to make drawing a requisite accomplishment for teachers of all grades. It is now required only in the higher grades, but the State Superintendent thinks it very important that all teachers should possess this equipment. The order making this addition to the teachers would need to come from the State Board of Education.

Death of Miss Dunham.

The death of Miss Emeline Dunham, aged 62 years, of Three Bridges, occurred last Friday after an illness with pneumonia. She was quite well-known in this city, where she has relatives. She was a sister of John Dunham, of Madison avenue; Amos Dunham, of Somerville; Mrs. Abram Bockfellow, of Hoboken; Mrs. C. M. Pennington of Arlington avenue, and Mrs. S. F. Sebring, of Division street. The funeral services were held from the residence of her niece, Mrs. Eli M. Odam, 1038 Arlington avenue, Tuesday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock. Interment at Hillside Cemetery.

Carriers to Take Registered Letters.

Postmaster E. H. Bird has received notification from the third assistant postmaster general that, beginning Monday, April 16th, the letter carriers in the residence parts of the city will be allowed to take letters and packages for registration while on their rounds. Heretofore it has been necessary for the sender of a registered letter to go to the postoffice. Under the new orders the carrier can receive them if they are ready and give a receipt to the sender.

To Organize a Signal Corps.

Major-General Sewell has commissioned Henry G. Opdycke, of Jersey City, a civil engineer, to organize a signal corps under the law reorganizing the National Guard of New Jersey. The corps will be formed as a cavalry troop, and will consist of four officers and forty-six non-commissioned officers and privates. The uniform and equipment will be similar to that of the United States Signal Corps.

Friday, May 4th, the Last Day on Which Settlements Can be Made Under Provisions of the Martin Act.

After the Common Council concluded the public hearing in the City Hall matter, last Monday, the regular order of business was returned to for the purpose of considering a few matters. A communication was received from J. Fred MacDonald stating that the site he offered for the City Hall was the most desirable, and urging that the city purchase it. It was referred to the City Hall building committee. A petition was received from W. T. Newman, of West Second street, asking the Council to act in the matter of macadamizing West Second street between Central avenue and Liberty street, as petitioned for several times. Dr. James Hayes, who owns property in the city upon which taxes were assessed for 1878, 1879 and 1880, asked that the interest be returned to him on the amounts which had been paid. The matter was referred.

Mr. Tolles introduced an ordinance accepting Johnston avenue from the northwest side of North Avenue to the southwest side of East Front street. This caused discussion and Mr. VanHerwerden wanted to know if it was customary to accept a street before it was macadamized. Most of the members were in doubt, and the matter was laid on the table. It is the rule now not to accept streets until they have been macadamized, flagged and curbed, and it was Mr. Tolles who introduced the ordinance sometime ago making this the law.

D. H. Lang, secretary of the State Telephone Company, petitioned for the right to construct telephone wires through Plainfield to connect with lines at Bound Brook and Trenton. The matter was referred to the street committee.

Mr. VanHerwerden moved to reconsider the vote on the resolution providing for the advertisement of delinquent taxes. He then offered a resolution that Friday, May 4th, be fixed as the last day when settlements can be made for property affected by the Martin Act. The idea of making a change in the advertising of taxes that are due is that the Council desires to treat all under the provisions of the Martin Act, and not under the regular State law. Council then adjourned.

H. Crowe & Company Assign.

H. Crowe & Company, grain exporters, at No. 453 Produce Exchange, New York, made an assignment Saturday to Samuel F. Eaga. The partners are Herbert Crowe, who lives in Plainfield, and Howard R. Howser, living at No. 239 West Eleventh street, New York. Estimates of the liabilities at the Produce Exchange were $6,000, and the assignment was attributed to the firm being on the wrong side of the corn market. The concern has been regarded as a Winsepp house, and Mr. Crowe has been in New York since September, 1892.

Interment was at the convenience of the family.

His Little Home Saved.

Friends of James Burdick, of East Third street, an old and respected citizen of Plainfield, have raised sufficient money to pay off the back taxes on his property so that it will not come under the proceedings of the Martin Act. The little home of the old man will thus be saved for him, and he is correspondingly happy.

H.S WORK RECOGNIZED.

Charles B. Brown Receives a Call to Become Associate Y. M. C. A. Secretary.

Charles B. Brown, formerly of Plainfield, and now general secretary of the Jersey City Young Men's Christian Association, has received a unanimous call from the New Jersey State committee to become associate Y. M. C. A. State secretary. During the two years Secretary Brown has been in Jersey City the local association has been entirely reorganized, and the work brought to such a degree of development that a movement to erect a $75,000 building will soon be under way.

Secretary Brown has not yet accepted the new offer, and will not leave his present field unless some one be secured to take up the work, which has been started in Jersey City.

Will Do Military Duty in Cuba.

John Morely Campbell and his bride of a few weeks have been enjoying a short visit with Mr. and Mrs. S. H. Struthers, of West Front street. Mrs. Campbell is a niece of Mrs. Struthers, and her husband, who has just been promoted to First Lieutenant in the U. S. Army, is a native of Texas. He has been assigned to the Fifth Regiment, and expects to be sent to Cuba. When the order was received for the marriage arrived Lieut. Campbell could not leave his station in Texas, and his bride, accompanied by her father, who is a minister, went to where the groom was living and was married.

CITY HALL HEARING WAS NOT A SUCCESS.

Comparatively Little Real Sentiment Was Heard About the Municipal Project.

FEAR OF A HIGH TAX RATE.

THAT'S WHAT CAUSES MOST OF THE OPPOSITION MANIFESTED.

Lengthy Speech Against the Idea Made by Winfield S. Applegate—But One Spoke in Favor of the Improvement —Some of the Points Made.

The public hearing given last Monday by the members of the Common Council for the purpose of ascertaining whether the people want a city hall erected at present, was largely attended, but so far as being a bowling success against the project, the earnest devotees of the proposition to defeat it had little to crow over, for it was a flat failure. The Council failed to get a true expression of opinion on the subject despite the lengthy speeches of the few who spoke, and those who did speak against the project wandered so far from the subject that once during the hearing Mr. Buckie felt impelled to make a few remarks and bring the speakers back to the subject.

President Smith, in opening the hearing, stated by way of explanation that it was not the purpose of the Council to spend $100 000 according to the bill, but about $65 000 or $70,000 at the most. The meeting was then thrown open for discussion.

Farmer Assemblyman Roger F. Murray presented a communication for A. G. Barclay, of West Seventh street, who could not be present. The document was noted for one thing—length—and it required considerable time for Acting Clerk Wean to read it. The writer started in by saying that a city hall was not a necessity, the Mayor does not need one as his duties are not so many and arduous but what he can perform them in the customary way. He commended Plainfield for the absence of all feathers and fuss. He believed that a city hall and jail should be separate and advised this plan when the proper time for building arrived.

Mr. Barclay did not consider the American people mean, but he thought the present accommodations adequate for all needs. He cited that a City Hall must surely mean increased salaries amounting to at least $2,000 and he believed that the Council should give the taxpayers a breathing spell of five years before raising the tax rate. He spoke of the sewer system which Mr. Frost said would be run for $30 000 a year, but which was costing about $4,000 a year. He referred to the "plumage of the gay bird," meaning the furnishings for a City Hall, which would cost at least $30 000, and said it would be a shame to expend so much money to furnish "a swing place for a City Hall gang." He touched briefly on the Martin Act and said that if the present gait was continued there would be many lonesome homes on the line of the Jersey Central Railroad.

The next speaker was Lawyer Winfield S. Applegate, who evidently appeared on behalf of an opponent, as well as himself. He commenced by saying that all had the welfare of the city at heart however they might differ. He referred in a glowing manner to Plainfield as a good place to invest money and told of the pride felt by many for the enviable record made by the city and of her traditional policy of going slow in important matters. He considered it wise to hesitate in building a City Hall, which would involve an expense of $75,000 or $100 000. He said that Plainfield has the reputation of fostering substantial improvements, such as schools, which affect every family. He referred to the improvements of the streets, police, fire department as a benefit to all and where every dollar invested comes back with interest.

He wanted to know if the Mayor or Council would not any better in a City Hall than they do now. He then mentioned a town named Gilford in Connecticut, where the tax this year had been abolished for the reason that there was a balance of $7,000 in the treasury the first of January. This he thought was an admirable state to get into. He did not think Plainfield could very well afford to spend $75,000 in ornaments. Mr. Angleman then continued speaking for sometime during which he gave figures to show what an increase in expense a City Hall would make, add how hard it would come on the poor man who has to pay the burden.

At this point Mr. Buckie explained that from time to time the various messages presented by the Mayors of the city had always referred to a City Hall and just what this was nothing new. It was he who urged action in the matter of building a City Hall and when the question was put to a vote Mr. Dumont was the only one to vote against it. He said that the only people he listens to regarding expenditures of city money are the persons who pay taxes. He did not consider the City Hall an absolute necessity, but thought there was a strong sentiment in favor of it, and if it wasn't for sentiment he did not believe there would be a church in the city. He said he was in favor of a City Hall if the majority of the people are, and he felt sure the city could build one if they want to and the tax rate would be no higher than it is in North Plainfield. He believed that the city is being run in an economical way. He then spoke of the recent action of the Council regarding the High School matter, and said that he could not resist the plea made for better and increased accomodations. He would not recall his vote if he could. He admitted that diplomacy was not shown in the action, but that he considered the only act against the work of the members in that transaction.

Mr. Dumont could not resist the opportunity to say a word, although he stated that the meeting was called to hear an expression and not for the members to give their views. He said the Board of Education showed conclusively that better and larger accommodations are needed, and as much cannot be said regarding a City Hall. Referring to the churches he said that if it was not for the Plainfield churches the city would not be where it is today. He considered them the bulwark of the city. He said most emphatically that no living man could say within $15,000 what a City Hall would cost Plainfield. He hoped the matter would be delayed until a proper time to go on with it.

J. W. Murray, Sr., followed Mr. Dumont and spoke at some length regarding the underground railway in New York that is now in course of construction. He favored schools that would give everyone as good an education as possible. He did not want to charge anything, but referred to the manner in which Tweed ruled New York, and while he did not liken him to anyone in the Council he considered that the item of expense would be large if the hall should be built through the Council.

L. B. Wooloston was impressed with the idea that Plainfield does need a City Hall, after hearing previous arguments. He said it would be a disgrace to let the outside world know that the city cannot build a suitable municipal building. He said that the people want a new station opposite the North Avenue station simply because the railroad would pay for it. If the city was to stand the expense there would be a howl such as is heard against the City Hall. He stated that brick, mortar, lime and labor is the same now as a year ago, and no one would feel the tax for sometime to come if a hall was erected. He thought Plainfield could afford it.

Mr. Wooloston decried the idea of the poor man paying the expense. It is the poor man who benefits and does not have to pay much for what he gets.

Patrick Casey took Mr. Wooloston up on this proposition and stated that in his opinion the poor man does pay big. He referred to the Martin Act and told how he had to pay $256 76 assessment levied upon his property. He thought if the rich man wanted to give his children a better education he could afford to send them to a paid institution, and not attempt to oppress the poor man with heavy taxes. He did not favor a City Hall at present.

In conclusion Robert Rushmore, Col. Dietrich, Isaac W. Bushmore and John Casey spoke against the proposition of building a City Hall and each one advanced one argument and another to support their positions. This concluded the hearing and the Council returned to regular order of business.

MISS LYON'S LECTURE.

The Fifth One in the Course Was Given Monday Night.

The series of lectures on "Europe in Africa in the Nineteenth Century," which has been given during the last few weeks by Miss Dorothy Wilberforce Lyon, Ph. D., of Elizabeth, have been much enjoyed by those who have attended them. The subject is one which is of special interest at the present time, and the clear and interesting way in which Miss Lyon has presented the facts has added much to their value. The fifth lecture of the course was given Monday morning at the home of Mrs. Hariot Barton Ford, of Watchung avenue, the subject being "The Establishment of French Power in Africa and the 'Hinterland' Question."

Strikers Cry "Scab-Stabbed."

The striking machinists in Paterson, who have been enjoined from doing picket duty or interfering with non-union men, claim they have been blacklisted and pursued to shops in other places, where they lost their jobs as soon as it became known that they were Paterson strikers. It was decided to engage outside men as pickets.

VOORHEES FOR DELEGATE

REPUBLICAN LEADERS THINK HE SHOULD BE HONORED.

They Want Him Selected to One of the "Big Four" to Attend the National Convention.

Governor Voorhees will probably be a candidate before the State Republican Convention, for the honor of representing his party as one of the Delegates-at-Large at the National Republican Convention at Philadelphia in June. Sometime ago there was an announcement made that a slate has been fixed, by which the Delegates-at-Large chosen by the State committee should be Senators Sewell and Kean, Chairman Franklin Murphy of the State committee, and Franklin Gummere, of Trenton.

Just who was responsible for this selection was not known, but it was not known, but it was accepted for a while. The custom is to choose the two Senators and the chairman of the State committee as delegates, but it was not quite clear where Barker Gummere came in. Certainly it was not by custom, for he holds no official position which would entitle him to the honor. On the other hand, it is almost universally the rule that the Governor of a Republican State should be made of the Delegates-at-Large, and this is especially true of States like New Jersey, where a Republican Governor is more or less a rarity.

Last week a number of Republicans of prominence discussed the subject at Trenton, and it was the unanimous opinion that Gov. Voorhees should be one of the delegates unless he had objections. On the contrary it was said he would like very much to be one of the representatives, especially as other States are determined to confer the honor on their Chief Executives. The result was that the Governor was proposed as a candidate before the State convention, and he is expected to make the contest.

SPECIAL EASTER SERVICES

Elaborate Preparations for Services in St. Joseph's and St. Mary's Churches Next Sunday.

Elaborate preparations are being made at St. Joseph's R. C. church for Easter. The service will be held next Sunday morning at 10:30 o'clock. There will be a large chorus choir and they will be assisted by an orchestra under the direction of Martin Kuff. The feature of the service will be the rendition of "Farmer's Mass," and there will be some solo work. Mrs. LaPorte will preside at the organ.

Similar arrangements are being perfected at St. Mary's R. C. church, and the large choir will be assisted by an orchestra under the leadership of Joseph Sattels. "Farmer's Mass" will be sung and there will also be special solo work.

Death of Mrs. Sherwin.

Mrs. Elizabeth A. Sherwin, wife of Orren Sherwin, of 302 East Second street, died last Tuesday with paralysis, which was brought on by a long illness. For a number of days past she was in a very critical condition, and her death was expected most any time. Mrs. Sherwin was a resident of Plainfield for a great many years and was a woman of exemplary Christian character. She leaves a husband, a daughter and a son. The latter is Horace J. Sherwin, the West Front street shoe dealer. The funeral services were held from the late residence this afternoon at 2:30 o'clock.

Death of Col. Markley.

Word has been received in this city of the death of Col. Hamilton Markley, of Camden, who was one of the most prominent men of New Jersey. He was a member of a number of lodges and also of the National Guard, at one time serving on the staff of Gen. Sewell. He was a brother of Mrs. Harry M. Stockton, of this city.

Drill of the Cadets.

The cadet battalion of the Plainfield High School held its weekly drill in the High School yard Friday afternoon. The cadets were put through the various battalion movements and are fast getting into condition for the exhibition drill which will be held shortly before the close of school.

Miss Margaret McCutchen, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. W. McCutchen, of Rockview avenue, has returned from Smith College for her Easter vacation.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward Bushmore who have resided in Cranford during the past winter, have returned to Plainfield and are occupying the house corner of Grove street and Rockview avenue.

GETTING READY TO OPEN PARK GOLF CLUB

The New Professional, Blair, Has Taken Charge of the Course.

WILL OPEN THE LINKS SOON.

COURSE IS IN EXCELLENT CONDITION AT PRESENT.

May Be Possible to Let the Players Use the Course Some Week-Prospects for a Fine Season.

Very bright, indeed, are the prospects for the coming season at the links of the Park Golf Club. Last season saw the course a popular place and this year it will be more attractive than ever. The changes made in the methods of government of the club promise to work for the very best interests of the organization. Every pleasant day sees the course drawing nearer fit condition for play.

At the head of the greens committee this year is Councilman George T. Rogers, who was one of the most enthusiastic golfers of the club last year. On his appointment Mr. Rogers lost no time in getting at work, and is now able to promise his clubmates that the course will be ready to open informally by Saturday, April 21st. If the pleasant weather continues it may be possible to have the course in condition before that time and give the young people who are at home for the Easter holidays a chance to play. The fair greens are in good condition now.

Mr. Rogers and the new club professional, Andrew B Blair, went over the course Sunday afternoon to see what would have to be done before it was ready for play. Besides being an excellent instructor, Mr Blair is an expert green keeper and fully understands the care of the course. He will take full charge of that work and will look after the course during the season. Several capable men have been engaged to care for the course under his direction.

An addition is being built to the club house and as soon as it is completed Professional Blair and his wife will take up their residence there and remain at the club house throughout the season. Mrs Blair is an excellent cook and will act as stewardess at the club house. Arrangements will be made so that members can have light luncheons served there.

Professional Blair comes here from Cleveland, O., very highly recommended. Among his testimonials is a strong one from the golf department of A. G. Spalding's sporting goods establishment. He has just returned from a trip to his home in Scotland. He comes from Dunnestoun, Glasgow. Mr. Blair is a young man and is a fine player as well as teacher and green-keeper. Those who have met him have been very favorably impressed.

No schedule of events on the links this summer has yet been issued. There will be the usual holiday events and the plan of a weekly competition for a cup to last all the season, which proved so successful last year, is likely to be tried again this year.

Too Busy to Hold Two Positions.

Willard M. Miner, of East Sixth street, has resigned his position as secretary and director of the American Automobile Company. The American Automobile Company is preparing for an active season, and Mr. Miner's duties as chief electrician of the Knickerbocker Telephone Company, New York, will not permit him to devote the necessary time to the work of the other corporation.

A Home Marriage.

Erik Soel and Miss Hilda Olson, of this city, were married last Tuesday by Rev. O. G. Tingleff, pastor of Swedish Mission Society. Gustaf Lund acted as best man and Miss Helga Alven as bridesmaid. Miss Alma Ahlgren and Alfred Johnson also stood up with the couple. The wedding took place at the home of the bride, 461 West Sixth street.

Entertained at Whist.

The Tuesday Evening Whist Club was entertained last Tuesday by Mr and Mrs. W. H. Angleman, of Somerset street. Mrs. Adam Seals and Mrs. Fred Canfield won the first and second prizes for the women, while Horace Huff and Fred Canfield drew the honors for the men. The usual pleasant time was had by the members Mr. and Mrs. Walter Agnew, of Somerset street, will entertain in two weeks.

Mr. Martine to Speak.

James E. Martine has received an invitation to attend the banquet to be given by the friends of Ex-Minister J. Bryan in Camden April 20th. He will be one of the principal speakers and will respond to the toast of "The Claims of Democracy."

Mrs. Eden, of Chatham street, who has been at the hospital several weeks for treatment, expects to be discharged tomorrow, cured.

TRIALS OF A MISSIONARY.

P. G. Wyckoff Delivered an Interesting Lecture Before Trinity Church Endeavorers.

The meeting of the Christian Endeavor Society of Trinity Reformed church was along missionary lines last Monday, and was in charge of Dr. Schenck, the pastor of the church. After the singing of a solo, "God's Lily," by Miss Mary Griffin, Pastor Schenck introduced P. G. Wyckoff, of Sandford avenue, as one who is not only interested in missions as a Christian, but from the fact that his brother was laboring in a foreign field, Tindivanam, India.

Mr. Wyckoff told of the trials of the missionary in India, where the people are satisfied with their gods, and how isolated the missionaries are, deprived of the fellowship of Christians. He told how Mrs Wyckoff has been called upon to lay out her children for burial. Every so often tours are made through the country, the missionary carrying his tent with him by means of oxen, who are not very rapid, and an ox cart. It sometimes taking one hour and a half to travel one mile. Stops are made at the various stations and as soon as a crowd gathers preaching is begun by the missionary or some of his helpers. Once a year the reports of the missionaries are made and when a meeting of these workers from round about is held, when plans for work are discussed.

EARLY INTELLIGENCE

—The Elizabeth Presbytery will meet in Hope Memorial chapel April 17th and 18th.

—Housewives will find the finest lard at Neuman Bros., the Watchung avenue grocers.

—Leave your orders early for hot cross buns. We deliver them Good Friday morning in time for breakfast. Stephenson, 146 North avenue.

—A stone sidewalk on the Dunellen street side of Miss S. B. VanWinkle's property, corner Mercer avenue, will soon take the place of the present boardwalk and be greatly appreciated by the traveling public.

—An invitation is extended to all to come and see the carload of blooming plants and palms which Mrs. L. J. Denton has just received. Large supply of fresh cut flowers, roses, violets, mignonette and carnations. Pape Goutier roses at cut rates. Prices are extremely low. See ad.

—Edward A. Laing, the West Front street news dealer, has purchased the interest of the newspaper route of W. H. Williams, of Park avenue. Mr. Williams has been in that business for thirty-five years. Laing began delivering this morning. Mr. Williams makes an announcement in another column.

—Reginald de Koven, author of "Robin Hood" and other operas, will contribute to The Youth's Companion for the week of April 19th an article on "Taste in Music," which is said to be quite as diverting as it is instructive. In the same number will be begun a serial story, "The Schoolhouse Farthest West." The framework of the story alone is fictitious, the incidents being all founded on actual experience in teaching school in Alaska.

SIDEWALKS MUST BE LAID IN THE BOROUGH

Council Decides That This Work Must Be Done at Once by Property Owners.

MAYOR IS FULL OF ENERGY.

HE CRITICIZES THE TROLLEY COMPANY IN SEVERE TERMS.

They Raise Two Months' Dust on Somerset Street—Talk of Borough Sprinkling Streets—The Widening of Somerset Street.

Mayor Smalley and the Borough Council are getting into bad habits and a reform rule is in order. The regular April meeting was held Friday evening, but it was nearly 9:45 o'clock when His Honor called the session to order, and it was late when it was concluded. There was a great amount of business introduced. His Honor was feeling in good humor and he put everything through with as much dispatch as possible. All the members were present except Mr. Vallant, who was out of town.

The report of Collector Brown, including that of the clerk, Frank Hyzley, was as follows: Taxes and licenses, $630 45; special school, $219 78; Board of Health, $6 35; Watchung avenue assessment, $54 80; rent of property sold for taxes $41; F. W. Somers, license, $213 75; Clerk Rowley, fines, $13; bills payable by note $1,000; cash on hand March 1st, $1,735 95; total receipts, $3,804 78; disbursements, $2 2-3 13; cash on hand April 1st, $1 62-3 65; borough account, $1,-631 18; Watchung avenue account, $670 46.

The election of Charles Greader as a member of West End Hose Company, and Charles A. Steadman as a member of Warren Engine Company, were confirmed by the Council. Residents in the vicinity of Willow avenue asked the Council about the work of macadamizing that avenue from Girard avenue 400 feet south, which was petitioned for sometime ago. The matter was referred to the proper committee, as was also a petition for crosswalks on Park place from Dorer street to Mercer avenue. Wm. M. Stillman petitioned for the privilege of removing the Dyer house on Craig place to a lot on Grove street 60 feet from its present location. This was granted and Mr. Stillman was allowed five days to block traffic on Craig place while making the change.

Dr. D. C. Adams, who sold to Wm. M. Stillman a piece of property corner of Craig place and Grove street, fifty feet frontage, petitioned to have that part set off and an apportionment in the tax made. This was agreed to by the Council and the apportionment was made as follows: Lot 1, 1898 $134.19, $41 65; lot 2, 1899 $117 79, $39 33.

Mayor Smalley appointed Wm. N. Pangborn and J. W. VanHorn special marshals to do regular duty, without pay from the borough. They were confirmed.

At this time an application, signed by ten freeholders, and headed by S. B. Joseph and L. B. Woolston, was received asking the Council to adopt an ordinance that would provide for the laying, maintaining and repair of sidewalks, crosswalks and curbing throughout the borough. The application is drawn according to law and provides for every street in the borough that is used. The application was referred to Farnsby and read an ordinance was introduced and read for the first time. It will now be advertised and Friday evening, April 28th, there will be a meeting held for the purpose of giving the people of the borough an opportunity to make any objections to it that they see fit.

Mayor Smalley reported that there had been no arrests during the past two weeks. Mr. Clark, chairman of the street committee, reported that the sum of $81 97 had been expended on the streets during March. There was a disputed bill of $43 82 from Michael Powers regarding crosswalks which had not yet been paid.

Mr. Clark offered a resolution that bids for crushed stone, crosswalks and sidewalks be advertised for and that the same be opened at the Council rooms Monday evening, April 18th, at 8 o'clock. Mr. Swackhamer offered a resolution that $43 82 be reducted from Michael Powers who had purchased the property corner of Park place and Somerset street from the borough, who had taken it for taxes. A resolution by Mr. Clark provided that a crosswalk be laid on Warren street, near Chatham.

Mr. Lee gave the Council quite a surprise by offering a resolution to change the name of Dorer street to Madison avenue. This was done in view of the proposed section of opening Dorer street into the city. Council Reed thought it best to wait until after the sidewalk ordinance was adopted before taking any action, and the matter was referred to the street committee. It can be stated, however, that the proposition was favorably received and no doubt will be adopted.

Mr. Swackhamer offered a resolution to the effect that a tax warrant be issued on the Collector authorizing and instructing him to sell property upon which the 1898 tax is delinquent. A resolution by Mr. Clark provided that Collector Brown transfer all borough money from the City National Bank to the First National Bank, and that hereafter all borough money be deposited in the latter bank in the name of the Mayor and Councils.

In connection with the new sidewalk ordinance Mr. Clark named the Borough Counsel what effect there would be if property owners on one street should object to the ordinance, whether it would annul the enforcement of it on all other streets. Mr. Reed said in his opinion he should say no. That to defeat the ordinance a majority of the property-owners would have to object and this was considered highly improbable as in most cases the property-owners want it.

Mr. Clark reported on the matter of street sprinkling by the borough. He said at present it was impossible to estimate the exact cost. The committee learned that they could purchase a platform spring wagon holding 600 gallons of water for $375, and a reach wagon, without springs, holding the same amount of water, for $250. It would cost $15 per month for water for each wagon for seven months from April to October. He said that the committee could not tell as to the amount of water that would be used, as could only be determined by the weather, whether wet or dry. He thought that after the plant was purchased the work could be done for $500 a year.

Mayor Smalley was inclined to think that the expense would be too much and that it might reach $1,500 a year. To this Mr. Clark replied that if the expense should come out of the street department fund that fund would have to be increased.

This brought forth a lively speech from His Honor regarding the dust on Somerset street made a nuisance by the trolley company cars. He considered the trolley a nuisance in this respect and he thought it about time the trolley company come to time and sprinkle Somerset street. He thought they should be compelled to sprinkle or else be made to stop running their cars, and if the Council has no authority he considered that the Board of Health could assert its rights and declare the thing unhealthy as well as a nuisance. The matter was finally left to Mr. Clark, who was asked to see Superintendent Adelmann and then Mr Biker and see if some arrangements cannot be made for the trolley company to sprinkle. As it is now the Council has no ordinance or agreement whereby it can compel the company to sprinkle.

After much debate it was finally decided unanimously to purchase two watering wagons to sprinkle the streets at the expense of the borough and that the Council provide by resolution for the expense if necessary, also that the committee ascertain the best possible rates for water for the sprinkling. His Honor stated that where the Lord furnishes the stock it ought to be low.

By resolution offered by Mr. Rogers John Stein was appointed pound-keeper of the borough.

His Honor again introduced the subject regarding the water and gas companies opening up the streets of the borough without first obtaining a permit to do so. Mr. Reed informed the Mayor that the companies have no right to do this and that they are compelled to put the streets back in as good condition as they found them. He said that in most cases the work had been poorly done without the knowledge of the officers of the borough who paid to have it done right. In some instances the companies had remitted when called upon to do so for failure in fixing the streets properly. Mr. Reed suggested that offenders be fined $11 each as a preventative against further infractions of the ordinance.

The Mayor desired the papers to state that the Council would like to receive the donations toward the opening of Dorer street within two weeks, as the money to proceed with the work is now needed. In connection with this he went at his only set of sidewalk Somerset street with a determination that is characteristic. He felt as though the commissioners should be appointed and the work taken up at once. He suggested a modification of the original plans to the effect that the work of installing a storm sewer from Jackson avenue to the bridge be deferred for the present and that one be put in from Jackson avenue to Greenbrook road. This would relieve the street so that the lower end of the street if widened could take care of itself. This improvement, Mr. Smalley said, could be installed at an outlay of $2,500. He was pronounced in his opinion that something should be done at once, and he instructed Mr. Reed to draw a petition to be signed by property holders favoring the improvement. This will be presented at the meeting April 28th when further steps will be taken in the matter.

Before the Council adjourned Mr. Smalley referred to two bills of $30 each for the use of two places on Somerset street for election purposes. He stated that last year these two places were rented for $70, which he considered sufficient for two days. He said the bills would be held out until they were adjusted properly.

FIREMEN ARE BRAVE.

Often Risk Their Lives to Save Those of Others.

Chicago's Fire Department and How It Is Managed — Men and Horses Trained to Respond Without Delay.

(Special Chicago Letter.)

A MAN without hat or coat ran to the corner of Halsted and Madison streets, a few nights ago, and, with nervous hands, unlocked the red fire-box. In an instant he had turned in the alarm. There was a slight buzzing in the electric ticker in the fire department in the city hall.

"Box 233," said the man in charge.

At the same time the tickers were buzzing in engine houses Nos. 5, 7, 17, 24, 40, and in hook and ladder houses Nos. 2, 6, and the alarm was given for fire-marshals A, 5 and 8.

The coatless and hatless man had put in motion the machinery of the great fire department of Chicago. In less time almost than it takes to write it the sturdy little engines with their snorting furnaces were puffing out big clouds of black smoke, the snake-like coils of the heavy rubber hose were scattered here and there across the street, while the firemen were throwing strong streams of fire into the windows of the shambling tenement building from which the flames were dark-ly. There was Chief Swenie himself, the veteran fire fighter of half a century, in top rubber boots and rubber hat, cool and deliberate. There were his two assistants. On each side of the street were little piles of coal to feed the engines. On the sidewalk was a crowd of men, women and children, who had gathered there in an incredibly short space of time.

The second alarm had been already turned in, calling six engines Nos. 1, 3, 10, 12, 18 and truck No. 4, with two additional marshals. Still the flames grew higher and snapped more fiercely, and the third alarm was turned in, bringing out five more engines, another truck and another marshal. For four hours the department fought steadily with the flames and then, smouldering and black, the ruins stood like specters in the deserted street.

This is but an an outline of the daily work of the fire department of the city of Chicago. There are incidents enough and stories enough connected with every fire around which one might weave a romance more thrilling, more pathetic and abounding more with the bravery of noble men than is portrayed in the most imaginative work of fiction.

There are the stories of heroes who brave without fear the flames — and risk without question their own lives, to save the lives of others.

But back of it all is a most remarkable system—a system so replete with minutiae and details that the most trivial fire of the great city is as much a part of the records as the most disastrous conflagration.

An idea of the magnitude of the work in hand may be obtained when it is known that in the year 1898 there were 5,048 fires in the city of Chicago, involving a valuation of property amounting to $91,922,219, with a loss of $2,851,-— and insurance of $60,534,740. There were 6,422 alarms turned in during that year, and of those 3,526 were first alarms, 64 second alarms, 22 third alarms and 33 fourth alarms, or as they are called, 4-11. In addition to this there were 24 special alarms and 2,752 "still" alarms—that is, alarms turned in by telephone or messenger.

There are 1,200 fire alarm boxes and the same number of police boxes in the various fire districts of Chicago. This box, 233, at the corner of Halsted and Madison streets, represents one of the worst fire districts in Chicago, but just south, at the corner of Halsted and Fourteenth streets, is the banner box, No. 322. Last year this box was pulled 77 times.

One who is not familiar with the workings of the fire department of a large city can scarcely have an idea of its scope and magnitude.

The chief of the department in Chicago is D. J. Swenie, who celebrated his fiftieth anniversary as a fireman December 3, 1898. And yet he is so hale and hearty and active that one would not venture in putting his age a day above 55.

The rank and file are as well drilled as soldiers in an army. There are 1,100 firemen in this city, 87 engines, 27 trucks, 4 fire boats, and 2 hose companies located in the suburbs where there are high pressure water systems.

The perfect arrangement of the fire telegraph system has reduced to a minimum the time it takes for the firemen to respond to a fire. When an alarm is turned in the number of the box is indicated automatically at the headquarters of the fire department in the city hall and in the engine houses which must respond on the first call. On the first alarm the fire-marshal or the chief of the battalion, responds in person. The average number of fire-marshals called out is five and one hook and ladder company. If the chief of the battalion sees that the fire promises to spread, he pulls the box again and turns in what is known as a 2-11. To this extra alarm five more engines and another truck generally respond—but this depends entirely upon the locality. A third alarm, known as 3-11, calls out five more engines. Sometimes a fifth or fire alarm is given, when the conflagration is quite threatening, a 4-11 is turned in, combining a second and a third alarm. When the second alarm is turned in—that is, the 2-11—the chief of the battalion has gone direct to the fire alarm office in the city hall where a large board is fastened to the wall. This board has holes in it each representing an engine and truck company. The chief places pegs in the holes of the company that has been called out and in this way the department keeps track of all the companies. As a territory becomes unprotected on account of a large fire, companies are called from more remote districts to fill the places of the absent men. Then are the firemen shifted back and forth in order that the whole city may be protected. There are 16 battalion districts in the city with as many chiefs.

Probably the most interesting feature of the fire department is the celerity with which the firemen respond to alarms. In each of the engine houses—day or night—a man is continually on watch at the switchboard where the alarms are indicated. Above the engine room are the sleeping apartments of the men. On the first floor are the horses in their stalls. Adjoining them is the engine with kindling and coal ready for the touch of a match. Above the engine are the harnesses which can be instantly adjusted with the pressure of a button. If, for instance, the man on watch gets an alarm at midnight he instantly turns the switch, a gong is sounded, the horses are immediately released automatically and, trained to their work, they spring to their places in front of the engine and the harness falls upon their backs. While this is going on the men spring from their beds and, in a twinkling, slip on their "bunkers"—this is, rubber boots with trousers attached—slide down the brass poles to the floor below and—well, before you can count three, they are ripping down the street to the fire. The best time that has ever been made by such an engine company that went a distance of 121 feet to the first hydrant, laid 300 feet of hose and had 100 pounds of water pressure playing on the flames in 1 minute and 18 seconds after the alarm was turned in.

As much care is exercised in the selection of firemen as the government exercises in the enlistment of men in the army and navy. A man to be eligible for the Chicago fire department must be between the ages of 21 and 28 years; he must be not less than 5 feet 7 inches in height and must weigh not less than 125 pounds. In addition to this there is a rigid examination and investigation as to health and morals.

This in brief shows the system of the fire department of Chicago, one of the greatest organizations in the world, composed of brave men and conducted on schedule.

HERO OF MAFEKING.

This Is the Name Given in England to Col. Baden-Powell.

His Remarkable Defense of the African Frontier Town Against a Superior Force Proves Him a Thorough Soldier.

Col. Robert Stephenson Smith Baden-Powell, whose heroic and picturesque defense of Mafeking has been no less remarkable than that of Sir George White, at Ladysmith, is a seasoned frontiersman. At the beginning of the Transvaal war, Col. Baden-Powell undertook the defense with a force consisting of a part of the First battalion of the Lancashire (Royal north) regiment, the First battalion Munster fusileers and 1,000 colonials, with one battery of artillery—in all probably 2,000 men.

The siege began on October 25, 1899, and was led by Gen. Cronje in person until he went to Kimberley to oppose Methuen. Baden-Powell was bombarded almost daily. He made occasional sorties, but his force was too small and his weapons too ineffective to make headway against the besieging force. Col. Plumer, who was stationed at Fort Tuli, in Rhodesia, raised a force of 2,000 irregulars to go to the relief of Mafeking. On January 20, reports came of the relief of the town, and there have been similar reports since.

Col. Baden-Powell, says the New York Tribune, is a cavalry officer, who joined the hussars when he was 18, and is now a lieutenant colonel in a regiment of the Dragoon guards. His life has been spent in the army and in special service and travel, and he is an authority on cavalry tactics, having written manuals on reconnoissance work and scouting. He is a natural leader of men, and rallied around him at Mafeking not only a well-known group of officers of high social position, but also a seasoned band of frontiersmen and adventurers. The defense of Mafeking has been that of a natural scout, whose ear has been constantly on the ground, listening for the stealthy approach of the foe, and whose keen intelligence and inventive skill have devised a great variety of resources for thwarting the devices of Cronje and his later opponents.

Like Cecil Rhodes, Col. Baden-Powell was born in a rectory. He is the son of the late Prof. Baden-Powell, of Oxford and Langton manor, and was born on February 22, 1857. Educated at Charterhouse, he joined the Thirteenth hussars in 1876, and, on active start, served with his regiment in India and Afghanistan and in South Africa. Early in his military career he became familiar with the parts of the African continent with which his chief work, they were to their places in front of the engine and the harness falls upon their backs. While this is going on the men spring from their beds and, in a twinkling, slip on their "bunkers"—this is, rubber boots with trousers attached—slide down the brass poles to the floor below and—well, before you can count three, they are ripping down the street to the fire. Sunshine and Fresh Air.

Sunshine and fresh air are perfectly invaluable in purifying the home. In fact, sunshine is thoroughly hostile to many disease microbes; therefore it should be allowed to flood our rooms, not only as a means of purifying them after they have been used in sickness, but as much as possible at all times. The housekeeper has always three powerful helpers in the work of keeping disease at bay—they are soap and water (especially boiling water), an abundance of fresh air and floods of sunshine. These no chemical disinfectants can equal for everyday use.

AN "EAVELOPE LIBRARY."

New Departure in Missionary Work Made by Young Women of Trinity Church.

The regular meeting of the Young Women's Mission Band was held in the lecture room of Trinity Reformed church Friday afternoon. The feature of the meeting was a very interesting talk given by A. I. Mettler, superintendent of Maroonsehr chapel Sunday-school. His talk was concerning the lumber camps in the Alleghenies in Jefferson county, Pa., where he spent much time last year. He described camp life. He also spoke of the excellent missionary work carried on at these camps and told how it was started through gifts of comfort bags sent by societies.

Mr. Mettler's talk excited more interest in the work, and the members formed what is known as an "envelope library." This was started yesterday when suitable stories and verses were cut from old papers by the members who brought scissors with them for that purpose. These clippings will be enclosed in envelopes and sent to various persons employed in the lumber camps. In this way they hope to keep in touch with persons who are in need of missionary work. It will form an incentive for more work on the part of the members of the band.

LAST PLAY OF THE SEASON.

Thursday Evening Whist Club Members Were Guests of Mr. and Mrs. Robert M. Clark.

The last regular meeting of the Thursday Evening Whist Club was entertained Thursday by Mr. and Mrs. Robert M. Clark, of this borough, and an unusually good time was had by the members, twenty in all. The first and second prizes for the women were awarded to Miss Etta Krymer and Mrs. Taylor, and F. S. Cutter and John G. MacLoughlin won the first and second honors for the men.

A feature of the event was the awarding of the prizes to the lady and gentleman who made the highest average score for the season. Miss Lizzie Smalley won the honors for the women and John G. MacLoughlin for the men. Thursday evening, April 13th, the club in conjunction with the Tuesday Evening Euchre Club and the Saturday Evening Euchre Club, will give a euchre party and dance in the Camera Club rooms. Eight prizes will be offered for competition. This event will wind up the season for the three clubs mentioned.

After the game Thursday the host and hostess served refreshments, which was followed by an informal dance.

WIND BLEW BURNING PAPER

Side of An East Third Street Home Set on Fire, But No Serious Damage Done.

The high wind blew a burning paper from a bon-fire against the rear of the home of George Grey, 412 East Third street, Friday noon. The paper burned undisturbed until the side of the house caught fire. Then the occupants of the house discovered what was happening and an alarm was sent in from Box 16, corner of East Front and Richmond streets.

The fire department was on hand in a short time and a single extinguisher did the work. The house is the property of Mrs. Hanna Westphal, of Liberty street, and is covered by insurance. The damage was slight and will not amount to over $25.

CAN'T GET THE STORE.

Shoer's Saloon on Somerset Street May Not be Opened for a Time.

Mr. Sisser, who recently was given a license to sell liquor in the Charles Bock building on the bridge on Somerset street, has not yet opened the saloon, and the chances are that he will not at once. The place he wants is now occupied by the Plainfield Building Association and that concern has no desire to vacate. Inasmuch as the association has a lease on the place they are likely to remain where they are. The tenants of the adjoining stores, a pool room and a barber shop, are perfectly satisfied and do not want to move.

Another report is to the effect that Mr. Bock wants to go into partnership with Sisser, but that the latter does not want a partner. The outcome of the trouble will be watched with interest.

PROSPERITY ENDS POOR FARM.

Only One Pauper Left for Millburn Township to Provide for.

Millburn township has decided to give up its poor farm, where in years past the paupers of the town have been housed and given employment. Under the prosperous times of the last year business has fallen off at the poor farm until there is but one pauper left, and the township committee has figured it out that what the poor farm has been costing to maintain would have paid for the board of the paupers at a good hotel at a rate of $14 or $15 a week.

Now the poor farm will be leased to somebody, and the farmer who leases it will be paid for boarding the township's poor.

TO AID THE CITY NURSE.

GOLDEN RULE CIRCLE, KING'S DAUGHTERS, GAVE DELIGHTFUL AFFAIR.

Musicale and Sale Held at Home of Mrs. John Vallant, at Myrtle Avenue, Friday Afternoon.

The Golden Rule Circle, King's Daughters, of North Plainfield, gave a delightful musicale, tea and sale of cake and candy Friday afternoon at the home of Chamberlain and Mrs. John Vallant, 19 Myrtle avenue, from 3 until 6 o'clock, for the benefit of the city nurse fund. The attendance was large and the receipts were gratifying to the members of the circle.

During the affair a musical programme was presented by Miss Grace Carroll, soprano soloist; Miss Clara VanFleet, pianist; Misses Nellie and Bessie Vallant, piano duets, and Master John Vallant, banjo solos.

Mrs. Most received the guests, assisted by several members of the circle. The dining-room Mrs. Isaac Bunyon and Mrs. Hiram B. Winckler poured chocolate and tea. They were assisted by Miss Elizabeth Hoagland, Miss May Hoagland, Miss Mamie Steiner and Miss May Conroy. Miss Bertha Stevens and Miss Ida Fountain had charge of the sale of cakes, and Miss Clara VanFleet and Miss Ada Woolston presided at the candy table. Everything was disposed of at fair prices. The net proceeds will be $25.

WATER MAIN BROKE.

Cave in Caller on Somerset Street Resulted in Lively Young Flood Saturday Morning.

There was an abundance of city water in Somerset street Saturday owing to a break in the water main that runs in from the street along side of the property owned by Surrogate Spencer. Adjoining this property work was started this week digging a cellar for a building that is to be erected by Mr. Eggerding, of Park avenue. Last Saturday the ground caved in on the side next to the Spencer property and it severed the water pipe at 11 a.m. Word was sent to the Water Company and a gang of men was put to work at once repairing the break. It was necessary to dig a trench the entire width of the street to reach the pipe, and this required considerable time.

In the meantime the water ran freely into the street, in some places nearly covering it. The work of repairing that side of the cellar which caved in will take a day or two.

TO GO INTO BANKRUPTCY

A. B. Thorn Unable to Continue Plumbing and Tinning Business — Liabilities are $10,000.

A. B. Thorn, the plumber and tinner of Somerset street, closed his place of business Friday morning preparatory to filing a petition with the United States District County in bankruptcy. The failure is due to the ceasing of building operations and inability to collect debts.

Mr. Thorn is represented by Lawyer W. S. Angleman, and the latter furnished a statement of affairs this morning. There are unsecured debts amounting to $2,500; a note, including book accounts, $1,500, and stock amounting to $3 000. In addition to the above the above the liabilities, secured by mortgages on real estate amounting to $10 000.

There seems to but little doubt but what the petition will be granted. Mr. Thorn has not decided what course he will pursue following the settlement of present business difficulties.

FACTORY BURNED.

Plant of Plainfield Kindling Wood Company at Watchung Destroyed by Fire Friday Night.

The factory of the Plainfield Kindling Wood Company at Watchung was entirely destroyed by fire early Friday evening. The fire started in the engine room when the proprietor, Winans Mobus, and his employes were home to supper. Its origin is unknown. Clarence B lyeu, a neighbor, saw the blaze and gave the alarm. A bucket brigade was formed, but the building was entirely consumed. The machinery in the factory was wrecked. The loss will reach $800. There was no insurance. The company will continue in business and orders received will be filled as usual.

ENDEAVOR OFFICERS.

Miss Yates Elected President of Crescent Avenue Church Society.

Africa was the subject of an interesting missionary study at the Christian Endeavor meeting of the Crescent Avenue church Friday evening. A number of curios from Africa were exhibited and their former use explained. A solo appropriate to the subject was sung by Chas. Lewis.

The missionary programme was followed by the annual meeting of the society. The committee reports showed a total membership of 58 persons, 18 associate members and 25 honorary members. Officers were elected for the ensuing year as follows: President, Miss Yates; vice-president, J. Stanley Voorhees; corresponding secretary, Fred G. Smith; recording secretary, Elizabeth Bruce; treasurer, Walter Sampson.

AFTERNOON SESSION OF MISSIONARY UNION

Mrs. Frederick Douglass, of Newark, Was Elected President of the Society.

PRACTICAL TALKS GIVEN

CONVENTION WILL BE HELD NEXT YEAR IN NEWARK.

Splendid Treatment Accorded the Delegates by the Ladies of Trinity Reformed Church Who Entertained.

The seventeenth annual meeting of the Women's Missionary Union Classis of Newark, which was held April 6th in the Trinity Reformed church of this city, was a very pleasant and successful affair in every way. The addresses were interesting and helpful, and the reports rendered showed a large amount of work done by the societies of the union.

At the close of the morning session, a basket luncheon was served in the lecture room of the church, under the charge of the Ladies' Christian Work Society. The delegates from each church were seated together, and coffee was served to all by the women of the society, who also served luncheon to the officers of the union and the speakers of the day.

The afternoon session opened at about half past two. An interesting and instructive address upon "The Mountain Whites" was delivered by Mrs Taber Knox, of Warwick, N. Y. She gave a very clear picture of the people living among the mountains of the south, their ways of life, and the efforts that have been made for the improvement of their condition. With the poorest kind of schools, no newspapers, scarcely any Bibles, no doctors, and with such habits as snuff dipping common among them, there is plenty of opportunity for such work.

A soprano solo, "Fear Not Ye, O Israel," was sung by Miss Etta Krymer, after which the offering was received. Mrs. I. W. Gowen making an appeal for a generous gift, and Mrs. Cornelius Schenck making the offertory prayer.

Several brief practical talks on methods of work followed. The first was on "Mission Band Work for Boys," by Miss Retta Cobb, of East Orange. She said that a worker along this line must have patience, ingenuity and prayerfulness, and that the children must be carefully studied to discover their individual tastes and capabilities. Making maps, writing short papers and getting up question matches were some of the lines of work advocated. Miss Cobb also advised the appointment of a novel officer, a bat-tender, to prevent maltreatment of the members' bats.

Miss Nina Peters, of Newark, spoke briefly on "How to Interest Young Women in Missionary Work." She advised making the study of missions a part of Sunday-school work, and giving young women some definite, practical missionary work to do close at hand.

"How to Make Missionary Meetings Interesting and Successful" was the topic of a brief talk by Mrs. William R. Wright, of Nutley. Considering that a missionary society was largely what its leader made it, she said that a president should be full of prayer, missionary information and missionary zeal; that she should be tactful, and have the ability to make other people do the work, while keeping the direction of matters herself. She said also that the most successful society was the one that cultivates most the desire to win others to Christ."

"The Place of Literature in Missionary Societies" was the subject of a paper by Mrs. C. W. Gulick, of Montclair Heights. She advised the appointment of a literary committee who would aim to introduce missionary literature into the whole congregation with which the society was connected. A missionary study class, a reading circle and an up-to-date missionary library were other suggestions.

Announcement was made by the president, Mrs. J. S. Allen, that the next meeting of the union would be held in the First Reformed church of Newark.

The election of officers for the coming year was then held, resulting as follows: President, Mrs. Frederick Douglas, of Newark; first vice-president, Mrs. Henry M. Cobb, of East Orange; other vice-presidents, the wives of all the pastors of churches represented in the union; secretary and treasurer, Mrs. C. B. VanDewater.

Mrs. Allen introduced the new president, Mrs. Douglas, to the union, then the session closed with the benediction, pronounced by Rev. Mr. Peake, of Millstone.

About a hundred and fifty delegates were present. The preparations for receiving and entertaining them were carefully made and smoothly carried out, so that all present had a most enjoyable time. The committees in charge of the affair were as follows: Reception committee, Mrs. C Schenck, Mrs. B. VanName, Mrs. A. E Gulick, Mrs. A. L. Force and Mrs O. W. Dunham; committee in charge of the luncheon, Mrs. E. T VanWinkle, Mrs. P. M. Demarest, Mrs. F. Tompkin, Mrs. Benjamin Williams, Mrs. J. Krymer and Mrs. H. W. Marshall; decoration committee, Mrs. J. G. VanDyke, Mrs. C. M. Thorpe, Mrs. B. F. Cortell, Miss Mehl, Miss Klassan and Miss Berkaw. The ushers, who also acted as waitresses at the luncheon, were Mrs. Marshall, Mrs. Leggett, Mrs. William C. Startup, Miss Ada Chandler, Miss Minnie Williams, Miss Mary Griffin, Miss Lillian A. Force, Miss Cora Laire and Miss Adelaide Baxter.

A. L. Thiswith, organist of the Trinity church, attended the convention all day and furnished the music.

BRYAN DOLLAR DINNER.

NEBRASKAN'S FRIENDS WILL GATHER IN CAMDEN.

Object is to Stir Up Sentiment So That an Instructed Delegation Will Go From Jersey.

The organized plans to capture the New Jersey delegation to the Democratic National convention will receive a fresh impetus at a Bryan dollar dinner to be given in Camden April 26. The dinner is to be under the auspices of the Camden County Democratic Club. The invitations read as follows:

The objective point of this banquet is to assemble all representative Bryan forces of New Jersey who are under any and all circumstances in favor of the nomination at the next National Democratic convention of our great leader, William J. Bryan, for the Presidency, and the sending of an instructed delegation for his nomination at such convention.

It is noteworthy that the complete surrender of our opponents to any policy or scheme which promises campaign corruption funds to be placed in the hands of the brutal Mark Hanna, and on the other hand the increasing popularity of Mr. Bryan, insures his success in November.

It behooves all lovers of liberty, humanity and prosperity to bestir themselves to band together for the overthrow and complete annihilation of the brutal spirit represented by the money trust, the commercial trust, militarism and imperialism.

The Republican party is shackled and gagged by organized greed, which impels it for the sake of corruption funds and the execution of a monarchical policy to seek the overthrow and complete annihilation of the Declaration of Independence and the Constitution of the United States.

We count you as a friend of our great leader and the principles advocated by him, and therefore most cordially solicit your presence at the banquet. Yours for the preservation of the Republic, Joseph W. Horner, chairman; Samuel M. Roberts, treasurer; Clarence Atkinson, Charles Stokes, William F. Morgan, Allyn Brewer, John Wright, Thomas Cook, Terence Mathews, Thomas Prickett, Edward Schwabenland, Charles Shuck, Edgar Conover and John F. Hall.

The men who sign the call were in the recently organized Bryan movement which started in a Philadelphia hotel

DR. SIMPSON PROMOTED.

President McKinley Appoints Him Assistant Surgeon, With Rank of Captain in Volunteer Army.

Dr. Maxwell S. Simpson, of this city, has just been honored by President McKinley, who has appointed him assistant surgeon, with rank of captain, U S. A. Dr. Simpson enlisted when the Spanish war broke out and he was surgeon of the Battalion of the Essex and Mercer Regiments, and served with his company on the Badger during the war. Later he was appointed surgeon in the volunteer army and was assigned to duty in the Philippines, where he is now stationed. His many friends in this city, as well as throughout the State, will be pleased to learn of his promotion, which is well deserved. Dr. Simpson is filled with patriotism and his love of country has been so strong that he could not refuse the opportunity to do all that is possible in this direction.

G. A. R. ENCAMPMENT.

It Will be Held in Trenton 17th and 18th of Next Month.

The next State encampment of the New Jersey G. A. R. is to be held in Masonic Hall, Trenton, May 17th and 18th.

It is very probable that a Trentonian will be again honored with the office of department commander.

Captain E. V. Richards, of Trenton, who is the present senior vice commander, is a candidate for the higher office. He is being strongly backed by Aaron Wilson Post.

A circular issued by the post and signed by General Donnelly and Colonel Stahl, Past Department Commanders, and by fifteen of the comrades who have been post commanders, makes a strong appeal for the support of Captain Richards at the coming encampment.

COL. STOWE'S WORK.

A Model Consul General at His Post in South Africa.

Kansas City Man Who Stands High in the Estimation of His Superiors and Is Working Hard for American Commerce.

The American consul general at Cape Town, James G. Stowe, was appointed January 10, 1898, and has for two years represented American interests in extreme South Africa in a manner which causes the state department to regard him as one of its most efficient agents, particularly as a promoter of increased commercial relations. His energy has been devoted to the extension of American markets, with results which have been encouraged at any of the consulates abroad, and he has frequently pointed out new and lucrative fields for the exploiting of surplus American products, particularly in the hardware line. Col. Stowe's district in South Africa, until the war began there, comprised all the territory south of Pretoria and Lourenzo Marques, including the United States consular agencies at Bloemfontein, Durban, East London, Johannesburg, Kimberley and Port Elizabeth. Now his jurisdiction is limited to British possessions, the agencies at Bloemfontein and Johannesburg having been recently attached to the consulate at Pretoria.

Col. Stowe was born at Providence, R. I., June 14, 1843, but for many years he has lived at Kansas City, Mo., where he has long been known as the most public-spirited citizen of the community. He has amassed considerable wealth as a jobber of machinery, and at the time of his appointment he was president of the Kansas City Implement, Vehicle and Hardware club, which is one of the most enterprising organizations devoted to local improvement in the city.

Col. Stowe had a common school and collegiate education, and during the civil war was an inspector of ammunition under the ordnance department. He knows no other language than English, but in one of the most finished and polished speakers of his section of the country. He has exhibited little activity in politics, has never been a prominent partisan, but has been resolute in his efforts to improve his adopted home town and increase its business prosperity and influence. A resident of Kansas City, speaking of Col. Stowe, said to a New York Tribune reporter:

"He is one of those leaders who are to be found in most of our cities, and particularly in the rapidly growing cities, where local pride runs high. Col. Stowe is our most prominent 'boomer,' always devoting himself to helping new enterprises, factories, railroads and capital generally to locate at Kansas City. He is known as a man who is always doing the greatest amount of work for the least money, who is always working for the advancement of his community in at stake, who is looked up to by every one and is 'the leading citizen.'"

Col. Stowe's appointment was made by the president upon the recommendation of Assistant Secretary Webster Davis, of the interior department, who was familiar with his admirable qualifications for consular works, and Mr. Davis started a few weeks ago for Cape Town to make Col. Stowe a visit.

The Driest Spot on Earth.

The reputation of being the driest spot on earth is claimed by Payta, in Peru, a place about five degrees south of the equator on the coast that has risen 40 feet in historic times. Prof. David G. Fairchild, a recent visitor, reports having reached there in February just after a rain of more than 24 hours, the first for eight years. The average interval between two showers is seven years. Sea fogs are common. Of about nine species of plants noticed seven were annuals and their seeds must have remained dormant in the ground for eight years. In spite of the lack of rain, the long-rooted Peruvian cotton is grown in the dried-up river bed, furnishing crops that yield subsistence to the natives.

Steam Drays in London.

Huge steam drays are now a common sight on the streets of London. They run from 2½ to 7½ miles an hour, and can carry tremendous burdens. The steam drays are 13 feet long and 6½ wide, while the bed, on which rests the load, is 8 feet from the ground by 5 feet. The front wheels are of iron, two feet and nine inches in diameter, and the tires are four inches wide. The rear or driving wheels are three feet in diameter, with tires five inches wide. Steam is generated by liquid fuel and the engine is of 14 horsepower. By the use of these drays all the space occupied by the horses on ordinary vehicles is saved, and the result is a great relief in overcrowded streets.

NEW ORGAN BUILDING FOR GRACE CHURCH

Description of Fine Instrument That Will Be Ready for Use After Easter.

BUILT BY MIDMER & SON.

THE ORGAN WILL HAVE 1,950 PIPES IN ALL.

Wonderful Creation of Expert Organ Builders as It Looks in the Factory Today—Some Interesting Details Concerning It.

The new organ for Grace P. E church of this city, is nearly completed, and as it will be undoubtedly the most modern and thoroughly complete instrument in town, a description of it will be of interest. A visit to the factory of the builders, Messrs Reuben Midmer & Son, of the Borough of Brooklyn, New York city, was exceedingly interesting and through the kindness of Reed Midmer all the vast details of the organ built in his establishment were very thoroughly explained.

Very few people have the least idea of the immensity of the work of building a modern organ, especially where the entire instrument is made on the premises, even to the casting, or making of the composition metal, of which the majority of the pipes are made. The writer was conducted through the entire plant, and then into the erecting room where the organs are put together just as they will be in the church they are made for. Grace church organ looked like a good-sized summer cottage; there were pipes from about the diameter of a straw down to the ponderous Double Diapason bass, large enough to crawl into. One of the most interesting parts of the instrument is the key-board, which is an entirely new design.

The entire organ is built on the tubular pneumatic system, so that the manipulation of the instrument is accomplished with absolutely no exertion on the part of the performer The working of the entire organ is effected with such speed and efficiency as to be marvelous. Every part works with such quietness and is immediate in response to the calls made upon it. One of the features of note is the ability to change from the most simple combination to the use of the entire instrument, without disconcerting playing, by the mere touching of a button placed between the key board. The draw stops are arranged in circular terraces of highly polished wood; the knobs are in ebony and rosewood, beautifully engraved. The organ comprises two manuals and pedals, with a compass from CC to to C4, 61 notes, on the manuals, and from CCC to F, 30 notes on the pedals It has 12 stops and 853 pipes on the great organ; 14 stops and 976 pipes on the swell organ; 4 stops and 120 pipes on the pedal organ; making 30 speaking stops of full compass and 1,950 pipes.

The combination action, for operating the stops, are situated between the key-boards, as are all the couplers There are twelve different combinations affecting the entire instrument, ranging from the softest production of tone to the immense volume of the full organ, and there are five couplers operating on the manuals and pedals. With this system of combinations, by simply pressing one of the small ivory push buttons, twenty-two in number, the stops are thrown on or off as will Each of the different combinations gives suitable pedal stops and couplers, and are all double acting. The couplers are also tubular, so that when the entire organ is used, with unison, super octave and sub octave coupler on, it plays with the same ease as with it uncoupled. Each combination, coupler and pedal movement is so marked as to be immediately detected. The entire key-board is beautifully finished in ebony and rosewood, and is a triumph of the organ builder's art.

The organ will occupy the large organ chamber in the chancel, the front pipes to be in polished quarter sawed oak, and the pipes displayed in three arches are to be finished in gold. The bellows are to be operated by an electric motor situated in the cellar under the organ. The voicing of the instrument has been the personal work of Mr. Midmer and many novelties have been introduced. Messrs. Midmer & Son are not strangers to Plainfielders; the organ now in use in Grace church having been built by them nearly thirty years ago, and the new instrument is the twelfth they have erected in this city, which certainly speaks well for those with whom they have had indeed firm and have always had the reputation for honesty and fair dealing, and the people of Grace church are to be congratulated in securing this, such a noble instrument, which will be placed in position immediately after Easter.

Park Golf Club's New Professional.

George T. Rogers, chairman of the greens committee of the Park Golf Club, has completed arrangements with Andrew B. Blair, of Donaldson, Glasgow, to secure Mr. Blair's services as club professional this season. Mr. Blair comes here from Cleveland, O., very highly recommended.

HOUSE UPSIDE DOWN.

One of the Most Unique Features of the Paris Exposition.

It Is Called "The Inverted Mansion"—Some Startling Illusions Produced by Inversion Arrangement of Mirrors.

Visitors to the exhibition at Paris who make their entrance by the Place de la Concorde will probably wonder whether they are the victims of hallucination or the subject of a seasonable practical joke. They will be confronted with a weird-looking structure, which a momentary examination will show them is in reality a house. But it is not an ordinary dwelling place. Architects usually have a weakness for laying their foundations upon a solid substratum of earth. Not so the designer of the "Manoir à l'Envers." He has laid the foundations in the clouds, and the only communication with mother earth is by way of the chimneys and turrets of his feudal mansion. Nevertheless, there is no danger of its falling into pieces with its occupants, for, be it noted, this topsy-turvy mansion is not uninhabited. The visitor draws close to the entrance at the windows; people dressed like himself look out. To his astonishment they are as topsy-turvy as the house, for their feet point skywards and their heads are directed towards the ground. If anxious to enter the house and to learn how it has become possible for mere humanity to emulate the fly and walk upside down, the visitor will find his bewilderment increased. In what ways the New York architect of the apparent intention of the designer of the "Manoir" is to instill a lasting doubt in the minds of men as to whether they do really stand on their heads or their heels.

Ultimately the visitor enters he at once becomes part and parcel of the topsy-turvy scheme. He is ushered into a room, and gradually it dawns upon him that he is really walking upon the ceiling. He looks anxiously round him for something to clutch; there is nothing! He takes one cautious step—another! He has achieved the impossible; he has learned to walk with his head where his heels should be. The lesson thus being learned, he will find it possible to enjoy with equanimity the ordinary doings of humanity from his novel point of view. He may proceed to a bathroom and perceive a steaming jet of hot water spouting upward into the tub. He may proceed to the dining-room, where, the laws of gravity being suspended, the table remains unmoved directly over his head, and all the paraphernalia of the table, the plates, the cutlery, the flowers, sustain their positions without any more effort than the guests dining thereat.

The same holds with the kitchen, where the chef, in immaculate white apron, is busily engaged in his usual duties. The cook lets fall a saucepan lid; unconsciously the visitor puts up his hand, which is useless, for there is no need for him to do so, since, like everything else in this abode, the saucepan lids obey laws of their own. Then there is the drawing-room, where strange sights abound. A chandelier he may avail himself of the unexampled opportunity afforded him for studying the art of the Parisian coiffeur as displayed upon the head of a lady who at the plano beneath is tinkling out the tune of the latest popular air. Even Gulliver in all his travels never witnessed anything more singular.

This ingenious production is the idea of a Russian engineer, and a French architect is responsible for the building itself, while Parisian capital has made its erection possible. Needless to say, an ingenious arrangement of mirrors is responsible for an illusion which for elaborate detail easily transcends anything previously attempted in the same line.

Created a Sulphur Lake.

In the western part of the Mexican state of Michoacan, near the town of Chapula, in the Guduache hacienda, an underground rumbling was heard recently, followed by a strong detonation, which threw the populace into a panic. An immense column of smoke rose from a neighboring hill, which is famous for its sulphur springs. A lake of hot sulphur water formed on the plateau of the hill. The lake is 1,000 feet across and 50 feet deep.

"God" on American Coins.

The word "God" never appeared in any government act until 1864, when, on the suggestion of the director of the mint, Pollock, of Pennsylvania, "In God We Trust" was stamped on the copper two-cent piece. Before this time "E Pluribus Unum" had been the motto. Strange to relate, "E Pluribus Unum" on coins never was authorized by law.

Salesgirls Wear an Insignia.

The salesgirls in a New Jersey town have started a crusade against the use of slang.

MUSICALE AT DR. WALDO'S.

Enthusiastic Commencement of the Engagement of His Daughter, Miss Edith Waldo, to Announced.

A delightful event of last Thursday was the reception and musicale given by Dr. Waldo, of the Shuler avenue, which was an occasion for the announcement of the engagement of his daughter, Miss Edith Waldo, to William DeV. Beach, assistant pastor of the Methodist Episcopal church at New Haven.

The affair was attended by a large number of society people from this city and New York, and was marked by many pleasant features. During the first part of the evening there were musical selections by a high order of merit by members of Dr. Waldo's family. Dr. Waldo played the 'cello; Fullerton Waldo, viola; Miss Edith Waldo, first violin, and Miss Dorothy Waldo, second violin. The renditions were perfect and called forth the approval of everyone present. Following the first part a social time was enjoyed during which refreshments were served. Then followed the second part of the musicale, which was enjoyed equally with the other.

The announcement of the engagement is to be followed by the wedding which will take place during Easter week, and which promises to be of unusual brilliancy.

Some of those present Thursday were: Mr. and Mrs. Charles W. McCutchen, Or. and Mrs. W. B. Richards, Mr. and Mrs. J. Kirtland Myers, Mrs. Joseph M. Myers, Joseph L. Myers, Mrs D. T. VanBuren, L. H. VanBuren, the Misses Martine, Councilman and Mrs. D. P. Mellick, L. V. F. Randolph and family, Miss Minnie Randolph and family, Mr. and Mrs. David P. Hall and Miss Hall, of this city; Miss Kieh, of Fanwood, and many others from New York.

DEATH OF MRS. DEPEW.

She Was the Daughter of the Late Abram Sees—A Member of Grace P. E. Church.

The death of Mrs. Helen J. Depew, daughter of the late Abram See, and widow of the late Ephraim Depew, occurred Thursday at the home of her daughter, Mrs., August W. Kielpecke, 122 East Ninth street, where she made her home for years. Mrs. Depew's great suffering from neuralgic troubles, but her last illness was pneumonia which caused her death. Mrs. Depew's father was at one time prominent in insurance circles, and was a member of the firm of See & Low. After his death his daughter retained an interest in the business. Harry Depew, her son, is now the manager of the business.

Mrs. Depew was about sixty years of age. She was a member of Grace P. E. church, where she was a faithful attendant. She was a woman possessing a great many fine qualities and an exemplary Christian. Three children survive her, Mrs. August W. Kielnecke, Mrs. A. S. Patterson and Harry Depew, all of this city.

MRS. REED WON HONORS.

Result in the "Mixed Doubles" of Bowling Contest on the Park Club Alleys.

The honors in the "mixed doubles" at the Park Club bowling alleys easily went to Mrs. Charles A. Reed last Tuesday, as the figures below will show, who rolled during the evening and they furnished a very pleasant evening. A number of spectators witnessed the matches and encouraged the contestants with their applause.

Mrs. C. A. Reed and Bert C. Ball made the highest score, 293 pins, out of which Mrs R ed made 176, which was 22 pins better than anybody else. The scores of the teams were as follows:

Mrs. A. Reed	176
B. C. Ball	117
	293
Miss Ellen Mae Howell	129
Mrs. T. V. Ball	107

COMING TO JERSEY TO LIVE.

Mr. Stuyvesant Will Buy Grand a Road Near His Gaines Preserve.

Rutherford Stuyvesant, the New York millionaire, has offered to pay one-third of the cost of macadamizing the turnpike road in Warren county from Hackettstown to Allamuchy. Mr. Stuyvesant has a county home on Allamuchy mountain in Allamuchy township and has announced his intention of becoming a citizen of Warren county.

The road to be improved is about five miles long and the cost will be about $20,000. Mr. Stuyvesant will assume the township portion of the debt at a low rate of interest.

Believed to be Innocent.

An effort is to be made to have Fred Wood, colored, of Perryville, Ky., condemned out of State Prison. Wood was convicted by the Burlington County Court on a charge of breaking and entering and assault on Mary Shinn, a widow, at Burdentown, and has served over one year, having been sentenced to 20 years. Many believe that Wood was not guilty of the charge. Mrs. Shinn was soon after adopted insane and sent to the insane asylum at Trenton.

JERSEY REPUBLICANS TO CHOOSE DELEGATES

Former Mayor Chas. J. Fisk the Probable Choice in This Congressional District

PRIMARIES ON APRIL 16th.

CONGRESSIONAL DISTRICT CONVENTION AT BELLEVILLE, APRIL 17TH.

State Convention to Choose "Big Four" Will be Held at Taylor's Opera House—Platform Delegations Unknown and None.

The Republicans of this city and all the rest of Union county will hold their primaries Monday night, April 16th, to choose delegates to the Eighth Congressional district convention at Belleville, Tuesday, April 17th, and to the State convention at Trenton, Thursday, April 19th. At both conventions delegates will be elected to the Republican National convention to be held in Philadelphia next June.

Little interest is manifested in the primaries, as there is little prospect of a fight at any of the conventions and none at all the primaries. It is really the only chance that the Republican voters of the county will have to express their opinions in the choice of the Republican nominees for President and Vice-President. There is apparently no doubt whatsoever but that President McKinley will be renominated by acclamation. On the Vice-Presidential nomination there may be a contest. Plainfield, and all of Union county for that matter, is not particularly interested in the contest, and there will be no instruction of delegates.

The Congressional district convention, which is to be held at Belleville, just outside of the city of Newark, in Essex county, will select two delegates to the National convention to represent the Eighth district. There will also be two alternates to be chosen. Four years ago Former Mayor Charles J. Fisk, of this city, was an alternate. This year he will probably be chosen a delegate. His companion is likely to be either Col. Full-r, of Bayonne, or Supreme Court Clerk William Riker, of Orange.

The basis of representation of the different wards, boroughs and townships at the convention will be one delegate for every 100 votes or fraction thereof over fifty cast at the last State election. The four wards in this city will have the choice of four delegates each, except the Fourth which has six.

Two days after the convention at Belleville, the State convention will be held at Taylor's Opera House, Trenton. At the latter gathering, the "Big Four," as the four delegates-at-large from New Jersey to the National convention are called, will be elected. The probable choice of the party will be United States Senators Sewell and Kean, Franklin Murphy, of Newark, and State Comptroller Bradley, of Trenton.

The basis of representation at the State convention will be one delegate for every 200 votes or fraction thereof over 100 cast at the last State election. Under that arrangement Plainfield will have a delegation of nine, two from each ward, except the Fourth which has three. The delegates will be chosen principally from among the leaders of the party in the various wards. It is considered too important a matter for the rank and file and the convention will include most of the prominent Republicans from all over the State.

ARCANUMITES MET.

Representatives From Many Lodges in This Vicinity Attended Greenbrook Council Meeting.

The Royal Arcanumites of this section held a union meeting Thursday at the session of Greenbrook Council, of this city. Delegates were present from Cranford, Fireside, Fanwood, Metuchen, Bound Brook, Bridgewater and Plainfield Councils. Among the distinguished officers present were Supreme Regent W. Holt Apgar, of Trenton, the highest officer of the order in the country; Grand Regent L. A. Lightfoot, of Westfield, the highest officer in the State; Vice Grand Regent Horace I. Bowne, of Hoboken; Representative to Supreme Council F. S. Potter, of Jersey City, members of Grand Council W. E. Collins, of Fanwood, and James Rogers, of Cranford, Deputy Grand Regent S. K. Meeske, of Cranford.

A period of speech-making followed the meeting, all the principal guests saying a few words. There was also a vocal solo by Frederick J. Pope. The entertainment committee in charge of the meeting consisted of William F. Oliver, C. C. Davis and M. C. VanArsdale.

In Honor of a Guest.

Miss Marie B. Anthony entertained a few friends at her home on West Front street last Thursday in honor of Miss E. Virginia Hantsch, of Staten Island. The evening was passed very pleasantly. "Progressive Letters" was the principal event. Miss Emily Runyon and Mr Howe, of Derby, Conn., winning first prizes.

PULPIT ATTACK ON THE STOCK GAMBLERS

Rev. J. W. Richardson Preaches a Sermon Indulging in Severe Criticism.

WEAK AND POOR SUFFER.

BELIEVES THE MILLENIUM WILL COME IN NEXT HUNDRED YEARS.

Society as Now Organized Fosters a Pernicious Evil—Gotten Games, the Noble Stock Jobbers' Practice a Menace to Welfare of Community.

Rev. J. W. Richardson, pastor of the Park Avenue Baptist church, preached an interesting and able sermon Monday evening on "Plain Talk About the Relation of the Classes to the Masses." His text was from Matthew 21:14—"Even so it is not the will of your Father which is in Heaven that one of these little ones should perish."

Mr. Richardson began his discourse by alluding to the difficulty the average man had to make both ends meet in his effort to gain a livelihood and the fact that there was already a great cry raised against the capitalists and the corporations in general. As regards the theory that all men are equal he said that was not literally true—from the fact that some start in life much stronger than others, while others are better educated because of the advantages possessed by their parents.

God has furnished an abundance of everything but the selfishness of mankind crowds the weaker to one side which is contrary to God's teaching. We fail to observe the Golden Rule and the result is that the little ones who are the weaker are pushed to one side.

The speaker said that there was a tremendous transformation going on in society. One hundred years from now society will be completely changed. Brains and character will supercede selfishness and be superior to it in every respect. Character and not cash will then be the criterion and enduring manhood and womanhood will prevail. All this will be brought about through Christianity. In the connection Mr. Richardson took occasion to say that the time is approaching when there will be a more definite understanding between the employer and employe—a more respectful intercourse between man and man. When that time comes the clerk will be as respected as an Astor or a Vanderbelt.

The trusts and social strata of society came in for a good deal of criticism. Society as now organized, he said, places a premium on ill-gotten gains. Men are taught the value of wealth in order to obtain social standing in the community. The covetous and selfish disposition is brought about by the greed for this wealth, which is largely gained by producing fluctuations in the market. All this takes from the poor, who are the weak children of God. The consequence is the masses suffer for the benefit of the classes. For this grinding down of the poor these men will be compelled at the awful day of Judgment to face God and render an accounting for this modern method of gambling with the lives of his people.

Mr. Richardson's denunciation of the stock speculators was particularly scathing. He said that those who manipulated the stock, particularly stocks that directly affected the comforts of the poor, were a menace to the welfare of the community. It was the grip of despotism which caused sorrow in thousands of homes and precipitated much misery. The modern methods of dishonest extortion, he believed, caused oppression and was literally legalized embezzlement.

To remove or remedy the evil Mr. Richardson suggested that the people should use their prerogative and by law restrain the classes that puts the heavy burden upon the masses. This, he said, can be done by agitation that will bring about reformation and eventually change the infamous methods now in vogue by those who seek to crowd to the wall the weaker ones.

As Christians he urged his hearers to vote against any man who favors class legislation. He demand that laws shall be enacted making it a State prison offense to so manipulate the products of that which we eat or wear as to produce extortionate prices; also to forbid the formation of trusts in coal, oil, etc. It lies entirely with the people to bring about the desired change. Legislation should be for the masses and not the classes if we wish to restrain the heavy hand of oppression that is now holding the weaker ones to its iron grip that is worse than despotism.

CHOKED HIS TENANT.

Ex Justice Mosher Held Chris. Becker for the Grand Jury.

Chris. Becker was before Justice Mosher Friday afternoon charged with assaulting Isaac Shrager, a tailor of Madison avenue. The tailor alleged that Becker, of whom he rents a store, choked him because he attempted to interfere with his landlord taking up a board walk in the yard adjoining the tailor shop. The defendant admitted that he had choked the little tailor, but claimed that the latter had threatened him. Justice Mosher held Becker to await the action of the Grand Jury.

A WARNING.

Audubon Society Cautions Men and Boys About Shooting Certain Birds.

The Audubon Society of the State of New Jersey warns the men and boys who have been shooting and pocketing birds on our public streets that there is a law for the protection of night-hawks, whip poor-wills, thrushes, meadow larks, finches, martins, barn swallows, woodpeckers, robins, orioles, red or cardinal birds, cedar birds, tanagers or other insectivorous birds. The penalty for shooting or injuring such, or having them in one's possession, is twenty dollars.

Loyal Temperance Legion Meeting.

About fifty delegates and officers of the Loyal Temperance Legion, New Jersey branch of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, met in the hall of the union in Newark Friday. There are ninety-one legions, with a membership of 4,941. Miss Alice Guernsey presided. Addresses were made and a luncheon was provided. Among the resolutions was one denouncing the manufacture and sale of liquor and cigarettes.

TURNING MILL BURNED.

OVERHEATED PIPE STARTED FIRE IN JOHN HERMAN'S SHOP.

Out of the Borough Fire District, but Firemen Tried to Save the Building—Loss is $1,500.

A serious conflagration, involving a loss of $1,200, occurred a little after 7 o'clock Monday a. m. when John Herman's turning mill, located near Smalley Brothers' stone crusher, on Somerset street, was totally destroyed. The building caught from an overheated stovepipe, which ignited the roof and the flames quickly spread to all parts of the building. Mr. Herman and his employes had been at work only a short time when the fire broke out.

An alarm of fire was sent in from Box 145, corner of Somerset street and Hudson lane, and the department responded unusually quick. It was soon learned that the fire was out of the district for the borough firemen, but Mayor Smalley gave them instructions to proceed and do all they could to save the property. Twenty two lengths of hose was laid from the hydrant at Johnston's drive to the scene of the fire, and Warren Engine was stationed by the brook closer to the fire. The West End Hose Company also responded and did good work.

By the time the firemen arrived the building was enveloped in flames and there was little chance of saving anything. The water wheel was saved by allowing it to run. The machinery in the building was not damaged to any extent. The fire was an exceedingly hot one and the firemen had all they could do to get near the place. Otto Smith, who wore a celluloid collar, suffered the loss of his collar, and his neck was burned tgritly. This was caused by a spark alighting between the neck and the collar.

The building was fully stocked and there was no insurance on the contents. There was $400 insurance on the building. This is the first fire under the new official, Chief Debele, and he is more than pleased with the way the firemen turned out and with the support given him. They responded quickly to his orders and everyone did good work.

A LIVELY RUNAWAY.

Horse Was Frightened by Women Waving a Tablecloth in Front of Him Monday Morning.

A lively runaway occurred Monday in the borough. A horse and wagon owned by C. Frank French, and driven by George Nelson, was left standing in the rear of Thorn's building on Somerset, while Nelson went into a store. In the meantime a woman in one of the upper floors waved a tablecloth out of one of the windows. This frightened the animal and he ran through the alleyway to Craig place, in making a turn to get into Somerset street the wagon was thrown against a post, and thus saved the life of a woman, who would have undoubtedly been killed. The rig then proceeded up Somerset street and collided with Henry Ustrig's baker wagon, putting the wagon almost out of business. From there the horse turned into Somerset place, and running into a fence ripped the pickets off complete ly. He also ran into Harry Hann's new bicycle, wrecking it.

By this time the fractious steed was caught before doing any further damage. The wagon is the total wreck, but the horse escaped without any injury. Mr. French signified his willingness at once to stand the expense for all damage and he will also buy Harry Hann a new wheel.

Mail Carrier to Watchung.

Inspector Chappel, of the Postal Government, has appointed Emerson C. Howard, of this city, a carrier of mail between this city, Watchung and Warrenville. He leaves the Plainfield postoffice at 9:30 a. m., and on the return leaves Warrenville at 11 a. m. At present one trip a day is made. Mr. Howard is so provided with horse and wagon that he can carry passengers back and forth as well as mail, and he takes this way of notifying the public. Patrolman Jeremiah Cash is Mr. Howard's sworn deputy, and whenever he is unable to make the trip Mr. Cash will officiate in his place.

Jubilee Singers Heard.

The Southern Jubilee Singers, from a colored industrial school in Georgia, gave a concert and entertainment in the Seventh Day Baptist church Saturday evening. A sextette sang some charming negro melodies while there were recitations and stories. A large audience was present to the entertainment and enjoyed the singing particularly.

Concerted Calls Again.

The Young Women's Mission Band of Trinity Reformed church feel very thankful for the liberal patronage of the public and their friends at the sale of home made cakes at Smith Bros. grocery on Sa urday. The demand was much larger than the supply and the sale was financially a success, over $17 being realized.

A High Chimney.

The chimney for the power-house of the organ factory at Garwood will be one of the tallest in the State. When completed it will be nearly 200 feet high.

STONE OF GRATITUDE.

Pretty Legend Told by Roman Chroniclers of the Topaz and the Emperor's Snake.

The topaz is called the stone of gratitude, and the old Roman books record the following legend from which the stone derives this attribute:

The blind Emperor Theodosius used to hang a brazen gong before his palace gates and sit beside it on certain days hearing and pitting to right the grievances of any of his subjects. Those who wished for his advice and help had but to sound the gong, and immediately admission into the presence of Caesar was obtained.

One day a great snake crept up to the gate and struck the brazen gong with her coils, and Theodosius gave orders that no one should molest the creature and bade her tell him her wish. The snake bent her crest slowly in homage and straightway told the following tale:

Her nest was at the base of the gateway tower, and while she had gone to find food for her young brood a strange beast covered with sharp needles had invaded her home, killed the nestlings and now held possession of the little building. Would Caesar grant her justice?

The emperor gave orders for the porcupine to be slain and the mother to be restored to her desolate nest. Night fell, and the sleeping world had forgotten the emperor's kindly deed, but with the early dawn a great serpent glided into the palace, up the steps into the royal chamber and laid upon each of the emperor's closed eyelids a gleaming topaz. When Emperor Theodosius awoke he found he was no longer blind, for the mother snake had paid her debt of gratitude.

DEVOTION OF A DOG.

Runs After a Railroad Train so as to Be Reunited with the Children He Loved.

On incident occurred at Perry, Okla., a few days ago which illustrates the devotion of a dog to children. Mrs. E. Butler, the wife of a grocery man, who mysteriously disappeared from Perry some weeks ago and who came from Atchison, Kas., last year, was leaving Perry for Ohio, a former home. The family dog was given to a neighbor. When the train arrived on which the Butler family was to leave the dog had broken a big rope with which he was tied to the house of his new master, and had appeared at the train. His new master and another man held the dog by a leather collar, but when the train started the dog bit both men and got away. He took after the train, barking in every jump, and for more than a mile he could be seen running after the car with all his might. The next morning when the next northbound passenger train arrived in Red Rock, a station 20 miles north of Perry, the dog was there, and made a spirited attempt to get aboard. He had to be fought off by the train crew. When the train started he ran after it, and as far as the train could be seen the dog was close behind it, barking as he ran.

The dog had not been away from the Butler children for any length of time for two years. He had followed the children by the hour and kept watch over the little beds by night.—St. Louis Republic.

INSEPARABLE FRIENDS.

Wherever This Dog Goes the Goose Which He Once Befriended Is Sure to Follow Him.

Animal friendships are curious at times. For example, look at the illustration, which represents a Canadian goose that is devoted to a dog. The goose lives at Vancouver, British Columbia, where it was being worried by several Indian dogs, when the large dog shown in the picture interfered and saved its life. Since then the goose cherished a warm attachment to the dog, who returned it. They did not separate, but slept in the same kennel and wherever the dog went the goose followed, and they were rarely, if ever, more than a few feet apart. The sequel of the story is rather sad. The owner of the dog had to leave and the goose was left to pine without its companion. The incident is described by a writer in the Field.

A Mammoth Apple Pie.

Probably the biggest apple pie ever baked was the big feature at a reception of Artie Phillips, a member of the Twentieth Kansas regiment, on Saturday night at his home in Smyrna. This soldier boy, in one of his letters from Manila, said he would give four years of his life for one of those apple pies such as his mother used to make. At the reception tendered him the pie was produced. When he was presented with a pie, square in form, measuring five feet one way by two feet the other. In the pie were two and one-half bushels of apples, ten pounds of flour, ten pounds of sugar, half pounds of lard, two pounds of butter and a commensurate amount of other articles which go in this kind of pastry. The pie was properly baked and eaten with relish.

DEXTER MASON FERRY.

Detroit Capitalist Who Wants to Succeed Pingree as Governor of Michigan.

Dexter Mason Ferry, republican candidate against Gov. Pingree, is a man of power in the political life of Michigan, and is widely influential in the business circles of Detroit. He is vice president of the First national bank, one of the organizers and officers of the Wayne County savings bank, a director of the Union Trust company and head of the seed house of D. M. Ferry & Co.

Mr. Ferry served as chairman of the state republican committee during the last national campaign, and it was due largely to his management that the state was carried for President McKinley. It was during the national campaign that Mr. Ferry's name was first mentioned as a possible candidate for the gubernatorial nomination. In 1893 his friends urged him to make the race against Gov. Pingree. He refused to do so and his name was withdrawn.

Mr. Ferry was born at Lowerille, N. Y., August 8, 1833. His ancestors came to this country in 1678 and settled in the Massachusetts colony. When young Ferry reached the age of 16 family reverses compelled him to shift for himself, and he worked for a time as a farm hand. He was ambitious, and managed to attend the district schools during the winter terms. When still a boy he had absorbed all that the teachers of the district schools were able to give. He took a position in Rochester mainly for the educational advantages offered.

Mr. Ferry came to Detroit in 1855. He worked for a time for S. D. Elwood and managed to save a little money out of a very meager salary. He formed a partnership with M. T. Gardner in the seed business in 1856. The firm continued in business for many years, and when Mr. Gardner's interests were secured and the present firm of D. M. Ferry & Co. was organized. Mr. Ferry's judgment and financial aid have been utilized in forming many of the leading enterprises of the city. Among them may be mentioned the National Pin company, the Detroit Copper Rolling Mill company and the Gale Sulky Plow company.

Mr. Ferry was married to Miss Addie E. Shaffer, of Utica, N. Y., in 1867, and they have four children. In social life he is pleasant and unostentatious.

GEORGE ESCOL SELLERS.

Original of Mark Twain's Famous Col. Mulberry Was a Quiet, Scholarly Gentleman.

Until a little over a year ago there lived in a comfortable home, just south of the tower which marks Bragg's headquarters during the battle of Missionary Ridge, one of the most interesting characters.

His name was George Escol Sellers, and he was born in Philadelphia, in November, 1808.

More than 50 years ago he was engaged in civil engineering in Tennessee, and knew more about the state, its past history, its anthropology, archaeology, etc., than most of the most intelligent natives, although he had been a citizen only about ten years at the time of his death.

After we had talked for half an hour about those old days, writes a Philadelphia Press correspondent, my friend informed him that I would like to look at his curiosities.

"All right," he said. "I will go with you to the other room."

And such a den it was as one seldom has opportunity to enter. It was a combined student's room, artist's studio, engineer's office and anthropological museum.

It was evident that Mr. Sellers had been accustomed to wealth, and his circumstances were apparently easy at the time of my visit.

Mr. Sellers was the original of Mark Twain's Col. Mulberry Sellers, but that was a rather sore experience to him, and he did not often refer to it. Sometimes, however, when talking to friends he recurred to it in very plain terms.

HENRY CLAY FRICK.

Coke and Iron Magnate Who Is Now at Onia with His Former Partner, Mr. Carnegie.

Henry Clay Frick, the coke "king" of the world, did not start life from such absolute poverty as did his business confrere, Carnegie. He is of German descent, and when he first saw the light of day in Westmoreland county, Pa., December 19, 1849, he was born into a thrifty family. He enjoyed such education as the schools of his neighborhood afforded until he reached the age of 20 years, but he was precocious in business enthusiasm and spent his vacations checking in a store. When he came out of school he went into the flouring mill and distillery owned by his grandfather and was employed as bookkeeper. On the side, he toyed with a small railroad venture which proved profitable and permitted him to amass a small capital. With this he experimented with the coking possibilities of the Connellsville coal, in which region he was located. In company with a few farmers, he got control of Broad Farm and built 50 coke ovens. Success was immediate and the capacity was soon doubled. Then more territory was secured and the number of ovens was once more doubled. The panic of '73 came on and swamped some of his partners. Securing aid from influential friends, he bought up the discarded interests and came victorious. Soon after the revival of business the profits of a single year amounted to more than the purchase price of the new properties. The immense industry to-day operates on 40,000 acres of coal in the Connellsville region, over 12,000 ovens, with a daily capacity of 22,000 tons of coke, and employs 11,000 miners and operatives. Upon the death of Thomas Carnegie, Andrew admitted Frick into the Carnegie company. He became chief of the interior for the business capacities of the comparatively young man. Mr. Frick was made chairman of the company in 1889, but a few years ago divided the responsibilities of the onerous office by having a president elected, he retaining the chairmanship. Mr. Frick has spent large amounts of money in charitable work, but has done it so modestly that the world does not know much about it.

years ago. The general is 60 years old, but he has had comparatively little experience as a fighting soldier. As a raw lieutenant he was attached to one of the regiments that took part in the Chinese war, and he was one of the officers in Napier's expedition to Abyssinia in 1867. These were the only two warlike affairs in which Cronje's pursuer ever engaged. He was promoted for the rank of major general in 1897. His intervening years had been spent in administrative work, but when he was promoted to his present rank he was made inspector general of auxiliary forces and recruiting. He is now the commander of the Sixth division of Gen. Buller's army corps.

VENABLE'S "CLUB" RAIDED BY POLICE.

Interrupted an Exciting Crap Game That Was Being Played by Dusky Sports.

EIGHT MEN WERE ARRESTED

THEY ALL CLAIMED THAT THEY WERE NOT GAMBLING.

When Arraigned in Court Monday Morning All Pleaded Not Guilty and Were Released for Trial Next Friday Morning.

The police paid a visit Saturday evening to John Venable's club room on the third floor of the building, 160 Park avenue. They disturbed a quiet game of "craps" that was in progress. The participants declare it was only a friendly game and that there was "nothing doing." The police claim that money changed hands freely. Monday morning Venable and his seven guests were arraigned before City Judge Runyon and their trial set down for Friday morning at 9:30 o'clock.

A month ago, it will be remembered, Mayor Rockefellow called the proprietors of several suspected "joints" before him and warned them to desist. John Venable was among that number. For several nights his club rooms were dark and then the old frequenters began to rally once more.

The police have watched the place carefully ever since Saturday night a raid was planned as a number had been seen to assemble there. Sergeant Kiely, Roundsman Frederickson and Patrolman Saffron quietly made their way up the two flights of stairs at 9:30 o'clock. The hum of conversation was to be heard in the hall. The door was locked and Sergeant Kiely rapped.

"Who's there?" demanded the guard inside.

"Me," growled the Sergeant in gruff tones. "Lemme in."

The door opened and the little detachment of the police entered. The green baize table suddenly lost interest to the group that surrounded it. There was only one exit and the police controlled that. "Cack" Carter looked out of the window but the ground was too far off and he surrendered with the others. There was no resistance.

Besides the eight occupants, the police captured the table with its complete outfit of cards, dice, chips and several dollars in bills and coin. Patrolman Weimzenreid was called in to assist in escorting the prisoners to police headquarters where they were locked up for the night.

Sunday morning John Venable, Harry Thomas, George Anderson, Samuel and Alexander Cuff were all released on bail for appearance this morning. Walter Carter, alias "Cack," Jerry Kinsid and Fred Taylor were locked up in default of bail. The prisoners were all colored men.

When arraigned this morning all except Carter pleaded not guilty. Carter changed his plea when he saw how the rest were going. Former Councilman Walter L. Heath had appeared for them and at his request the hearing was adjourned until Friday morning. The men were released on their own recognizance.

OFFER MADE TO ANDREW RADEL

Asked to Accept the Presidency of the Brunswick Traction Company.

The directors of the Brunswick Traction Company have tendered to Andrew Radel, of Bridgeport, retiring president of the Bridgeport Traction Company, the position of president of that road, and Judge Krueger, of Newark, the present official head of the concern, has urged Mr. Radel to accept.

Mr. Radel has practically refused the offer, as his large and growing trolley interests in Connecticut and Rhode Island, where he owns valuable electric franchises, require all of his personal attention. However, the offer is open for three months, and it may be that, if Mr. Radel can so arrange his other business in New England, he will accept. He holds out no encouragement, however, to the directors, and wishes them to understand that he cannot take the place.

FOR PROTECTION AND AID.

Steel Plate Workers Employees Elect Officers for New Year.

The Scott's Mutual Aid Association held their annual meeting Saturday evening, when officers for the year were selected as follows: President, E. J. Neal; vice-president, George Moorehouse; treasurer, H. C. Neiss; secretary, D. C. Allen; directors, Benjamin Peyser, Arthur Moore, Matthew Cooney, Frank McKay, John Kline and Elias Pangborn.

The treasurer's report showed a balance of $207.48 on hand, and that during the past year $240 was expended for sick benefits. At present there is a membership of 128, and every branch of the association is in a healthy and flourishing condition.

THE CONSTITUTIONALIST.

"Support the Constitution, Which is the Cement of the Union, as Well in Its Limitations as in Its Authorities."—Madison.

FISK WAS MADE A NATIONAL DELEGATE.

His Plainfield Friends Were Able to Make a Deal to Secure the Coveted Honor.

ORANGE HELPED TO DO IT.

FOWLER - BERGEN CONTROVERSY WORKED INTO THE CONVENTION.

Bayonne and Essex Men Combined to Beat Fisk, But Were Unable to Do So—George E. DeCamp is the Other Delegate.

(By a Staff Correspondent.)

Belleville, April 18.—Former Mayor Charles J. Fisk, of Plainfield, will be the one of the two men to represent the Eighth Congressional district at the Republican national convention in Philadelphia next June. Mr. Fisk and George E. DeCamp, of Livingston, were elected delegates at the Congressional district convention held at the Belleview hall, yesterday afternoon. The alternates chosen were Edward P. Allen, of Bayonne and John H. Eastwood, of Belleview.

All these things were not accomplished, however, in as brief a time as it takes to tell of them. While Mr. Fisk was elected by an overwhelming majority, his friends had to do some lively hustling to secure such a result. To begin with it was necessary to break up the combination that the city of Bayonne and part of Essex had formed. Then the cohorts of Congressman Fowler demanded an expression of opinion from Mr. Fisk on the Fowler-Bergen factional strife. As Mr. Fisk was not there to express himself for or against either side, they had to be content with a resolution instructing the National delegates to support Franklin Murphy for National committeeman. The Fowler faction has favored Murphy as against Barker Gummere, of Trenton, who is understood to have the support of Senator Kean.

There really wasn't the slightest reason for bringing the Fowler-Bergen fight into the convention, but some of the former's friends in Elizabeth were anxious on the subject and wished particularly to know how Mr. Fisk stood in the matter. This agitation threatened to make trouble in the Union county delegation, and, as it was, delayed proceedings for some time.

Mr. Fisk was absent, but Former Sheriff Wm. T. Kirk came in his place as delegate and told the rest that Mr. Fisk was not well enough to attend.

An attempt had been made by the Bayonne and Essex delegations to join forces and leave Plainfield out in the cold, but it happened that Essex had two candidates and its delegation was split. The Plainfield leaders hustled about and found Orange and neighboring townships ready to unite on Fisk and their choice, George E. DeCamp, of Livingston. That settled the result of the convention, while the other trouble was cleared up by deciding in caucus to instruct the delegates to support Murphy for the National committee.

It was not until 3:45 o'clock that Samuel Martin, of Belleville, chairman of the Congressional committee, called the meeting to order. Horace Roberson, of Bayonne, was made chairman and T. M. TenBrook, of Bayonne; H. L. Johnson, of Glen Ridge and Noah F. Morrison, of Elizabeth, secretary. Committees were appointed, Plainfield being represented only on the committee on credentials by Charles H. Dunham.

A somewhat lengthy platform was adopted, endorsing everything the Republicans have done, are doing or ever expect to do. While the delegation was not instructed, the convention expressed itself in favor of William McKinley as the next Republican presidential candidate.

There were a few words of commendation for Congressman Fowler were upon most of the delegates shouted and applauded for several minutes. It showed pretty conclusively the feelings of a majority of the delegates on that question at least.

Charles N. Codding, of Westfield, chairman of the Union county delegation, introduced the resolution about instructing the delegates to support Murphy and it was unanimously carried.

Then came the choice of delegates. Bayonne first put up E. P. Allen but gracefully withdrew when the result was evident and supported Fisk and DeCamp. Mr. Fisk was nominated by Ernest R. Ackerman, of Plainfield, in a little speech. Montclair and Bloomfield refused to give up the fight and named their candidate, Charles H.

PROSPERING FINELY.

St. Peter's Lutheran Congregation Finds Itself In Financial Affairs Improving Considerably.

The Evangelical Lutheran congregation of St. Peter's church is reporting good success. The members are worshipping in their own house of worship, and though no longer renting the church to others they have managed to close the last fiscal year with apparent signs of success. They have been able by recent action of the trustees to raise the pastor's salary $100, and transfer a snug treasurer's balance to their credit at the bank. This certainly reflects credit on the good management when it is considered that no concerts, sociables or suppers have been held in the church for its benefit, neither has the Synod contributed anything to the support of the work in the church.

The members are gratified with the success attained, but do not intend to rest with that, as is evidenced from the determination to open preaching stations at Cranford and Westfield. To enable Rev. Mr. Shaffer to do this an assistant from the seminary will be secured at once. In addition to this he will provide for the wants of another charge whose pastor is abroad.

HOP LEE WAS MAD.

"Waiters" Man Did Not Like the Way His Shirt was Ironed, but His Protest Didn't Avail Him.

Hop Lee, the West Front street Chinese laundryman, came near getting himself into trouble Tuesday afternoon with a customer. The latter called to explain some trouble about a shirt that was poorly ironed. Hop decided after looking at the shirt that he did not do the work. This angered the customer who talked in strong language to the Chinese. One word brought on another and finally the Chinese picked up an iron and was about to strike the customer, when Hop's assistant jumped in and separated the two. The customer walked out declaring that he would have satisfaction and that he would secure the services of Captain Grant to assist him.

SYSTEM TO A FINE POINT.

Superintendent of Highways Doud Inaugurates It in the Borough.

Thomas Doud, superintendent of the streets in the borough, is about to put in operation a system whereby an accurate and detailed account of every man employed in the borough on streets can be kept and referred to at any time. This system will be used in connection with the sprinkling of the streets, and this will tell exactly what the cost will be for the sprinkling and how long it takes to cover the borough. A personnel of the men will be kept and their work will be noted. Mr. Doud desires to place the work on a systematic basis and secure for the borough the greatest amount of work for the least money, consistent with fair wages for the work done.

MARRIED AT ST. MARY'S.

Nuptials of Annie O'Brien and Herman Bedrupt Celebrated Monday.

The marriage of Miss Annie O'Brien and Herman Bedrupt, of this city, took place Monday evening at 8 o'clock at St. Mary's church in the presence of a number of relatives and friends. Rev. Father Westman, assistant rector, officiated. Miss Maggie O'Connor, of this city, was the bridesmaid, and Thomas O'Keefe, also of this city, was best man.

The bride was gowned in blue silk trimmed with white satin, and the bridesmaid wore a gown of white organdie over pink silk. After the wedding the bride and groom returned to their home on South Second street, where a wedding supper was enjoyed by many friends.

Rushing Trolley Work.

Work is being rushed on the trolley line between Westfield and Rahway, and by May 15th cars are expected to be running over the route. Gangs of workmen are also preparing the Woodbridge and Sewaren end of the course, getting ready for the increase of travel that is expected when the road is completed. Cars are expected to run at intervals of fifteen minutes' headway, instead of about forty-five minutes, as isthe case at present.

Club Car "Evona" Overhauled.

Saturday the club car "Evona," which is run on the Central railroad between Plainfield and Jersey City, and which has been in the company's shops in Elizabeth, being given a thorough overhauling, was sent to Jersey City and was placed in commission Saturday night.

—The Plainfield Photograph Supply Company, 133 North avenue, have just received a complete line of photographers materials, camera etc. Their prices are as low as New York.

WORK OF ENDEAVORERS.

CITY UNION HEARS WHAT HAS BEEN DONE DURING THE YEAR.

Miss Hawkins Elected President for the Year—Reports From Various Committees.

The annual meeting of the Plainfield Christian Endeavor Union was held Tuesday night in the lecture room of Trinity Reformed church. There was a good attendance in spite of the threatening night. Miss Florence Genevieve Hawkins, president of the Union, was in the chair. E. C. Martin acted as precentor, and Miss Lillian A. Force as pianist.

The meeting began with a service of song, after which brief devotional exercises were conducted by Rev. Cornelius Schenck, Ph. D., pastor of the church in which the meeting was held. The minutes of the last meeting was read by the secretary, Miss Edith L. Smith, and accepted. Miss Smith then gave a general report of the year's work in the societies of the union. This was a most encouraging report. There are now in the union fourteen societies, with more than six hundred active members. The junior work was said to be succeeding equally well, while the Union as a whole reported excellent work done in various departments, and some fine meetings held.

This report was followed by that of the missionary department, of which Mrs. David H. Rumph is chairman. The Union has held a missionary mass-meeting, provided during the summer for an outing for twenty little girls from New York, and promoted the reading of missionary literature.

The roll-call of societies followed, after which came the election of officers. This resultrd as follows: President, Miss Florence Genevieve Hawkins; first vice-president, Jos. DeGroff, Dunellen; second vice president, Miss Nettie J. Beesking, of Washington-ville; secretary and treasurer, Miss Ernestine C. Smith.

The offering was then received, Miss Nancy Bandolph singing an offertory solo.

The first address of the evening was by Rev. Alexander McGeorge, of Newark, who told of the work of the J. Clement French Industrial Home for Men, which has been made a memorial of the late beloved State president. This industrial home was the last work undertaken by Dr. French. The aim of the institution is to help men to help themselves. Mr. McGeorge told of the starting of the home, and gave some illustrations of the good work it is doing.

Mr. Martin sang "The Homeland," then Miss Hawkins introduced Dr. Ward, of Lyons Farms, who told of "The Personal Side of Dr. French." He gave a short biographical sketch of Dr. French, speaking especially, however, of what he was as a Christian Endeavorer. Dr. Ward read extracts from several letters written by friends of Dr. French, telling what he had been to them and told of his many beautiful traits of character, and of his noble work for the Master. He died March 14th, 1899, after a long illness, leaving behind him great and general sorrow.

After the singing of a hymn, and the benediction pronounced by Rev. A. E. Main, an informal social was held, under the charge of the Union social committee.

MAYOR WAS LENIENT.

He Presided in City Court and Suspended Sentence on a Quartette of Offenders.

Mayor Rockfellow was kind yesterday. In the absence of City Judge Runyon with illness he presided in the City Court this morning and suspended sentence on the quartette of offenders arraigned before him. In the case of David Thompson, colored, who threw bricks and hatchets at his wife and the neighbors Monday afternoon, there was a proviso to the suspension of sentence. Thompson had to promise to give up drinking for a year. Thomas Keanedy, who was arrested yesterday by Roundsman Flynn for being drunk, was arraigned and sentence was suspended. John Lawler, a hobo, arrested last night by Patrolman Mattox, was allowed to go on promising to leave town at once. Sentence was suspended on Robert Kelly, arrested by Roundsman Flynn for being drunk.

Borough Public Hearing.

The Borough Council will hold an adjourned meeting Friday evening of this week when the sidewalk ordinance will come up for a second reading and a public hearing will be granted those interested.

A Farewell Reception.

Mr. and Mrs. T. W. Powell, of Fairview avenue, gave a farewell reception at their home Tuesday. They will leave next week for Asbury Park, where they will remain this summer.

"THE OTHER WOMAN" AT THE PARK CLUB.

Bright Comedy Sketch Given by Amateur Dramatic Talent Tuesday Night.

CLEVER ACTING WAS SEEN.

TWO JUVENILE ACTRESSES MADE THE HIT OF THE EVENING.

They Portrayed Country Children—The Dramatic Part of the Entertainment Was Followed by an Informal Dance.

Two little comedy sketches, produced by local talent, were greatly enjoyed by an audience that filled the small hall at the club house of the Park Club last Tuesday. After the entertainment came an informal dance. The whole affair formed the Park Club's share in the festivities of Easter week.

A one-act curtain-raiser, entitled "The Other Woman" was first given by Miss Grace E. Overton and Miss Edith L. Burt. Miss Overton was the social chatterbox with Miss Burt as a guest at her afternoon tea. There was a man in it, of course, although he didn't appear on the stage. The portrayal of the character of the hostess, with all her chatter and gossip, by Miss Overton, was excellent. She told of the man, what a great flirt he was and how he was about to marry an heiress. Then she gossiped about his entanglement the summer before with "the other woman," which happened to be, of course, Miss Burt. The efforts of the latter to appear unconcerned were cleverly shown.

"'Tis an Ill Wind That Blows No Body Good," was the title of a clever sketch in two scenes. Miss Overton appeared as the country house maid, and took the part in delightful fashion. Miss Burt and Miss Alice Barlow, as young women from the city, had come to the country for a visit accompanied by their French maid, Miss Mabel VanDeventer. The two trouble at once between the maids that did not end until the second scene when the French maid departed to marry the other's butcher sweetheart.

Miss Overton is a clever young woman and was able to take the difficult part with much success. Miss Burt was perfectly natural in her acting and put a deal of enthusiasm in her work. Miss Barlow was the charming young society woman, more quiet perhaps than her friend, but filling the role satisfactorily. Miss VanDeventer made a capital French maid.

The hit of the evening was, however, the appearance of two youthful participants, Marion Overton and Margaret Townsend, as the two country children in all the glory of their gingham gowns and sunbonnets.

Both plays were well received and words of commendation were generously bestowed on the young woman at the completion of the programme. During the intervals there were mandolin solos by Everett Murray, accompanied by Miss Alice Barlow on the piano.

MISS WALDO A BRIDE.

Wedded to Rev. DeV. Beach, of New Haven, at His Father's House Tuesday.

A very quiet wedding took place Tuesday at noon at the home of Dr. Leonard Waldo, of Stelle avenue, when his daughter, Miss Edith Waldo, and Rev. William DeV. Beach, assistant rector of a Methodist Episcopal church of New Haven, were united in marriage in the presence of guests to the number of about fifty. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Edward Greer Fullerton, of Bridgeport, Conn., uncle of the bride.

The home was prettily decorated with roses and smilax. After the ceremony and congratulations a wedding luncheon was served. Mr. and Mrs. Beach left Plainfield during the early part of the afternoon to enjoy their honeymoon. They will take up their residence in New Haven upon their return.

Father Smyth Invites the Veterans.

Rev. Father Smyth, pastor of St. Mary's R. C. church, has extended an invitation to the members of Winfield Scott Post, No. 73, G. A. R., Woman's Relief Corps and Sons of Veterans, to attend divine worship at his church the Sunday evening prior to Memorial Day. It is always customary for some pastor to extend this invitation, and Father Smyth desires that his invitation be accepted, which it will be undoubtedly. The invitation will be acted upon within a short time.

LICENSE FEE IS RAISED.

SOMERSET WHOLESALE DEALERS MUST PAY $400.

The Fee Has Been $125 in the Past—W. J. Logan Elected Foreman of the Grand Jury.

Somerville, April 18.—The Somerset county Grand Jury for the April term of the Supreme Court was organized yesterday by electing Wm. J. Logan, of Bridgewater, foreman, and not Mayor Smalley, of North Plainfield, as was erroneously reported yesterday.

That there is to be a decided change in relation to the treatment of liquor dealers in Somerset county under the judicial administration was evidenced in the announcement that hereafter the fee to be exacted for wholesale liquor licenses will be $400, instead of $125, as it has been in the past. The following licenses were granted:

Hotel—Charles Jensen, North Plainfield; George W. Olmstead, East Millstone; Aug. Bechtold, Harlingen; Edward Schoos, Warrenville; William O. Allen, Liberty Corner; Fred A. Nelson, Washingtonville; James Toman, Chimney Rock; Martin Liddy, Bernardsville; John W. Hulsizer, East Millstone; Henry J. Ideh, Rocky Hill; Pauline Able, Neshanic Station; Edward T. Wright, Millstone; John J. O'Kane, Kingston; Andrew H. Schley, Bernardsville: Ellis Sutton, Peapack; David S. Young, Mt. Bethel; Thos. Howard, Bedminster; Wm. J. Sisser, Raritan; Richard O'Connor, Jacob J. Mauer and Frederick Coombe, Bound Brook; Chas. H. Fury, William H. Cawley, Somerville, Sarah L. Fisher and Mary A. Caldwell both had applications for the Middlebrook Hotel, owned by Miss Fisher. Mrs. Caldwell is now in possession. There was a remonstrance against the latter. The court laid the matter over until Friday. Judge Magie also remarked that David S. Young, of Mt. Bethel, had not paid his last year's fees until recently, and he would give him a chance Friday to be heard. The following wholesale licenses were granted: Michael Bremer, Bound Brook; Peter Bailey, N. J. Bottling Association, Somerville and North Plainfield. Saloons—John Donahue, South Bound Brook; Richard Hickey, Cornelius Hickey and John Traynor, Raritan.

The calendar was called and all the Supreme Court cases, but two, went off for the term. These two were set down for the 23d and 25th. Only four of the Circuit Court cases were ready. They were taken up today. The first one called was that of Kate Hodge, administratrix, against Benjamin F. Jennings, executor, on contract. Alvah A. Clark appeared for plaintiff and W. S. Angleman, for defendant.

The slander suit of Wesley Brokaw against W. L. Saunders was laid over until the September term at the request of James J. Bergen, lawyer for the defense. Irving L. Brady, Brokaw's attorney, had agreed with Saunders' first lawyer to try the case this term, but Mr. Saunders made a change and so the case went over.

A non-suit was granted by Justice Magie this morning in the Circuit Court at Somerville in the action of Kate Hodge, administratrix of the estate of William J. Hodge, deceased, against Benjamin F. Jennings, executor of the estate of Emily Hodge, deceased.

Before Emily Hodge died in 1894 she gave a note for $300 to William J. Hodge, then her husband. The note was to be payable the day after her death. After the death of both Wm. J. Hodge married Kate Hodge.

Some time after Wm. J. Hodge died when Kate Hodge brought suit against the estate of Emily Hodge to recover on the note.

Communion of Good Manners.

The last meeting for the season of the Ethical Culture Society, a branch of Unitarian and Other Liberal Christian Women was held Tuesday afternoon at All Souls' church, Park avenue, at 3:30 o'clock. Considering the inclement weather there was a fair attendance and all enjoyed thoroughly the lecture given by Mrs. Florence Howe Hall on "Christian Courtesy the Corner-stone of Good Manners." Mrs. Hall treated the subject in a broad manner and the various excellent points were given due emphasis. Following the lecture a general discussion of the subject was indulged in by those present. After the meeting tea was served by members of the Alliance.

Death of Austin Sturtevant.

The death of Austin Sturtevant occurred at his home on Liberty street last night. The funeral will be held Friday afternoon from his late home. Central and Columbia Lodges, A. O. U. W., are invited to attend.

James McCann, of South Second street, has entirely recovered from a recent serious illness.

OLD FIRE BOYS DINED.

Members of Alert Hose Company Had a Good Time at the Hotel Kensington.

Alert Hose Company, No. 1, which for many years performed good fire protection service in this city, has now officially, as well as otherwise, passed out of existence, and the company and its deeds can now be considered as history. The act that caused this passing event was a dinner given last Tuesday at the Hotel Kensington, by members of the company. It was the desire of all to sit about the festive board once more and swap stories of old times. There were plenty of good speakers present and their talents were used to good advantage.

Prior to the banquet the members held a meeting in which they closed up the affairs of the association. It was about 9 o'clock when the meeting adjourned and the members took their seats at the table, and from that time until the small hours the members thoroughly enjoyed themselves. Those present were W. H. Cook, R. M. Stelle, S. Frank Corbell, F. D Herring, S. F. Kimball, Joseph M. Hawkins, E. H. Lowry, L. G. Simpson, W. S. Lowry, W. F. Arnold, R. H. Anthony, J. L. Moore, Louis M. Stover, C. O. Barnett, Townsend Bushnion, Roger F. Murray and J. B. Dumont.

WILL SUPPORT VOORHEES.

Union County Delegates Will Vote to Have the Governor Chosen as One of the "Big Four."

The Republican State convention will be held at Trenton today to select the "Big Four" to represent New Jersey at the national convention and to name the successor to the late Garret A. Hobart in the national committee. The only question regarding the composition of the "Big Four" is whether it will be Governor Voorhees or Barker Gummere, of Trenton, who will be of the party. The others will be the two Senators, Kean and Sewell and Franklin Murphy, chairman of the State committee. It is understood that most of Union county, including this city, will support the Governor.

ON CITY SIDE TOO.

Project to Have Somerset Street Widened on Both Sides of the Brook.

Borough Councilman Robert Clark, Jr., and the street committee, of which he is the chairman, will at an early date hold a conference with the street committee from the Common Council for the purpose of discussing the advisability of widening Somerset street from Front street to the bridge. It is the intention of the borough officials to widen the street from the bridge to Jackson avenue, but they would like to see the widening continued through to Front street so that it may be uniform.

It is proposed to ask F. M. French to move his stable that are now located on the sidewalk, and to secure if possible the closing up of the area way alongside of the building occupied by the News. The officials believe that the time has arrived when this improvement is demanded, and every effort will be made to make it.

Found Dead in Bed.

Somerville, April 18.—Alexander Dunn, aged 74 years, a prohibitest and well-known citizen of this place, was found dead in bed Monday morning at the residence of his son on West Main street. As the bed clothes were not disturbed it is evident that he passed away in his sleep. Heart trouble is the cause assigned for death. Mr. Dunn owned a large farm and lived at Greenbrook for over thirty years. He had been in his usual good health, and was not sick a day. He leaves one son, Fred Dunn, with whom he lived. The funeral services will be held from the residence of the son tomorrow morning at 10 o'clock. Interment will take place at Evergreen Cemetery, this place.

Mr. Fisk Home Again.

Former Mayor Cone J. Fisk, of West Seventh street, returned from Lakewood Monday night. An attack of the grip has kept him at home ever since and he was unable to attend the Congressional district convention at Belleville yesterday on that account.

New Plant for New Orange.

Elizabeth, April 18.—Ground was broken Monday morning at New Orange for a large chandelier factory which, when completed, will furnish employment to 600 people. The builder is Mr. Williamson, of New York. The plant will cost $50,000. In connection with it 140 houses are to be erected for the use of the employes and their families.

CHURCH GOVERNMENT OF PRESBYTERIANS.

The Elizabeth Presbytery Continues Its Sessions in Hope Chapel.

GOOD REPORTS ARE MADE.

PLAINFIELD CHURCHES ARE IN A PROSPEROUS CONDITION.

Delegates Elected to the General Conference—Candidates for Ministry Examined—Want Better Sabbath Observance.

A business session was held this morning, the moderator being again in the chair. The first business of yesterday was the examination of candidates for the ministry. Three candidates were present, Walter B. Greenway, Robert D. Schoonmaker, and John F. Dobbs.

Robert M. Cumings was also received under the care of the Presbytery as a student preparing for the ministry. The time for the consideration of other business arrived before the examination was concluded, and it will be resumed this afternoon.

The delegates to the General Assembly at St. Louis were next to be elected. The election resulted as follows: Pastors, Rev. Dr. Kempshall and Rev. G. Kennedy Newell; alternates, Rev. Mr. Mason and Rev. Mr. Flathaway; elders, Messrs. Smith and Stephenson; alternates, Messrs. Squier and Bull.

A fifteen minute address on the Sabbath question was delivered by Rev. Dr. Hathaway, secretary of the American Sabbath Union. Dr. Hathaway, began by saying that most of the evils which exist in the country are the result of Sabbath desecration. He drew a startling picture of the way the God's day is used for work and amusement, and then spoke of the need that the church should awaken to the state of things and work unitedly to change it. He told something of the efforts of the American Sabbath Union, and begged that they be sustained. He spoke especially of the Paris Exposition, and the efforts of the Americans to close their exhibits Sundays.

The meeting closed with a devotional half hour, conducted by Rev. George Buckle, of Elizabeth. At 12:30 the Presbytery adjourned for luncheon to meet again at 2 p. m.

The second session of the meeting of the Elizabeth Presbytery now being held in Hope chapel began Tuesday afternoon at 2 o'clock. Rev. Mr. Cobb, of Elizabeth, the newly elected moderator, was in the chair. The afternoon session was devoted to having the minutes of former meetings and other reports read, and the transaction of other routine business.

The moderator appointed two special committees, as follows: Committees, Messrs. Perry, Kerr and Pierson; committee on judicial commissions, Messrs. McKelvey, Green, Atwater, Kempshall, Richards, Cross and Stephenson. An invitation was extended to the Presbytery to hold their next meeting at Liberty Corner. This invitation was accepted.

Reports were rendered concerning the work and condition of the churches in the Presbytery during the past year. Nearly all were extremely encouraging. The pastors of the Plainfield churches told of a year of successful efforts and growth. Dr. Richards said that Crescent Avenue church had never had a better year, and that there was to close resting on Hope chapel; he told of spiritual awakenings, the building of the new chapel, and steady, consecrated work. Affairs in Warren chapel, according to Mr. McKelvey's report, are in a satisfactory condition with a growing membership and well attended meetings. Rev. Mr. Tilden of Scotch Plains gave an encouraging report of that church, speaking especially of the work among young people. For the Dunellen church A. A. Lake reported good attendance at meetings, and larger gifts to missions than for several years.

Rev. C. E. Herring, of the First Presbyterian church, could not be present, but an elder of the church, Wm. H. Shotwell, rendered an encouraging report. Nearly all the reports received from churches in membership, large and helpful meetings, and active societies. There was a considerable amount of discussion as to the real spirituality in the churches, it being emphasized that spirited meetings are not necessarily spiritual ones, and that enthusiasm in work is not the same thing as a deep religious life. The consensus of opinion, however, seemed to be that there is much real spirituality in the churches, and in many cases a perceptible growth in the Christian life. One most dis-

LOST TRIBE OF ESKIMOS.

The Strangest Anthropological Find That Has Been Recorded in Recent Times.

The strangest anthropological "find" recorded in the last decade of the nineteenth century will soon be announced by the American Museum of Natural History. It is nothing less than the discovery, on a lonely island in Hudson bay, of a lost tribe of Eskimos, a community which has been without intercourse with other representatives of the human species for centuries, and whose members never saw a white man until a few months ago. They are still in the stone age, knowing no metals; they grow no plants and their houses are built of the skulls of whales.

The home of this strange tribe is on Southampton island, a piece of watergirt terra firma nearly as big as the state of Maine, situated at the north end of Hudson bay. Apparently the people have lived there ever since civilization times, and to-day they live and subsist in exactly the same way as they did then.

Having been isolated for so long a period, it is natural they should exhibit many characteristics. A superb collection of utensils, weapons of the chase and other objects, made through the agency of Dr. Franz Boas, has been brought to New York in a whaling vessel and deposited in the Museum of Natural History.

The houses of skulls, more properly described as huts, are built by putting together the great jaws of right whales, which are covered over with skins. In the middle of this primitive dwelling is an elevated place on which stands the inevitable stone lamp, employed for lighting, heating, cooking, melting snow, drying clothes and in certain arts. It is nothing more than an open dish of rock oil or seal oil, with a wick of dry moss soaked in fat.

The whale is the chief means of subsistence of these strange people. They use the whalebone in a variety of surprising ways, making their snow shoes and buckets of it by bending it into rounded shapes and sewing on the bottoms. Many of their implements are of whalebone, and from the same stuff they manufacture toboggan-like sleds.

The tribe comprises only 58 individuals, about equally divided between the sexes. Its members speak a dialect peculiar to themselves and quite unlike that employed by any other Eskimo. A strait about 20 miles broad separates Southampton Island from the western shore of Hudson bay, where there is a colony of Eskimos, and once in a very long while the strait freezes over. This happened, it is said, 75 years ago, and then a few hunters came over from the island to the mainland, where they were much surprised to encounter other human beings like themselves, having doubtless imagined that they were the only people in existence.

On Southampton island there is no soapstone, which among the Eskimos elsewhere is the favorite material for pots and kettles. Hence the people of the lost tribe are obliged to make such receptacles out of slabs of limestone, glued together in rectangular shapes with a mixture of grease and deer blood. In the same way they manufacture their lamps, and this fact is another evidence of the prolonged isolation of the community described, inasmuch as Eskimos, when they can obtain no soapstone in their own neighborhood, will pay any price to get it from some other more fortunate tribe.

Sometimes they will make trips lasting several years in quest of this material, which is rare and not often discovered in pieces large enough for lamps or pots.—Cincinnati Commercial Tribune.

ODD TOWN OF CULLODEN.

The Liquor Element "Engineered" the Anti-License People Out of the Village.

"I reckon we've got the oldest town in our state that there is in the United States," said a West Virginia man at the Aquarium. "Ever hear of Culloden? I don't mean the claze of Culloden, I mean Culloden, West Virginia. Well, sir, about half the population of the town doesn't live in the town and can't vote in the town, although they are right in the town.

"It's plain. The good people, and they are in the majority, too, are down on saloons and liquor in any shape. They got up a temperance meeting and purposed to drive the liquor men out of town. When you find a West Virginian who believes in liquor you find a man who is ready to fight for it. The liquor people got together and in some way got the confidence of the town engineer. I don't know whether he was a liquor man or not, but they got him on their side. The engineer discovered that the town was not laid out right and he got authority to change the metes and bounds. When he finished the job the temperance people found out that they lived just outside of the line of the town, no matter what part of the town their houses were in. A man could stand in his back yard and talk to the man whose place right up to the line in place, and who was a voter, but the first man had lost his vote.

"The lines of the engineer excluded, as I have said, the temperance people. It took in the license folks all right. The map of Culloden as it is now looks a good deal like a sheet of paper after a fly with ink on its feet meanders across it. You can tell how a citizen of Culloden stands on the liquor question by the place where he builds a house, if he builds one, which doesn't often occur. In spite of its zigzag boundaries, however, Culloden is a contented community."—N. Y. Sun.

Don't Do It.

Don't try to down trouble by raising fists or checks.—Chicago Dispatch.

OLD HARRISON HOMESTEAD

Many Famous Personages Have Lived Under Its Roof

[Special Cincinnati Letter.]

WHATEVER may be one's partisan convictions, the fact that the Harrison family is one of the most illustrious in American history cannot be denied. At least three of its members have played epoch-making parts in the forming and development of the government of the United States. Benjamin Harrison, who was born in Charles City county, Va., in 1726, was one of the signers of the declaration of Independence, for four terms served as a member of congress, was twice elected governor of Virginia, besides filling many other offices of honor and responsibility. His third and youngest son, William Henry Harrison, born February 9, 1773, was the ninth president of the United States, and one of the most gallant, intrepid and loyal soldiers of his time. For several years he was a member of congress and governor of the territory of Indiana, which then included the present states of Indiana, Illinois, Michigan and Wisconsin; and in this position secured the subdivision of public lands into small tracts and the passage of many measures for the welfare of actual settlers. In 1811, when it seemed that the hostile Indians would massacre all the white settlers, he gave the redskins battle at Tippecanoe and defeated them. Equally conspicuous and patriotic were his services on the Wabash during the war of 1812. In 1839 he was nominated for president by the whigs, and elected next year after a red-hot campaign in which log cabins and hard cider were made the party emblems. A few days after his inauguration he was prostrated by a chill and died April 4, 1841, just one month after having assumed the duties of his office.

In 1814 Gen. Harrison established a family homestead at North Bend, O., not far from Cincinnati, at the junction of the Ohio and Miami rivers. When President Jackson, at the outset of his administration, recalled him from his post as minister to the United States of Colombia, he retired to this North Bend estate, the eastern end of which the manor house consisted of a log cabin that had been built by one of the first settlers of Ohio, but which had long since been covered with clapboards. In this house was reared John Scott Harrison, the general's son, who served in congress from 1853 to 1857; and on August 20, 1833, Benjamin Harrison, who was elected president of the United States in 1888, was born in the same historic old mansion.

Originally the Harrison estate consisted of 600 acres, but when it was sold a few weeks ago to Mrs. O. H. Hall, of Cincinnati, but seven acres remained. John Scott Harrison was a good man, but a poor manager, and permitted the property to drift away from him. For a time it looked as though the old Harrison homestead would fall into the hands of speculators and be torn down, but Mrs. Hall, prompted by a commendable desire to keep the property intact as a kind of historical charge, purchased it for $15,000 and has just erected a brass tablet over the main entrance setting forth the fact that the house had been founded by the hero of Tippecanoe.

How long the old property will thus be preserved for the public is, of course, hard to tell; but a movement is now on foot to have some society or other take charge of it. It has been suggested that the Daughters of the Revolution enter into negotiations with Mrs. Hall for the purpose of obtaining control of the house and refurnishing its empty rooms. It is believed that in the course of time it might again become an inspiration to patriotic pilgrims, as it was back in the thirties when thousands journeyed to North Bend to rest and refresh themselves under the mighty trees which shaded its hospitable entrance.

CRAZY AS MARCH HARES

The Jacobite Agitators of England and Scotland

[Special London Letter.]

THE craziest organization of which we have any record in England at the present time is the "Legitimist Jacobite league," formed for the purpose of restoring the Stuarts to the throne of Great Britain. Its membership is not very large, but it's noisy, and whenever the anniversary of the death of Charles I. comes around its ringleaders hold semi-public meetings, denounce Queen Victoria's title to the throne and indulge in talk which, were it not so extremely ridiculous, would be seditious. They pay homage to a Bavarian princess whom they are pleased to call "Queen Mary III. and IV. of Scotland and England," and whose praises they sing in prose and verse.

Just now the Jacobites are scattering circulars and posters through London and the provinces in which the government is denounced for plunging the country into war with the South African republic.

Here at home the Jacobite agitation is looked upon as a joke, but in some of its leaders have succeeded in enlisting the services of two or three otherwise sane American correspondents in their agitation it might be well to state that the "rightful heir" of the Stuart contingent is a charming German princess who takes but little stock in the pronouncimentos of her deluded followers.

Queen Mary IV. of the Jacobites is Princess Mary Theresa, wife of Prince Ludwig, heir presumptive to the throne of Bavaria. She was born an archduchess of the ancient house of Austria-Este-Modena. She is a direct descendant of Mary Stuart, James I. and the ill-fated Charles I., who was decapitated by order of Oliver Cromwell. After the collapse of the lord protectorate Charles II. became king; and he, in turn, was succeeded by his brother James II. The latter was such a dismal failure as a ruler that he was deposed, his daughter Mary and her Nassau husband, William, succeeding to the throne, although his sister Henrietta Anne, seventh child of Charles I., was next in line of succession. It is from this sister that Princess Mary, the present queen of the Jacobites, is directly descended.

Princess Mary, who, in the course of time, will be queen of Bavaria, has no unfriendly feelings toward the "usurping" Victoria. She is a happy wife and mother, and occupies one of the prettiest palaces in Munich, a city noted for its magnificent public buildings. Vanity being an heirloom of kings as well as paupers, it is to be supposed that she is not averse to being addressed as "her majesty" by 4,000 or 5,000 half-baked Britishers and Englishmen, but she has sense enough not to enter into any sort of "entangling alliances" and conspiracies. The present king of Bavaria, Otto, is crazy as a March hare; the prince regent of the kingdom, Luitpold, is a very old man, and it is only a question of a few months when her husband, Prince Ludwig, will be ruler of the Bavarian kingdom and the head of the Wittelsbach family, one of the oldest and most distinguished of royal houses.

The London legitimists claim that the princess is ready to "stand up for her rights" whenever a good opportunity shall arrive; but as she has a sensible husband and is surrounded by advisers who take more interest in the welfare of the house of Bavaria than the interests of a band of political fanatics in a foreign land, it is safe to presume that the call for a Jacobite uprising will not be responded to in our day. At any rate, the Hanoverianians who now share the spoils of British royalty do not seem to be quaking in their boots.

IN THE PUBLIC EYE ABROAD

Statistical and Historical Data Bearing on the News of the Day from Foreign Lands

Public Improvements in Siam. Siam is receiving considerable attention from all portions of Europe at the present time. Surplus capital from England, Germany, France, Italy and other nations is seeking an outlet in this little kingdom.

There is a great amount of building going on in Bangkok; a conservative estimate placing the number of permanent buildings that have been erected during the last year and are now in process of construction at 2,500. These do not include the temporary structures of the natives, but represent all styles of more permanent buildings, from the rented shop and humble dwelling to the new palace as it stands and the most pretentious modern dwelling house. The materials used in the construction of these buildings are wood, brick, corrugated iron and tile. A few years ago teak wood was the most common building material, but the great advance in the price of teak has led to the importation of cheaper woods and an endeavor to obtain other lumber from the forests of Siam. Several large fires have given rise to ordinances prohibiting "attap" (thatched) roofs or bamboo structures in the city in future. These circumstances, on the whole, have proved beneficial, for the city now rising is for a large part made up of brick, iron and tile.

The sanitary department has also taken advantage of these fires to broaden the streets in the burned districts, so as to give room for sidewalks of brick and cement and open brick sewers between the sidewalks and the streets. These improvements are now being pushed beyond the confines of the burned districts; and the temporary structures that have encroached upon the streets, as time has gone by, are gradually giving way to the sidewalks and sewers throughout the city.

Thirty-five years ago there were no streets in Bangkok. All traffic was carried on by boats, and the numerous canals still compete with the street traffic. As late as ten years ago there were no more than nine miles of paved streets in the whole city. To-day there are over 47 miles, and many new streets are being opened up each year, on which the old iron and wooden bridges are being replaced by modern steel bridges. The king himself builds one steel bridge each year out of his private funds as a gift to the city, and this is opened to the public with some ceremony and rejoicing. The government imports from England every year considerable quantities of bridge materials.

Seventy-five miles of canals traverse the city of Bangkok, a large percentage of which has been added in recent years. The tendency, however, is to make streets instead.

There is an 8,000-light (incandescent) central station in Bangkok which was purchased in 1890 from the English Brush company by a Siamese company, for the purpose of lighting the king's palace and for the use of the public. The plant was not operated until 1894, as the company met with financial difficulties, and finally it was turned over to Mr. L. E. Bennett, an American engineer, under a 30-year exclusive franchise to furnish light for the government and the public. Since that time it has been operated fairly well by an American syndicate.

Rice cultivation is the principal industry of Siam. There are 26 steam rice mills in Bangkok, and, although the first one in the country was started by an American, none are owned by Americans to-day. Four are European and the rest are owned or managed by Chinese. Some of the Chinese firms have a very large capital. Seven of the mills have their own electric light plants, one of which was furnished by an American house, all the other supplies and the rice-milling machinery used here have come from England and Scotland.

A few years ago the paddy or rice husk, which is used for fuel, was so valuable that it was a source of profit in its consumption; now, however, the rapidly increasing price of fuel has created a good market for this husk, and efforts are being made to economize by introducing more improved methods of combustion.

Teak wood is the next most important industry of the country, and there are ten large steam sawmills and many smaller handmills in the city for the manufacture of teak lumber. Three of the mills have their own electric light plants, and all of them get their machinery and supplies from Great Britain.

The Railroad Mileage of Asia. From various sources United States Consul General Guenther, at Frankfort, Germany, has gathered the following interesting figures regarding the railroad mileage of Asia:

The lines now in existence have a total length of about 30,000 miles, of which two-thirds belong to British India. The portions of the Trans-Caspian and Trans-Siberian railways already constructed have a length of 3,200 miles. A number of European syndicates have obtained concessions for 3,000 miles of railroads in China, which will traverse regions rich in minerals and agriculture; many of these lines are already in process of construction. The Chinese government owns about 300 miles of railway. The lines are very remunerative, especially that from Peking to Tientsin. Japan is well provided with railroads, the present length being 3,200 miles. French Indo China has at present only 120 miles, but the French possessions in Cochin-China, Annam and Tonquin will soon have 2,400 miles, which will greatly help to develop their mineral and agricultural resources. The Dutch Indies are well supplied. Java alone has 1,000 miles. There are as yet no railroads in Persia of any consequence; but Turkey operates 1,200 miles in Asia, and 600 miles more are in construction or projected.

The Russian commission which for months past has been busy with the preliminaries for the construction of a railroad from Astrakhan up the river Volga has completed its labors. The plan is to lay the track on the left shore of the Volga and to connect with the general Russian railway system. This railroad will become of the utmost importance for the north to north commerce of Russia with Central Asia and Persia—the more so because at the same time the Volga channel through the Caspian sea will be deepened to enable steamers to proceed directly to Astrakhan without being compelled to reload on flat-bottomed lighters.

Cotton Crop Short in India. Conditions in India during the present season have proven disastrous to the cotton crop. From northern, central, western and southern India alike the reports are most discouraging. In the beginning of the season the rain fell in some tracts in such quantity as to interfere with sowings, while in others there was not enough to permit of sowings being freely made. There followed throughout the country an early cessation in the rain, and the young plants withered and died under the drought and heat.

For the whole of India it may be said that the second yield compare with those of 1896, so far as an estimate can be made, as follows:

	Area.	Yield.
1896	14,729,000	3,966,000
1897	11,605,000	661,000

*For 400 pounds.

Strikes in Bohemia and Germany. Strikes are not any more of an unusual occurrence in Europe than they are in America. During the year 1896, many strikes occurred in Bohemia, chiefly on account of the 11-hour and for a 10-hour day. In some cases they were successful; in others, concessions were made; on the whole, the strikers gained a material advantage.

The chief objection of the Bohemian manufacturers to decreasing the hours of labor was that in Germany, in similar establishments, the 11-hour day prevailed, and that to cut off one-eleventh of the daily working time would seriously handicap them in the race for business.

But now comes the news from the great textile center of Germany that more than 20,000 workers, stimulated by the victory of their colaborers in Bohemia, are agitating for the ten-hour day, and that they propose to organize the entire textile working force of Saxony in furthering this movement.

It therefore looks as if the ruinous competition from Germany, feared by the Bohemian manufacturers, would be checked.

MAX OWEN.

The Stage Gossip from Both the East and West

Chicago is Revelling in a Feast of Good Things and New York is in the Mire

"ALL good things come to him who waits" may or may not be true. Some one has changed the old proverb to read "him who hustles while he waits."

Chicago waited patiently for the good things of the stage in which New York was reveling during the early part of the season, and her waiting was not in vain. To-day Chicago and other western cities are enjoying the luxuries of the stage, while Gotham must pick up with the lesser lights of the Continental world.

It may be that this playing second place to Gotham by the western cities is not an unmitigated evil. "Experience makes perfect" on the stage as in anything else, and several of the leading plays of the winter have come west after long runs in New York in much improved forms and with well-strengthened casts.

Chicago, for instance, did not have to humor Mrs. Langtry's social aspirations. They had been so well squelched by the social lights of New York and Philadelphia that by the time "The Degenerates" and Mrs. Langtry reached Chicago the lady was quite willing to devote all of her attention to her art, and under those conditions the play was certainly improved. No one who has ever seen "The Degenerates" could possibly imagine that such a play and society would mix well. It matters not whether the play is a truthful portrayal of society or not, the fact remains that society does not like to be presented to the public in that form. But Chicago saw the strongest possible production of a very questionable play, and if it is acting rather than morals that attract audiences, Mrs. Langtry is certainly entitled to the success she is achieving.

To say that either Irving or Miss Terry presented the theater-going people of Chicago with a better production than they gave their New York audiences would be untrue, but I do not consider it untrue to say that their company improved with the additional practice. Young Lawrence Irving, for one, needed the training that he secured during the first part of the American engagements of the company to enable him to produce the faultless presentation of the characters which he portrayed. He is a strong actor, but still a young one, and every night of experience under his father's tutelage added to his strength.

Irving's Chicago engagement was a wonderful financial success. Seventy-five thousand dollars was piled into the money tills of the box office during his short stay in the lake city, and he could well afford to present Chicago another opportunity of seeing him and his company before his return to England. The return visit is promised for a week in April.

But with all these bright and shining lights of the theaters and theatrical gossip playing on the boards of Chicago, the people of that city never turn from the old loves. While they accorded the "great guns" of the stage an almost unequaled reception, yet it was the old favorites of the players who favor the city with their presence each season. Of this class none stands higher than does Alice Nellson and the superb company with which she is presenting "The Singing Girl." The brilliant success that Miss Nellson and her company have achieved this season is due entirely to their efforts; they have been hampered by a play that has nothing to attract; that but for the efforts of a brilliant company would fall flat, but even with this to handicap their efforts they have won a brilliant success.

A local critic in Chicago says of this company:

"Manager Perley has been applying to this company some of the principles that made the Boston idea famous. He seems to be creating a set of younger Bostonians. Just now Chicagoans are unable to judge of the performances of the tenor of the company as he, Richie Ling, is in hospital back somewhere on the road, and an understudy fills his place. The temporary player is manly and effective in appearance and in song and lacks only little of dramatic fire. Eugene Cowles' dominant basso is heard again in this opera, and although Mr. Cowles has but two numbers and they give him little enough opportunity, he gets several encores nightly.

"The comedians are three bright fellows. John Slavin, who, as the brother of the fiction, has to wear girl's clothes and be taught by a repulsive old prince, is as active as a rubber ball and as brotherlike as he ought to be. Joseph Herbert makes a gay old bird of the prince and he puts in a handy car in the topical song of the three comedians in the last act. Joseph Cawthorn pretends to be a chief of police, but everyone recognizes him as Cawthorn of the scattering speech and everyone applauds.

"Manager Perley has capped his climax of good things with a magnificent chorus. Such a fine appearing lot as the men have not been seen here in ages, and every one can all act and sing besides. The women are equally attractive and successful, and since the finales of two of the acts were written for concerted singing the abilities of the choristers are proved mightily."

New York is seeing all manner of minor attractions these days of Lent. Some are new, some are old, some have never before been presented in New York but have had long runs on the road of the one-night stand character, and some have been seen season after season in Gotham. Among the new ones to Gotham may be mentioned "The Pride of Jennico," "The Carpetbagger," "Madame Butterfly," and "Mrs. R. O'Shaughnessy, Wash Lady."

The first of these is a stirring love tale with the usual tragic features and happy ending. It is one of the class of plays that never appear long at any one place and the world is none the worse when they disappear.

"The Carpetbagger" is one of Opie Read's southern stories dramatized. It had quite a run on the road before reaching New York, and may be said to be the best of the four, unless an exception be made in favor of "Madame Butterfly."

This piece has a pretty Japanese setting, in which an officer of the United States navy figures prominently, though not very gracefully. It is piece that calls for considerable talent to make it presentable, and it is only justice to say that Blanch Bates is giving it careful handling.

Of the last one nothing need be said. Its course through its as an Irish farce of the broadest kind.

JEWELRY.

Pretty Accessories For the Costume of the Period.

A pretty idea for securing the long cravat often worn with shirt waists is to encircle it with a chain bracelet. These bracelets consist of a gold link chain with an enameled or jeweled ball at each end, and a gold slide through which the cravat is drawn and readjusted to their size. When it is tied around the cravat, the slide is pushed up closely and the ends of the chain hang down their full length.

Long chains continue in unabated favor. They are at least a yard and a half in length and are seen in every style from simple beads of various kinds to gold, jeweled and enameled affairs of great expense.

Steel beads and gold embroidery upon black cloth gowns are a spring novelty and are calculated to attract attention, although they are not need to excess. Flowers and a small border for the tunic are sufficient. Black cloth is to be much worn.

A picture is given of gown of satin cloth. The skirt is laid in plaits which are stitched down to about 15 inches of the foot. The tight bodice is fitted by means of stitched plaits instead of darts. It has a yoke of plaited silk green silk, framed by a wide band of heavy white guipure. There are small gold buttons down the middle of the yoke, and the collar is of silk green silk. The narrow full of brown velvet is fastened by a gold buckle. The tight sleeves are plain. The turban of beige silk is trimmed with feathers.

THE FASHIONABLE FIGURE.

Out Out of Door Exercise Has Done For Women.

Tiny waists are no longer fashionable. They have fallen from the high esteem in which our ancestresses held them, and are as artificially exaggerated by small waists never seen among women of the refined and elegant class. The increasing favor in which outdoor exercise is held by women has much to do with this unfashionable change, and the tendency is to increase in gracefulness and in clearness of complexion. The skin in particular is strongly affected by tight clothing, which hampers circulation and circulation.

Silks, satin and brocade silk are much used for corsets, which usually match the garment in color, if not in material. These are also corsets composed entirely of wide ribbons, held together by whale-bones at the side. Elaborate trimmings of lace, bows and plaitings, although pretty in themselves, are undesirable because they form lumps under the bodice of the gown, and the woman who wants her corsage to fit perfectly will wear an entirely plain corset.

The costume illustrated is of mauve bengaline. It has a tunic which is short in front and bordered with applications of heavy velvet. Below this is a plaited skirt. The close bodice has a bolero front and a vest of velvet application. The wide collar, which passes under the bolero, is also covered with applications of velvet. The plastron is of plaited white surah, the waist of white tulle. The plain sleeves are stitched at the wrists. The white straw hat is trimmed with a drapery and knot of mauve tulle, with mauve ostrich plumes.

NEW COLORS.

The Latest Shades Are Here Subdued in Quality.

The majority of shades now in favor are soft, the reign of crude colors being almost at an end. In materials intended for tailor-made gowns in particular these veiled tones prevail again. Covert cloth is beginning to dispute pre-eminence with smooth finished cloths and is used for the newest costumes of the severest type. The mixtures of colors in the meager cloth is very fine, so that at a short distance the mixture effect is lost. Grays of all shades, dull blues and beiges are the favorite tones, and the decoration is kept subdued.

Gray predominates. From iron gray to a gray so light as to be merely a shadowed white it is seen in an immense variety of shades and is used for all sorts of gowns. Many silk waists are seen in tones of gray, the paler ones being extremely refined and elegant in appearance, especially when trimmed with white or cream.

The cut illustrates a costume of periwinkle blue taffeta. The skirt is plain. The tight bodice has a three-cornered revers continuous with the collar of white satin, upon which is an application of blue velvet. The plastron is of guipure on white satin and is joined horizontally by little bands of blue velvet, which form a corselet and yoke and encircle the collar. The tight sleeves have three tucks rounding the wrists, across which are crosses formed of blue velvet. The cuffs match the plastron. The large hat of periwinkle blue straw is trimmed with blue velvet and three white plumes, and white flowers are placed under the left side of the brim.

Covert Cloths and Other Goods For Tailor Made Gowns.

There are some extremely pretty covert cloths among the new importations. They are fine and silky and are to be had in red, blue, purple and other decided colors, as well as in gray and mode shades.

The skirt of the tailor made gown may be perfectly plain—except that it is no longer without any plaits at the back—or it may have clusters of plaits at the side. For the bodice a tight corsage may be shown, a little coat or a bolero, either open or closed. The illustration shows a street costume of silver gray cloth. The skirt has a cluster of three plaits at the right side and is decorated with a plain bias plait and a band. The bodice is plain behind, while at the right side are three plaits which seem to continue those of the skirt. The corsage opens at the left side by a tab and ornamenteris olive. The yoke is of gray panne. The plain sleeves have three plaits across the top. The gray panne belt is closed by a gold buckle. A large cravat, with applications of guipure, is worn. The hat of gray straw is trimmed with ostrich plumes and a gold buckle.

DRESS ORNAMENTATION.

Various Uses of Trimmings Already in Favor.

Easter brings us no great novelties. The gowns which inaugurate the warm weather season are not new in cut, the chief originality depending upon the trimmings, and the trimmings employed are not new, but are so varied that it is possible to gain many fresh effects with them.

Little ruffles of ribbon continues to be greatly employed. The ribbon in this and is made with a heavier cord woven in, so that it may be drawn up into a ruche or ruffle. It is used in the decoration for the edges of plaitings and ruffles or describes designs upon the surface of taffeta, lace and mousseline de soie.

Small and complicated trimmings are more and more used, so fine that they would pass almost unnoticed in a general survey of the gown. Their attractiveness lies in their delicacy and fine workmanship rather than in their effectiveness. Stitched straps are much employed, applied to form motifs of various kinds. Sometimes they are of a color different from that of the gown and are wide, but the result is too striking to be pleasing.

The gown illustrated is of pearl gray satin cloth, and the skirt is mounted at the back in a hollow plait. Around the foot is a deep embroidery of pearl gray silk, above which are stitched straps of cloth forming a panel between where they cross. The fitted bodice is closed in front by pearl buttons, stitched straps simulating a bolero and attaching themselves to the revers by pearl buttons. The revers are of white cloth embroidered with cream silk, the collar and plaited plastron of white satin. The close sleeves are trimmed with crossed stitched straps and buttons, like the skirt. The toque of pale gray bengaline is draped and is trimmed with two curled golden brown feathers.

WEDDING GOWNS.

Materials Used For the Fashionable Bride's Toilet.

Wedding gowns are most elegant when simple in style, although they may be of the richest possible material—indeed, that is considered desirable even for a young bride—where it can be afforded. Fortunately, dead white is no longer indefinitely prescribed. Cream, ivory and pearl white are equally well worn by brides, so it is possible to suit the individual complexion. Wedding gowns are notoriously unbecoming, and every resource for mitigating the unfavorable effect is valuable.

Quite a good quality of satin cannot be afforded it is best not to have satin at all, but to choose crepe de chine, which is far less expensive and really more becoming.

A picture is given of an evening gown of black lace over colored satin. The skirt is plaited, the fullness plain at the back and draped in front. A chou of black velvet is fastened at the side of the décolletage by a buckle of brilliants, and the velvet belt is also fastened by a bow and buckle, long ends of the ribbon falling upon the skirt. Plquets of flowers are placed across the shoulders, and a black velvet bow is worn in the hair.

Feathers and Other Decorations For New Gowns.

The plumage of the barn door fowl is again in demand for decorative purposes, and, indeed, the feathers are, as a rule, more becoming for bonnets, hands and collar fixing than the more expensive but less effective ostrich plumage. Gowns as well as hats are trimmed with feathers, are, the latter being used to border tunics, corsages and yokes. Little hands of cut-off marabou, very fine, are placed upon the edges of ruffles, embroidered upon lace and used to outline motifs of embroidery and passementerie.

Ostrich feathers, of course, much employed, also other kinds of feathers. Bands of plumage are the greatest novelty of the moment, no particular change of form being seen in general attire.

Embroideries and passementeries continue to be as much employed as ever, and braid is also greatly employed for gowns of the plainer class. The newest braid, plain or waved, is provided with a heavier thread, which may be drawn tightly to gather the braid into curves which will follow any design.

The cut shows a gown of pastel red cloth. The skirt has a short tablier, upon which is mounted the lower part of the skirt, which is laid in stitched plaits, the junction being concealed by an application of black passementerie. The back is laid in two box plaits. The bodice, pointed at the back, has loose fronts, trimmed with gold bands and a border of white satin embroidered and spangled with black. The chemisette is of white mousseline de soie, the cravat of white tulle. The black satin belt is fastened with an enameled buckle. The white hat of rice straw is trimmed with bunches of red roses.

Old fashioned lace straw is being revived as a novelty, and numerous small bonnet shapes are shown in it, especially in the natural yellowish color.

A picture is given which shows a tailor made spring costume for a girl of 10 or 12 years. It is of pastel blue cloth, the skirt having a plain tablier and being mounted in box plaits at the sides and back. There are lines of white silk stitching around the foot, at the skirt and at the top of each plait. The short sack bodice has a shawl collar and revers faced with blue and white checked silk. The plastron is of blue cloth and, like the sack and sleeves, is ornamented with lines of white stitching. The buttons are of dull gold. A hat of blue straw is worn with a trimming of white embroidered mousseline de soie and a curved feather.

The Central Presbyterian Church of New York has decided to hold an early morning service to correspond to the early mass in the Roman Catholic churches, and intended, like that, for servant girls. A similar service will be held in the afternoon. Both will last only a half hour, and a short address will be given at each. The Central is one of the largest and most aristocratic churches in the city.

MANY KINDS OF OLIVES.

They Are Imported in Casks Chiefly from Spain and Bottled in This Country.

Most of the olives eaten in this country come from a territory of about a hundred miles in diameter, around the city of Seville, in Spain. They are imported in casks of 160 gallons each, the importations, varying with the crop, ranging from 2,000 to 4,000 casks a year, and averaging about 4,000 casks.

Olives are sorted in Spain, according to sizes, and each big cask is filled with olives of approximately the same size. There are 16 sizes, and they are merely the several sizes were described by names; now they are commonly known in the trade by numerical designations, the names indicating the number of olives to the kilogramme. Thus, 75's means that about 75 go to the point from 70 to 80 to the kilogramme.

The olives are imported in brine. Formerly many olives were imported already put up in bottles, but almost all the olives now sold here are now packed here. The work is done chiefly by women and girls. There are ingenious machines for pitting olives that are put up pitted, but no machine has yet been invented for putting the olives into the bottles with the symmetrical arrangement in which they are now so commonly seen. This work, the building of the wall around the inside of the bottle, where it may be seen by the purchaser of the olives by hand, the fler placing each olive in the bottle separately with tongs made for the purpose, every olive and row being arranged with care and precision, so that the effect of the whole is attractive and pleasing. This is slow work for beginners, but experts come to fill bottles very rapidly, and perfectly as well, and with such deftness of touch on the tongs as not to bruise or mar the olives in the handling. The interior space is filled with a specially prepared brine, to be then corked, capped and labeled, the bottles being then packed in cases.

Olives are put up in a great variety of packages; a single packer in New York uses bottles in a hundred different sizes and styles. Olives are put up in better shape in this country than anywhere else. The glass used in making the American bottles is better, to start with, and the bottles are more perfect in form, the olives are more handsomely packed in the bottles, and the bottles are better labeled; the whole package, in fact, is better and more sightly in appearance.

Olives are packed nowadays in this country in other cities than New York, but the chief importations come to this port, and most olives are packed here than at any other point. From this city olives are distributed all over the country, and carload lots of olives, either in bulk or in glass, are not uncommon shipments.—N. Y. Sun.

RUSSIAN MERCHANTMEN.

Number and Size of the Ships Employed in the Ocean Trade.

Twenty years ago Russian merchant ships were so few that they were insufficient even for the coasting trade, and the idea of entering the foreign trade was out of the question. In 1877 the volunteer fleet was commenced by voluntary subscriptions, and four German vessels were purchased and used in the transport service with the Turkish army, and afterwards in maintaining a service between the Black sea and the Russian ports of the Pacific, calling at various far eastern ports on the way.

A little more than ten years ago the fleet consisted of seven ships, with an aggregate tonnage of 21,128, the largest vessel being 3,500 and the highest speed 13½ knots. Now, however, the fleet numbers 14 vessels of 127,693 tons, while a new vessel is in course of construction. The latest accommodation is said to be equal to that of the best liners. The fare from Odessa to Vladivostok has been reduced from 80 to 36 guineas. There is steerage accommodation for about 2,000. The ports of destination are Vladivostok and Port Arthur, the first-class passengers consisting largely of army officers and business men enticed by prospects of commercial activity. Emigrants are carried to considerable numbers. They mostly belong to the agricultural class, and settle in eastern Siberia, the resources of which are being developed with great rapidity.

As exodus from European Russia has also recently encouraged of artisans and trained factory hands, who are attracted to the east by a considerably higher wage, in consequence of a scarcity of skilled labor there. Of the outward cargoes last year 50,400 tons consisted of general merchandise, railway material, and munitions of war, and 26,046 tons of ordinary merchandise. On the return voyage these vessels brought about 29,000 tons of merchandise, consisting of tea, sugars, etc. In the eight years the inward cargoes have increased from 16,000 to about 100,000 tons, and the passengers from 6,000 to 26,000. The occupation of Port Arthur and Ta-lien-wan by Russia has already produced a great increase in trade with the far east, and it is believed that the enforcement of the decree restricting the carrying trade between all Russian ports to vessels under the Russian flag will give a great additional impetus to the exchange of commodities between European Russia and eastern Siberia. The most important Russian shipping enterprise is the Black sea and the Russian Steam Navigation and Trade company, which has a fleet of 89 steamers with a displacement of 151,758 tons, exclusive of small craft. The activity of this company, which is likewise subsidized by the government, increases annually.—London Times.

BIBLE WITH A HISTORY.

It Was Found on the Plains Long Ago and Used on Many Ceremonial Occasions.

The Bible which was used in the ceremonies beginning the celebration in Sacramento of the fiftieth anniversary of the state of California has a history that is very interesting. In 1849 a young man is coming across the plains found a pile of books by the side of the road with a stock scrawled on them. Hearing of a new territory to help themselves. The young man is searching through the old volumes found a handsome Bible, which he considered a shame to be left upon the dreary desert. He placed it in his wagon and took it to Sacramento. He presented it to Dr. R. H. McDonald, who at that time conducted a drug store in that city.

Some time after the advent of the Bible into Sacramento a meeting was called in that city for the purpose of founding a lodge of Masons. That was on January 8, 1850, and the lodge was to be known as Connecticut lodge, No. 78. It chanced that the meeting place was adjoining the premises occupied by Dr. McDonald. To this it was convened. It was found that there was no Bible at hand with which to conduct the ceremonies, and Dr. McDonald presented the book that had been given to him by the young man for the lodge's use.

On the 19th of the following April the grand lodge of Masons was formed and the Bible again played an important part in the ceremonies. After the formation of the grand lodge the name of Connecticut lodge was changed to Tehama Lodge, No. 2, but ever since its establishment on January 8, 1850, the Bible has remained in the possession of the lodge.—San Jose (Cal.) Divorced Thirty-Five Times.

The case is mentioned in a Chinese paper of a native, aged 40, who has married and divorced 35 wives, and is now married to the thirty-sixth. He was first married at the age of seven and betrothed for this extraordinary, a regard of inconstancy is that he has a younger sister of extremely jealous and rancorous disposition, who, from the moment that a bride enters the house, instigates a system of persecution, which soon drives the unhappy woman to ask her husband for a divorce. — N. Chinese Cooks Next to the French.

Second only to the French are the Chinese when it comes to culinary skill. Both will take the simplest material and contrive to put together a meal which would shame an ordinary American cook. In peasant families the wife or daughter does the cooking, but in the larger establishments the cooks are invariably men. Confucius forbade

OLDEST MONUMENT.

It Is Now in the British Museum and Perpetuates the Memory of an Ancient Architect.

Of course, the most antique monument in the world belongs to Egypt.

It is a tower of 15 tiers high, and when inspected closely it has none of the appearance of extreme old age. Yet it dates back to the year 2780 B. C. and immortalizes the fact that one Hesy was architect to the king at Memphis.

Incidentally, the oldest monument pertains to the oldest story in the world. The little piece of carving in the British museum shows two tiny figures seated in a high-backed chair. It will be noticed that the two figures are seated in the same chair—which in itself is a significant fact—and on close inspection you will observe that the gentleman has his arm around the lady's waist.

It may be well to say, however, that this lady is the wife of Hesep, the king's architect. So it is evident that the monument only sets forth a case of conjugal happiness, which was none the less perfect because these old persons were Egyptians.

A very remarkable feature about this oldest monument is the fact that the color which was placed on the figures in those early ages still retains its brightness.

The red and yellow are very distinct, and it is marvelous that these pigments should have lasted through so many centuries.

The little monument is exhibited today under a glass case in the western gallery of the British museum. It bears no inscriptions to tell that it is the oldest monument on earth known to man; only the date sets forth its story.

This date is, of course, vouched for by the most learned Egyptologists.

A WEALTHY INDIAN.

Dr. Acland Oronhyatekha, Supreme Ruler of the "Ancient Order of Foresters."

Although once the possessors of a vast continent, the American Indians are to-day a poor people. Except in a few cases where they have separated from the mass of their race and adopted the life of civilized white neighbors, their accumulations of property cut a comparatively small figure in the total wealth of the country. A rare exception to the rule is found in the person of Dr. Acland Oronhyatekha, a Canadian Indian, who has gained both wealth and fame by force of his genius and business ability. Dr. Oronhyatekha's good fortune began in 1860, at Brantford, Ont., when he, a lad of 12, chanced to meet the prince of Wales, who was then making a tour of America. The prince was so impressed with the brightness of the young man that he invited him to England and gave him an education at Oxford university. Oronhyatekha afterward studied medicine at Toronto university, graduating therefrom in due course. He was highly successful as a physician, but his best fortune came in connection with the Ancient Order of Foresters, a fraternal benefit society which he reorganized and carried to success. He has been the chief official of this order for years, and is said to receive a salary of $12,000 a year. He owns a magnificent home and entertains sumptuously. Mrs. Oronhyatekha is a great-granddaughter of the famous chief, Joseph Brant, who figured largely in the Indian troubles of early days. She is a woman of noble character and many accomplishments.

A DEMOCRATIC WEEKLY,

PLAINFIELD, N. J.

A. L. Force, Editor and Proprietor

Why the City Hall is Held Up.

If a majority of the members of the Common Council could agree on one site that would satisfy their ideas of the location of a City Hall in Plainfield, such a building would undoubtedly be built in the near future. The Council, however, is apparently hopelessly divided as to the best site for the proposed municipal building, and as there seems to be no prospect of a majority of the members adjusting their views in accordance with one another the chances of the project being consummated in the immediate future are very meagre, indeed.

In the minds of nearly all the officials of the city there seems to be no question but what the best interests of the city government needs and demands the establishment of a City Hall, but until an agreement can be secured among the majority of the Solons the improvement seems likely to be held up.

The opponents of the City Hall building, headed by the garrulous and egotistical Bunion, are gloating over what they claim is the result of the influence that they exerted against the carrying out of the improvement. It is plain to be seen, however, that they are claiming a victory to which the true state of affairs does not conform. The City Hall project is stalled because the members of the Council cannot agree on a site, and not because of the clamor and wild claims made by the opponents.

Gov. Voorhees is out with a statement explaining his attitude in reference to the selection of the delegates-at-large to represent the New Jersey Republicans in their National convention. Inasmuch as there has been considerable said about the probability of there being a fight between Senator Kean and the Governor for the honor of being elected as one of the "Big Four," Mr. Voorhees takes occasion to say that he "would not be a party to a scramble for the place." By this, however, the Governor does not mean to say that he would not like to be elected a delegate-at-large. On the contrary, he says that he would esteem it a high honor. Incidentally, the Governor says that his choice for the "Big Four" is Senator Sewell, Senator Kean, Franklin Murphy and himself. Evidently he believes that Union county will be in the political swim, with good chances of its favorite Republicans—Voorhees and Kean—getting what they want in the line of Republican honors. It is against political practices to choose two members of the "Big Four" from the same county, but then this is an age when precedents are cutting but little figure in public life.

Wealth and the Governorship.

Mayor Seymour says in regard to the Governorship that a man of small means cannot stand the tax involved in a Gubernatorial campaign as a candidate and that "you want a rich man for such an ordeal."

This prompts the Newark Advertiser to say that an inspection of New Jersey's roll of Governors fails to sustain the Mayor's remark. Going back fifty years, it will be found that the only rich men elected in that time were Marcus L. Ward, Theodore Randolph and Leon Abbett. On the other hand, Rodman M. Price, George T. Werts, Robert S. Green, George C. Ludlow and Joel Parker were comparatively poor men, and so was John W. Griggs when elected. Governor Voorhees is not rich. In a number of instances rich men were defeated by comparatively poor men. Thus Cortlandt Walsh, George A. Halsey, Frederick A. Potts and John Kean, Jr., found that in an election by the people personal wealth was rather a handicap than otherwise.

The proud citizens of Dunellen are very much exercised over what they seem to think is a gross official slight of them on the part of the officials of Middlesex county. For instance, read this point in this week's Dunellen Call:

We notice that the Sheriff ignored the borough of Dunellen in his recent Granting of a Grand Jury, although drawing one of its citizens. Is not a borough here as much a borough as those who ignored our borough as such in granting licenses by crediting the license of W. H. Taylor to Piscataway.

Sheriff Barclay and Judge Strong will please note that Dunellen is still on the map, and her citizens must be recognized.

DOES COFFEE AGREE WITH YOU?

If not, drink Grain-O—made from pure grains. Not a bit of injury to any one who drinks Grain-O! I did not like it for a long time, but after using it for one week nothing would induce me to go back to coffee. It nourishes and benefits the system. The children can drink it freely with great benefit. It is the beverage of the future instead of pure grains. Get a package from your grocer to-day. Follow the directions in making it and you will have a delicious beverage for old and young. 15c. and 25c.

Admitted to Bail.

Frank Johnson, who was arrested Sunday for assaulting Mrs. James Caufield, of Johnston avenue, has been admitted to bail by Justice Nash, before whom he was arraigned.

Ex-President Cleveland.

If Former President Cleveland declines it, Governor Voorhees will honor the distinguished Princetonian with an appointment to the membership of the Gubernatorial Pair of Kentucky, of New Jersey. At least this is the story circulated by those who are in a position to know. The commission is composed of two Democrats and two Republicans, and one of the present Democratic members has announced his determination of serving on the commission no longer. If Mr. Cleveland will accept the position it is the intention of the Governor to name him for the retiring member's place.

If there is any office that should prove congenial to the habits and tastes of the former President, this one should. In the first place he is a devotee of hunting and angling, and is very much interested in propagating and protection of fish and game. Besides that the office carries no salary with it, and in accepting the appointment Mr. Cleveland would relieve himself of the charge of still being ready for any office that might bring financial gain.

Mr. Cleveland has not been consulted. His friends have expressed anxiety that he will accept the appointment as it is thoroughly praiseworthy, entirely non-partisan and is without pay or menace of unfriendly criticism. Meetings of the commissioners occur at irregular intervals in Jersey City or Trenton. A corps of twenty five wardens and a chief warden or protector do all of the field work. The commissioners supervise the accounts and make suggestions. Then they have a little dinner which they pay for from their own pockets. They all seem to like it and deem it highly probable that Mr. Cleveland would.

The Rummage Sale.

Plainfield is very much interested just now in what will undoubtedly prove to be one of the most unique affairs ever given in this city for the benefit of charity. It is the "rummage sale" which several score women are arranging to carry out on a profitable basis for the Muhlenberg Hospital. They will undoubtedly receive very substantial encouragement in their unique enterprise, and in this connection it is interesting to note the following editorial from the Newark Advertiser, which was written after Newark had just ended a "rummage sale." The Advertiser says:

The "rummage" sale is a central scheme for cleaning out the accumulated unused stuff in a household and converting it to some useful purpose.

Every housekeeper stores away in the attic articles of clothing, furniture, etc., which have a certain value in her eyes and cannot therefore, be thrown out or given away. The store is added to year after year and remains undisturbed. It is the receptacle of that of which would be of use to some less provided household.

The "rummage" has a charitable object and offers an opportunity to empty the attic of the accumulation to good advantage. When the frugal housekeeper realizes that her useless and cumbersome store of things can be turned into cash for philanthropy, or to promote causes in which she is interested, there is a clearance out of the attic, and the sense of giving it is gratifyingly blended with a feeling of deliverance from a long standing domestic nuisance.

Remarking that educators in this country puzzle not a little over the problem how the proportion of High School pupils may be increased, although this may cause more extended accommodations and teaching facilities, the Newark News notes that an interesting inquiry made recently in Philadelphia brought out the fact that pupils are frequently dropped from failure on one or two subjects. One high authority—the question was in reference to a Girls' High School—put it in this way: Because a girl can't draw a picture of a horse is no reason for keeping her out of an education in other branches. The deduction from this is that the curriculum of High Schools should be made more elastic, effecting discriminations for the individual and for special aptitude or its like. This, of course, involves a more extensive teaching outfit and smaller classes. But if courses could be so adjusted as to permit an industrious and conscientious pupil to continue the course to the finish, in spite of inaptitude or failure in one or two subjects, there would certainly be an advantage gained in the best interests of education. After all, for nine-tenths of High School pupils, the end of the school training, as a very small minority go higher to the college or university.

The excitement prevailing in New York over the suggestion that music be used to cure patients suffering from nervous and mental disorders seems to be excusable, in view of the fact that the kind and quality of the music has not been decided upon. Incidental to the discussion, Dr. Charles A. Dana says, "Music is attractive to idiots, degenerates and persons of abnormal temperament. It may be soothing to a lunatic, but so is a horse-hairbrush."

CLUBBED A WOMAN WITH FENCE RAIL

Distressing Results of the Attempt to Christen Johnson's Child.

JOHNSON HELD FOR JURY.

THREW CAUFIELD AND REAGAN OUT THE BACK DOOR.

Johnson Said They Weren't Invited—Mrs. Caufield Went to Husband's Rescue and Had Head Cut With Wood Weapon.

Frank Johnson and his wife, natives of Poland, tried to christen their little daughter Sunday afternoon. They live on St. Mary's avenue. A few friends gathered in honor of the event. James Caufield, of Johnston avenue, and Daniel Reagan, of Spooner avenue, dropped in. Johnson says they were unbidden guests and so he threw them out. Mrs Caufield went to the rescue of her husband and had her head split open with a rail. She now lies at home in a precarious condition. Johnson was held by Justice Nash under $200 bail for his appearance before the Grand Jury. City Judge Bunyon fined Caufield $5 for fighting and let Reagan go, as he tried to act as peacemaker and was badly beaten for his pains.

When the gathering was in progress, the two guests walked in and drank beer for a time. Then Johnson threw them both out of the back door. It is alleged that he picked up a fence rail and clubbed Mrs. Caufield over the head. She had arrived after being told by a neighbor, James Fitzpatrick that her husband was being murdered.

Former Sheriff Kirk was driving by and heard the noise. He notified the police. Chief Grant, Sergeant Kiely and Patrolmen Saunders and Watson responded. They arrested the three men. Dr. Tomlinson was summoned to care for the injured woman.

DEATH OF ISAAC A. CONNETT

Had Been Ill for a Long Time—Engaged in the Meat Business for Many Years.

Isaac A. Connett, aged 61 years, one of Plainfield's best known citizens, died last Monday at his home on East Fifth street after an illness covering a period of six months. He was a great sufferer from heart and stomach trouble. Toward the last he was unconscious and remained so till he died.

Mr. Connett was born at Short Hills, and was a son of the late Samuel and Sarah Connett. Early in life he went into the butcher business and this he followed all his life. He formerly ran a wagon through the country in the vicinity of Oak Tree, Metuchen and other nearby places. Some time before he was taken ill he was engaged by L. A. Hummer, the Somerset street butcher, to run this route. He was a man of quiet nature and retiring. He had a host of friends who will learn of his death with sorrow. He leaves a wife, a daughter, Miss Lottie Connett, and a son, Harry Connett. He also leaves two brothers, Frazee and Henry Connett, of Illinois, and two sisters, Mrs. I. D. TenEyck and Mrs. L. C. Putnam, of this city.

The funeral services will be held from the late residence, 202 East Fifth street, Thursday afternoon at 3 o'clock. Interment will be in Hillside cemetery.

Carmer, junior warden; vestrymen, E. C. Perkins, Horsley Barker, T. H. Pollard, C. L. Nichols, A. E. Farber, Jr.; delegates to convention, George P. Dupee, James A. Alexander, E. C. Perkins; alternates, A. E. Faber, Jr., Horsley Barker and T. H. Pollard. It was unanimously decided to change the date of the annual meeting from Easter Monday to the first Monday in Advent.

FAMILY ROUTED OUT BY A FIERCE FIRE

Charles J. Noel's Home Totally Destroyed at a Late Hour Sunday Night

THE LOSS WILL BE $4,000.

A DEFECTIVE FLUE SUPPOSED TO BE THE CAUSE.

Members of Household Awoke Just in Time to Escape in Their Night Clothes—House Burned When Firemen Arrived.

The home of Charles J. Noel, 223 Netherwood avenue, was totally destroyed by fire late Sunday night, the family fleeing in their night clothing just in time to escape with their lives. The conflagration will result in a loss of $4,000 to Mr. Noel, most of which is covered by insurance. A defective flue is supposed to be the cause.

Mr. Noel, his wife, his mother and two young children were fast asleep when the fire started. They were awakened by a loud crash. An explosion of the superheated smoke, the "back draft," between the beams, blew down the ceiling to the dining room. They found the house full of smoke and the roar of the flames was plainly audible. Snatching a few articles of clothing, the frightened family fled out into the night.

The children were sent to give the alarm while Mr. Noel rushed into the house again and managed to save a few things from the lower floor before the flames drove him back. Charles P. Adams, of 249 Jackson avenue, sent in an alarm from box 19 at 11:09 o'clock. At that time the upper part of the house was a mass of flames.

It was a long run for the firemen and they had to lay in 1,650 feet of hose to reach the house. The steamer was necessary to get any pressure. By that time the walls fell in and the house was a wreck.

The house was a total loss and will reach $3,500, which is nearly all covered by insurance. The loss to the contents will reach $600, which is also covered by insurance. Mr. Noel owned both house and contents.

Last of Miss Lyon's Lectures.

The last of the series of six lectures on "Europe in Africa in the Nineteenth Century," by Miss Dorothy Wilberforce Lyon, Ph. D., of Elizabeth, was given Monday morning at 11 o'clock, at the home of Mrs. Harlot Burton Ford, of Watchung avenue. The subject was "Italy in Africa: Abyssinia and Madagascar." The whole course has been an interesting and profitable one to all who have attended it, and this closing lecture was no exception to the rule, much information on the subject being given in an entertaining way.

Ministers Discussed Christian Science.

The Plainfield Ministers' Association was entertained Monday afternoon by Rev. Cornelius Schebek, Ph. D., of the West Front street. There were eleven ministers present and all thoroughly enjoyed the paper prepared and presented by Rev. G. W. Gardner, of Grace M. E. church, on "Christian Science." An informal discussion of the subject followed which was of considerable interest. The next meeting of the association will be held Monday, May 14th.

GLAD CAROLS SUNG TO WELCOME EASTER.

Elaborate Services Were Carried Out in the Local Churches Sunday.

ALL LARGE CONGREGATIONS

SUNDAY-SCHOOLS TOOK A PROMINENT PART IN PROGRAMMES.

Music in the First Presbyterian Church Was Especially Good—Edifices Made Beautiful With Lavish Display of Beautiful Flowers.

An almost tropical sun, a temperate wind and a sky only dotted by fleecy white clouds were the elements which made Sunday the most delightful and joyous Easter Day which has been known in a long time. The influence of such a day could not be otherwise than far reaching, and everywhere, even in the air it seemed, could be felt the gladness and joyousness which marks the season of the anniversary of the resurrection of Christ and His triumph over death. Young and old, rich and poor all joined together in one grand strain of rejoicing and praise which could be heard everywhere, in the most humble home and in the most stately mansion.

As usual the day was marked by special Easter services in the churches in and about the city. In all of them, from the smaller ones with very small choirs, in some cases no choir at all, to the larger ones, with large chorus choirs, were rended musical programmes. The preparations for the larger and heavier services have extended over several weeks and an immense amount of labor has been required to put them into presentable shape. As a rule they were very creditably executed, although in some there were shortcomings, but as a general rule the special music was well rendered, and it was, in most instances, of a more elaborate nature than anything before attempted and it was these heavier services, with an apparent lack of talent, which caused the shortcomings. In all of the churches the choirs had been augmented to a considerable extent, while at the Presbyterian a quartette of soloists from outside the city assisted the choir. A very elaborate musical service was rendered in the First Presbyterian church. Prof. Miller, the organist and choirmaster, tendered his resignation some time ago to take effect May 1st. Before severing his connection with the church it was his intention to present the "Messiah," by request of a number of his congregation, however, this idea was given up and Prof. Miller threw all his energies and resources into the work of preparing one of the heaviest musical services ever given in a church in this city, and he succeeded admirably, he could not have a better service than he had that which was rendered under his direction yesterday.

The children figured largely in the day's special services, some in the morning, some in the afternoon and some in the evening, but in nearly all the churches at one time or another.

The services were largely attended, the fine weather bringing out many numbers of persons not regular churchgoers, and these, with the regular congregations of the churches, filled many of the edifices to overflowing.

The services of the various churches in detail, with a description of the decorations, follow:

FIRST BAPTIST CHURCH

The Easter services at the First Baptist church Sunday morning and evening were unusually attractive and were attended by a large number of people. The decorations were confined entirely to the pulpit platform and organ, consisted of flowers, palms and smilax.

The morning service opened with a selection for violincello and organ, by Felix and Howard Case. The offertory, "The King of Glory," was rendered by Miss Harris, soprano soloist. During the service there were solos by Mrs. Ward, contralto; Wm. Holmes, baritone, and George Smith, tenor. An appropriate sermon was delivered by the pastor, Dr. Yerkes.

The afternoon service was an elaborate one in which the home Sunday-school, together with the schools from the East Third Street Mission and Mt. Olive Baptist church, united. The choir was assisted by Mrs. B. T. Barnes, piano; Felix Bouche, 'cello, and Howard Case, organist. The exercises opened with a selection by the trio, and was followed by an Easter carol, "Welcome, Happy Morning," by the schools. The choir rendered an anthem "I am He that Liveth," which was followed with a carol "Hail, Thou Glorious Easter Morning," by the schools. The intermediate department sang "The Glad Easter Message," and the primary department rendered "The Sunbeam Roses." A delightful recitation, "The Flower's Greeting," was given by Russell Miller. Mrs. Ward sang a contralto solo, after which there was a recitation by girls from the intermediate department. The offertory was a selection by the instrumental trio. The Easter Sunday-school lesson was taught by Mrs. Alonzo Pettit, of Elizabeth. After another carol by the schools, there was a selection "Andante," by the trio, and following the benediction there was an organ-postlude. The musical programme was in charge of Charles W. McCutcheon.

CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH.

Easter was observed at the Congregational church with special services Sunday morning and afternoon. At the morning service Rev. C. L. Goodrich preached an appropriate sermon. There were two selections by an instrumental trio, Mrs. B. T. Barnes, organ; Mrs. M. E. Dwight, piano; and F. Ludwig Conde, violin. The selections, were "Adazio" by Fesca and a postlude by Haydn. A special quartette, composed of Miss Bertha V. Willis, Miss Julia Belknap, M. G. VanArsdale and Stacy Reynolds, sang Te Deum in D, by Stoelley, and "This is the Day," by Holden. Miss Willis also sang the soprano solo "Easter Dawn," with violin obligato by Mr. Conde. In the afternoon, the Sunday-school held special exercises, the primary department taking part. Miss Addie Parker Jackson ready a story "The Garden of The Lord," and F. Ludwig Conde gave two violin solos. The decorations consisted chiefly of Easter lilies which were banked around the pulpit.

CRESCENT AVENUE CHURCH.

The Easter services in the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church Sunday were marked by special Easter anthems sung by the regular quartette choir. The pastor, Rev. Dr. W. R. Richards, preached an Easter sermon in the morning. The Sunday school had no special exercises. The floral decorations were of particular beauty. The chancel arch was boldly banked with Easter lilies, the blossoms arranged in the form of a cross on a background of green.

FIRST M. E. CHURCH.

The musical programme at the First M. E. church, as published in the Daily Press, was followed. The Sunday-school took part in the morning services. The regular choir was augmented by several soloists. Raymond A. McGee sang a bass solo and there was other special music by the choir. The attendance at the service was large. The church was prettily decorated with palms and potted plants. The Easter lilies prevailed in the decorations about the pulpit.

TRINITY REFORMED CHURCH.

The floral display was not lavish, but just enough to give a very pretty effect. The committee who arranged the display with such tastefulness is entitled to much credit for the result of their labors. The instrumental playing of A. L. Titsworth, organist, was, as usual, excellent, and the singing by the regular quartette of the church, the Misses Krymer and Williams, and Messrs. Cutting and Moore, was very gratifying and gave evidence of much practice and careful training by their leader, Mr. Titsworth. Dr. Schenck, the pastor, at the morning service, gave an excellent Easter sermon on Paul's injunction to the Corinthians, wherein they were exhorted to "be steadfast, unmovable, always abounding in the work of the Lord."

In the evening the edifice was thronged to its utmost capacity with members of the Sunday-school and congregation, and the members of Marcoonier chapel and Sunday-school. The members from Marcoonier chapel were in charge of Mrs. Mal Marcoonier Schwenck, assisted by H. W. Marshall, the recently-appointed general superintendent. There were about seventy-five persons from this branch of the church present. Another feature was the presentation of the new home department of the Sunday-school, that occupied side seats in the front of the church. The singing by the school was most excellent, under the leadership of F.S.Cutter, who faithfully and efficiently trained the scholars. The violin selections by Mrs. George Sauma, accompanied by A. L. Titsworth, on the organ, were enjoyed, as was also the singing by the primary department under the direction of the superintendent, Mrs. J. M. Tier.

The exercises were in charge of Superintendent E. H. Anthony, and in addition to remarks by him, the pastor, Dr. Schenck and A. E. Mettler, spoke. Mr. Mettler, of Marcoonier Sunday-school, also offered prayer.

In addition to the musical part of the service, there were recitations by members of the primary department as follows: Helen Woolley, Flossie Yaeger, Laura Bodine, Myra Dunavan, Russell Vail, Perry Holder, Ira Vail, Arthur Williams, George Coles, Mildred Calees, Edna Coles, Hattie Nitschwitz, Ethel Vail, Cora Gray, Gertrude Schlelf, Rowland Leighton, Anna Rose, Nettie Robinson, Beulah Randall and Helen Woolley. The last two named gave a recitation with organ accompaniment. Each one of the above acquitted themselves creditably and reflected credit on themselves and their instructor. The service closed with the congregational singing of "The Palms," and the doxology, after which Pastor Schenck, pronounced the benediction.

GRACE EPISCOPAL CHURCH.

Besides the two early services at Grace Episcopal church, the regular service at 10:30 o'clock was well attended, the sacred edifice being taxed to accommodate the large congregation that gathered to worship on Easter morning. The floral display was the most elaborate made in some years, the chancel being a veritable bower of loveliness with a profusion of cut flowers, potted plants and trailing vines. The special music was rendered by the magnificent vested choir in a manner inspiring to even those not familiar with sacred music. The rector, Rev. Dr. Rodman, was assisted by Rev. Frank Appleton, the curate. Dr. Rodman's sermon was most appropriate to the Easter festival, and was one of that well-known clergyman's best efforts. In the evening at 7:30 o'clock the service was made interesting by the children of the Sunday-school participating. The service took the form of a children's festival, in which the rector made use of the opportunity to impress upon the younger members of the school the importance of the Resurrection and what it teaches.

The music was under the direction of Mrs. W. A. Freeman, to whose excellence much credit is due. The choir was augmented by these soloists: Miss Mabelle Smith, soprano; William Tallamy, tenor; Arthur and Fred Freeman and Fred Pope, bass.

HOLY CROSS CHURCH.

The superb music provided for Easter at Holy Cross Episcopal church attracted large congregations at both the morning service at 11 o'clock and at evensong at 4:30 o'clock. The floral display about the chancel was very handsome but perhaps not more elaborate than is usual on such occasions at this church. Choirmaster G. Edward Stubbs, ably assisted by Organist Clarence D. Sears, rendered exquisite music with the aid of the vested choir. Besides the administering of Holy Communion the rector, Rev. Montgomery Downey, M. A., preached an able sermon on the Resurrection at the morning service. At evensong the children of the Sunday-school participated in the services. On Saturday evening, after the 4:30 o'clock service, five infants and three adults were baptized. On Tuesday afternoon the annual parish meeting will be held at the close of the service at the Parish House.

ST. MARY'S CHURCH.

The various services at St. Mary's church were well attended, but more particularly at 10:30, when high mass was celebrated, Rev. Father Westman being the celebrant. The sanctuary was altar was tastefully arranged with palms, easter lilies, etc., while above all in illuminated letters were the words, "He is Risen; Alleiuia." Rev Father Smyth, the pastor, preached a sermon on the Resurrection and the lessons we should derive from it. The musical part of the service was very fine. Farmer's mass was sung by the regular choir, Miss Smith, organist, augmented by an orchestra under the able leadership of Joseph Sattels. Responses were also sung by the acolytes, who, at the conclusion rendered "Holy God, We Praise Thy Name."

ST JOSEPH'S CHURCH.

The services at St. Joseph's church at the 10:30 o'clock mass were largely attended Sunday morning. The edifice was taxed to its limit to accommodate all who wished to participate in the worship. The music was of a high order of excellence and was in charge of J. E. Bailey. Rev. Father Miller, pastor of the church, sang Farmer's mass in B. flat. A full orchestra assisted the choir. It consisted of Prof. A. G. Carpenter, M. A. Korff and Philip Neider, violins; Dr. J. F. Berg, cello; Claus Wallender, J. Nicholas, cornets; E. J. Myers, G. B. Myers, clarionets; J. Carlsen, trombone. Miss A. LaPorte presided at the organ in her usual efficient manner. The decorations were designed by the Sisters of St. Joseph's Home.

PARK AVENUE BAPTIST.

Two anthems by the choir and an interesting sermon on "The Resurrection," by the pastor, Rev. J. W. Richardson, were the features of the services at the Park Avenue Baptist church Sunday morning. There were no special decorations other than a few plants in bloom on the platform. In the afternoon the Easter exercises of the Sunday-school were held. Two recitations, "My Garden," by Miss Florence Cuming, and "The Lily's (Complaint," by Miss Nellie Giles, were interesting features of the occasion as was also the musical portion of the programme. Rev. Mr. Jones, of Kentucky, made a short address. Miss Adelia Runyon and choir rendered beautifully "The Palms." Rev. J. W. Richardson, the pastor, was presented with an Easter book by Miss Florence Smalley, on behalf of the Sunday-school

ST. STEPHEN'S CHURCH.

Special Easter services were held at St. Stephen's church Sunday morning and afternoon. There were special Easter carols by the choir. The decorations were very handsome and consisted principally of palms and Easter lilies.

SEVENTH-DAY BAPTIST CHURCH.

Easter was observed at the Seventh-Day Baptist church Saturday morning with special services. Rev. A. E. Main preached a sermon appropriate to the day while the choir sang several Easter carols. The platform was banked with potted plants and Easter lilies.

FIRST PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH.

The services at the First Presbyterian church Sunday evening were especially interesting. The feature was the singing of Miss Blanche Fellows and of a quartette consisting of Miss Fellows, Miss Vanderveort, Mr. Stengel and Mr. Charll. The last three named are from New York. Another feature was the violin playing by P. Ludwig Conde and the work of W. H. Miller, organist.

GRACE M. E. CHURCH.

Pleasing Easter exercises were held at Grace M. E. church Sunday afternoon under the auspices of the Sunday-school. There was a special music and recitations by the little ones from the primary department, under the direction of Miss Lunger. Superintendent John Vallant was in charge and looked after things in general. He also made a few remarks of a happy nature. At the morning and evening services there was also special music and appropriate discourses by the pastor, Rev. G. W. Gardner. The church was tastefully decorated with all kinds of flowers by members of the school.

MONROE AVENUE CHURCH.

Rev. John MacMurray, the new pastor of the Monroe Avenue church, was greeted by a large congregation Easter morning. There was no special service and the decorations were confined to a few flowers and potted plants. The new pastor delivered an able discourse appropriate to the Easter festival. The sermon was favorably received. In the afternoon the children's exercises were held. They consisted of the singing of carols and recitations by various members of the school. An interesting feature was the lily exercise, which was participated in by sixty children who marched through the aisles and upon the platform, each carrying a small lily. There were no services in the evening.

ST. PETER'S LUTHERAN CHURCH.

At St. Peter's Lutheran church Sunday services appropriate to the day were held. Through the liberality of Mrs. L. Borsum, leader of the primary department in the Sunday-school, a bountiful supply of Easter and calla lilies were arranged in and around the chancel. The Lord's Supper celebration was largely attended. The music was also greatly enjoyed.

MT. OLIVE BAPTIST CHURCH.

At the Mt. Olive Baptist church last Sunday the Sunday-school enjoyed the Easter-tide by presenting a programme of recitations and songs. A feature was the singing by Miss Robinson, otherwise known as "Black Hattie." An excellent address was made by Dr. D. J. Yerkes, of the First Baptist church, and remarks were made by the superintendent of the school, also by Pastor Jackson. A large sum of money was raised to help pay off the church debt.

CHURCH OF THE HEAVENLY REST.

The service at this church Sunday morning was one of the most pleasing in its history. The floral decorations were unusually fine, and the altar was embellished with lilies, asters, and many choice flowers. The selections by the choir were excellent, and the music taken by the children were thoroughly enjoyable. A feature was the presentations of a set of brass vases and a brass font by the members of St. Agnes Guild, a former organization of the church. Each scholar was presented with an Easter card and an egg by W. W. Moore, who was in charge of the service.

Farm Buildings Burned.

Last Friday night the large barns and outbuildings on the property formerly owned by Paul Beardsley at East Millstone, were entirely destroyed by fire. Spencer VanCleef, the owner of the place, had just taken possession and a large amount of valuable furniture, farming implements, etc., were burned up. How the place caught fire is a mystery, but it is believed to have been the work of an incendiary.

couraging report was that presented by Rev. Mr. Mitchell, the pastor of a colored church in Elizabeth, who gave as his opinion that the money spent by the Presbytery in maintaining that church could be spent somewhere else to better advantage. The discussion was followed by brief devotional exercises, conducted by the moderator, and including music and prayer by a number of delegates.

A brief business session followed the devotional exercises. The request of Rev. James G. Williamson, of Bethlehem, to be relieved from his pastorate, which he has held for fifty-one years, came up for action. The request was granted. The request of Rev. C. S. Converse, of Connecticut Farms, that relations between him and his church be dissolved, on account of his ill health, was also granted. The call of the church of Perth Amboy to Rev. Mr. Mendenhall, was considered, and placed in the hands of Mr. Mendenhall, who expressed his willingness to accept it. This concluded the afternoon session.

The evening session of the Presbytery was called a popular meeting and was fairly well attended. Rev. G. Kennedy Newell, pastor of Hope chapel, presided. Rev. Mr. Blauvelt, of Roselle, read the Scripture, after which Rev. T. S. Wynkoop, of Northern India, a delegate to the Ecumenical Mission Council, delivered a short address in relation to the circulation of the Bible and religious tracts and the great benefits that had been derived from their broad dissemination throughout the world.

Rev. Mr. Wynkoop's address contained many statistics in reference to the Bible that were new to the congregation and it proved as instructive as it was entertaining.

The session then adjourned to 9 o'clock this morning. Rev. Dr. Rogman, rector of Grace Episcopal church, was among those who attended the session.

FISK WAS MADE A NATIONAL DELEGATE.

Johnson. The vote showed 189 ballots for Mr. Fisk, 173 for DeCamp and 20 for Johnson. There were 306 delegates at the convention, 97 from Union, 90 from Essex and 19 from Hudson.

In the election of alternates, Bayonne put up its candidate again and this time with success. Essex was again divided, the two candidates being Charles H. Johnson, of Montclair, and John H. Eastman, of Belleville. Allen received 186, Eastman 126 and Johnson 86. The meeting adjourned after a committee of five of which J. T. McMurray, of Plainfield, and C. N. Codding, of Westfield, were members, was appointed to fill any vacancies.

FREEHOLDERS WILL BUILD THE BRIDGES.

But Not Until All Doubt Is Removed Over Acceptance of the Streets.

JACKSON, JOHNSON AVES.

WERE ON CITY MAP BUT HAVE NEVER BEEN ACCEPTED.

W. S. Codington, Attorney for the Board of Freeholders, Wanted Question Definitely Settled — Will Come Before Council Again.

The request, presented at the last meeting of the Common Council asking that Jackson and Johnston avenues be accepted by the city, was an attempt on the part of the street department of the city to settle a puzzling question that has been troubling that department and the Union County Board of Freeholders.

Sometime ago the this paper told of the need of a better bridge over Cedar brook at Netherwood avenue and of bridges over that stream at Jackson and Johnston avenues. Heretofore there has been no bridges at all where these latter thoroughfares cross the brook. It has been necessary to wade or go around. The question was then raised as to whether the city or the county would have to bear the expense of these improvements.

The matter was considered by the Board of Freeholders and by the street department of this city, and the Freeholders finally admitted that it was their duty to repair or build the bridges if the streets had been duly accepted by the city. There was no question about Netherwood avenue, but Former Assessor W. S. Codington, attorney for the Board, wasn't sure about the other two streets.

The first official city map, made in 1870, the year after the incorporation of the city, which was duly signed by the Mayor and Council, shows both Jackson and Johnston avenues, but no ordinance was ever passed accepting them. According to the view of the street department, the fact that the streets are on the city map established the fact that they were considered as accepted; but Lawyer Codington had a little doubt on the matter.

To make sure of the fact Councilman Tolles, who is chairman of the street committee, introduced an ordinance at the last meeting of the Council declaring Jackson and Johnston avenues accepted by the city. The ordinance once passed, the Board of Freeholders would have no further excuse for delay in the building of the bridges. Then came the unexpected obstacle in a resolution passed by the Council concerning the matter that the city would hereafter accept no streets that were not macadamized. As neither Jackson nor Johnston avenue is macadamized, the ordinance as it was presented, conflicted with the resolution.

The Council will probably be asked to vote on the matter at the next meeting when the question will be presented in a different way. The Council will probably be asked to declare that it understands that Jackson and Johnston avenues have been duly accepted since both appear on the city map of 1870.

Bakery Pavement Plan.

Crosby & Hill have introduced a very unique and original premium plan among their customers which is sure to be very much appreciated. They advertise that purchasers saving their duplicate purchase checks until they have accumulated $25 and presenting them to the cashier will be given in exchange a due bill entitling the holder to $1 worth of merchandise in any department of their immense store. It must be very apparent that their plan is far superior to any thing of the kind yet introduced as it gives the customer an immense range of goods from which to make their selection and at the established market value. This plan reduced to its simplest form gives the customer a per cent. discount on all their cash purchases when they amount to $25.

PRETTY HOME WEDDING.

MARRIAGE OF MISS SUSAN HELEN BOSS TO LOUIS M. HUMMER.

Nuptials Celebrated Wednesday April 11th Amid Pleasant Surroundings at Home of Bride's Parents

The home of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Boss, of Craig place, was the scene of a pretty wedding Wed. April 11th, at 4 o'clock, when their second daughter, Miss Susan Hunt Boss, was married to Louis Mulford Hummer, son of Mr. and Mrs. L. A. Hummer, of Somerset street, in the presence of a large assemblage of relatives and friends.

The home was prettily decorated with palms, pink and white roses and southern smilax, the prevailing colors being pink and white. In the parlor, where the ceremony was performed, flowers and palms were banked in one corner, and it was in front of this that the couple were made one by Rev. Charles E. Herring, pastor of the First Presbyterian church. Loyd Randolph, of Westfield, played the wedding march.

The ceremony was a very impressive one. Then followed the wedding supper, which was served in the dining room. This room was also decorated in pink and white. In the centre of the table there was a large pyramid bridal cake, surrounded with smilax and roses.

The bride's gown was white organdie over white silk and duchess lace. She carried bridal roses. Her attendants as bridesmaids were Miss Lottie Wilson, of Lebanon, Hunterdon county, and Miss Grace Teller, of this city. The former wore a gown of white organdie over pink, while Miss Teller's gown was pink mousseline de sole over pink. The bridesmaids carried bouquets of pink roses. The flower girl was Ida Ramsey, niece of the bride, also of Lebanon. She was dressed in white organdie trimmed with white satin ribbon. She carried a basket of roses, and as she preceded the bridal party she strew the path with them. The groom was unattended. The ushers were Phillip Kirch, of this city, brother-in law of the bride, and George Hummer, of Easton, Pa., cousin of the groom. The groom's gifts to his ushers were solid gold stick pins set with pearls. The bride's gifts to her attendants were white lace fans and corsage bouquets of lilies of the valley.

Mr. and Mrs. Hummer were the recipients of a large collection of useful and costly gifts including furniture, cut glass, silverware, lace, and many other things useful in keeping house.

After supper was served the bride and groom left their relatives and friends and started on their honeymoon trip with the good wishes and prayers one could wish for. Upon their return they will reside in the borough. The groom is an employe in the office of The Evening Sun, New York, and both he and his wife are popular young people in a large circle of acquaintances.

Among those who were present at the wedding were Mr. and Mrs. Hummer, of Annandale, uncle and aunt of the groom; Mr. and Mrs. J. O. Cramer, of Annandale, uncle and aunt of the bride; Mr. and Mrs. Oping, of Somerville; Mr. and Mrs. Clark, and Miss Susan Hunt, aunt of the bride, of Lebanon; Mrs. Fishbaugh, of Easton; Mr. and Mrs. L. A. Hummer, parents of the groom; Mrs. Samuel Boss, Miss Stella Boss, mother and sister of the bride, W. H. Brokaw and family, Mr. and Mrs. Howard A. Pope, Miss Bush, Mr. and Mrs. S. C. Baker, Rev. Charles E. Herring, Mr. and Mrs. Charles A. Hummer, uncle and aunt of the bride, Mr. and Mrs. Charles A. Hummer, Mrs. Cook, Mrs. Tilsworth, Mrs. Eugene A. Laing, Mrs. Laing, Miss Crane, Miss Petzle, Miss Merrill, Miss Tilsworth, Miss Bertha LaRue, Mrs. Chapin, Morris VanArsdale and family, Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Haynes, Miss Bullwell, Miss Whitfield, Mr. Anderson, Mr Stryker, Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Lutkins, Mr. and Mrs. George Clark, James H. Best, John P. Powers, Mrs. T. Bollis, Miss Bollis, Phillip Kirch and family, Mrs. Anna B. Mulford, the Misses Young, of this city and the borough.

Daughters of Rebekah Danced.

A social dance was given Thursday in the Camera Club rooms under the auspices of Friendship Degree Lodge, No. 4, Daughters of Rebekah. There was a very good attendance of young people who thoroughly enjoyed the dancing to the music furnished by Rogers. Those in charge of the affair were Mrs. Kottearing, chairman; Mrs. VanFleet and F. G Walsh. Dancing commenced at 9 o'clock and was continued until a late hour, when refreshments were served by the committee.

Never Can Tell About the Horse.

About the last of March a stranger, an old man with a long white beard, drove up to a stable in Newark and asked to have his horse put out. He said he hailed from Plainfield. That was the last seen of the man. He did not give his name. The horse is still at the stable awaiting an owner. Thursday the police authorities of Newark telephoned to Chief Grant to see if he could locate the owner of the horse.

CALIFORNIA'S MINING.

Old Claims Are Being Worked Over and New Places Developed— Wealth of the Golden State.

The opening of mines that have been for a quarter of a century or more idle, is one of the notable features of the times in California mining. Most of these are quartz properties, which, under old methods of mining and milling, were not profitable to work. Modern methods have, however, made them available. Many of them have ore in sight that will make them productive from the time they are reopened and their reduction works are started, for the methods now in vogue are so economical that a good margin of profit is present in ore that would not pay expenses by the old-time processes. Cheap power, cheap light, more effective and less costly explosives, improved appliances for breaking out the ore from the slopes, hoisting and pumping machinery capable of reaching to greater depths and lifting greater weights more expeditiously and economically and chemical processes that arrest all the gold contained in the rock, combined with a more intelligent knowledge of the gold-bearing veins, are the agents of modern success. These methods and appliances have thus unconsciously, as it were, raised the business of quartz mining largely out of the domain of speculation.

But a new interest is also being taken in the placers. Discoveries have been lately made at various points which encourage new exploration for gold-bearing gravel deposits whose existence had not been suspected before. Gravel mines that have been worked for nearly half a century have thus been given a new lease of life. A disposition is also being shown to work on unobjectionable methods, many of the deep gravel mines which were forced by the courts to discontinue hydraulicking. In these properties it is intended to mine only the richer strata of gravel lying on the bedrock. Some of them are now being prepared for drifting. Preparations are also being made to open several big gravel properties in Calaveras and other counties, which have not yet been operated, and in which capital has lately become interested. Other minerals besides gold are also receiving a liberal share of attention from prospectors and claiming the notice of mining investors. New borax ledges of great promise have been lately opened in the Mojave basin, and a large body of zinc ore is reported to have been found near San Vicente, San Diego county.

The increasing confidence of capital in California mines is noticeable. It is not obtrusively paraded. But wherever a promising mine is for sale there is not the same difficulty in finding a purchaser for it that existed a few years ago. Capital in large amounts has thus been quietly invested. Boston is credited with having placed at least $10,000,000 in California and Arizona mines, and a large proportion of the investment has been made in the former. Experts are scattered all over the mineral belts examining properties in the interest of this class of investors, and, as a result, sales are becoming frequent each succeeding week, and the initiative taken by Easterners to develop properties which will add to the general wealth of the state.—San Francisco Chronicle.

THE EARTH A PYRAMID.

An English Scientist and Eminent Oddist Advances an Astounding Theory.

Since the earth was first formed many theories have been advanced as to its shape and the process of its formation, but no one until our day ever maintained that its form was that of a huge pyramid. Centuries ago Pythagoras and Aristotle declared that it was spherical. Anaximander that it was shaped like a column, Democritus that it was a concave disk and very much resembled a huge porringer, Empedocles and Anaximenes that it was a plane disk, and Xenophanes that it had roots like a tree, which spread in all directions far into the infinite.

Now comes Mr. J. Greene, an English scientist and a government official in the Sandwich islands, with the bold announcement that all these ancient theories, as well as the modern ones, are utterly baseless, since, according to him, the earth has the form of a triangular pyramid, or, in other words, of a regular tetrahedron, with the apex at the south pole and the base at the north. An extraordinary theory this may seem to all except us who are so familiar with the earth as pictured on papier mache globes, and yet it is attracting the attention of European geologists, and, among others, of Mr. De Lapparent, who seems by no means inclined to reject it hastily.

Torgioni Tozzetti, a writer of the last century, said: "If we can suppose all the water of the seas to be annihilated we would find that the solid earth was of a most rugged form."

According to this hypothesis, say geographers of the old school, there would be a spacious sea on opposite every continent. The new theory, however, as has been said, seemingly eliminates the waters of the earth altogether and caves not a jot as to their location. If we admit that the earth is now completely solidified, even in its central parts, we must, it is asserted, also admit that it was at one time in a state of fusion, and that after a crust was formed the hot subterranean waters of the still fluid interior would present an appearance as harmonious and as free from unsightly protuberances as possible.—Cincinnati Commercial Tribune.

A Burning Question.

A query as to fire insurance is a burning question.—Chicago Daily News.

ASKS STATE FOR BIG CONCESSIONS.

Scheme of Gigantic Proportions Believed to be Back of an Application.

THE CENTRAL INTERESTED.

A LEASE OF 999 YEARS WANTED ON CHEAP TERMS.

Railroads Banded Together to Secure a Lease That Will Enable Them to Build Warehouses in New York Bay.

Everything points to the fact that it is the Lehigh Valley Railroad, Baltimore and Ohio Railroad, Central Railroad of New Jersey and the Standard Oil interests that are back of the scheme to secure a lease of the land which the State owns between Ellis and Bedloe's islands, in New York Bay. The Board of Riparian Commissioners has been asked to establish around the land exterior, pier lines and interior lines for solid filling on the following conditions:

Terms of lease, 999 years; rent first five years, $1 000 a year; fifty years thereafter, $7 500 a year; and $20,000 a year for the remainder of the term. The lessee has the option to purchase the land in fee at any time within the first five years of the lease for $200,000. If the lessee fails to expend at least $50 000 upon the land within two years after the approval of the lease by the Secretary of War the lease shall be forfeited.

The first thing which would point to this conclusion is the fact that the grant, if made, would be in front of grants made to the Central Railroad, Lehigh Valley Railroad and Standard Oil Company. There is a clause in the grants which declares that the Riparian Board shall make no grants in front of the property already granted. Unless these corporations offered no objection to the making of a grant between Bedloe's and Ellis' Islands it would be a grave question if the grants could be made. Another thing to be considered is the fact the warehouses and wharves contemplated would be of small value unless they could be reached by rail.

The only railroads which reach the shore front in proximity to the land under consideration are the Central and Lehigh Valley and their connections. The interests of the four great corporations mentioned are closely allied. The Lehigh Valley Railroad recently acquired possession of Black Tom, on which the National Storage Company's warehouses are located. It was said that this land was desired for a passenger terminus and ferry to New York. It is now the concensus of opinion among those who are interested in the matter that the real object which the Lehigh Valley Railroad Company had in view in securing the property was to give it a means of reaching the artificial islands with their immense warehouses, which it is proposed to build.

The distance from Black Tom to the land it is proposed to acquire would be slight and a railroad trestle across the flats at that point would not interfere with traffic to any considerable extent. The Central Railroad also would not be far from the artificial islands, and it would be possible to run its line to the warehouses also. The warehouses and wharves, if built, would enter into serious competition with the warehouses and wharves which the Pennsylvania Railroad Company is to build three thousand feet from the Greenville shore line. The fact that the Pennsylvania Railroad Company recently appropriated half a million of dollars for its improvements and now has been at work on it leads to the conclusion that it proposes to anticipate the other large interests and rush its plans through while the capitalists back of the Oregon enterprise are striving for concessions and are overcoming the obstacles which the War Department may put in their way. P. Sandford Ross, the contractor who is to carry out the Pennsylvania Railroad Company's plans, already has a force of men at work with a tug and pile-driver.

The most serious thing for the Riparian Board to consider in the matter of the price to be charged for any concession if it is decided to make it. Mr. Cragin offers $100 000 for the entire grant, comprising ninety acres. That is at the rate of about $87,000 an acre. The land is under water, but the men who buy it propose to make it as solid and as valuable as the shore front property, or more so, as there will be opportunities from the water two miles at least. Land on the shore front in the vicinity of the concession is valued at $1,000 a foot front. There are about 1,000 feet in the grant. That would make the price offered by Mr. Cragin about $15 a foot front.

Must Pay Up or Go to Jail.

Warrants for the personal tax delinquents in the borough of Mountainside were issued by Justice Collins, of Westfield, Thursday, and turned over to a constable for collection. Mayor Cory has ordered that all personal delinquents pay up or go to jail.

PRETTY WHITE HERON.

How a Little Bird Helps the Elephant to Rid Himself of an Annoying Enemy.

What are these birds doing on the elephants back? What is their object in pecking and clawing at His hide and seemingly trying their hardest to annoy and disturb the great brute? 'Tis rather an impudent and dangerous proceeding, one would naturally think, for, with one sweep of his powerful trunk, the elephant could whisk them all from his back and crush them to nothingness. There are a few curious facts which will answer these questions.

You must all know what parasites are. Your dictionary or encyclopedia will tell you that they are of two great classes—those of the vegetable kingdom and those of the animal. In the first division, or botany, as it is otherwise named, parasites are plants which live directly on other plants, and through their roots take their nourishment from the larger growth, and not from the ground. The orchids, a wonderful species of flower, of which there are several hundred varieties in the United States and several thousands in the tropics, answer this description partially, as though they live on trees and other plants which are rooted in the ground, their roots in turn are not fastened into the tree, but are exposed to the air and absorb food from it.

The mistletoe, the flower which, with the holly and other evergreens, is used for decorations at Christmas time, is, however, a complete parasite, and inhabits the oak tree usually, growing in the crotches of its great branches. The mistletoe brings us to the kissing bug, which is not botany, but of entomology (insectology), which is a division of zoology; and now we are getting near to the elephant and the birds. Naturalists tell us that every living creature or growing thing has its parasite. Even the flea, they say, which is in itself a parasite, has smaller fleas to keep it scratching and annoyed. If this is a fact and the theory correct, and susceptible of further application, then parasite No. 2 must have his troubles, and so on, multiplied into infinity. Where does it stop? and what a terrible case of "flea eat flea" it must be! And what a source of satisfaction it would be to the poor dog to know how his tormentors were being tortured! From the flea to the elephant is a big jump, but we will not stop to talk of the birds on his back. The birds are there after parasites; and that is the answer to the first question. One would think that the elephant with his wonderful endurance, his comparative ignorance of pain and with a hide six inches thick to protect him, would be above being annoyed by little things; but he isn't.

In the deep forests of Africa, where the elephant roams, there lives also an insect called the "wood-tick," and he is his most hated and feared enemy. Against lions and tigers, against the great rhinoceros even, the elephant is as well fortified as a battleship against a rifle ball, but the tick is small to be fought. The tough, thick hide, which is proof against the claws of the lion and the thorns of the jungle, is easy to the tick, and he just bores it full of holes. He gets down into the crevices and wrinkles of the elephant's back and there he stays and gnaws and chews and wriggles and scratches. No amount of rubbing against rocks or trees will relieve the smarting. But the elephant has a little bird for a friend. No sooner is the tick comfortably situated than a pair of bright, piercing, yellow eyes seeks him out, and a long, slender, graceful beak pluckes him forth from his hiding and feasting. The owner of those eyes is that bill is a beautiful white heron. He is small of body, long of leg and large of heart and purpose, and in northern Africa he is said by the natives and hunters to be the elephant's guardian angel. The elephant is wise to judge him so, too, for, ugly tempered as he often is, he is never cross with the heron, or ibis, as he is called in the Nile country. When the long, slender bill starts on a tour of the huge flesh, as it sometimes does, he is patient with his benefactor, and, bearing the pain without a twitch, seems to know that it is for the best.

In countries where there are no elephants the ibis seeks other animals, and performs the same service for oxen and sheep which it does for the mammoth of the jungle, and from this it comes to be called the "cattle heron."—Cincinnati Commercial Tribune.

Spiders are a serious plague in Japan. They spin their webs on the telegraph wires, and are so numerous as to cause a serious loss of insulation. Sweeping the wires does little good, as the spiders begin all over again.

UNCLE SAM WON'T MOVE.

POSTOFFICE TO REMAIN WHERE IT IS FOR FIVE YEARS LONGER.

Lease Will be Signed With the Babcock Estate—Present Facilities are Excellent.

The city postoffice will not be moved, at least for five years, from its present location in the Babcock building. Recently Postoffice Inspector W. B. Snow was on here from Washington, D. C., for the purpose of making the necessary arrangements to continue the office in its present location. There has been some talk of locating the postoffice in the corner store of the Babcock building. That store is at present occupied as a carpet department by Woodhull & Martin. It is understood that the above firm is not well satisfied with the location that they do not desire to vacate for the store adjoining and west of the entrance to the Babcock building.

Postmaster Bird told a reporter Friday morning that the necessary application papers had been made out and the lease drawn up by the representative of the executors of the Babcock estate and been forwarded to the first assistant postmaster general to whom all applications for rental and supplies must be submitted. The application has the approval and recommendation of Inspector Snow. While the lease has not yet been signed, it is quite probable that it soon will be, in consideration of the recommendation of the inspector.

Inspector Snow told Postmaster Bird that the Plainfield postoffice was one of the best equipped in the State, *outside of large cities where the post*office is located in a government building especially constructed for such a purpose. The lease of the present quarters occupied by the postoffice does not expire until October. It is probable, though, that the new application will be accepted by the government officials in a few days and the lease forwarded to the executors of the Babcock estate for their signature.

TO LEAD AT MARCONIER.

H. W. Marshall Chosen as Superintendent of Trinity Reformed Church's New Branch.

At the regular meeting of the consistory of Trinity Reformed church last Thursday, H. W. Marshall was the unanimous choice of the Consistory as their leader in the position of general superintendent of Marconier chapel at Oak Tree, recently accepted as a branch of the church and Elder VanEmburgh and Deacons Thorpe and VanZandt were appointed as a committee from the church to assist Mr. Marshall in his work and to secure supplies for the Sunday evening services at the chapel. The selection of Mr. Marshall as general superintendent of the chapel is very pleasing to the people of Oak Tree, as he has already endeared himself to them by the interest he has manifested in the chapel and for his regular attendance at the Sunday-school ever since its adoption as a branch of Trinity.

The appointment of Mr. Marshall as general superintendent of the chapel will in no way effect the present superintendent of the Sunday-school, A. E. Mettler, who is doing very efficient and satisfactory work at the chapel, and Mr. Mettler will continue to act as the superintendent of the Sunday-school.

B. AND O. PLANS.

Reports Which Involve the Absorption of the Reading and the Jersey Central Roads.

A Baltimore dispatch to the New York Herald says that it is currently reported that the Baltimore and Ohio is about to absorb the Philadelphia and Reading and the Central Railroad of New Jersey, thus obtaining a through line of its own to New York. The Pennsylvania is said to be interested in the deal, taking as its share the coal tonnage of the Scranton, Wilkesbarre and Mauch Chunk districts of Pennsylvania, now dominated by the Jersey Central.

Thisweekend, it is said, was considered in Philadelphia Thursday, when Chairman Shoonover of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad, and President Gassett, of the Pennsylvania Railroad, had a conference. The local railroad heads refuse to give out any information on the deal.

West Embree Street a Macadam Street.

Property owners living on West Fifth street, between Monroe and Grant avenue, are getting up a petition to present to the Common Council to have their street macadamized from curb to curb. They agree to pay two-thirds of the expense, if the city will pay the other third. If the work is done the property owners will have three years in which to pay the two-thirds. It is a most commendable effort and one if accomplished will be greatly appreciated.

Being Cut Down to Grade.

East Third street is being cut down to grade by Street Commissioner Gawett's men, an improvement which has long been needed. The street is to be resurfaced with macadam and will be put in excellent condition.

CUPS TO BE COMPETED FOR AT HILLSIDE CLUB

Schedule of Contests for the Season Announced by Golf Committee.

SEVERAL NEW TROPHIES.

HILLSIDE LINKS WILL OPEN SATURDAY WITH INFORMAL COMPETITION.

VanHerwerden and Golf Club Cups Have Just Been Offered—Schedule of Events— Conditions Governing Them—A Lively Season in Prospect.

An active season has been planned by the golf committee of the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club. The schedule of competitions was announced Friday night by the committee. Besides the trophies that were contested for last season, there are several new ones. The schedule only includes the regular club competitions. Others may be added and then there will be the various matches to be arranged by the captain of the team, Rutherford M. Shepard.

While the course will be informally opened next Saturday and a little competition has been arranged, it will not be until the second week in May that any event of importance is to take place. Then comes a scratch tournament. The first trophy to be played for is the VanHerwerden Cup, offered this year for the first time. The Golf Club Cups are also new. The active season runs through May and June up to the Fourth of July. Then there will be a lull until September as many of the players go away for the summer. There will undoubtedly be some informal competitions arranged during that time however.

The schedule, complete to date, as announced last Friday by Lewis R. Waring, chairman of the golf committee, is as follows:

April 21, (Opening Day.) Prize for best score May 12, 2 p. m., Scratch tournament, 18 holes. medal play, open to all active members.
May 19, 10 a. m., Van Herwerden Cup.
May 26, 2 p. m., Preliminary round, Chapman Cup.
May 30, (Decoration Day.) 10 a. m., First round match play, Chapman Cup.
3 p. m., Semi-finals, Chapman Cup.
June 2, 2 p. m., Finals, Chapman Cup.
June 9, 10 a. m., Schoonmaker Cup.
June 16, 2 p. m., Reinhart Cup.
June 23, 2 p. m., Gilbert Cup.
June 30, 10 a. m., van Herwerden Cup.
2 p. m., Men's Foursome.
July 4, (Independence Day.) Bogey Handicap.
Sept. 3, (Labor Day.) Golf Committee Cup.
Sept. 6, 10 a. m., van Herwerden Cup.
Sept. 13, 2 p. m., Reinhart Cup.
Sept. 20, 2 p. m., Golf Club Cups, classes "A" and "B."
Oct. 11, 10 a. m., Schoonmaker Cup.
Oct. 27, 10 a. m., van Herwerden Cup.
Nov. 1, 2 p. m., Preliminary round, Chapman Cup.
Nov. 6, (Election Day.) 10 a. m., First round match play, Chapman Cup.
2 p. m., Semi-finals, Chapman Cup.
Nov. 10, 2 p. m., Finals, Chapman Cup.
Nov. 26, (Thanksgiving Day.) 10 a. m., Gilbert Cup.

The play for the several cups will be regulated by the following conditions:

Chapman Cup. Men's competition, open to active members only, the eight players who shall have qualified at medal play, eighteen holes, to compete at match play, eighteen holes.

Reinhart Cup. Handicap, men's competition, open to active members only, eighteen holes, medal play.

Schoonmaker Cup. Handicap, competition open to ladies over sixteen years of age, whether active, associate or junior associate members, eighteen holes, medal play; the competition October 13th, match play, open only to those ladies who have made one or more wins for the series cup.

Golf Committee Cup. Handicap, eighteen holes, medal play, open to active and associate members.

Men's Foursome Cup. Handicap, competition open to active members only, eighteen holes, medal play.

Bogey Handicap Cup. Competition open to active members, eighteen holes, match play.

Golf Club Cups. Handicap, eighteen holes, medal play, classes "A" and "B"; class "A" open to all members whose handicap is 18 or less, class "B" open to all members whose handicap is 19 or more.

All entries for these competitions must reach the chairman of the golf committee or be dropped in the box provided for the purpose at the clubhouse at least twenty-four hours before the event, otherwise the entry will not be accepted.

Scores for the handicap competitions must be accompanied by the member's last three gross scores for 18 holes (totals) unless they are already in the hands of the golf committee, otherwise he must play from scratch. Members are requested to deposit as many score cards as possible in the scores box, so that the committee may have a reliable basis for handicapping. In all club events each participant must play with a member of the club.

A FACTORY SETTLEMENT.

SO-CALLED ALTRUISTIC ENTERPRISE IN SOMERSET COUNTY.

It Will be Located at Belle Meade—Small Manufacturers Will be Induced to Locate There.

The Provident Realty Company has been formed to establish an altruistic factory settlement at Belle Meade, Somerset county. The company has already organized itself, secured a charter from the Secretary of State and elected its officers. The president of the company is John Guild Mutchler, of Trenton. Wm. G. Moore, cashier of the Trenton Trust Company, is treasurer, and Scott Scammel, a lawyer, is secretary and general counsel. The prime mover in the company is Wm J. Robinson, of Red Bank, who is the general manager of the real estate department of the Knickerbocker Mortgage Company of New York. The capital stock of the company is $300 00, of which $1 0,000 is treasury stock, guaranteed by the trust company. All the stock is fully paid up and non assessable.

The plan is to start a settlement similar to those of the Krupp Company in Essen, Germany, and the National Cash Register Company, of Ohio. In this instance, however, the settlement will be made up of many small manufacturers, who find it impossible to compete with their large contemporaries, instead of one large concern. The building of the settlement will be conducted so as to provide for employes especially the best possible surroundings, and it is proposed to erect a number of large buildings, which will be given over rent free to manufacturers who are cramped in lofts in New York and other cities.

LAUNDRY BURNED OUT.

OVERHEATED STOVE STARTED FIRE IN MILLER BUILDING FRIDAY.

Discovered by Janitress in Flat Above—Loss Will Reach $1,500, Mostly Covered by Insurance.

Flames swept the interior of the Queen City Laundry, 337 Park avenue, Friday evening, and threatened all the Miller building with destruction. The total loss to building and contents will reach nearly $1,500. The fire started in the drying room of the laundry from an overheated stove.

The fire was discovered by Mr. Humphrey, who occupies the flat on the third floor over the laundry. The smoke reached his rooms by way of the air shaft. He alarmed the occupants and notified the telephone exchange next door. An alarm was sent in by telephone but before the firemen could start, box 13 was pulled by City Judge W. N. Runyon at 9:07 o'clock.

Several wagon loads of paper were heaped in the cellar. The fire had just reached it when the firemen arrived. The interior of the laundry was all ablaze. One stream was turned the building from the rear and two from the front. In half an hour the fire was flooded out.

Fred Moore lived in the flat on the second floor. His wife was ill. She was moved to a neighboring flat. The second and third floors were filled with smoke, but the fire did not reach them.

Adam E. Dealaman, proprietor of the Queen City Laundry, places his loss at $600. He had a large wash on hand. His insurance was $300. The damage to the building, owned by Miss Annie Miller, will reach $700. The first floor is a wreck and the second and third are damaged by smoke. It was amply covered by insurance. Fred Moore's loss will reach $75, covered by insurance. Mr. Humphrey's loss will be slight.

Plainfield Pencilings.

"Plainfield Pencilings" is the the title of a new paper that is to be published and edited by Guerillimo Thorn, Plainfield's old photographer. Mr. Thorn says the first issue will consist of 20,000 copies and that the paper will be interesting and of special benefit to Plainfield.

Central Lodge's "Smoker."

Central Lodge, No. 48, A. O. U. W., entertained a number of the members of Columbia Lodge as well as a few of the grand officers at a "smoker" Thursday. The principal speakers were Grandmaster Lambert, of Newark; Deputy Grandmaster Rogers, of New Market; Supervising Deputy V. W. Nash, W. S. Anglemon and Charles Hepburn, of this city. Everybody had a good time and the "smoker" was a fraternal gathering that will not soon be forgotten.

Considered Rev. Mr. Martine's Case.

The official board of the Presbytery of Elizabeth met in the First Presbyterian church in this city Thursday to consider the question of dissolving the relations of Rev. Mr. Martine and the Dunellen Presbyterian church, in order that the minister may accept the call to Marlboro. The matter was discussed and the required permission will be given.

THE SIXTH MUSICALE.

Christian Endeavorers of the Seventh-day Baptist Church Hosts at First Talent.

The sixth musicale of the Christian Endeavor Society of the Seventy-Day Baptist church, held in the church Thursday, fully sustained the reputation for excellence made by past affairs of a similar character. Every pew in the church was occupied and the audience overflowed into the chapel.

All those who took part in the programme, except Miss Lillie d'Angelo Bergh, of New York, were from this city and well-known in Plainfield musical circles. Miss Bergh is possessed of a strong rich soprano voice that evidenced the results of long and careful training. Her selections were admirably chosen to show her range and exact rendering of the difficult parts.

Miss Edith Waldo, violin, and Dr Leonard Waldo, violin-cello, gave several instrumental trios, with Miss Jessie Utter, piano, that were of unusual excellence.

The double quartette sang well while the baritone solos of William Holmes were satisfactorily rendered. Miss Jessie Utter acted as accompanist. To her much credit is due for arranging the delightful affair. She was chairman of the committee in charge and spared no efforts to make the musicale a success. The success of her efforts was admirably demonstrated.

BRIDE'S LONG JOURNEY.

MISS VERMEULE TO MEET PROSPECTIVE HUSBAND IN SALT LAKE CITY.

He is Lieutenant Pearson, U. S. A., and Theirs is a Love Match of Many Years.

Miss Marguerite Vermeule, daughter of Mrs. Sarah Vermeule, of Watchung avenue, will leave Plainfield this week Thursday for Salt Lake City, where she will meet Lieut. Samuel Pearson, U. S. A., to whom she will be married, after which they will proceed to Fort Duchesne, Utah, where Mr. Pearson is stationed.

It was originally planned that they should be married next June, but Lieut. Pearson was governed by army rules, and the time was changed accordingly. He is not able to get a sufficient amount of time off to come to Plainfield as he would like, hence the plan of meeting his bride part way. Mr. Pearson is a native of Pasadena, Cal., and came to Plainfield ten years ago when he entered Harned Academy. He remained there five years, and then took up the profession of civil engineer. He was associated with H. C. VanEmburgh, and did work in various New York state towns and cities. This business he followed for a few years, but finally decided to enter the Regular Army. He went to Sing Sing and enlisted in Company I, 1st Regiment, U. S. A., as a private, and rose considerably through the west. When the Spanish-American War broke out he went to Cuba with his regiment, and had a very lively experience. He performed great service and won promotion to sergeant after the fighting at SanJuan. Last October he was again promoted to lieutenant, and was stationed at Fort Duchesne, Utah, a military post.

Miss Vermeule met her future husband ten years ago and since then the friendship has ripened into a strong love for each. She is one of the most estimable young woman, active in the work at the First Presbyterian church, and very popular in a large circle of friends. She will make the journey to Salt Lake City alone.

DEATH OF MRS. BEERS.

Little Daughter is Critically Ill With Same Disease That Killed the Mother.

Mrs. Adele Daniel Beers, wife of Albert R. Beers, of 724 Watchung avenue, died early Saturday at her home after a several weeks' illness with pneumonia. Her little daughter is still critically ill with the same dread disease and, on that account, the funeral was private. Both Mrs Beers and her daughter were taken ill several weeks ago and grew steadily worse. It is hoped that the life of the child can be saved.

Mrs. Beers was the daughter of Edwin M. and Caroline M. Daniel, of West Eighth street. She was born in this city and has spent most of her life here. Twelve years ago she married Mr. Beers, who is engaged in the rubber goods business in New York. She has been a woman of domestic habits and her home was always a very happy one. She was quite modest and unassuming in her ways, but greatly beloved by all who knew her well She was a member of the Rescue Club.

She leaves a husband and three children Her death is a particularly sorrowful one on account of the serious illness of her daughter with the same disease that caused the death of the mother.

Indefinitely Postponed.

"Ward Stephens' third chamber music concert that was to be given in the Casino Tuesday evening, April 24th, has been postponed indefinitely. When the date is fixed due notice will be given.

FOR INSULAR FUNDS.

Secretary Gage to Name Government Depositories.

POPULAR ELECTION OF SENATORS.

Philippine Bill Barely Escapes Displacement in the Senate—Borrows Makes a Speech In Opposition to the Seating of Quay.

WASHINGTON, April 13.—The house yesterday, after a spirited debate, adopted the resolution reported from the insular affairs committee to authorize the secretary of the treasury to designate depositaries in Porto Rico, Cuba and the Philippines for the deposit of government funds. By the terms of the resolution it applies to Cuba only so long as the island shall be occupied by the United States. An amendment to include the Philippines in this provision as to Cuba, offered, as stated, to emphasize the desire of the opposition not to retain the islands, was defeated by a party vote.

A senate bill which will permit the dependent mothers of soldiers or sailors of the Spanish war, even though they married Confederate soldiers, to receive the benefit of the general pension law was passed. The remainder of the day was devoted to debate upon a resolution offered by the committee on election of president, vice president and representatives in congress for a constitutional amendment empowering the legislatures of the states to decide whether United States senators shall be elected by the legislatures or directly by the people. A substitute resolution was offered by the minority of the committee providing that from the majority resolution in giving the states no option, but providing that it shall enure to the people should vote directly for United States senators.

An effort was made in the senate by Mr. Morgan to displace the present unfinished business, the Spooner Philippine bill, by the substitution in its stead of the Nicaragua canal bill. While Mr. Morgan's motion failed—15 to 33—the Philippine measure was saved a new spurt from being displaced by the Alaskan civil code bill on motion of Mr. Carter, the motion being defeated on a roll call—29 to 33. The close of the day's proceedings was an exhaustive discussion of the Quay case by Mr. Burrows of Michigan. Senators on both sides of the chamber gave him most careful hearing and at the conclusion of his speech warmly congratulated him.

Mr. Quay of Arkansas, chairman of the Democratic national committee, opened the session with a sharp retort to a charge made against him in the house yesterday by Mr. Henderson of Iowa. The senate will not be in session Good Friday, adjourning over until Saturday.

The Strike at Pawtucket, R. I.

PAWTUCKET, R. I., April 13.—Only one of the more than 500 weavers employed by the Torraine Manufacturing company, on strike since the mill gates were opened yesterday. That man went in to finish a cut of cloth which took about two hours' time. Then he joined the other weavers. The other departments of the mills were started as usual. Treasurer and Agent James R. Sayles, of the company, met the strikers' representatives. The strike was caused by the refusal of Agent MacColl to permit the operatives to run three looms instead of two. The mills receive and work second dress goods and employ about 1,400 hands.

Mrs. Grace's Mexican Silver Mines.

SYRACUSE, April 13.—Mrs. Mary D. Grace, a great grandchild of the late ownership of silver and lead mines in Mexico valued at millions of dollars has been decided to be valid by the highest court in the state. The court reversed that a judge of a lower court recognizes the legality of the company which usurped her rights, and he refuses to recognize or obey the order of the court. Mrs. Grace will appeal to the United States government at Washington upon the ground that Mexican troops were called out to dispossess her five years ago.

Strike Cripples Telegraph Lines.

CHATTANOOGA, April 13.—The strike of telegraph operators on the Alabama Great Southern and Memphis divisions of the Southern railway is complete. No response can be obtained to calls for any station along the line, and the O. R. T. officers state that all the men with one or two exceptions are out. The Western Union operators are also out. Officials of the Southern here state that they will be able to supply the places of the strikers in a few days.

Internal Revenue Collections.

WASHINGTON, April 13.—The March statement of the collection of internal revenue shows that the total receipts for the month were $24,326,677, an increase as compared with March, 1899, of $1,363,285. The receipts from some of the sources of revenue are given as follows: Spirits, $9,607,599, increase $647,629; tobacco, $5,348,429, increase $854,; fermented liquors, $5,180,855, increase $213,290; oleomargarine, $225,162, increase $58,457.

No Change In the Canteen Matter.

WASHINGTON, April 13.—Relative to a published statement ascribed to Secretary Root to the effect that president has made a substantial change in the army canteen, it is learned at this department that no change whatever has been made in the existing regulations, according to Secretary Root no change is contemplated in existing methods.

Postmasters Appointed.

WASHINGTON, April 13.—The following fourth class postmasters have been appointed—Carrie A. Hall, Richelieu, New Jersey—Harlington, E. B. Bergen, New York—Chevlot, Stephen H. Miller; Groton City, Henry R. Bliss; R. I., Middletown, Newport, R. I.—Rosedale, Pennsylvania—Rutledge, W. S. Palmer; Whiteley, W. C. Fleenikon.

Democrats Decide on Kansas City.

KANSAS CITY, April 13.—The subcommittee of the national Democratic committee held its meeting here to-day. Kansas City retain the national convention in July, the local committees having made satisfactory promises of a half.

How Does Altgeld Know?

ALBANY, April 13.—Former Governor Altgeld of Illinois will be the principal speaker at a banquet to be given at the Casino Tuesday evening, April 24th, has been postponed indefinitely. When the date is fixed due notice will be given.

GOOD FRIDAY SERVICES.

PARTICIPATED IN BY PASTORS OF SEVERAL CHURCHES.

Held in the First Methodist Church, and Attended by a Large Concourse of People.

The Good Friday services at the First M. E. church Friday evening attracted the attendance of a large number of the church-going people. The services were very impressive and were participated in by the pastors of seven of the city's various churches. There were present Rev. Dr E. M. Rodman, rector of Grace Episcopal church; Rev. L. L. Goodrich, pastor of the Congregational church; Rev. Cornelius Schenck, Ph. D., pastor of the Trinity Reformed church; Rev. D. J. Yerkes, pastor of the First Baptist church; Rev. A. E. Main, pastor of the Seventh-Day Baptist church; Rev. W. C. O'Donnell, former pastor of Monroe Avenue M. E. church, who took Rev. G. W Gardner's place on account of the latter being ill, and Rev. W. B. Richards, pastor of Crescent Avenue church.

The services were opened by the choir singing "My Faith Looks Up to Thee," followed by prayer and responsive reading. After the scriptural reading the various pastors give brief addresses with regard to the utterances of Christ while on the cross. The subjects were arranged and the quotations from the scripture relating to the crucifixion were referred to as follows:

"Father, forgive them, for they know not what they do," Rev. E. M. Rodman; "Verily, I say unto thee, to day shalt thou be with me in paradise," Rev. C. L. Goodrich; "Behold thy son; behold thy mother," Rev. Cornelius Schenck; "My God, my God, why hast thou forsaken me?" Rev. D. J. Yerkes; "I thirst," Rev. A. E. Main; "It is finished," Rev. W. C. O'Donnell; "Father, into thy hands I commend my spirit," Rev. W. B. Richards.

The discourses were alike fervent, earnest and replete with Christian thought, conveying to the large congregation an inspiration that was imbued with spiritual magnetism and refreshing to the mind in the way of Biblical history.

After the brief sermons an offering was asked in aid of the Children's Home.

This union service was particularly interesting from the fact that the ministers who took part in it included one of an Episcopal faith as well as representatives of the Methodist, Baptist, Presbyterian, Congregational and Seventh-Day Baptist. It was a unity of brotherly love, joined in offering up praises to the Deity upon one of the most sacred of all holy days and at the close of the Lenten season—a period of prayer, fasting and self-denial. It is believed that these union services will be the means of doing much toward fostering a kindlier feeling between the members of the various denominations.

Rev. W. C. Rodgers, pastor of the First Methodist church, presided over the services, and announced the various numbers on the programme.

Let Us Hope So.

The statement is made on good authority that Plainfield will see the new station of the Jersey Central Railroad completed before summer is over. The officials of the company are even now considering the plans and it is expected that active work will be started before June. Once started it will not take many months to complete the improvements that the Central has planned.

Colored Couple Wedded.

Mrs. Emma Webster and Henry Brown, both of this city, were married Thursday at the home of the bride, 804 Arlington avenue. The ceremony was performed by Rev. W. D. Johnson, pastor of the Filmore Baptist church, before a number of relatives and friends of the couple. The bride was accompanied by Mrs Letta Maynard and the groom by Watson Randolph.

Death of Margaret A. McCready.

Word has been received of the death of Miss Margaret A. McCready, youngest daughter of Thomas L. and Emily A. McCready, and granddaughter of the late Benjamin W. McCready, M. D. She died at her home 138 West 13th street, New York, Thursday. She was formerly a resident of Plainfield.

Funeral of Mrs. Bielly.

The funeral of Mrs. Catherine E Bielly, of Brooklyn, mother of Eugene Bielly, of this city, took place Thursday, the interment being in the Holy Cross R. C. church cemetery at Flatbush, L. I. Mrs. Bielly was seventy-six years of age and leaves seven children.

Used Profane Language.

Edward Couch was arraigned before City Judge Runyon Saturday on the charge of using profane and indecent language, preferred by Mrs. Mary Laing. The judge found him guilty but suspended sentence.

Notaries Go Out.

The terms of all notaries, except those appointed within five years and July 4th, and hereafter the term will be five years instead of for life as formerly.

LIGHT IN DARKNESS.

Londoners Encouraged by Lord Roberts' Message.

THOUGHT TO BE GETTING READY.

Boers Still Kept at Bay at Wepener. Kitchener's Scouts Are Now Appearing on Flank and Rear of Buller's Army.

LONDON, April 13.—In a roundabout way London hears that Lord Roberts, when wiring to the Duke of Wales at Copenhagen congratulating upon the escape from assassination, added two or three hopeful sentences portending an early advance with wide reaching combinations.

Quiet assurances are passed around among military men that Lord Roberts is employing his great army effectively and that the adventurous Boer commandoes are likely to be enmeshed. Scraps of news—a detail here and another there—have reached England over comparatively idle cables, but they do not illuminate the situation.

The colonists at Wepener still hold off the Boers. Lord Roberts is marching eastward until he is within 80 miles of Kronstadt. Boer scouts have gone around Ladysmith and have appeared at Dundee and other points in General Buller's flanks and rear. The officers of Buller's irregular horse estimate the Boers in Natal at 18,000, but these figures are not considered as being regarded here as the outside number.

The Bloemfontein correspondent of The Daily Telegraph, telegraphing on Wednesday, says:

"Lord Roberts wisely declines to exhaust his men and horses in hunting the elusive Boers until his preparations are complete. He will be content to hold the barren comfort of the occupation of a few farms for a short time."

A dispatch to The Daily Mail from Lourenco Marques, dated Thursday, says:

"It is reported from Pretoria that a Boer commando is moving through Rensburgland. This is said to be a clever ruse to draw the British army away from Wepener.

"About 2,000 foreigners constitute the new foreign legion in Pretoria, including some cossacks in uniform. Several fresh recruits left here for Pretoria today, including a French captain, brother of the late General de Villebois-Mareuil."

The Copenhagen correspondent of The Daily Mail says:

"Lord Roberts in a telegram to the Prince of Wales tendering congratulations on behalf of the troops in South Africa upon the escape of the Prince at Brussels spoke very hopefully of the situation at the front."

Advices from Cape Town say the Bloemfontein correspondent of The Cape Argus says:

"Olivier's commando is moving in the direction of Smithfield.

"Two different laagers are located between Bethany and the Kaffir river, lying *parallel to the railway, 12 miles east-*ward."

Brave Defense at Wepener.

ALIWAL NORTH, April 13.—The colonial troops are still holding their own splendidly at Wepener. Commanding heights command the town. The Boer attack yesterday was not very serious. The British are carefully husbanding their ammunition, and their guns are making excellent practice. They have plenty of ammunition. A patrol from Smithfield reports that small groups of Boers are visible.

Locked Up and Left.

FISHKILL, N. Y., April 13.—William Reilly, a tramp, was locked up Friday for a night's lodging to Constable Wiltse at Fishkill on Saturday night. He was placed in the jail, and the constable forgot he had locked up the man. Wednesday afternoon Charles Sparks was passing the jail, which is in a remote part of the village. Hearing groans, he investigated and fled off the lock. He discovered Reilly almost dead. The man had had no food or drink in four days and also the extreme heat of the building trying to make people liberate him from the jail. The man is in a bad condition, but careful nursing will probably save his life.

Monitors to Be Laid Up.

WASHINGTON, April 13.—The navy department has practically decided to put out of commission in the harbor of Manila the monitors Monterey and Monadnock, releasing the crews for service on other vessels where they are badly needed. An alternative proposition is to send one of the monitors to Cavite, as a floating ship for gunners. In either case the purpose is to avoid the hardships to which officers and crews are subjected by keeping them aboard the monitors during the hot season in the Philippines.

Texas Bridge Destroyed.

COLUMBUS, Tex., April 13.—High water in the Colorado river has washed away the Southern Pacific railroad bridge here. The loss will exceed $100,000. Columbus is now entirely surrounded by water and the railway output to the west. Half the bridge has emerged. No lives have been lost, but all crops have been destroyed. The river has been rising two days, however, and no further damage is anticipated.

Gigantic Mining Schemes.

SPOKANE, April 13.—The Chronicle says that the formation of the biggest mining company operated in the states west and one of the largest gigantic mining schemes ever formed has been made public. The King Solomon Mining company, headed by James R. Townsend of Lacon, Ill., has been capitalized for $30,000,000 and has secured hundreds of claims for 2½ miles along Lake Kootenay, near Ainsworth, B. C.

Child Fatally Burned.

GOUVERNEUR, N. Y., April 13.—The 2-year-old son of Hiram Duncharm found a can of coal oil and spilled the clothing on the cradle in which his infant sister was sleeping. Before help could arrive the baby was horribly burned and died in a few hours.

President Signs the Bill.

WASHINGTON, April 13.—The president at 7 o'clock last evening signed the Porto Rican tariff and civil government bill. Only Secretary Root and Mr. Cortelyou, of the president's cabinet, with the president, were present when the bill became a law.

NOVEL APPARATUS.

Bicycle and Automobile Tires Inflated Automatically by a Clever Slot Machine.

An interesting and novel form of apparatus for inflating pneumatic tires, such as those used on bicycles and the heavier ones used on automobiles, designed to work on the penny-in-the-slot system, is shown here. The most novel feature of this device, the invention of John Fay Wilson, of Jetmore, Kan., is the mechanism for controlling the air pressure, which is produced by means of an electric motor and compressor. This is set in operation by the insertion of a penny in the chute shown, and the operation of the plunger is as usual in coin-controlled mechanism. After the tires are connected with the tubes shown the pointer is adjusted to the proper point on the dial, the figures of which represent pounds of air pressure desired. The coin is then dropped in the slot and the plunger pushed home. The air pressure required to force the air into the tube becomes so great as to indicate that they are properly inflated the electric contact is broken, the motor stops and the pressure is cut off.

EXPERIENCE COUNTS.

Under No Circumstances Should Novices Attempt to Ride on Muddy Roads at Night.

Cyclers must be graduated in the school of experience ere they can be considered thoroughly versed in their machines; and in no particular, perhaps, is experience more necessary than in the matter of riding on muddy roads. Until this experience is gained, beginners should keep to the byways of venturing among traffic when the roads are wet, for then a sudden side-slip might mean the ending of their earthly career. Old riders can tell at a glance the condition of surface conducive to side-slipping, and they are apt to push along the really dangerous places and to crawl along where it is really safe to ride at speed. Experience of road surface cannot be gained, of course, in riding; but, should the novice before indulging in town riding, beginners should make it a practice to put in a certain amount of riding in quiet thoroughfares when the roads are wet and muddy. By so doing they will speedily become acquainted with the conditions of surface dangerous to ride over in traffic. Nervous riders are troubled with side-slip to a far greater extent when cycling at night than during daylight, one of the reasons for this being that they are continually easing up and steering all over the road in endeavors to avoid imaginary muddy stretches. Do not ride in the dark when the roads are muddy is the best advice to nervous riders.—Golden Days.

Protector-Closing Contrivance.

Take 12 inches of pure scrap rubber, rubber cuttings, or the like, place it in a suitable utensil and submit it to heat over a fire until it has dissolved into a thick mass, taking care to stir the whole briskly and constantly, and as no longer, or it will become solid. Then remove it from the fire, take its temperature, which will be 200 degrees Fahrenheit or thereabouts, and set it aside to cool till its heat has fallen 20 degrees Fahrenheit. Take the temperature and it taken. Then add 1½ ounces of white resin and stir until thoroughly mixed. Then add one ounce of boiled linseed oil and three-quarters of an ounce of dryers. (Use two last-named ingredients only to go in together), and well mix the whole and stand it aside till its temperature shall have fallen another 60 degrees Fahrenheit or thereabouts, when it will be ready for use.

Women Like Winter Riding.

Women have taken to winter riding this season, and are quite as persistent and enthusiastic as any other sex, with long top riding shoes, thick woolen, gloves, a soft hat without feathers to catch the wind, and a stout coat or jersey constitute the apparel of the determined cyclist. A new style of sweater, especially designed for riding, is being considerably favored now. It is made with sleeves that fit tightly about the wrists and forearms, but are fully ample about the upper arms and shoulders. They have a roll collar and the tightly knit elastic neck, but button across the shoulders in front, and instead of looking rough are somewhat dressy.

Combination Automobile.

Recently a motor carriage has been introduced in France which combines many novel features. It is normally propelled solely by an oil engine, but on hilly ground is helped by an electric motor. The oil engine works at constant speed, and when the vehicle does not ascend all the engine power the excess driven the dynamo as a current and charges the accumulators. Then the accumulators are used only occasionally, and they are kept fully charged. The engine is directly connected to the dynamo motor, which is shunt wound, and this in turn used to start up the engine. The change in speed are effected mechanically.

DEATH CAME SUDDENLY.

ISAAC LANCE PASSED AWAY SITTING IN A CHAIR.

Caused by a Stroke of Apoplexy—Had Been Ill for Some Time—

A Christian Worker.

Isaac Lance, aged 80 years, a highly respected citizen of the borough, living at 12 Westervelt avenue, died suddenly Friday afternoon at his home. He had just returned from the yard and had been sitting in a chair about ten minutes when he passed away. Dr. J. Harvey Bodemer, the family physician, was summoned, but he could do nothing to save his patient, who died two or three minutes after his arrived. Death was due to apoplexy. For some time past Mr. Lance was being treated for kidney trouble with which he suffered a great deal at times.

Mr. Lance had been a resident for many years and was a painter by trade. He followed this business for several years until his health forced him to retire. He was a earnest, Christian man, and for some time past was interested in the Sunday-school work of the East Third Street Mission, where he was a regular attendant. He is survived by a wife, a daughter, Miss Eva Lance, and a son, Howard Lance, all of whom live in the borough.

The funeral services were held Monday afternoon last from the residence, 15 Westervelt avenue, at 2 o'clock. Members of Queen City Lodge, No. 198, I. O. O. F., and Masonic Tribe, No. 118, I. O. R. M., attended in a body. Interment in Evergreen Cemetery.

STRUCK BY TROLLEY CAR

HORSE SO BADLY INJURED THAT IT WAS NECESSARY TO KILL IT.

Dayton Mellick Did Not See Approach of the Car and He Turned Directly in Front of It.

Dayton Mellick, the milk dealer, whose farm is at Mount Pleasant, sustained the loss of one of his valuable team of horses early Saturday. Mr. Mellick was serving his customers in the eastern portion of the city at about 6 o'clock.

While driving on East Fifth street in the vicinity of Franklin place the team was struck by trolley car No. 14 in charge of Motorman Gamble. Both horses were thrown down and one of them was so badly injured that it had to be killed. It was shot by P. H. Lamourette, of East Fifth street. The other horse's legs were scratched but it was not seriously injured.

When the accident happened Mr. Mellick was driving along side the track in the direction of Netherwood. At Franklin place he turned his team over the track directly in front of the car which struck the horses before he was aware of the car's approach. Mr. Mellick told a Daily Press reporter that he did not see the car approaching nor hear any signal of warning given by the motorman.

A citizen who saw the accident says that the motorman did ring his gong some distance before approaching Mr. Mellick. The milkman says that the reason he did hear or see the car was because his wagon is completely closed in.

Supt. Adleman and Vice President John T. Fritts have made Mr. Mellick an offer in settlement of all damages. It is not believed that the motorman is entirely responsible for accident.

HUSBAND TELLS THE SECRET

Mrs. Bunting's Parents Hear of the Wedding, but Do Not Forgive.

Nettie Cowperthwait, eighteen years old, daughter of Henry Cowperthwait, of Piscataway town, near New Brunswick, became acquainted with Frank L. Bunting, a conductor of the Perth Amboy line. The young man's home is one of the oldest families in the county, and when her parents heard of the courtship they put a stern veto on it.

The girl, however, managed to meet her lover regularly upon his trips, and on March 23 they went to Somerville and were married by Rev. J. R. Bryan. Mrs. Bunting returned to her home and kept her secret. In violation of all traditions it was the husband who let the secret out. He told friends, who spoke of it and the rumor reached the ears of the bride's parents. They taxed her with the marriage and she admitted for the fortnight she had been Mrs. Bunting.

There was a time, said Mrs. Bunting left her parents' home and went to New Brunswick. She and her husband are living in that city at No. 21 Richmond street, waiting for the parental forgiveness. Mrs. Bunting says love is better than wealth.

Funeral of Mrs. Sherwin.

The funeral services of the late Mrs. Orsen Sherwin were held from the house, East Second street, Thursday afternoon, and there was a large attendance of relatives and friends. Rev. Dr. D J Yerkes, pastor of the First Baptist church, officiated, and spoke words of infinite concerning the Christian character of the departed. The interment took place in Hillside cemetery.

JOHN D. RUNYON'S SUFFERINGS AT END

One of the Victims of the Accident Last Thursday is Dead.

MR. SPICER STILL ALIVE.

THOUGH HIS CONDITION IS REPORTED TO BE CRITICAL.

Mr. Runyon's Death is Believed to be Due to a Fracture of the Breast Bone Which Punctured His Lung—He Was a Good Citizen.

The terrible injuries sustained by John D. Runyon last Thursday afternoon resulted in his death about 11 o'clock last Sunday. It will be recalled that Mr. Runyon and Joseph B. Spicer while in the former's lumber shed were precipitated to the ground by the giving away of the bridge-like contrivance that was up in the loft of the big shed. The men fell a distance of about 15 feet and were seriously and it was thought fatally injured. Mr. Spicer is still in a critical condition and it is feared that he cannot survive the terrible injuries he received owing to his advanced years.

The death of Mr. Runyon was a surprise and a shock to the community. It was hoped that his rugged constitution would be the means of enabling him to survive the bruises he sustained. Although the most skilled physicians obtainable have been at Mr. Runyon's bedside, he did not give evidence of improvement. Last night Dr. Zeglio, the attending physician, noticing that there was an appearance change for the worse, at the suggestion of the family wired Dr. Weir, a celebrated physician of New York, but he was not at home. Word, however, was left for Dr. Weir to come to Plainfield as soon as possible.

Mr. Runyon complained of much pain in his chest and from a superficial examination by Dr. Zeglio it was feared that his breast-bone had been broken and that the lungs had been punctured. Besides this it was known that two of Mr. Runyon's ribs were fractured and he was otherwise frightfully bruised. His death, however, is believed to have been the results of the injury to his chest. When he passed away at about 11 o'clock the sufferer was surrounded by his wife, sister in-law and H. O Newman, his confidential clerk.

The age of Mr. Runyon was about fifty-five years.

John D. Runyon was a son of Ephriam J. Runyon, a well-to-do farmer, who lived in Piscataway township. The subject of this sketch was born at New Market, near the mill pond at that place, about 50 years ago. About a quarter of a century ago his father died and the farm was sold. It was about that time that John D. Runyon was married to Sarah R. Boice, a daughter of David J. Boice, a well-known coal dealer, of Plainfield. For some years after his marriage, Mr. Runyon conducted a grocery business at New Brunswick. Later he moved to this city and engaged with his father-in-law in the coal and lumber business. The establishment of this concern was a few rods south of the present plant of Boice, Runyon & Co. The lumber sheds were subsequently destroyed by fire. Then the firm of Boice & Runyon was established and the Cook Brothers' lumber business was purchased. This was about ten years ago.

Upon the death of David J. Boice the firm was continued at the old stand, those composing the members of the firm being Mrs. Boice and John D. Runyon. For nearly a decade this firm has enjoyed a successful business career. John D. Runyon, the deceased, was largely instrumental in the construction of a number of dwellings in and about the city, his efforts in this direction being principally in Netherwood. In this enterprise Mr. Runyon was associated with Jeremiah Manning and Seaman Williams, well known contractors.

Although Mr. Runyon took an active interest in the affairs of Plainfield he never sought or held public office. He was, however, an active member of the Board of Trade, being one of the promoters of that well-known organization. About two years ago Mr. Runyon was appointed one of the appraisers of the Union county boulevard. For many years Mr. Runyon had been a member and regular attendant of the First Baptist church of this city and at the time of his death was a member and secretary of the board of trustees. He is survived by his wife but there are no children.

The funeral arrangements have not been completed.

FINGERHUTHS HAVE MOVED

There is Hope That the Wife Will be Relieved of Paying Full Penalty of Her Sentence.

Theodore Fingerhuth and his sons have finally moved from the Allen farm, near Somerset Park, where Peter Roehricht was shot and killed. They will now take up their home on a farm near Berkeley Heights, belonging to Robert Murphy. Mrs. Fingerhuth, who is now serving a term in the county jail at Somerville for the killing of Mr. Roehrict, may be released shortly. She was sentenced to jail for six months and to pay a fine of $500.

According to the law she can be released for good behavior when three quarters of the time has been served. She has now been in jail for four and a-half months. The matter will be brought to the attention of the court at the next session and an effort will be made to have the fine remitted and Mrs. Fingerhuth released.

Did Not Report the Fire.

The fire department was called to the Crescent Rink building, Watchung avenue, Saturday evening at 6 o'clock by telephone. There was smoke but no fire apparent. After a long hunt, the firemen found the Italian proprietor of the barber shop in the building putting out a little blaze that had started in his back room from a stove. He had seen the firemen and the apparatus but he had not reported the fire. The firemen had the flames extinguished in short order.

JERSEY DELEGATES WILL BE FOR BRYAN.

Meeting of Democratic State Committee Saturday Indicates Such an Outcome.

LITTLE THOUGHT OF DEWEY.

STATE CONVENTION WILL BE HELD IN TRENTON, MAY 31ST.

One Delegate Will be Allowed for Each 200 Democratic Votes Cast in the Gubernatorial Election Two Years Ago.

Newark, April 16—The Democratic State committee met at the Jeffersonian Club at noon Saturday, and fixed Thursday, May 31, for the convention at which delegates-at-large will be chosen for the National convention at Kansas City. The convention will be in Taylor's Opera House, Trenton.

The meeting was presided over by Chairman William B. Gourley, of Passaic county, and Secretary William E. Devereux recorded the proceedings.

The following members were present: William C. Heppenheimer, of Hudson; William B. Paugh, of Bergen; Eckert P. Budd, of Burlington; Harry B. Paul, of Camden; Colonel E. L. Price, of Essex; James W. Lanning, of Mercer; Oliver Kelly, of Middlesex; Charles L. Rogers, of Ocean; William J. Keys, of Somerset, and National Committeeman Philip D. Baker, of Cumberland.

It was decided that the delegates to the State convention will be elected on the same basis that prevailed in the last Gubernatorial convention. Each election district will be entitled to at least one delegate, and the general representation will be on the basis of one delegate for each 200 votes, and one additional for a majority fraction in excess thereof. The committee will meet again to prepare a declaration of principles the evening preceding the convention.

While no expression was made during the session of the committee as to the preferences of the members on the question of a candidate for President, it was the consensus of opinion, learned before and after the meeting, that the New Jersey delegation to the National convention will be for William Jennings Bryan. A comparison of the sentiment existing in the various sections of the State, as reported by the committeemen, showed that the candidacy of Admiral Dewey has not taken a popular hold, and that the prevailing preference is undoubtedly for Bryan.

A talk with several members of the committee resulted in the opinion that the State convention will probably select as delegates-at-large to Kansas City, William B. Gourley, of Passaic; Johnston Cornish, of Warren; Colonel E. L. Price, of Essex, and Robert Davis, of Hudson.

The primary elections for delegates to the State convention and to the Congressional convention will be held at the will of the local organizations.

William C. Hendee, committeeman from Cumberland county, resigned and his place was filled by the appointment of Edward E. Grossoup.

A TALK ON BIRDS.

Prof. Apgar Deserved a Fashion That Tolerates the Slaughter of Beautiful Birds.

The subject of birds was treated in an entertaining and highly instructive manner by Prof. Austin G. Apgar, of Trenton, Thursday, at the chapel of the Crescent Avenue Methodist church. The disagreeable weather prevented a large attendance, but those who were present were much gratified.

Prof. Apgar is thoroughly at home among the birds. He has made the characteristics of the feathered tribe a life study, and is therefore well fitted to talk interestingly of their habits, peculiarities and usefulness. He lingered upon those present the wrong that was being done in the use by the women of the song birds for decoration on their bonnets and hats, and denounced the editors of certain magazines who had maintained that it was not detrimental to the propagation of the birds to slaughter them at certain periods of the year.

Prof. Apgar described many of the points of usefulness to which the birds are adapted and by illustrations on a blackboard outlined the various interesting features about them. He also told of the many kinds of birds to be found, and stated that a study of them could be made right at home as well as to go abroad.

AN ARTIFICIAL SPINE.

Ingenious Harness Designed to Give Welcome Support to the Cotton Picker's Back.

The cotton pickers of the south, who occupy a stooping posture all day long during the picking season, have an unusually heavy strain placed upon the muscles of the back, which become so fatigued as to incapacitate the pickers for rapid work. To avoid this, Samuel C. Potts, of Apple Valley, Ga., has devised an artificial spine of metal for the pickers, which transfers the strain of stooping from the naturally weak muscles of the back to the strong, stout muscles of the shoulders and thighs. This he accomplishes by means of the harness-like arrangement here illustrated, which consists of a flat, flexible steel support, with the necessary band and straps to secure it to the body. The upper cross bar is fitted to slide along the spine support, accommodating itself to the curvature of the back. There is a hole in each end of the cross bar, which straps pass, and these are fastened around the shoulders. The lower bar is fixed, and terminates in two rings, through which straps pass, which are fastened around the hips. The end of the spinal support is a ring, through which two straps pass, and these are buckled around the thighs. It is asserted this harness relieves the back of the cotton pickers from the strain incidental to the long-maintained stooping position by transferring it to the stronger muscles, as above explained. —Cincinnati Commercial Tribune.

SPINE FOR COTTON PICKERS.

IRISH CARPET MAKERS.

Their Success in Turning Out Rugs That Are Known as Persian Has Been Phenomenal.

Just a year ago some manufacturers of artistic textiles touring in Donegal resolved on establishing a place for the making of hand-tufted carpets of the description generally known as "Turkish" or "Persian." The peculiarity of this fabric is that from its nature it must be a hand production. The tufts are tied by the fingers in knots in longitudinal wraps, which are stretched between the long parallel beams. The carpets are made to the size and shape of any room. The design is placed in front, and the girls, from three to a dozen, according to the size of the carpet, select the colors indicated by the chart which are tied, then bound down by "shoots" of woolen weft drawn across the entire width, and beaten firm by small iron toothed hammers.

There is interesting variety and pleasure in the work, and it is such that individual skill and workmanship come largely into play. Altogether it is just such an industry as is suited to the rural districts of Ireland. No steam power is required, and there is therefore no handicap on the commercial side by the absence of coal.

The first year's experiment with the Irish girls has proved that they are admirably suited for the work. The girls show a nimbleness of fingers and sharpness of eye for color and form that have quite astonished their teachers, and they take to the work with a spirit and cheerfulness quite refreshing. So encouraged are the promoters of its ultimate success that they have planned out a broad scheme that will spread the work all over the west of Ireland and give employment to many hundreds of girls and boys.—London Furniture Record.

Soda Water Satisfies Hunger.

Carbonic acid gas, says a medical authority, has the singular property of lessening the sense of hunger, and may profitably be remembered in dealing with cases of diabetes in which bulimia is a prominent symptom. The sent of hunger is found in the solar plexus. By the use of water charged with carbonic acid gas the branches of the solar plexus distributed through the mucous membrane of the stomach are influenced in such a way that the absorbent vessels are affected, which is the foundation for the ravenous hunger often present in diabetes and certain forms of indigestion may be greatly mitigated, if not wholly appeased. Water charged with carbonic acid gas may likewise be employed with advantage in many cases of hyperpepsia in which there is a sensation present in the stomach described by the patient as a gnawing "goneness," emptiness, etc.

The Face as an Index.

It is a fact that persons astonished are apt to open their mouths. The reason is that attention, involuntarily attracted, uses up nerve-force, and relaxes the muscles not engaged in staring. For the same reason, the astonished person is liable to let things fall out of his hands. Contrariwise, one who is forcing himself to keep his eye and thought on a single object, sets his teeth and contracts his eyelids—an automatic precaution against distraction by other sights. A sudden dissipation of the force collected in such voluntary attention agitates the muscles, producing a sigh of relief, a smile or a laugh.

HIS TRUNK IS STILL THERE.

And Mary Anna's "Daddy" Still Regrets Using a Phrase That Had Two Meanings.

William Frederick Allen was in love with Mary Ann Jenkins, and was unhappy when not in her company. When he began to call upon her it was only on Friday nights, and he never staid later than ten. Then he began to come on Monday nights also. Later he added Sunday afternoons to his list, and so on until he was liable to drop in at the Jenkins residence every evening in the week, besides spending every Sunday afternoon there.

Mr. Jenkins, Mary Anna's father, watched with growing anger the increasing frequency of Mr. Allen's calls, and often expressed his mind on the subject to the wife of his bosom, but she silenced him with the convincing query: "Would you like Mary Anna to die an old maid?"

Notwithstanding this, Mr. Jenkins was extremely civil to the young man, for he did not like him, and he was more than ever on the point of saying something to him which, in all probability he would have regretted later.

One day, however, Mr. Jenkins could restrain himself no longer. William Frederick had not omitted to call a single night for nearly three weeks, and had been at the house on six afternoons in a week. After Mary Anna had dismissed her admirer at the front and returned her papa. He made a great effort to be calm, and said, with what he intended to be cutting sarcasm:

"Hadn't that young man of yours better bring his trunk?"

Instantly Mary Anna threw her arms around her father's neck and kissed him impulsively.

"O! You dearest, sweetest, best father in all the world," she cried, "you don't know how happy you make me."

"What!" gasped the old man.

"And William will be happy, too, when I tell him," she went on, nearly strangling her parent with her enthusiastic hugs.

"W—what's that?"

"You see, papa, it's just this way. Dear Billy is the best fellow in the world, but he isn't well off, and we couldn't for the life of us see how we could go to housekeeping; but your kind suggestion that he bring his trunk has solved all the difficulties. We'll stay right with you, father dear, when we are married. O! You are the best daddy in creation. I'll go and tell mamma and we'll decide on the wedding day right away."

Mr. Jenkins attempted to speak, but she had gone, and the next he heard was that the wedding would take place in about three weeks. If he had any opinions on the subject they were mental ones, for he was not allowed to express them orally, and the affair came off as planned.

His son-in-law and family are still living with him.—Chicago Tribune.

CLEANING CLOTH.

How to Treat Worn Dress Goods to Give Them a New Look.

Dark cloth of any kind, if it is pure wool, can be easily cleaned. Professional dyers and cleaners do it, attempts to clean cloth which is mixed with cotton, or wool or any other textile. Experienced manufacturers dislike to use mixtures even of silk and wool, because they are less durable and less satisfactory to wear than goods of pure wool or pure silk.

To clean cloth dresses rip them, if possible. Men's cloth clothes can be much more easily cleaned without ripping, but women's gowns, whether in the garment is ripped or not, begin by shaking and brushing all the dust you can from it. After this examine it for grease spots. Remove these with gasolene. If they are obstinate heat them and try washing out the grease with a solution of soap bark and lukewarm water. Use a stiff brush to scrub the goods on both sides. When it is dry use gasolene again. In time the most obstinate grease stain will come out. Then sponge the goods on both sides of the garment for dust. Go over every portion of it on the right side with a brush dipped in a solution of soap bark. Rinse off this soap with clear cold or lukewarm water, taking care the garment is not ripped to absorb the rinsing water as fast as it is applied. By this means the soap bark can be rinsed out. Let the garments dry a little, then iron them dry. Ammonia may be added to the water to help rinse out soap bark. It dries more rapidly than clear water. Silk garments that will not wash are difficult to clean. A mixture of half alcohol and half water applied with a stiff brush or a firm white cotton cloth will clean them better than anything else we know. Ribbons may be very successfully cleaned in this way after first removing any grease stains with gasolene. After using alcohol and water on all delicate textures you can with a linen cloth, lay them on a linen cloth and lay a linen cloth over them and a heavy cotton one over that, and press them nearly dry. Now press them perfectly smooth with a hot iron and when cold fold them and let them hang in a warm room on a line until they are perfectly dry. Linen absorbs water more easily and is better than cotton to lay under and over silk when it is pressed.—N. Y. Tribune.

Port Royal Corncakes.

One pint of corn meal, four tablespoonfuls of all-wheat flour, one pint of milk and three eggs, with salt to taste. Mix flour and meal with the milk, beat the eggs very light and add them. Bake on a griddle. Spiced sugar goes very nicely with these cakes. To prepare it, take a cupful of granulated sugar and stir in well one-half teaspoonful of ground cinnamon and a good pinch each of ground cloves and mace, sprinkle well with nutmeg; mix thoroughly.—Housewife.

PORTO RICO TO A NEW YORKER

An American Business Man's Favorable Impressions of the Island and Its People.

From whatever point of view the city of San Juan is seen it is like an elaborate stage picture. The houses as well as the fortification, government buildings, etc., rise in tiers one behind another and the embrasures for the guns, the parapets, and the Moorish towers here and there add to the effect. All the buildings are of brightly painted stone or brick, with marble tiled floors and stairs with iron railings. The interior partitions and roofs are also of masonry, so that the town practically is incombustible and needs no fire department. This applies to the poorest quarters of the city as well as to the best, and the only exceptions are a few detached wooden houses and the negroes' huts at the south end. Looking out from the city in any direction the same suggestion of stage scenery strikes one. The blue waters of the ocean on the one side and the bay on the other, with the wooded plains and the hills and mountains rising in the distance with the clear atmosphere bringing everything apparently into such range heightens the theatrical appearance. The views in every direction are beautiful. Walking through the city one is struck with the smooth and level, narrow streets with their overhanging piazzas, the arched entrances to the buildings and the well-stocked, busy and businesslike stores.

We read of the dirt and poverty of Cuba, but nothing of the sort is apparent here. The people of all sorts and conditions look well, are dressed cleanly and brightly and there are no dirty children or ragged negroes in any quarter such as we see in our own cities. In a week's walking through all parts I have not seen a beggar or anyone who looked as if he did not have enough to eat. Neither have I seen an intoxicated person, though cafes and "American bars" are plentiful and native rum is cheap.

The American soldiers here are allowed to have almost every liberty, and are to be met with everywhere and are in appearance, manner and action a credit to their country and to their officers. They have very little to do, as the entire population is peaceable and friendly and satisfied to be "Americans." This feeling is especially strong among the young men, and the rising generation of both sexes from appearances will be as amicable to Yankees as our boys and girls in the states. The fact that there are less than 2,000 United States troops on the entire island, with close to a million population, shows the friendliness of the Porto Ricans.

As regards comfort in living, of course, it is warm, but there is a refreshing breeze from the ocean or the mountains almost always, and with proper clothing one is very comfortable. We have good drinking water and there are four ice factories and a fifth is being built. Nearly everything in the way of food supplies that can be obtained in New York is obtainable here, and at fair prices, in addition. The New Yorker feels the need of American cookery. Though there are some "American" hotels here, so called, grease and onions are still too conspicuous. The beef also is poor, and of the best fat and sleek as anywhere, but American ways of killing and dressing the beef would be a big improvement. Fish are excellent and plenty. There is no game, and no shooting at all, but neither are there poisonous snakes or insects, so we won't grumble at that. Of course we have summer vegetables, beans, tomatoes, lettuce, etc., all the time, winter and summer.

Capital and directors are what is needed. Sugar, coffee, tobacco and oranges are the crops to raise and the soil and the workers are here. Money and intelligence are needed particularly in the development of the tobacco leaf industry. There is a great future for both of these crops here. Tobacco is good now, but with improved handling and curing will equal almost any Havana. Oranges and pineapples of the best variety flourish in all parts of the island, and before long their production in large quantities for the states will be among the American enterprises here. Sugar and coffee have first place with the Porto Rican agriculturists and will probably always be their staple crops. —N. Y. Sun.

Tennessee Critticising Missouri.

A tall, lean, hungry-looking countryman walked up to the box office at the Grand opera house several nights ago and called for a front seat. He was accommodated with a three and half dollar-down in front of the ticket seller. He stalked into the theater about ten minutes before the curtain went up and was shown his seat. The usher did not turn it down for him, and he did not seem to know any such turn to it. He perched himself on the edge of the upturned seat and was apparently enjoying himself, until an old gentleman behind him touched him on the shoulder and said:

"You don't you sit in your seat right?"

"Wal, I 'lowed I was," replied the countryman; but he was from Missouri, and the usher had to show him. —Memphis Scimitar.

ACTIVE SOCIAL LIFE COMMENCED AGAIN.

Formal Affair Given in the Union County Country Club Casino Monday Night.

PROVED TO BE A SUCCESS.

THE HALL PRETTILY ARRANGED FOR THE OCCASION.

Many Out-of-Town Guests Were Present—Informal Dinners Preceding the Dance—Those Who Acted as Patronesses.

The formal function of Plainfield society, the Assembly, marked the close of the Lenten season and the resumption of the active social life last Monday. The dance was really a continuation of the series held during the winter and it was practically the same people who gathered at the club house and Casino of the defunct Union County Club last evening. It proved just as great a success as the others and as fully attended.

The series of Assemblies last winter was given rather as an experiment. It was not then intended to hold any formal dance after Lent. The series proved so successful and there was such a general demand for another dance in the spring that the patronesses and Charles E. Brooks agreed to hold another Easter Monday night.

At the suggestion of Mr. Brooks the young people turned out early and there was quite a number on hand to start the dancing at 9 o'clock. The younger set were out in force. As many of the young people at college and boarding school are home for the Easter holidays, there was an unusually large attendance. Then many strangers, guests in Plainfield homes, were present.

The Casino was prettily arranged with chairs and divans in the alcoves and a floral screen on the stage behind which the orchestra played. Guests were received in the club house and there the supper was served at midnight. The table was handsomely decorated.

The patronesses were Mrs. Charles E. Brooks, Mrs. Rowland Cox, Mrs. M. E. Edgerton, Mrs. Charles J. Fisk, Mrs. Pliny Fisk, Mrs. Wm. T. Kaufman, Mrs. Sylvanus L. Schoonmaker, Mrs. Henry M. Stockton and Mrs. R. P. Talmage.

Aside from the success of the affair as a dance, it proved a delightful reunion of the society young folk. Many have been out-of-town during Lent and the dance was a general exchange of experiences. The dance is the first of a series of charming affairs that will occupy the attention of society this week.

Preceding the dance there were several informal dinners at Plainfield homes. Miss Daisy Shepard gave a charming one at her home, "The Gables," where she entertained a number of New York and Plainfield society folk. After the dinner the party went to the Casino to attend the Assembly.

WORK MUST NOT BE SLOW

BOROUGH SIDEWALKS TO BE LAID WITHIN WEEK AFTER STARTED.

Street Committee of Council Lays Down This Rule to Contractors—Bids for Crushed Stone.

Mayor Smalley and the street committee from the Borough Council met last Monday in the council rooms to receive bids for furnishing crushed stone, flagging and crosswalks for the coming year. There were three bids, Manhattan & Cashin offered to furnish flagging 1½ inches thick at 43½ cents a lineal foot, and crosswalks 4½ inches thick at 80 cents a lineal foot. William Barton's was 90 cents for crosswalks and 46 cents a lineal foot for flagging. He also bid 37 cents a lineal foot for the best blue stone flagging. The bid of Manhattan & Cashin was accepted and they will commence work as soon as the stone ordered arrives.

There was one bid to furnish crushed stone. That was from J. H. Wilson. He offered to furnish No. 2 size and slab for 95 cents a ton and 1 inch and dust for $1 a ton. This bid was accepted.

It was decided that before any stones are laid that Superintendent of Highways Pond should inspect the base and see that the work is done satisfactorily. The first crosswalk to be laid will be on Warren street. Mayor Smalley instructed Manhattan & Cashin that all work must done within a week after its ordered. The committee also decided to have Chief Campbell ride about the borough and get a correct list of all properties where stone walks should be laid, and this list will be returned to the committee for use as soon as the sidewalk ordinance is adopted which will be May 1st. The committee discussed several matters regarding streets and walks, which will be brought up at the regular Council for action.

The Rummage Sale opened yesterday. The beginning was decidedly auspicious and promises a success for this movement in the aid of Muhlenberg Hospital and the Plainfield Relief Association. A strange and wonderful collection of articles has been in the store in the Jackson building for several days. All that was needed was the people and this morning the people came.

The vanguard of the patrons for the Rummage Sale appeared full an hour before the time set for opening the doors, 10 o'clock. They wandered by, looked in the windows and congregated at neighboring street corners. Meanwhile the corps of saleswomen and other assistants began to arrive. There were a host of little details to be arranged at the last minute that kept the committee busy.

The display of wares on the tables was complete and everything was priced. A remarkable mixture it was. Much of the stock was salable, but some of the articles may have to wait some time for a purchaser. The prices are, with a few exceptions, very low. A few curiosity hunters, who came early, found some rare old things in the line of furniture and crockery.

But the stock and the sellers thereof were only part of the sale. A wonderfully important feature was the host of customers who flocked in. Ten minutes before the time came for opening the doors fully a hundred men, women and children had assembled in front of the store. The saleswomen and the cash girls took their place and the doors were swung open at just 10 o'clock.

In swarmed the crowd and in a few minents the place was packed with people who crowded and pushed each other in a good natured scramble for the bargains. The saleswomen found their duties decidedly pressing. Everybody was anxious to know the price of this and of that, was in a hurry and wanted to be waited on without delay.

"Cash, cash" could be heard at every side. As the young folk who are to appear as cash-boys and cash-girls later in the day were at school when the sale began, a number of young women, familiar in Plainfield society, volunteered for the place. A lively time they had of it, buffeted about by the crowd and forced to nearly fight their way to the cashier's desk. Inside of a minute after the doors were opened to the public the first sale had been made and the money deposited with the cashier.

The throng that took possession of the store was intent upon business. No time was lost in reaching the desired counter and there the various articles were tossed about as the customers viewed their worthiness. Women prevailed in the crowd but the other sex turned very well considering the hours. All nationalities were represented there.

Ten minutes after the doors were opened, Patrolman Geise, who was on duty at the door, refused to allow any more in as the store was fairly swamped As those inside passed out, others were admitted and the throng continued all the morning. At noon there was a period of inactivity for the workers and then the crowd gathered again with the prospect of continuing all the afternoon.

As to any estimate regarding the receipts of the day, it is impossible to give any at present. There have been plenty of purchases, however, and that have been more but for the limited accommodations.

Most of the purchases were of the smaller articles which could be easily carried. The chief trouble in selling the larger things will be the difficulty on the part of the purchaser in taking them home as nothing will be delivered. The clothing for both men and women was possibly the most popular department although the ladies' hats and the shoe table found many gathered about them.

—S. Schwarz & Co., the West Front street grocers, have taken another lease for five years with J. E. Marline, the owner of the property.

SMALL BOY AND MATCHES.

The Combination Gave the Firemen a Hard Run and a Lively Blaze to Battle.

Two setting hens were the first occupants of the hennery in the rear of the premises 1205 North avenue Tuesday afternoon. Then came that dangerous combination of the small boy and matches. After that the fire department was sent for. The house was occupied by Sullivan Esault, an Italian, and his family.

The wife saw the flames and an alarm was sent in from box 28 at 4:20 o'clock. It was a long run for the department, but the firemen reached there in time to save the adjacent barn which was threatened with destruction. The hennery was destroyed but the little blaze on the side of the barn was extinguished and that structure was saved.

What seemed to worry the Esault family the most was that their setting hens had been disturbed. The house is owned by James Brown, of Cottage place. The loss will not amount to more than $75 Barn and hennery was covered by insurance to the amount of $300.

CLOSING OF THE GYM

CLEVER WORK DONE BY YOUNG Y. M. C. A. ATHLETES.

Various Exercises Led by the Class Leaders, and Watched by a Good-Sized Crowd.

Probably the large number of the fair sex present may have had something to do with it, but at any rate the boys of the Y. M. C. A. gave an excellent exhibition of gymnastum class work at their formal closing last Tuesday. The gymnasium gallery was well filled long before the exercises began.

The entertainment opened with a selection from the orchestra, composed of members of the classes, followed by an exhibition of dumb bell work by all classes, and closing with an apparatus drill.

The classes were then divided and put through a series of class work, with their leaders, as follows: Low bar drill, led by Charles Zimmer; horse moves, led by Herbert Brokaw; parallel bars, by Eric Moraller; high bar moves, by Fred Cranston, and window stivning, by Paul Whitall.

A reading was then given by Elmer Cutting, after which the lights were turned down and an interesting and clever torch swinging act was given by Physical Director Heywood.

This was followed by a tumbling act by Terry and Harkins, and bag punching by Hervey Deane. The exhibition closed by the presentation of medals by John Valiant. The winners were mentioned in The Press some time ago.

The ladies then took part and invited the boys to the refreshment room where a lunch had been prepared for them before leaving for home.

Everyone voted the exhibition a success and too much credit cannot be given to Director Heywood and to the following class leaders: Eric Moraller, Herbert Brokaw, James Stafford, Charles Zimmer and Fred Cranston.

During the evening Mr. Heywood took occasion to mention the summer privileges which are given to new members, of which full information can be had at the office.

Runaway Horse Demolished Carriage.

A horse belonging to Mrs. G. H. Kenyon, of Kensington avenue, which had been left on Belvidere avenue Tuesday afternoon, took fright and ran away. The horse ran down Watchung avenue as far as Crescent avenue before being caught. The carriage was entirely demolished. As no one was near the horse at the start it is not known what frightened him.

Too Many Dogs in the West End.

The residents of the West End have made numerous complaints to the police about the annoyance caused by dogs at night. Not only do they keep people awake, but a number of fine lawns in the vicinity of Grant avenue have been ruined.

Mr. Spicer Continues to Improve.

The many friends of Joseph D. Spicer, of West Fifth street, will be pleased to learn that his condition still continues to improve. The physicians have strong hopes for his recovery.

Trolley Line Blocked Two Hours.

The Somerset street trolley line was blocked for two hours Tuesday afternoon, caused by the breaking of an axle on car No. 6. A new set of wheels were necessary before the car could be moved.

Appointed Financial Agent.

Rev. H. W. McKane, who was pastor of the Christian church on Grove street for two years, has been appointed financial agent for the Federation of Churches of New York city.

NEW YARDS FOR CENTRAL

CONTRACTS LET FOR RECLAMATION OF COMMUNIPAW BAY.

Where the Improvements are Completed Will Have Nearly 400 Miles of Sidings.

A square mile of Communipaw Bay lying between the present coal docks of the Central Railroad of New Jersey and the National Storage docks, adjoining Black Tom Island, is to be filled in and converted into a great train yard for that railroad company. Contracts have already been let for a large part of the work. A temporary bulkhead, nearly 5,000 feet long, will be constructed at once from the coal docks to the National Storage property. This temporary bulkhead will cut across the mouth of the bay a short distance back of the permanent bulkhead line, and eventually it will be replaced by a permanent bulkhead on the proper line.

The filling in of the inclosed area will be done gradually and by sections, each section being marked off by a transverse bulkhead running out from the shore to the temporary bulkhead. It is expected that the reclaimed space in the first section will be ready for use some time next year. The entire work will be completed in about four years, and then the Jersey Central will have a train yard capable of accommodating between 350 and 400 miles of sidings and stretching along a mile of water front. Piers not less than 1,500 feet long will be built out from this front from time to time as they may be needed by the railroad company.

A MIDNIGHT PROWLER.

Mayor Smalley's Wife Pointed a Revolver at the Intruder and He Disappeared Quickly.

Burglars attempted to gain an entrance to the home of Mayor Smalley, Myrtle avenue, about 1 o'clock Tuesday morning.

The prowlers were heard by Mrs. Smalley, who descried a man standing on top of the porch near a second-story window. On pointing a pistol at the intruder he slid off the porch and disappeared.

Chief Marshal Campbell was called and on investigation found footprints around the house, but was unable to trace them up. Mayor Smalley was not home at the time or he might not have got off so easily.

FEDERATION OF WOMEN'S CLUBS.

Speakers Selected for the State Organization's Meeting at Cranford.

The executive committee of the State Federation of Women's Clubs is busy completing arrangements for the State Federation social meeting to be held in Cranford May 10th. The programme is not complete as yet, but the speakers have been chosen. It will be a musical and poetry afternoon, probably consisting of a debate as to the relative value of prose and poetry, by Mrs. Terhune (Marion Harland) and Margaret Sangster.

As yet the debate has not been decided upon, merely suggested, and the afternoon's programme may terminate in a lecture by Mrs. Terhune and recitations from her own works by Margaret Sangster. At any rate these speakers have been secured.

WANT A WIDER STREET.

Project to Make a Wonderful Improvement on Duer Street.

In connection with the movement to change the name of Duer street to Hamilton avenue, there is also a movement on foot to widen the street to the full width, setting the sidewalk back to the fence line. There are many who think that this should be done before the name of the street is changed. Supervisor of Highways Thomas Doud has made a casual survey of the street and finds that the only great change will be at the corner of Lincoln place and Duer street where the grocery store is located. A silos will have to be taken off there. Otherwise the property-owners will not suffer much loss. The question is now being agitated and there are fair prospects for its success.

FOWLER'S GIFT.

Congressman Presents the City With Land for a Library.

Elizabeth, April 25.—Congressman Charles N. Fowler has purchased for $20,000 a splendid tract of land on North Broad street and Westminster avenue, this city, which he has deeded to the city of Elizabeth as a site for a new public library and reading room.

It is rumored that Andrew Carnegie may erect the building.

Monday Afternoon Club.

The twelfth anniversary of the Monday Afternoon Club will be observed on the Casino this evening at 8:15 o'clock. It will be for the members and their guests.

IN MIDST OF FLOWERS.

WILLIAMS—RANDOLPH NUPTIALS WERE CELEBRATED.

Pretty Wedding Ceremony in a Somerset Street House Performed by Rev. C. Herring.

It was a pretty wedding that took place Tuesday afternoon at 5 o'clock, when Miss Leanora Williams, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Frederick Williams, of Somerset street, and Blanchard Elston Randolph, eldest son of Former Councilman and Mrs. Isaac Randolph, of West Front street, were united in marriage at the home of the bride's parents. It was a quiet family affair, only a very few intimate friends outside of the immediate relatives being present.

The home was decorated in unusual good taste through the use of palms, ferns, smilax and roses. In one corner of the parlor there was a bank of palms and flowers so arranged as to make an improvised altar, while on either side were placed beautiful lilies that stood as symbols of purity and love. It was here that the happy event was solemnized by Rev. Charles E. Herring, pastor of the First Presbyterian church, where the bride is a member.

Precisely at the appointed hour, while the sweet strains of the Lohengrin wedding march were being rendered on the piano by Miss Elizabeth Whitlock, of East Orange, the bride, accompanied by her father, entered the parlor through the sitting room. At the same time the groom entered the parlor from the hallway and all met at the altar, where the officiating clergyman stood waiting to receive them. The bride was given away in marriage by her father.

There were neither bridesmaids nor best man. The bride's gown was of broadcloth and silk, trimmed with Russian lace, with hat to match. She carried an exquisite bouquet of bride roses.

After the ceremony congratulations were showered upon the popular couple, and then a pleasing wedding supper was served by Stephenson, the caterer. About 6:30 o'clock Mr. and Mrs Randolph left their relatives and friends to enjoy a honeymoon. They departed with all the good signs for a happy and successful married life. Rice in abundance was thrown at them, and to escape any undue notoriety they took a train from Dunellen, where they were enabled to leave unobserved. They will be absent about two weeks, and when they return will take up their residence on Albert street in a house owned by the groom which has been completely furnished and awaits their occupancy.

The many select gifts of value and elegance are but a slight evidence of the great amount of esteem in which they are held. They consisted of furniture, solid silver ware, banquet lamp, china, a check to the bride from a relative, a handsome silk sofa pillow made entirely by a young girl in her teens, and many other things too numerous to mention.

The groom is one of Plainfield's most popular young men. He holds a position of trust with a large wholesale hardware firm in New York. The bride is also one of the borough's most popular young women, and both have the best wishes of their many friends as they commence married life.

Mr. and Mrs. Randolph are spending their honeymoon at Old Point Comfort.

Dr. Henderson, of Burma, Ill.

Friends of Dr. A. H. Henderson, a medical missionary to Burma, will be pained to learn that on his return voyage to America he was stricken with pneumonia four days from New York and is now lying critically ill at the Presbyterian Hospital in New York. Dr. Henderson's wife, who is with him, was Miss Cora Shinn, of Ladoweod, the twin sister of Miss Julia G. Shinn, who went to Burma as a missionary last October.

Big Press Sent to Europe.

A large press was shipped from the Potter Press Works last Friday, in an unusual manner. The press, which was for foreign shipment, was not finished in time to be sent by freight, and was sent direct to New York by truck to the pier of the steamer. Five large truck loads were taken in all.

Delegates to Kansas City.

Robert Davis, the Democratic leader of Hudson county, stated yesterday that the delegates to the Kansas City convention from the Fifth Congress District would be Representative William D. Daly and Mayor Hoos of Jersey City.

"Jersey Shooter" a Resident.

Arthur A. Zimmerman, the former champion bicycle rider, known as the "Jersey Shooter," has leased a hotel at Point Pleasant for a term of years with the privilege of buying it.

WOMEN IN BLACK FACE.

ABSURD ALIASES ASSUMED BY METUCHEN SOCIETY LEADERS.

Up-to-Date Minstrelsy for Benefit of a Church—Performers Were in Fantastic Costumes.

Society women in Metuchen Tuesday night hid their countenances behind burnt cork and their identities behind absurd aliases and gave a minstrel performance in Robins' Hall, under the direction of Mrs. E. Holden Spear and Miss Josephine Schureman, for the benefit of St. Paul's Episcopal church. It was designated as "Up-to-Date Minstrelsy by the Twentieth Century Troubadours."

"Mister Johnsing," otherwise Mrs. Harry Johnson, was interlocutor. Mrs. Edward Kelly, tall, dignified and stately, had asked the stage manager to refrain from giving her an absurd name. "Of course," assented the stage manager, and he put her down as "Tiny Forget-me-not."

Miss Kitchen, who bears a marked resemblance to a well-known stage favorite, was called "Olga Papercoin." Her sister, a clever dancer, was denominated "Lole Fuller Buffet." Her gown was appropriate for it was a triumph of the accordion plaiter's art.

Other names on the programme were Celeste Barnewell, Sally Waters, Selina Sassafras, Pansie Blossom, Flossie Redtop, Chloe Stubbins, Mandy Brown, Morning Glory Washington, Sunshine Quickstep, Lily White, Lucy Waltawhile, Trudy Tripper, Tabitha Snowball, Black Pink, Lozy Overnine, Adelina Patti Brownskin, Chloe Coalsnuttle, Willow, Rosella Wash, Goldie Pearl, Dinah Dark-o'-de-Moon and Susan Thompson.

MR. DAVIS CAN'T COME.

He Writes James E. Martine That It Will be Impossible to Speak in Plainfield at Present.

James E. Martine, the well-known Democratic leader, received a letter from Former Assistant Secretary of the Interior Webster Davis yesterday morning, in which Mr. Davis says he says that it will be impossible for him to accept the invitation to speak in Plainfield which Mr. Martine extended to him. Continuing, Mr. Davis says: "I hope you will do everything in your power to arouse the sympathies of your friends in the interest of the brave people who are making such a heroic struggle for liberty and independence in the two South African Republicans. There cause is indeed a just one and should have the earnest sympathy of liberty loving people everywhere."

Getting Points.

Letter-Carriers Deitz, Garretson and Jones, who have been appointed for duty in the new free delivery service of the Somerville postoffice, were in Plainfield Tuesday. They accompanied the local carriers over their routes to get a general idea of the methods in use and afterwards learned something of the work of distributing at the office.

Morris Canal Open.

The Morris Canal was opened for navigation for the fifty-fifth season Tuesday. The boatmen anticipate a very prosperous and busy season. There are about two hundred and fifty boats in the canal.

OFF FOR NEWARK.

The Free Excursion Took 610 People From Plainfield and a Thousand From Other Towns Along the Line.

A free excursion of the Newark merchants carried 610 people out of Plainfield yesterday, besides 1,000 thousand from the other towns along the road. Three trains of fifteen cars each transported the excursionists. One train started from this city and two from Somerville, stopping at the other stations along the line.

The crowd from this city was not as large as it was last year when nearly 900 people were taken. The terrible rush for tickets at that time was not to be seen yesterday. Nearly 200 tickets were sold last night and the remainder yesterday. There was quite a crowd about the ticket office at times this morning but it was very quiet and orderly. Most of the excursionists were women. The Plainfield train left at 8:35, and the first Somerville section followed immediately after. The other was a few minutes later. There was plenty of room in all the trains.

MEETING OF CREDITORS.

PRELIMINARY TO A. D. THOMPSON GOING THROUGH BANKRUPTCY.

Held in Court House in Elizabeth This Morning—Surrogate Parrot Appointed Referee.

Elizabeth, April 25.—Atwood L. Decker, referee in bankruptcy for Union county, called a meeting of the creditors of A. D. Thompson, who has petitioned the court to allow him to pass through bankruptcy. The meeting was held at the Court House and there were about fifteen creditors present. Proofs of claims were filed and Surrogate Parrot was nominated and appointed trustee by the creditors. The referee appointed J. C. Pope, Henry Leifke and B. Frank Coriell, of Plainfield, as appraisers, to appraise the assets, which amount to $66,000 and include accounts, notes, judgments and real estate. The latter amounts to $16,000, which is included in the $66,000. The liabilities amount to about $250,000.

Some of the creditors desire an examination of affairs, and the examination was set for May 16th at the office of the referee at Newark.

This morning A. D. Thompson appeared in person, while W. K. McClure, attorney, appeared on behalf of J. H. McVey, of Plainfield. Other Plainfielders present as creditors were Elisha Coriell, W. M. Greenwood, J. Fred MacDonald, L. B. Woolston and J. F. Buckie. George F. Tobin, a creditor, was present, but filed no proof of claim. He will probably wait for the examination.

BOUGHT SERRELL BLOCK.

Morris Weinberger, the Clothier, Made an Important Purchase of Business Property.

An important deal in real estate circles took place yesterday when Morris Weinberger, the well-known West Front street clothier, purchased the valuable business property on West Front street owned by Mrs. Harold Serrell, which building is now occupied by Wm. Sebring, the clothier; Wm. Newcorn, the lawyer, and by the Jewish congregation who have a synagogue on the top floor. The sale was made through Lawyer Walter L. Hatfield, who represented his sister, Mrs. Serrell, in the disposition of the property. Mr. Sebring has a lease on his store for this year, and it is not likely that Mr. Weinberger will make any changes for the present, although he may occupy the place himself at some future date.

Tablet for Dead Soldier.

It was announced Monday at Rutgers College, in New Brunswick, that arrangements had been completed for the unveiling of a bronze tablet in memory of the late Colonel J. F. Bearden, U. S. A., who died in the Philippines. Colonel Bearden was formerly military commandant of the Rutgers College Cadets. The tablet will be unveiled with appropriate ceremonies on May 10th in Kirkpatrick chapel.

Won't Have His Right Again.

John Reilly, of New street, who has been at the hospital some time under treatment for poisoning, will be discharged in a few days. His sight has not returned and the chances are that it never will.

Still at Odds.

Conditions remain the same between Chris Bock and James Skener over the saloon question on Somerset street. The principals seem to be as far apart as ever.

In Honor of Dr. Buttrick.

A sociable will be given in Vincent chapel this evening in honor of the fourth anniversary of the pastorate of Rev. W. C. Buttrick.

DISAPPEARANCE OF FLOWERS CLEARED UP

All the Trouble Caused by Old Man Getting Into the Wrong Church.

AN ARREST WAS CAUSED.

WILLET MISTOOK PARK AVENUE BAPTIST ED.FICE FOR ALL SOULS.

A Peculiar Chain of Circumstances Prevented the Right Story Being Known Until Willet Was Arraigned Before Judge Nash.

The mysterious disappearance of the Easter flowers from the Park Avenue Baptist church was cleared up Tuesday afternoon through the arrest of Lewis Willet, of West Second street, an old man seventy years of age. The arrest was a mistake, however, as Mr. Willet is entirely innocent of the charge. The mistake happened in the following manner:

Mrs. Denton, the West Front street florist, by whom Mr. Willet is employed, had sold the flowers to the church, and at the same time rented some to the Unitarian church. The Easter services being over, Willet went for the flowers at the Unitarian church last Monday. Finding an old man and not well acquainted with the churches he became confused and entered the Baptist church, whose doors had been left open, in place of the Unitarian. As no one was around, he picked out the flowers he knew had come from Mrs. Denton's and took them away. As a large number of plants had come from other sources at the same time they were placed unnoticed in the store. Mrs. Denton had left the matter of checking the plants to the clerks who did not notice the difference.

Tuesday afternoon the sexton of the Baptist church, Edgar Brokaw, made complaint before Justice Nash against Willet on the charge of stealing the flowers. He had been seen taking some plants away by an expressman who had informed Mr. Brokaw. Justice Nash, who is well acquainted with Mr. Willet, sent for him and saw that some mistake had been made. Explanations followed and he was released to appear this afternoon, when no doubt the whole matter will be cleared up satisfactorily.

HIGH SCHOOL SITE.

Indications Point to the Cemetery Property of the Seventh-Day Baptist Society.

It is generally understood among those on the inside that the site most likely to be chosen for the proposed new high school will be the Seventh-Day Baptist cemetery property. The church officials are making every effort to remove the bodies interred there and such energy is taken to mean that it is desired to get the property in shape to sell to the city at an early date.

Marshall Wants Reasonable.

Cape May, April 25.—Assemblyman Ellis H. Marshall, of this county, announced today that he would be a candidate for the Republican nomination for State Senator to succeed Senator Robert E. Hand. Assemblyman Marshall has served two years in the House, and was re-elected last year by over 800 plurality. Many friends have asked Mr. Marshall to declare himself.

For Benefit of Choir.

An enjoyable musicale has been arranged for Saturday night at the parish house of the Holy Cross church. It will be given by the Guild of the church for the benefit of the choir. Those who will take part in it are Mr. Ruff, tenor soloist at Trinity chapel, New York, Miss Frances Wier, pianist, Miss Bertha van Nuise Wills, soprano, Maurice Audsley, violinist, and Fred VanEps, banjoist.

Watchung Social Club Dance.

The Watchung Social Club gave a dance in the Camera Club rooms last evening, which was well attended by the young people of the city and borough. Refreshments were served at midnight and dancing was kept up until a late hour this morning. Music was furnished by Professor Carpenter.

A Narrow Escape.

A stranger driving across the railroad tracks at Gatewood Tuesday did not heed the ringing of the electric alarm bell, and did not see an approaching train, owing to the fog, until it was nearly upon him. He saved himself by driving his horse upon the depot platform.

Flower Thieves.

Flower thieves have been operating in the dark around Ninth street residences. A watch is being kept and arrests may be made.

PET OF THE REGIMENT.

Jack Is a Soldier Dog That Has Seen Active Service Besides Being a Great Traveler.

"Jack," the mascot of the Second infantry and "Hero of Santiago," is perhaps the best known dog in the United States army. He properly belongs to company D, and has followed that company in its wanderings since it left Fort Omaha for the west. All the old officers and men of the regiment know "Jack." He is a noted fighter, and bears the record of never having been whipped; and if Jack don't get fair play in a fight, a dozen soldiers are ready to take it up. His picture shows him after a fight one afternoon in Cuba. He is an ideal terrier, rather large, and is playful. He isn't afraid of five, strange to say, and will go a prize fight before a burning cigar and tear it to pieces. Many tricks have been taught him, and his delight is the exhibition of these canine acquirements. Few dogs have traveled as much as Jack, he having been all over the western states and crossed the waters between the states and Cuba three times. He has been on all the marches with his company in the west, and is known by hill the Indians and cattlemen around standing Rock, Manilas and other frontier posts.

At the beginning of the Spanish-American war he left Fort Yates with company D for Chickamauga, Tampa, and finally Cuba, where he saw service the whole Santiago campaign. The rough riders, who crossed over to Cuba on the same boat with the Second infantry, all learned to know Jack, and he soon caught the sharp eye of Col. Roosevelt, who pronounced him a "great dog." After landing at Sibony the "miserable land crabs" infested our camps in hundreds, rattling over our blankets and faces at night and carrying off our much needed hardtack, and here again Jack came to our rescue; he had no love for these strange creatures, and immediately assumed the task of driving them from our camp. Just before crossing San Juan river, on July 1, the men of the Second piled their blanket rolls along the roadside, and here it was expected Jack would remain until after the battle, and be safe from the terrible rain of the Mausers. Then followed the slaughter at the Bend, and the charge and capture of the Spanish trenches, and in the excitement that followed the faithful dog was forgotten. And when the first detail went back for their blanket rolls Jack was gone. But two days after, while we were anxiously hugging our trenches, Jack was heard barking in Santiago, and several days after we found him with a squad of engineers, who had found him coming from the city.

This dog was seen to cross San Juan river during the battle. Many recognized him as "Jack," of the Second infantry, and as he wandered alone over the bullet-swept field, a conspicuous white figure, they said: "There goes Jack; he is going to be killed." He ran to and fro over the dead and wounded, stepping first at one and then at another, back and forth, then over the hill and into the Spanish lines. And when Jack was rescued every soldier was glad to see him, although he had been a prisoner of war, and ever since then he has been idolized by officers and men. An old captain recently returning to his regiment in Cuba, first inquired: "How is Jack?"

But Jack, like some of the soldiers, contracted malaria at Santiago, and not a week passes that poor Jack doesn't have a chill. And last month when company D made a march to Cienfuegos, the faithful old dog was left at the barracks. Jack may survive many years, but he could never endure another Santiago campaign.—Detroit Free Press.

Executioners on a Strike.

A very peculiar "strike" is recorded as being in progress in Canton, China. The executioners of the city, the beheading act are complaining that unless they get more money they will starve. It appears from their complaint that they are paid 500 cash (2½ cents) per head, and few decapitations obtain. Twenty-five cents is a small fortune to a poor Chinaman, but it seems that business has fallen off to a deplorable extent, or there is too much competition (been taking out licenses?), for the executioners and the executioners are suffering. The official to whom the complaint was made received it very gravely, and assured the strikers that he could not give them a raise in wages, but he was convinced that their business would soon be very brisk. How would the people who complain about this country like to live in China?

An Affectionate Wasp.

One of the eccentricities of Sir John Lubbock, who was recently raised to the peerage, is his fondness for live insects as pets. He once made a favorite of a wasp he caught in Spain, and the insect grew so fond of him that it would lie still in his hand to be stroked.

IN THE PUBLIC EYE ABROAD

Statistical and Historical Data Bearing on the News of the Day from Foreign Lands

American Enterprise in Switzerland. Capitalists of Europe are watching closely the invasion of what they consider their "sphere of influence" by American brains and American money. But while they are inclined to resent this new American influence that is being exerted in European countries, they are not so prejudiced as to be unwilling to invest their money in projects in which the Americans are leaders.

Within six months an electric street railway, projected by citizens of San Francisco and constructed by an American electrical engineer, will be in operation in Geneva.

Some two and a half years ago, Mr. Henry E. Butters, of San Francisco, Cal., who has been connected with the construction and exploitation of street railways in Cape Town and the City of Mexico, was in Geneva. He found a congested population, badly served by old-fashioned steam tramways and horse cars, and the idea of securing control of the franchise of the principal companies and organizing a new company for the operation of a street railway system on the American plan at once occurred to him. The interest of local capitalists was enlisted, and in the course of some months Mr. Butters had secured a controlling interest in the Narrow Gauge Street Railway company of Geneva, which owns and operates 44.74 miles in the city and suburbs. The projectors also secured an option on the franchise and property of the Compagnie Generale des Tramways Suisses, which owns and operates 12.56 miles in the heart of the city and its environs. The price to be paid if the right under this option is exercised, as it doubtless will be, is $1,254,300. The projectors have also secured a federal charter under the title of "Compagnie Genevoise des Tramways Electriques" and obtained concessions to lay their tracks on some of the finest streets and quays of the city, including the famous Rue du Rhone and Quai des Bergues. They also secured the right to construct and operate a line on the famous lake-side drive from Geneva to Versoix, a distance of some 5.44 miles, past the fine villas and chateaux of the wealthy and aristocratic classes.

The new company was organized with a capital of $983,000, but none of the stock has yet been issued or sold, although it has probably been largely apportioned. It is understood that the money for the construction is being furnished by the Paris Bank of South Africa. London capitalists are also interested in the venture, and it is likely that the new company in a short time will own and control all the street car lines in the city and canton of Geneva. To put existing companies into effect, to construct and equip all these lines on the American plan, and to exploit the extra exclusive rights of the new company will entail a total expenditure of about $2,895,000. The company would also have about 95 miles of road traversing the city in every direction and serving the entire canton. The total population amounts to about 119,000. The canton is next to the smallest of the Swiss confederation, but has only about 12 square miles of territory. The lines would also cross the frontier of France and would serve various small towns in the French departments of Haute Savoie and Ain.

Under the management whose management and direction the new lines are being constructed is Mr. Stephen D. Field, of New York and Boston. The work is progressing, nine miles of tracks having already been laid. One, at least, of the new lines will be in operation by the 1st of June. The American overhead-trolley system is being used and the American system of conduits for underground cables, for the first time in Europe.

Italian Laborers in Switzerland. It is claimed that 100,000 Italian laborers, skilled and unskilled, find employment in Switzerland, 90 per cent. of whom come into the country in the spring and return in the fall. For endurance, industry, sobriety and economy the Swiss affirm that the Italians excel all other laborers, but it is claimed that when the labor season is over they return across the border to their homes and spend their earnings in the Italian markets. It is estimated that these laborers take to Italy every fall an average of 200 francs per person. This would make an annual total of 18,000,000 francs ($3,474,000), or six francs per capita for the entire Swiss population. This is nearly two-thirds of the per capita ground, poll, fortune and income tax for the entire country, which amounts to over $5,500,000 annually.

Important Decision in Germany. The German federal court recently rendered a decision that is of interest to the commercial interests of every nation because it places the ownership of trade secrets in Germany in the hands of the manufacturers instead of the hands of the employe who discovered or invented them. In this particular case it appears that a foreman in the employ of a certain establishment invented a substance which his employer used in finishing "rustling" velvet. The use of this substance was considered a trade or business secret of the firm. The foreman, however, imparted the composition to others, and the firm had him tried under the law of May 27, 1898, entitled "An act for the suppression of base competition" (Gesetz zur Bekaempfung des unlauteren Wettbetriebs). The foreman was found guilty in the lower court.

The case was appealed to the federal court and the defense made the point that the foreman had only imparted his own invention to others; that the same was his intellectual property. The federal court dismissed the appeal on the following grounds:

The foreman was employed as such by the firm, and therefore it was his duty to try experiments by which the methods of work could be improved.

His achievement in inventing the substance was therefore only a part of the services which he owed to his employers. The invention belonged to his employers, and therefore the action of the foreman in imparting the secret to outsiders was in violation of their confidence. Only the employe is intrusted with experiments which may lead to such inventions. A stranger, whose labor does not belong to the establishment, is excluded from such experiments. The foreman was admitted to the experiments only on account of his employment by the firm, and it followed that the invention in question was made by him in consequence of his employment by the firm, for which he was paid.

Population Statistics in Europe. Next to France, Switzerland seems to have had a smaller percentage of births over deaths in 1898 than any other country in Europe. France, with a population of 38,600,000, had 843,923 births and 810,073 deaths, or an increase in births over deaths of eight-tenths of one per cent. of the population. Switzerland had but 11 births over deaths in every 1,000 inhabitants; England, 11½; Germany, 15; Russia, 14; Belgium, 11½; Italy 12; Austria, 13; and Hungary, 12. There were 8.1 marriages in Switzerland in every 1,000 inhabitants; in France 7.5; in England, 15.3; in Germany, 8.4; in Russia, 8.5; in Belgium, 8.2; in Italy, 7.3; in Austria, 8; in Hungary, 8.2. From 1870 to 1895 the population of Switzerland increased 370,000; from 1870 France increased 1,500,000; Germany has gained 10,000,000 since 1875; England, 6,000,000 between 1871 and 1891; Belgium gained 1,242,000 between 1866 and 1896; from 1869 to 1890 Austria gained 3,550,000 and Hungary 2,000,000; since 1882 Italy has increased 3,000,000. In Switzerland there are 73.2 inhabitants to the square kilometer; in France 67.1, England has 120; Germany, 96.7; Russia, 49.9; Belgium, 206; Austria, 79.6; Hungary, 54.3; Italy, 110.5; and France, 71.8, or the third lowest of the European powers, Russia and Hungary having less than France.

National Movement in Switzerland. There is a national movement in Switzerland looking to the establishment of hospitals for the treatment of lung diseases. Already there are hospitals at Leysin, Heiligenschwendi, Davos, Braunwald, Faltisbergwald and Malvilliers. The number of beds is at present nearly 600. The principal cure is fresh air, rain or shine.

"Lights of the Indicator" of the National League

Something About the Five Men Whose Decisions Are Law on the Green Diamond

IN ABANDONING the double umpire system and reverting to the scheme of having one knight of the indicator to be the supreme arbiter in baseball games, the national league magnates believe that they have assured the public that disgraceful rows over decisions will not mar the play this season. Many a time James A. Hart, one of the leading national league rule makers, has said to me: "It is hard enough to find six men on both sides of baseball games; what sense is there in the plan that requires us to find ten or twelve men?"

Mr. Hart's logic made an impression on his fellow magnates and they named five of the most experienced men that were available for the task this year. When the pitchers face the batsmen for the first time this season, and the hour has come for "play ball" in the opening contests of the National league, the men in blue behind the catchers will be the veterans, Tim Hurst, Henry O'Day, Ed Swartwood, Thomas Connolly and Robert Emslie. I have it from one of the major league leaders that the supervision of umpires and players, John M. Ward, will actually be compelled to work this season to earn his salary, which has been his in the past more as a pure gift from the National league than as a remuneration for services rendered. In theory it is fine—Mr. Day is to wander about the circuit almost incognito, as it were, and to keep his eagle eye on the umpires and players. In cases of disputes over decisions that may be of such a vital nature that they decide the fate of a close game, the supervisor is to be the sole and final arbiter. It is one thing for Messrs. Hart, Soden and Brush to legislate in this pleasant way, but it will be quite another thing for the players to depart from the established habit of "kicking."

I have sat through many a score of games on National league diamonds watching the work of the umpires named for this season's staff—it will be seen that there are five umpires while but four can be on duty at once, because of the league circuit being reduced to eight clubs. Naturally I have formed opinions of the ability of each man. These opinions are personal and doubtless they would not agree with those who are in the habit of witnessing games from less advantageous positions—the newspaper men sit immediately behind the catcher and umpire, where the balls that the pitcher "floats over" the plate or near it can be judged with quite as much accuracy as by the backstop and the umpire.

Knowing these men, I must say that there can be no sympathy extended to any critic who will say Umpire So and So "delivered the goods" New York, or whatever team might have been visiting the city in question, of a game. The umpires, whatever may be their human proneness to occasionally err, are high-minded sportsmen. They are impartial—owing their allegiance only to the national body, which pays them a good salary and expense money—and they have no desire to throw a game either way. The players realize this fully as well as the close critics do, but they are naturally prejudiced when an umpire's decision snatches away what looked to be a certain victory.

Of all the men on the league staff, Tim Hurst is the most maligned by those who have not seen him. Besides he has officiated as referee in pugilistic bouts and has maintained his reputation for pugnacity when attacked by senseless and brutish players. Tim is decided the right to illumine the game with his experiences.

For two years Hurst was absent from the league staff. He conducts some prize dissertations with the noisy players, in his quiet, undertone manner, that are worth a dozen lectures than all the threats and brow-beating language of some umpires. The men who bellow loudest over his decisions are the quickest to admit after a game that Tim understands his business. Once "Muggsy" McGraw, the worst feared player of the league by the umpires, objected to Hurst's decision and applied some vile epithets to the little man in blue. Hurst stepped up to the little villain's face, looked him full in the eye and remarked: "You talk like a missing link. Some day I hope to see you take on human form and betray some sign of intelligence. Now trot off to the bench, you cursing outang."

Spectators there for the game did not hear the repartee, but they understood what sort of a rapid firing gun Hurst had turned on the belligerent "Muggsy" to so effectually silence the oriole player's batteries. It was Hurst's style of diplomacy. He has plenty more of the same sort for other occasions.

"Bob" Emslie, by many considered the star umpire of the staff, is 34 years old and had five years' experience as a pitcher with the Camden, Baltimore, Toronto and Savannah clubs. For 12 years he has been calling strikes and balls, part of the time in the American league and nearly nine years in the major league. Emslie appreciates the call for dignity in his position and when traveling to a city to officiate holds himself aloof from the baseball men. He is a silent but not taciturn man, a close student of the rules and can be depended upon to be where his schedule will demand his presence. The grandstandites who never get familiar with the faces of the umpires notice Emslie immediately he takes up his position at the plate by his distinguishing habit of frequently sweeping off the rubber to guide the pitcher in putting over the sphere and by the peculiar, partially bald spot on the right hand side of his head, which he attempts to conceal by some extra long locks. In a heated discussion these locks often get brushed aside. Emslie is a most conscientious umpire.

The greatest "jollier" of the crowd is Ed Swartwood, a veteran American association and league player and a graduate from the umpiring ranks of the Eastern league. No one could get mad over "Swarty's" decisions. Even the late Marty Bergen, who was a chronic kicker while standing to catch, keeping up a continual round of verbal attack on umpires, although some critics called him the silent man, would say: "Swarty takes the cake. You have to get into the band wagon with him." During a game Swartwood made a bad decision and laughingly told the spectators behind him that he had made a "bull." "But it didn't cost anything," added the umpire. "Yez I will hear all sorts of kicks." Sure enough, after the game the defeated captain came to the umpiring room fairly blazing. "That decision" was dead wrong," he said. "I know it," was the reply. "Then why didn't you reverse it when you saw it was wrong?" asked the captain.

"I got a streetcar off your trolley," replied Swarty. "Why didn't you die and be born again when you found that you were cut out for a cheap kicking ball player?" That settled it. Swartwood, as the result of his abundance of animal spirits, his genuine honesty and conscientious manner, his determination to spread the milk of human kindness rather than the rennet of human dissension, is the favorite of the baseball world. He would stick to a wrong decision if he had to quit the game rather than make the game ridiculous by reversing his opinion. But he seldom errs in judgment. Connolly has had more experience as an umpire on bases in the big league, but he has the difficulty of controlling his speech. He will have to "cut this out" of his accomplishments to regain favor with the fans. Hank O'Day is the Nestor of the staff. He wears red, and although very blunt and dictatorial in his talk with the players is a most capable umpire. He had years of experience as a pitcher, knows every player and his characteristics and cannot be deceived by feints and balks. He is honest to the core and the only thing that Chicago fans ever had against Hank was that he was so afraid of being called a "home umpire"—he lives in Chicago—that he leaned away from the rough riders at every possible close decision.

There cannot be too many umpires like O'Day.

Insurance for Workingmen.

A new accident and sick benefit insurance law has been passed (subject to referendum) in Switzerland. According to the law, after January 1, 1902, all persons 14 years of age, and over, employed by, or carrying on work for any other person in Swiss territory, must become insured. The insurance fund is to be raised by contributions from the government, the employers and the work people. Work people are never to be required to pay more than two per cent. of their wages into the fund. The proportion which employers must pay varies according to nature of the employment and in the cases of some dangerous occupations is considerable, the maximum rate being as high as 12 per cent. of an employe's wages.

Easter Gowns for the Gotham Fashionables

Great Preparations Have Been Made for a Gorgeous Display of Finery

FIFTH AVENUE on Easter Sunday is the finest place in the country to study fashions. I have seen it in previous years, and know whereof I speak, and this year will prove no exception to this rule, if one is to judge from the many beautiful gowns which the Gotham dressmakers and tailors have been turning out for this occasion for some time past. Even the dressmakers and ladies tailors of Paris and London are contributing largely to this fashionable promenade for Easter Sunday.

Easter Sunday will bring with it a mass of tucks and plaits. Practically every gown that I have seen is arrayed with them, and they promise to be the feature of the early spring styles. Gowns of silk poplin will also be seen in comparatively large numbers on this day of new gowns.

I have made a round of the dressmaking and importing establishments, and this is what I have found in part:

A gown of royal blue silk poplin of which the skirt was made with a front panel of tiny tucks to within a foot of the bottom of the skirt where it flared in a deep flounce. The sides and back of the skirt were entirely new with four tucks just below the hips, running across the back, a space and then six tucks, another space and then eight tucks, with three tucks around the bottom. To be worn with this is a rounded empire jacket with high Medici collar with pointed revers, and with tucks in clusters of three running in bolero effect on each side of the front.

OF HELIOTROPE SATIN FACED HENRIETTA CLOTH.

OF ROYAL BLUE JOPLIN.

A smartly-cut gown of heliotrope satin-faced Henrietta cloth. The skirt of this gown is tucked all around with eight tucks in clusters spaced down. Around the bottom of the skirt are four strappings of the goods with pipings of glace silk at each side. Strappings of the cloth between the tucks extending to the knees. The bodice has a round yoke yoked across, and tucks in clusters of four from the yoke to the waist line, with strapped pieces between. A jabot of white chiffon with rosettes at the throat to finish.

A handsome gown of light silk poplin, trimmed with ecru lace applique. The skirt has three deep tucks on each side that are stitched just below the knees. A double box plait at the back. There is handsome ecru lace applique around the foot of the skirt. To be worn with this is a pointed bolero jacket with the applique of lace over. A deep turn-back collar and revers of ecru satin, with rows of narrow black velvet ribbon on. Tight-fitting sleeves with the applique of lace on the top and deep points falling over the hand.

An attractive gown of sea green cloth trimmed with a grayish lace applique. This gown has four pieces of the lace applique on the front and sides of the skirt with a double box plait at the back. The bodice is short, just to the waist line with strappings of the cloth around it extending nearly half way at the back, and gradually growing very short under the arms. An applique of lace over the shoulders, with a high collar of the same.

A gown of sapphire blue cloth. The skirt is quite plain, with a simulated flounce at the foot. It is not very full, but just suggestive of a fullness that gives an outward curve below the hips. The back has a gratulated box plait. A basque coat is to be worn with this, made of the same cloth, with turnover collar and deep rounded revers of sapphire blue panne, with silver braid over white on the revers, and a V to finish at the waist.

These descriptions show that skirts will show more novelty than bodices in ordinary spring gowns. The models are many, and the selection of fashion is yet unmade; but certain it is that either draping or folding or trimming will be used on nearly every skirt. The choice ranges from the bands and the straps of the plain tailor-made to the plaitings, the fillings, and the actual draperies caught up on the hip or the back of the smarter gowns. One of the favorite styles for soft materials is the side-pleats laid in flat plaits, leaving a plain, taffeta effect at the front, and a single or double box-plait flattened down as much as possible by ironing at the back. For the very softest of fabrics, such as crepe-de-chine, or taffetas, or the new silk crepon, graduated rows of gatherings are being run all round the top of the skirt for about six inches down; often these rows are shaped into a point in the center like a Swiss belt, and the same gatherings are continued upwards to an equivalent point on the bodice, giving the effect of a princess dress with a belt added. Other new model skirts have a tunic draped up to the back so as to draw it into a few folds at the left hip, which are caught under a buckle on the back of two from the top of the skirt behind. Of course this needs a separate foundation, on which the band of material round the foot to simulate the underskirt is stitched. A pretty novelty, not easy to describe clearly, but a pleasing change after long seeing plain and somewhat stiff designs, had a tunic draped up under a buckle to the front of the left hip, the folds thence carried round the hip in a manner worthy to be called a panier, and at the back passed under another buckle, where the soft folds fell in cascade of folds to the slightly trained end of the gown.

MUSKRATS SUCCEED TERRAPIN

Baltimore Gourmets Assert They Cannot Distinguish the Difference.

The rapid exhaustion of the supply of terrapin on Maryland's "east shore" has set the lovers of good living to devising a substitute for the succulent dish. One of the most fashionable clubs of Baltimore with a membership of 200 prominent citizens, and famous for the excellence of the meals served to those who dine at its rooms, has recently introduced the muskrat as filling the "long-felt want," and with a gratifying measure of success.

"Muskrat a la terrapin" is a feature of the menu, and it is claimed that so popular has this amphibious "varmint" become that the price of muskrats has greatly increased on the eastern shore of Maryland.

It is said that the muskrat is the most delicately cut meat; that it is not in the water he delights in rolling in clean, white sand; in short, that he, too, is one of nature's epicures. As to his odor, special care must be taken in skinning, cleaning and preparing him for the table. If that task is successfully accomplished the little animal is ready for the attention of the cook, and then for the appetite of those who have the courage to eat it.

The club also serves the genuine oldtime Maryland possum—"'possum," whenever the real cornmeal can be procured. The ingredients of these possum are cornmeal, eggs, salt and water, and the best quality of butter. No buttermilk is used and the best cornbread authority says that the use of baking powder is "ruinous."—Baltimore American.

MILLINERY HINTS.

Hats and Bons to Accompany Summer Gowns.

Among other millinery novelties is a hat of heavy straw braid, upon each seam of which is a tiny ruche of black gauze. The crown of some hats is completely covered with flowers.

The newest hat shapes have a high, narrow crown. A shape of this sort is made of real lace, laid flat over a transparent puffing of light mousseline de soie, the trimming being a simple pigeet of roses or orchids.

Hats of course chip in all colors are to be much worn, as are horsehair lace braids and hats all of tulle and mousseline de soie. These are very large and much trimmed, with flowers especially.

Boas for warm weather use are very large and fluffy, covering the entire shoulders and falling to the waist in front. They are made of lace, gauze, silk and velvet and are rather elaborate. No woman with a short neck should indulge in these accessories, attractive as they are, for they suit only slender, long necked figures.

Today's cut shows a costume for a young woman. It is of sky blue taffeta, the plain skirt being laid in a box plait at the back. The bodice has clusters of tucks alternating with bands of guipure insertion, and the sleeves are made in the same way. The corselet belt, the cuffs, the medici collar and the bertha are of sky blue crepe, the plaited collar and the cravat of white mousseline de soie. Rhinestone buttons form a decoration. The bodice is trimmed with forgetmenots.

FASHION NOTES.

Materials For Warm Weather and Styles For Making.

Fancy wool goods are trimmed chiefly with galloon, ribbon and lace. The designs for these materials are chiefly tiny dots or figures, fine stripes of various kinds and small brocke flowers.

The newest leather belts are no longer a plain band of leather. They are repousse and are often decorated with a gold design. High corselet belts of spangles or embroidery are also worn over full bodices of mousseline de soie or lace and are very becoming to a slender figure.

All skirts are lined except those of very thin materials, such as mousseline de soie, lawn, etc., which have a separate lining skirt. The skirt is no longer perfectly plain at the back, being now mounted with plaits or gathered if the goods are thin.

Pongee is again used and is well represented among the goods intended for summer wear. Being very light and thin, ruffles are indicated for the decoration, although plaitings, especially accordion plaitings, are also very suitable. Delicate lace or mousseline de soie may also be employed.

The costume illustrated is of very thin cloth. There is a line of cording near the foot of the skirt, which also runs up the front, and the skirt is fitted by cordings at the hips. The bodice, which is fitted at the back and stretched in front, has a guimpe of corded silk framed in an application of velvet embroidery. The tight sleeves are decorated with cording at the top and have little epaulets applqued at the shoulder. The toque is entirely of flowers, with a bow of ribbon and feathers as trimming.

KHAKI AND ITS INVENTOR.

Something About the Shade Just Now So Fashionable.

To the observer of fashion and fashion's changes the great popularity of khaki cloth must be apparent. All the new gowns that will permit of its introduction have some of it used in the trimming, and the most stylish of all are made entirely of the shade.

It is interesting to know just what the khaki word means and how it was introduced into the world of fashion. There is a mistaken notion that prevails concerning the word applied to the dust colored uniform that our soldiers adopted when ordered to the southern fields of battle, which is that khaki refers to texture or material, when it is synonymous of color only.

Khaki—which, by the way, is the only way of spelling the word, notwithstanding the many ways that are attempted—signifies dust color. It is therefore quite proper to speak of khaki cotton, flannel, silk, house, dog, cow or khaki anything so long as it is khaki colored. Khaki is "dust color." It has absolutely no other meaning.

The claimant of the honor for inventing the khaki is a Belgian engineer, Colonel Duller, who has spent many years in service with the English army in Egypt. It was wholly by accident that he fell upon the usefulness of the color. Far from home and a supply of cloth out of which the regular uniforms of the English army were made, all his wardrobe was stolen. The only cloth to be found on the spur of the necessity was khaki, but even that was good to find, and by the assistance of an Egyptian tailor a uniform was constructed that attracted the attention of the officers under whom he was serving.

Colonel Duller still has in his possession the first khaki coat ever worn by a soldier. The fact that it so nearly matched the color of the soil of Egypt was soon recognized and that it rendered its wearer less conspicuous as a target for the enemy's bullets forced itself on the attention of the authorities, and it was soon generally adopted.

English chemists made many attempts at copying the color used by the Persian soldiers, the results of which were never very successful. Although the desired shade was easily found, the lasting qualities were not readily obtained. The shade was not "fast." Consequently the first visit of the garment to the laundry invariably resulted in reducing the garment to its original unsightly condition. This was very inconvenient, as it necessitated redyeing after each laundering, a matter of considerable expense and great inconvenience.

As is to be supposed, new experiments were made from time to time, with more or less satisfactory results, but in every case two or three applications of common washing soda had the effect of restoring the material to its original color. But at last the mystery of the secret by which the desired tint could be "fixed" was discovered by a Manchester dyer.

Like all industrial discoveries, this one was only accomplished after much expenditure of time and energy. After many fruitless attempts the chemist had almost given up in despair, when in sheer desperation he tried a composition which it seemed would have to add another failure to the already long list of its predecessors. Contrary to all expectation, the result proved the crowning success of its efforts. The tint produced defied the severe tests to which it was subjected. A large cotton manufacturer was communicated with, and many thousands of yards were promptly dyed fast khaki. From that time on the army factory at Pimlico was supplied with miles of khaki cotton to make into clothing for the soldiers.

Despite the success in fixing the color on cotton, the fastness of the color when applied to woolen goods was not so satisfactory, and even yet it often happens that a shower of rain will make a khaki coat of cotton quite useless. Experiments are still being made daily in the hope that something will be found that will overcome the obstacle.

In connection with the foregoing it may be well seem necessary to warn the fortunate possessor of a khaki Easter gown to beware of April showers.

MILDRED MERRIAM

A novel way of reaching the Klondike will soon be attempted by a New York woman who is a claim holder in the gold region. She will attempt the journey on her bicycle. The trip to Dawson City will be made in the usual way, but from there on she will pedal her way over 1,000 miles of snow and ice to Cape Nome, which is her destination.

The daughter of a well known Washington physician is the first duly qualified mechanical engineer in that city. She will confine the practicing of her profession to the running of her own locomobile.

BRIDES OF CONGRESS.

Young Wives of Statesmen Make Washington Merry Gay.

The many brides of the official circle at Washington have made the past season unusually gay. Generally this distinction is conceded to the daughters of the capital set, but this year the tables have been turned, for the young wives of the congressional homes have added their quota to the gayety of the social whirl and have not failed to have their share of attention.

The "bride of the senate" this year is Mrs. Thurston, who was married to the senior senator from Nebraska during the latter part of November. Mrs. Thurston is the senator's second wife. She is tall and slender and has the rather rare type of beauty of dark hair and olive complexion, with azure eyes. She is very much younger than her distinguished husband. At the time of her marriage certain newspapers referred to her stage career. There was very little truth in the statements. A good part of her girlhood was passed in Washington while her father was senator from Florida. She was educated in Boston, and after she had been graduated she went abroad for a few months to study elocution under a well known master. This was probably the basis of the "stage" romance.

Mrs. Thurston's hotel apartments are very beautiful. They are filled with curios and interesting things from all parts of the world. The senator's smoking room is an ideal oriental den. The walls are draped with heavy tapestries, exquisite embroideries from China, curios from Cuba, the Philippines and Hawaii, and all around them are couches piled high with down pillows. There are teak and lulaid tables, with pipes from all corners of the globe, tobacco pouches and bowls of curious design and strange looking musical instruments that breathe eastern luxury.

Senator and Mrs. Thurston have entertained extensively during the season, and Mrs. Thurston has been noted as great a princess as was Miss Lola Pueman, the debutante.

Mrs. Mondell, the wife of Representative Frank W. Mondell of Wyoming, is a typical western girl. She was born and spent her girlhood except when studying in the east at Laramie. Dr. Harris, her father, was one of the early pioneers of the west and made a large fortune in mining. He gave his daughter every advantage of education and travel.

Although Miss Harris and Representative Mondell were from the same state, they had never met until he was serving his first term in congress. Miss Harris and her affianced were first believers in short engagements, and less than four months after they had met for the first time Miss Harris became Mrs. Mondell.

The youngest daughter of Ohio's eminent member of the house, Hon. Charles Grosvenor, has recently become the bride of Dr. Cassius Shepard of Columbus. Mrs. Shepard is almost as well known in Washington as she is in her home. Her father has been in congress more than 17 years, and she has virtually grown up in Washington, where she was educated.

She was abroad for two years to complete her education and to study music. Since her marriage she has visited with her parents during the month of March. She is very popular in society and has been entertained continually since her arrival in Washington.

Dr. Cassius Shepard is a graduate from the Pennsylvania Medical college, class of '00. He is practicing medicine at his beautiful home in Columbus.

The young and stately bride of the Harrisburg representative is a Virginia girl who was born and bred at the capital. A few years ago as Miss Gertrude Howard she went to reside with her uncle at Lynchburg. It was while visiting there that she met Representative Olmstead. He was apparently armor proof until he met Miss Howard arrayed in bridesmaid's attire. He capitulated to her charms, and the wedding last October followed.

They reside at the Shoreham, where they have been among the most generous entertainers of the season. Representative Olmstead was a stalwart bachelor when he entered congress three years ago, and as he was known to be wealthy he was considered one of the "catches" of the house.

EASTER COSTUMES.

They Indicate the Prevailing Styles For the Future.

Costumes for Easter set the pace for later ones, so we may expect to see much stitching and ornamentation of the gar-ments in the form of tucks and plaits. The newest idea in tucks is to have them waved instead of straight.

Bonnets hold an important position. Both small and large ones are used and are often very costly and are elaborately made. Watteau miniatures and steel or jeweled buttons are most employed for elegant costumes.

Rosses, yokes, collars and panels are shown in embroidery of all kinds. Embroidered applique is very continue in one, while lace and spangles still appear. Laces in particular decorates in all man-on the porch to sleep, like a big dog and would now and then go shambling into the office on chilly days and lie down in front of the fire.

Some of the party thought it would be great fun to camp out for awhile and they got some tents, which they pitched in the woods. One of the party was a lazy kind of a fellow who liked to sleep in the daytime, and almost every afternoon he could be heard snoring away on the cot in his tent.

His friends thought it was about time to stop this after awhile, and they got one of the cub bears, that was really as tame as a big kitten, and almost as playful, and one afternoon while the sleeper was tucked up as usual under his canvas cover, they put the cub inside his tent.

Bruin was nearly always hungry, and at first he went sniffing around to find something to eat. But pretty soon he heard the snoring, and at first he was going to clear out, but his curiosity got the better of him, and he went over to the corner in which the cot stood and began hauling at the cloth to get at what kind of an animal it was that was making such a funny noise.

When the sleeper awoke to find a big bear bending over him, he gave a yell, and a leap that sent young brain sprawling, and ran away as fast as a zoold. When he found out the joke that had been played upon him he was "mad as a hornet," but after awhile he could see the fun and laughed with the rest of them. But he wouldn't go camping any more.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

STOLEN TRADE SECRETS.

How the Mysteries of Some Notable Crafts Were Obtained by Enterprising Competitors.

Few inventions are at present worked secretly, as the patent laws now provide the protection which in olden times was wanting. One hundred years ago whatever a man discovered in the arts or mechanics he concealed. Workmen were put upon their oath never to reveal the processes used by their employers. Doors were kept closed, artisans going out were searched, visitors were rigorously excluded from admission, and false contrivances blinded the workmen themselves. The mysteries of every craft were hedged in by precautions which now appear to be fanciful and silly.

But neither locks nor oaths availed against the ingenuity of envious or inquisitive rivals. One after another trade secrets were revealed, until the wise patent laws did away with all necessity for secrecy. The secret of the manufacture of prussic acid was stolen from an old chemist who had a shop near Temple Bar, in London, by a chimney sweep, who dropped down the flue and took good note of the process.

The secret of the manufacture of fire ware, which was discovered in Holland and kept a secret for 50 years, was stolen by James Sherman, a Cornish miner.

The history of cast steel presents a curious instance of a manufacturing secret stealthily obtained under the cloak of an appeal to philanthropy.

In 1760 a Sheffield watchmaker became dissatisfied with the watch springs in use, and after many experiments succeeded in making cast steel. In 1770 he had a large factory making this steel. The process was wrapped in secrecy by every means within reach—true and faithful men hired, the work divided and subdivided. Large wages paid and stringent oaths administered.

It did not answer. One midwinter night a traveler knocked at the gate. It was bitterly cold, the snow fell fast and the inmates gave the weary wanderer shelter from the storm. He sank upon the floor and soon appeared to be asleep. But in reality he kept his eyes open, saw the whole process, and when he departed in the morning he carried with him the secret of making cast steel.

Ants Made a Bridge.

A naturalist found that some black ants were devouring the skins of some bird specimens on a table, so he made tar circles on four pieces of paper and put one under each leg of the table. Pretty soon he found the ants busily at work again, and, looking at the tar circles, found each one was bridged by bits of sand which the clever ants had brought in from the street.

BRUIN WAS CURIOUS.

Bear Examines a Lazy Camper's Bed and Is the Cause of an Unpleasant Awakening.

It was while in the Yellowstone National park that this joke was played upon one of a jolly crowd of young people. The government keeps a great many wild animals at this place, and visitors are cautioned not to shoot at them or throw stones at them, so they become very tame. The bears in particular, big, clumsy, awkward fellows, loaf around the hotels to eat up everything that is thrown out of the kitchen. At the hotel where this particular party was stopping, one of the brown cinnamon bears would even come up on the porch to sleep, like a big dog and would now and then go shambling into the office on chilly days and lie down in front of the fire.

Some of the party thought it would be great fun to camp out for awhile and they got some tents, which they pitched in the woods. One of the party was a lazy kind of a fellow who liked to sleep in the daytime, and almost every afternoon he could be heard snoring away on the cot in his tent.

MISS FANNY CROSBY.

Blind Hymn Writer Whose Verses Are Sung by Christians in All Parts of the World.

Miss Fanny Crosby, the celebrated hymn writer, is ill at her home, No. 343 Quincy street, Brooklyn, N. Y.

As Miss Crosby is over 80 years old, and blind, her present illness has caused considerable alarm among her friends.

Miss Crosby is perhaps the best-known writer of sacred songs in the world, and the words of over 4,000 hymns are said to be her work. Her most celebrated song, perhaps, is "Saved by Grace."

Up to a few days before she was taken sick, despite the infirmity of her declining years, she was busy writing a new hymn.

She has been closely associated with many of the renowned musical men of the past half century. Among her many friends is Ira D. Sankey, who for so many years helped the late Dwight L. Moody in revival work.

Mr. Sankey delights in singing Miss Crosby's hymns and thinks that she is the most prolific and pathetic religious song writer that the passing century has produced.

Speaking of Miss Crosby's work, Mr. Sankey says:

"Fanny Crosby will live for many, many years—her work will survive. I have also enough unpublished hymns from her pen to keep her memory alive.

"Many of her hymns will be sung as long as the English speaking race exists.

"Few persons know," continued Mr. Sankey, "that Miss Crosby has been blind ever since she was six weeks old. She was not born blind, but her blindness was brought about by an affection of the eyes, which necessitated an operation.

"A calamity which others would consider a terrible misfortune she looks upon as one of the commonplaces of her normal condition."

Miss Crosby does not grumble at affliction, and on one occasion was heard to remark that if the gift of sight were offered her she would prefer to remain as she is. She is of the opinion that her blindness has proved a blessing.

The statements published in several papers that Miss Crosby is in destitute circumstances is strongly denied by her friends, who declare that the royalty she receives from her hymns and poems affords her more than a comfortable living.

Miss Crosby has lived in Brooklyn for the past 50 years. She is a devoted member of the Methodist Episcopal church and found great pleasure in attending all its services before she was taken ill.

GEN. CRONJE'S PRISON.

Boer Leader to Be Confined in the House Built for the Great Napoleon at St. Helena.

The little island of St. Helena, where the Boer general, Cronje, and his captured army will be confined, is situated in the South Atlantic ocean, 1,200 miles off the coast of Africa and 1,160 miles from Cape Town, from which port the first detachment of Boers were started the other day. Lying all alone in the Atlantic, it is a mere spot of land in the midst of the waste of water. At its greatest it is but little more than ten miles in length and six and a quarter miles in width. Its total area is 45 square miles. The southeast trade winds blow constantly over the island and make the climate mild and equable. Rising on the high slopes of the mountains, which cover a large part of the island, any desired degree of coolness can be found. The island is surrounded by high and steep cliffs and has few places where boats of any size can approach. In every way St. Helena is a natural prison. The capital is Jamestown, a village with a population of 2,500, which is half of the entire population of the island. Previous to the opening of the Suez canal the island was a place of refreshment for homeward-bound vessels, but now it is only visited by an occasional steamer.

It is possible that Longwood, the house built for the emperor of the great Napoleon, will be given to Cronje as a residence.

CARDINAL RAMPOLLA.

Many Churchmen Are of the Opinion That He Will Be the Successor of Pope Leo.

Recent dispatches from Rome have again revived interest in the probable successor of Leo XIII., and in this connection Cardinal Rampolla, the papal secretary of state, is most prominently mentioned. This is probably for the reason that he is closer to the holy father than any other member of the sacred college, as his official office brings him in touch with the pope almost every day. Then it is said that he reflects the political views of the venerable pontiff, and that he is eminently qualified to succeed to the throne of St. Peter. Although only 67 years old, he has held many of the most important offices in the Roman Catholic hierarchy, and his advancement to the high office which he now occupies came in an incredibly short space of time. Cardinal Rampolla was born at Polizzi, August 17, 1840, and is of the Sicilian nobility. He was educated entirely in Rome. At a comparatively early age he evidenced that he was possessed of diplomatic talents of a high order. In 1882 he was consecrated archbishop of Heraclea and appointed nuncio at the court of Madrid. When in 1885 the quarrel between Germany and Spain over the Caroline islands threatened to assume serious proportions it was largely through his diplomatic action that peace was maintained, and it was on his suggestion that the pope was requested to undertake the office of arbitrator between the two powers. While in Madrid the cardinal won the esteem of the entire royal family, and it was with regret that they parted with him when the pope called him to Rome in 1887 to honor him with a cardinal's hat and to make him papal secretary of state.

PRINCE FERDINAND.

Bulgaria's Ernstic and Ambitious Ruler to Be Made a King by the Czar of Russia.

Prince Ferdinand, whose title will be changed to Ferdinand, king of Bulgaria, when the Russo-Bulgarian treaty arrangements are completed, has been for years one of the most conspicuous sovereigns in Europe. He has ruled over the troublesome Bulgarians since 1887, and is exceedingly popular with his subjects. Upon the death of Prince Alexander in 1886 the sobranje sent a deputation to Ferdinand requesting that he occupy the vacant throne. An attempt to assassinate him while attending the funeral of the dead prince was a sensation at the time. He took the oath of office on August 14, 1887. Russia had taken a dislike to him, and he was also persona non grata at the vatican. This opposition was mollified later by his decision to have his children by his two sons educated in the rites of the Greek church. The prince was born in Vienna February 26, 1861, and is, therefore, 39 years old. He was the youngest son of Prince Augustus of Saxe-Coburg and Princess Clementine, of Orleans-Bourbon-Orleans. As a youth he served in the Austrian army. He is wealthy.

His Name Was Stuck On.

Bucharest officials are conscientious. After a revision of the registration lists in that city the following notice was sent out: "[Maj. A. Panaitu: It is hereby brought to your notice that your name is struck off the list of electors for deputies and senators in the First district and will not again be inserted in it. The reason for this is the fact that your death occurred some time ago."

The Evolution of a Name.

A teacher in the Philadelphia girls' normal school tells a story of a girl of humble parentage who gave her name as Bridget when she was first enrolled. During her first year Bridget changed to Bridgetta. During her second year the first syllable was dropped and she became Etta. That developed into Margaretta, and when she received her diploma her name was Marguerite.

A Congressional Record.

Just at the present time the voters of this country are regaled with long and enthusiastic claims of the great and glorious work done by members of Congress, such statements usually being made to impress upon the constituents of various districts the idea that the country won't be safe unless the present Representatives are returned to Washington. Much fulsome flattery and many unique arguments are incidental to the discussion, all of which the people must sift down to a practical, hard-pan basis of what actually is best to do in the choice of Congressmen. A record that contains many startling facts and unusual claims is that of Henry R. Gibson, member of Congress from the Second Tennessee district, who lives at Knoxville, and finds his reelection threatened. He sends out an appeal to his constituents in view of what he has done in his official capacity.

Here it is: He has put through $33 war claims, amounting to over $1,500,000; he put through 65 special pension bills; he had 41 men commissioned as officers in the army by the President; he had 19 men appointed as postmasters; he had 74 new postoffices established; he made about 13,000 calls on the Pension Bureau; he sent out 29,000 packages of vegetable seeds; he sent out 67,000 pamphlets and books; he sent out 167,000 copies of his own speeches; he wrote 47,000 letters to his constituents. This is Gibson's account of his own doings (extending, it is to be presumed, through more than one Congress), printed and sent into his district. He says, in addition, that he was "more regular in attending the sessions of Congress" and "gave more of his time to the business of the people and spent less of it in pleasure and idleness," than anybody else.

Now let us hear from our own Congressman, the Hon. Charles N. Fowler, and see if he can't equal this wonderful record of the Tennessee statesman.

The Price That Staggers Humanity.

"The price that staggers humanity." This famous utterance of Oom Paul is just beginning to be realized by the people who are following not only the course of events in the South African war but as well observing the trend of affairs in India, over which the British Empire wields government with a hard hand. The agonizing cry for bread that rises from the lips of the countless millions in far-off India, where thousands are dying daily of starvation, may not be regarded as closely connected with the war of conquest and oppression being carried on by England, but nevertheless it is. The millions of dollars that is being poured into South Africa by the British Government to prosecute this unholy endeavor to subjugate the struggling and noble little Dutch Republic is a sum ten-fold sufficient—if honestly and rightly used, as it should be—to relieve the horrible misery of the British serfs and dependencies in India.

A stirring appeal of The Christian Herald for aid from Americans for the starving people of India offers some instructive facts in this connection as brought out by the Philadelphia North American. Referring to the plight of the people of India The Christian Herald says that "our courage has failed us to present all the shocking details. Every time the clock strikes the hour it tolls the death-knell of at least five hundred victims in India who have died for the want of a crust. The cable operates quickly and your contribution today may save scores of hundreds, yea, thousands of lives tomorrow."

And each individual's responsibility is brought home by this definite appeal:

How many lives will you save?
Two seeds a day will support one life.
One dollar will save a life for two months.
Two dollars will save a small child for a year.
Five dollars will save a man, wife and child until the next crop is gathered.
Ten dollars will save a whole family from death.
Twenty dollars will save ten lives for four months.
Twenty-five dollars will save them and afford them the comfort of blankets during the rainy and cold season.
Fifty dollars would save five families.
One hundred dollars would serve a small community.

Taking up the appeal of the Christian Herald the North American says that "God forbid that we should do anything to check for one instant the flow of American benevolence toward a tortured people betrayed in their desperate need by their rightful protectors. But it is impossible to read this appeal without reflecting on the responsibilities of those who have made it necessary. India is a part of the British Empire. The British government is spending $630,000,000 to subjugate a little group of farmers just outside of its dominions while its own subjects are dying by millions for lack of the assistance which it is amply able to furnish."

The North American turns the table of the Christian Herald in another direction, and makes these striking comparisons:

Two rifle cartridges a day will support one life.
One six-pounder shell will save a life for two months.
One twelve-pounder shell will save a life until the harvest.
One pair of cavalry boots will save a man wife and child until the next crop is gathered.
One minute's discharge of a Maxim gun will save a whole family for life.
The cost of the war for one second will save ten lives for four months.
Two rifles will save them and afford them the comfort of blankets during the rainy and cold season.
The cost of firing one shot from a six-inch gun would save five families.
One seven-pounder breech-loss horse would save a small community.

The comments of the North American furnish a scathing arraignment of the British government, and the soundness of its position and the aptness of its criticisms strike the American people with peculiar force. It is a very forcible lesson in "the price that staggers humanity."

At the celebration of the one hundred and fifty-seventh anniversary of Jefferson's birthday at the Jeffersonian Club in Newark the other evening William B. Gourley, chairman of the Democratic State committee, and Assemblyman Allan Beany both declared for the renomination of Bryan for the Presidency. Mr. Gourley admitted that he was not an ardent supporter of Bryan in 1896, and was not now in favor of the 16 to 1 theory. "But," he went on, "the keynote of the coming campaign must be anti-imperialism. I do not say that the Democrats must take back anything or that they should recede from any position, but I believe that the living issues should be put forward. The most important, the vital issues for the Democrats, are anti-imperialism and anti-trusts. With these issues there can be constructed a platform broad enough to induce every Democrat to give earnest support to the party nominee."

Referring editorially to the approaching State convention of the Democrats for the election of National delegates, the Summit Record says: "Union county will present a candidate for this honor in the person of James K. Martine, whose services have been fully as valuable as any of those named and this county's delegates will probably be heard from in no uncertain tones if any attempt is made to shut out his candidacy. There are other Democrats in the State, too, who have been equally faithful and serviceable to their party, and whose friends should demand full consideration at this convention."

Standing pre-eminent among the jurists of New Jersey—a State which has given many noted men to judicial circles—the death of Chancellor McGill deprives the commonwealth of one who was a peer in affairs of law. Chancellor McGill was beloved by both the members of his profession and the laity, and his death causes profound sorrow and regret throughout the State. He was ever just and impartial, dignified and agreeable—possessing all the lovable attributes of a beautiful character.

The veteran Trenton correspondent of the New York Herald says it is believed that the new Chancellor will be Justice Gilbert Collins, of the Supreme Court, although other names have been mentioned. It was understood some time ago that Justice William Gummere was slated for the place, but that slate is believed to have been shattered. Vice-Chancellors Emery and Pitney, Judge J. Franklin Fort and Chief Justice Magie have all been mentioned. The appointment may, it is true, be offered to the Chief Justice. He lives in the same city with the Governor and they are warm personal friends, the Governor having studied for the law in Mr. Magie's office. His fitness for the place is unquestionable. The essential qualification in a Chancellor is a conscientious, trained and accurate sense of equity. He mainly exercises what are called equity powers. He needs, of course, to be well read in the law and its principles, because the theoretical fundamental grand rule of the law is equity; but it often happens that following the exact letter of the law would work injustice, and it is for such cases that the Court of Chancery exists.

While the British are pouring millions of dollars into South Africa to carry on an unholy and needless war, its dependencies in India continue to die of starvation. It is a black page for England.

ON THE HILLSIDE LINKS.

FIRST PLAYING OF GOLF WAS ENJOYED LAST SATURDAY.

It was an auspicious opening that took place at the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club grounds Saturday afternoon. The large number of golf enthusiasts who have been eagerly waiting for the initial event turned out and thoroughly enjoyed the day. The temporary greens were used, as the regular ones will not be ready for two weeks. Otherwise the course was enjoyed and the contestants showed by their play that they are in good form. There were fully one hundred people in attendance and of that number about sixty occupied the course.

The event of the day was the scratch competition for a prize for the best score. There were about twenty-five competitors, and twelve of that number handed in their scores, everyone of which showed good playing, considering it was the first time the majority had played this season. Frank Talmadge won the prize, a set of golf balls, with a score of 90. He played very near to his old form. The rest of the scores were excellent as the following will show: F. O. Reinhart, 94; T. R. VanBoskerck, 95; J. W. Baker, 98; Willard Wadsworth, 100; Morris Dumont, 103; W. T. Kaufman, 106; F. C. Ard, 108; Olaf Saugstaud, 110; Howard Wright, 116; C. W. Abbott, 116; D. H. Barrows, 120

Another interesting event of the afternoon was the private match, mixed foursome, in which Archibald Henderson and Miss VanBoskerck beat Howard Hunting and Miss Dudley, of New York, 6 up. Their scores were 131 and 123.

There were many social features associated with the opening, including tea in the afternoon and dinners at night. A number attended the afternoon tea and enjoyed a chat. In the evening a large dinner was given by Archibald Henderson and Howard Huntington to a number of their friends.

Death of John Y. Brokaw.

John Y. Brokaw, who thirty years ago carried on the largest seat and blind business in Union county, besides running a factory in New Brunswick, died Sunday at his home in Elizabeth, aged 74 years. He was a prominent Republican politician in that city during the era of inflation and wooden pavements, which plunged Elizabeth into bankruptcy.

Garwood Wants Better Streets.

The Garwood Land Company has applied to the Westfield and Cranford Township Committees to have the streets repaired.

—We are in receipt of a letter from Mr. Major, the famous cement man, of New York, in which he sets forth some very interesting facts about Major's cement. The multitudes who use this standard article know that it is many hundred per cent. better than other cements, for which similar claims are made, but a great many do not know why. The simple reason is that Mr. Major uses the best materials ever discovered and other manufacturers do not use them, because they are too expensive and do not allow large profits. Mr. Major tells us that one of the elements of his cement costs $2.75 a pound, and another costs $2 65 a gallon, while a large share of the so-called cements and liquid glue upon the market are nothing more than sixteen-cent glue, dissolved in water or citric acid, and, in some cases, altered slightly in color and odor by the addition of cheap and useless materials

FREE RUM THE REMEDY.

DR. A. H. LEWIS ABHORS THE LIQUOR LICENSE SYSTEM.

Rev. Dr. A. H. Lewis spoke to the Christian Endeavor Society of the Congregational church Sunday evening and presented his ideas concerning the present position of the liquor traffic and suggested the line of campaign he believed would be most efficient in advancing the cause of temperance. The meeting was in charge of Rev. C. L. Goodrich, pastor of the church.

Dr. Lewis' address was particularly to the young people. The fifty years before them promised, he said, to be one of the most important epochs of modern times. They were about to enter one of the most commercial and wordly periods in the history of the world and the centre of it would be in the United States. In the last three years this country had stepped into a position it had never before expected to reach. There were life questions to be answered. There was no question that had not been disturbed or was about to be disturbed. With the new possession came new opportunities, new entanglements and new temptations.

Of the questions to be considered, he pointed out, none would be more important than that of the liquor traffic. The great trouble to be encountered, he said, will be indifference.

To break up the liquor traffic, he explained, it was first necessary to break up its commercial power. Anything will go in this age as long as it pays. One of the strongest supports of of the traffic was the license system. The abolishment of the license system and the advent of "free rum" would, he declared, be the means of ending the traffic all the sooner. It might drive the drinking habit into the homes but that was a step better than the saloon as the family influence would have its restraining effect.

His suggestions, briefly summed up, were that the commercial power of the saloons should be gradually undermined and the traffic forced down from its present protected position to that of any other trade and that there should be individual educational work among the young. The coming generation, if brought up to a proper realization of the evils of the saloon would eventually leave the saloon without patrons and so effectively close its doors in the only practical way.

Funeral of Mrs. Rafferty.

The funeral services of Mrs. Susan Rafferty were held from her late residence on Sycamore avenue Sunday afternoon at 4 o'clock. Rev. Dr. D. J. Interment took place at Woodlawn Cemetery, New York, Monday morning.

END OF THE EYLER INQUIRY IN SIGHT.

Legislative Investigating Committee Arranges for its Last Session Next Week.

EXPENSES WILL BE $3,000,

WILL NOT EXCEED THE APPROPRIATION THAT WAS MADE.

Additional Testimony Will be Taken at the Last Meeting and Then a Report to the Governor Will be Made.

The special committee appointed at the last session of the New Jersey Legislature to investigate the management of the State Industrial School for Girls held a meeting at the office of Assemblyman E. H. Meeker in New York Monday afternoon. Assemblymen Mungle, Meeker, Abbett and Wakelee were present. The committee revised the incidental expense bills, and they found that they now amount to about $2,500. The appropriation made by the State to defray the expenses of the committee is $3,000, and it was said by Mr. Wakelee that the limit would not be exceeded.

The greater part of the four hours of the sitting was occupied in going over the testimony taken before the committee, and a rather desultory discussion of the nature of the report which the committee will begin to prepare soon after its next meeting which will be held at Trenton Monday, April 30th. At this meeting some additional testimony will be taken, and Mrs. Eyler, the matron of the school, will be given an opportunity to testify again if she so desires. It has been understood that she wishes to contradict the testimony of some of the witnesses who have already been heard, and that in case of additional testimony against her management she would like to be heard in rebuttal.

Mr. Mungle, the chairman of the committee, said that the meeting next week would be the last one at which testimony would be heard, and that he wished it to be known that if there were any witnesses who desired to be heard they could have a hearing by making their wishes known in writing to the clerk of the committee, P. H. Charlock, of Elizabeth. Mr. Mungle also said that the resolution of the Assembly authorized the committee to sit during the recess of the Legislature, and that it was impossible to tell when the investigation would be finished. Under the law passed by the last Legislature the time for the appointment of a new Board of Trustees of the school expires today, it is probable that Governor Voorhees will make some ad interim appointments, if he does not make them permanent, without delay. The law also requires that the new Board shall reorganize the management of the school within ten days after it is appointed.

The testimony already taken by the the committee makes 2,212 folios, and it was the opinion of Mr. Meeker and other members of the committee that it could not be properly examined without holding two or three more sessions, when the report to the Governor would be made in consonance with the facts presented.

TAX ORDINANCE PASSED.

It Took the Common Council but Five Minutes to Transact the Business Monday Night.

There was a special meeting of the Common Council last Monday for the express purpose of adopting the tax ordinance on its third reading. This was required by law at this time. It required about five minutes to do the business. Mr. Mellick presented a communication from Mrs. Pierre Mali, in which the latter asked the Council to make its usual appropriation of $100 for the city park. President Smith decided, however, that it would be out of order to consider the communication at a special meeting and it will go over to the next regular session in May.

Address on Missionary Work.

Mrs. M. M. Waterbury, secretary of the Baptist Home Missionary Society, will make an address next Friday evening at the First Baptist church, and the regular meetings of the various societies of the church will meet that evening. The sociable that was to have been given after the Christian Endeavor Society that evening has been declared off and will be held at some future time.

Mr. Minter's New York Church.

W. H. Miller, organist at the First Presbyterian church, officiated last Sunday for the last time. Commencing with next Sunday he will fill a similar position at the Scotch Presbyterian church, New York.

MISS OVERTON'S RECITAL

CLEVER READINGS GIVEN BY PLAINFIELD YOUNG WOMAN.

At Y. M. C. A. Hall Last Night—Was Assisted by Miss Willis, Soprano, and Miss Howell, Pianist.

Miss Grace Elting Overton, at her recital in Y. M. C. A. Hall Monday evening, proved herself a young woman of exceptional talent. An appreciative audience listened to her selections with much interest and pleasure. She was assisted by Miss vanNuise Willis, soprano, and Miss Saidee Mae Howell, pianist.

Miss Overton is of pleasing presence and possesses a clear voice that she used with success to portray the different characters in her selections. The selections were all new and well chosen. A little scene from Paul Leicester Ford's "Hon. Peter Sterling" was cleverly pictured. The opportunity for a strong dramatic effect was taken advantage of in "The Crime of Court Nicholas," taken from Anthony Hope's Zenda Stories.

As the independent Irish maid in "The Letter From Ireland," Miss Overton was excellent, handling the difficult brogue very naturally. The Scotch dialect in "His Other Sweetheart," was good. By way of encores, Miss Overton gave two amusing little recitations, "Dooley's Five O'clock Tea" and "It's Time You Was in Bed," with piano accompaniment by Miss Saidee Mae Howell.

Miss Overton was best in her last selection, a monologue entitled "A Young Lady's Observation." She was perfectly natural and unaffected as the young woman who ran off with a young man's dress-suit case by mistake. And when she discovered the mistake, she was very properly indignant at the young man. It was all very cleverly portrayed.

The soprano solos of Miss Willis were well rendered. She possesses a sweet well-trained voice which she used with much expression in the various numbers. Her enunciation was distinct and her manner pleasing. Miss Howell's piano solo showed her a well trained musician and she afterwards made an excellent accompanist.

WANT CITY TO ACCEPT IT.

Madison Avenue, North of Front Street, Offered by W. M. Stillman and Babcock Executors.

William M. Stillman and the executors of the Babcock estate have requested the Common Council to accept the Madison avenue extension, between Front street and Green brook. The North Plainfield authorities have already promised to accept Duer street from Craig place to the brook and when these are both accepted, the Freeholders will build a bridge.

Mr. Stillman and the Babcock estate will file an agreement with the Common Council to macadamize Madison avenue within one month after the bridge is finished. Work on the Duer street side will be started within a short time.

GOLF AT CRANFORD.

Extensive Improvements Being Made on Grounds of Club.

Cranford, April 25—The Cranford Golf Club met Monday evening and adopted plans of Oakley & Sons, architects, for a new $2,500 clubhouse.

It is the intention of the club to expend about $10 000 more next fall for a more elaborate building, but this was necessary as a temporary expedient for the summer.

Some $4,000 has been already spent in putting the links in shape, and it is the intention of the management to continue regardless of expense until the grounds are second to none in the State.

The committee is composed of Thos. A. Sperry and Leroy M. Lyon.

An Electrical Canal Boat.

Within a few days the officials of the Delaware and Raritan Canal will make a test of a new electrical canal boat propelling device. The machine works in a manner somewhat similar to a trolley, and is expected to pull much heavier loads and at much higher speed than can be effected by the present method. Superintendent Henry W. Dunn, of Trenton, will conduct the test.

Annual Affair Arbutus.

The social committee from the Christian Endeavor Society of the Congregational church has arranged another bicycle trip for Saturday afternoon. The destination will be Bonhamtown and the party expect to secure enough arbutus to be able to send some to the New York missions. The start will be made from the church on West Seventh street at 2:30 o'clock.

Big Peach Crop in Sight.

The farmers and peach growers report that the indications are that there will be a large crop of peaches and other fruit this year. The peach trees are now coming out in blossom, and if only half remain upon the trees, the growers assert there will be an immense crop.

New Catholic Church.

The Right Rev. Bishop McFaul, of Trenton, laid the corner-stone of the Church of the Holy Trinity, at Perth Amboy, Sunday afternoon. He was accompanied by Rev. Dr. Norris, chancellor of the diocese.

INTEREST IN BOULEVARD

MAIN TROUBLE IS TO GET CONSENTS IN CRANFORD.

Interest is reviving in the county road widening and boulevard scheme, with a trolley road accompaniment. The prospect of a brand new 100 foot wide boulevard from Elizabeth to Aldene, or the Cranford line, and ending there, with the continuance of the present narrow and inadequate highway is not relished by some farseeing citizens and property owners, who are apprehensive that such a condition would be injurous to real estate values and be a drawback to towns along the line.

Indeed, one property owner has said that he has told parties who have approached him about compensation for property on account of widening the road that he would willingly take one-half the value of the land necessary to be taken if only the county road scheme should prevail. He was tired of holding land and paying taxes without prospect or opportunity of profit, and says that if the road were widened and a trolley road built the whole of the unoccupied land between Elizabeth and Plainfield would be of service to thousands of homeseekers and industrial corporations.

The fact that last year North avenue, beginning at Broad street and continuing to Plainfield, was declared a county road to Plainfield, and stands in need of and is waiting for improvement reduces the matter to getting consents through Cranford only.

A THRILLING RIDE.

Mrs. Harned in a Closed Carriage Driven by a Terrified Horse Without a Driver.

Rare presence of mind is probably all that saved Mrs. M. S. Harned, of East Front street, from perhaps fatal injuries in a runaway accident Tuesday morning.

She was seated in a carriage belonging to E. N. Horne, of North avenue, and driven by William Price. When near the corner of Park avenue and Front street Price left his seat with the intention of loosening a rein which had caught in the shaft, but as he touched the ground he slipped and fell, frightening the horse.

The animal started down Park avenue on a furious run, miraculously escaping all obstructions. At the corner of Park avenue and Fourth street the lines became entangled in the wheels, drawing the horse's head around with a sudden jerk and throwing him to the ground.

He was caught and held by Wesley Dunn. Mrs. Harned, who had been sitting calmly in the carriage, stepped out, none the worse for her ride.

Price sustained no injuries, but the horse was cut about the head and the shafts were smashed.

MISSING FOR TWO YEARS.

Zachary Taylor Cooke Left Newark With Large Sum of Money. Left no Clue Behind.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Belvidere, April 25.—The foreclosure proceedings against the estate of Zachary Taylor Cooke, now in progress in the Warren county courts, have revealed the fact that Mr. Cooke is missing. He cannot be found, and there are no evidence of his death.

Mr. Cooke formerly lived in Freylinghuysen Township, where he owned a valuable farm. He moved to Newark, and when last heard from he lived at 16 New York avenue.

On March 31st, 1898, he left Newark ostensibly for the purpose of visiting his former home. He had on his person a large sum of money, with which he intended paying off an interest on a mortgage, and making some improvements on his property in the country.

His family expected his return in a few days, but no trace of him has since been found, every effort made to locate him having proved futile.

TO ABOLISH CHANCERY COURT.

Movement to Begin Looking Toward That Improvement.

Newark, April 25.—As a result of the death of Chancellor McGill a movement to abolish the Court of Chancery in New Jersey is being resuscitated among influential members of the State bar. They say New Jersey should fall in line with other States and abandon the antiquated process that makes chancery so cumbersome. Practice in this court is practically a specialty, and those who have had experience with the simplicity of procedure in other States wish for such simplicity here.

A committee, consisting of Judge J. Franklin Fort, Eugene Stevenson, Judges Robert S. Woodruff, Joseph Cross, Abraham Q. Garretson, David O. Watkins, Alan Strong, James J. Bergen and C. H. Sinnickson, is preparing court reform recommendations to submit to the State Bar Association meeting in Atlantic City on next June 15th, and may include a recommendation for the abolition of the Chancery Court.

—All bills against the city must be in the hands of the City Clerk by Saturday night to ensure payment at the next meeting of the Council.

CONTEST TO CONTROL MELLICK'S ESTATE.

Letters of Administration Have Been Granted by Surrogate Parrot in Union County.

HE LIVED IN MIDDLESEX.

MELLICK DIED APRIL 10TH, BUT RECORD SAYS MARCH 26TH.

Application Also Made for Appointment of Administrator in Middlesex County, but Final Action is Held Up.

What promises to be one of the most important legal contests on record is now interesting the surrogate courts at Elizabeth and New Brunswick, where there is a complicated state of affairs over the estate of the late Henry Mellick, the wealthy miner, who died near Avon Park Tuesday, April 10th, leaving an estate valued at about $100,000, which includes money in both the First and City National Banks. Mellick died intestate, making a contest a very likely thing among so many who claim to be relatives.

A short time ago John C. Morris, of Stelton, who is no: a relative, it is said, applied to Surrogate Furman, of New Brunswick, on behalf of himself, for letters of administration. He has since filed a renunciation bearing the names of most of the first cousins who claim to be the nearest of kin. There are twenty-one signatures to the renunciation.

As a result of the above several who claim to be more closely related to Mellick than the cousins have filed a caveat which states that the caveators are next of kin. The filing of the caveat has held up the appointment of an administrator, as the caveators do not want the Surrogate to make an appointment until the case has been heard in the Orphans' Court.

While all of the above was going on at New Brunswick things have been working at Elizabeth. A short time after Mellick was erroneously reported to have died, which was March 26th, F. T. O'Kell, a resident of Westfield, and a New York attorney, made application to Surrogate Parrott for letters of administration. This application was made at the instance of nephews, who claimed to be nearest of kin. It is a matter of record at Elizabeth that Mellick died on March 26th, when as a matter fact he did not die until Tuesday, April 10th. What would appear to be the irregular part of the proceedings is the fact that Mellick lived in Piscataway Township of Middlesex county, and that there is no jurisdiction in the case in Union county. However, the application was granted to F. T. O'Kell, of Westfield, on Monday, April 16th. It is also stated that Mr. O'Kell is not a relative of Mellick. He furnished American Surety Company bonds for the faithful performance of all duties, and Surrogate Parrotte states that everything was regular. But according to law he would have to swear that Mellick was a resident of Union county, and this he could not do legally. If he did so he must have been misinformed.

The latter part of last week Mr. O'Kell, in company with another man, came to Plainfield to investigate matters pertaining to the estate of the dead man. He had a letter of administration which he showed to F. S. Runyon, cashier of the First National Bank. Everything appeared regular on paper, and Mr. Runyon believed him to be the legal administrator, although he had been told that Mr. Morris would probably be appointed. The men asked a great many questions about the heirs of Mr. Mellick, and finally decided to take their leave at Avon Park. They met the colored woman there who had charge of Mellick for many years. They questioned her, but got little information. They also asked for the keys which open the private box in the safe deposit vault at the First National Bank. These she would not give them for she said they had been sent to Rahway.

The two men then returned to the First National Bank, thinking possibly Cashier Runyon had a duplicate set of keys and he would open the box. Mr. Runyon informed them that he did not have a set of keys and he could not open the box. Without going any further in their search, they left the city and have not been seen since.

Cashier Runyon said to The Press in communication with the Middlesex county officials say that the acts of the Union county officials must be null and void, if for no other reason than that Mellick did not live in their county. This alone would annul the transaction. In all events the outcome is bound to be of great interest, as it will affect a host of people who claim to be nearest of kin to Mellick. If a contest should be made between the two counties over the case it would only tend to increase the interest and higher courts would be called upon to decide it. When Surrogate Parrot was questioned about the status of the case he refused to give his opinion at

WON A FORTUNE.

Former Boy of Miner Holding Who Was Born in Plainfield Thirty-One Years Ago.

The strange story of the wonderful success in the Alaska gold fields of a young man, who claims Plainfield, N. J., as a birthplace, was published in the Sunday edition of the New York Herald. It was a most remarkable tale of sudden rise from abject poverty to affluence.

According to the statement of the returned miner, Hiram Belding, he was born in this city, October 15, 1865. His father was a section hand on the Jersey Central Railroad. His mother died when he was a small child. With no real home, he wandered to New York where he went to live with an uncle. His uncle died when Hiram was sixteen and the lad was thrown on his own resources. He tried his hand at a little of everything and managed to save a little money.

He gradually worked his way westward in various capacities until the Klondike fever began. He was one of its most enthusiastic victims, and in January, 1898, left Seattle with a crowd of other prospectors, having invested his hoarded savings in an outfit.

Out near Nome City, two claims on Anvil Creek turned forth wealth far beyond his expectations. Today he owns a block of stock in the Alaska Commercial Co., for which he paid $65,000; a hotel at Oakland, Cal., that cost him $30,000; property at Nome City that brings a monthly rental of $400; and the two claims on Anvil Creek, one of which he declined to sell for $80,000. His income on his present investments will reach $15,000.

The last thing that Belding says he is going to do now as he is rich is to aid his two sisters and crippled brother now living at Paterson, N. J.

MEDALS FROM THE STATE.

Sailors and Men of the Regular Army to Receive Them.

All the men of New Jersey who served their country in the late war except the volunteers, who already have them, will be given medals by the State. Last week it was announced that these medals would not be distributed until after July 4th, but they are being made now and will be given out at once. Adjutant General William S. Stryker has written as follows:

"Since my letter of last week the Governor has ordered that the medals be manufactured immediately. This being the case, sailors, marines, signal corps men and men of the regular army, who served to the credit of New Jersey in the Spanish-American War, should send their discharges to the quartermaster-general, and if they are found to be entitled a proper record will be made, the discharges returned, and the medals sent them as soon as the order given under the new law has been executed."

Some of the New Jersey sailors entiled to the medals are still in the service, but no matter in what part of the navigable globe they may happen to be, the medals will be forwarded them when their credentials are passed upon by the quartermaster-general.

MR. M'CUTCHEN TALKS OF NEW SCHOOL LAW

Declares That It Was the Best Measure Possible Under Conditions that Prevail.

THE VARIOUS FEATURES.

HARD TO MAKE IT FIT BOTH CITY AND COUNTRY DISTRICTS.

He Says That the Committee Visited Newark for Advice and Suggestions, But No One Offered to Co-operate With Them.

S. St. John McCutchen, of North Plainfield, who is a member of the State Board of Education, and was one of the special commission to prepare the new school law passed by the last Legislature, appeared before the Newark Board of Trade Wednesday night and addressed the members on subject of the law.

Mr. McCutcheon said that the first thought that came to him was that that city was pretty late in the field in now taking up the subject. He went on to say that the commission, of which he was a member, went to Newark, as it went to all others from Cape May to Sussex county, to ask for advice and suggestions and help. But the request for such co-operation was ignored and the consequence was the bill had been ultimately drafted without assistance from any municipality except Camden.

"We members of that commission," continued Mr. McCutcheon; "well, we're hayseeds, and it may seem funny for us to be tackling a subject of that character. Senator Stokes is from South Jersey and I am from a little borough up in Somerset, and Mr. Betts is from no one knows where. He isn't saying anything about it. But I feel free to say to you that we have given you a pretty fair school law, certainly an improvement over former ones. I regret that you were not back of us, that you have not helped us.

"As to the operation of the law in county districts, I know perfectly well it is an improvement, but when we attempted to get up an improved uniform law for city and county schools the trouble began. I sincerely wish that the revision as we proposed it, had prevailed, that Senator McCarter's amendment had prevailed. We thought it would be accepted, but in the hurry of the close of the Legislature—that infernal last half hour—the amendment was lost. We had hoped to have a provision in the law that the Boards of Education should be elected at large or appointed.

"The first material departure from the present law is the provision for a board of estimate to determine upon how much money the schools shall have. It is not dependent upon the Common Council or financial board of a city. In Pennsylvania the school boards have power to fix the amounts. That, I think, is too large a power. A man gets interested in educational work and soon begins to reason that there's nothing too good for the schools. In his desire to increase and improve facilities he is apt to show a tendency to extravagance. So I don't think discretion in financial matters should be allowed a board likely to be thus prejudiced. Nor should the board be left to the mercy of Common Councils to cause it to appropriations after police and firemen's pensions. It must be expected that the schools will thus get the fag end of the budgets."

"Our law provides that an intermediate body shall be named to consist of two Board of Education members, the Mayor and two appointed by the financial body. You so have a board of five members, only two of which are committed to the interests of the Board of Education. Now isn't that a fair body to pass upon a school budget? When a city comes to issue of bonds I say no one but the taxing body should have that power. The new law so provides."

"I ought to refer to this—I have read with deep concern the expression of legal advice of the Corporation Counsel of Jersey City, to the effect that the provisions of the law were unconstitutional. I don't know that it is in the mouth of any one man to say the provision for a Board of Estimate is unconstitutional. The bill before its introduction had the scrutiny of lawyers quite as able as Allan McDermott. They agreed that in no respect could the constitutionality be questioned. As Governor Voorhees has said, it is your duty and my duty to accept the law as constitutional until the Supreme Court declares it otherwise. I have no hesitation in saying that it ought to be brought to a test at the very earliest moment."

Somerset Street Property Sold.

It is rumored that Mrs. A. M. Hanigan has sold the property at 49 Somerset street which is occupied by Dr. Pittis. She and her family will move to 13 Grove street, and Dr. Pittis will continue to occupy the premises.

GIRLS' LITERARY CLUBS.

FOUR NEW ORGANIZATIONS FORMED AT PLAINFIELD HIGH SCHOOL.

Last Period on Friday's Docket to Club Meetings While the Young Men Attend Battalion Drill.

Four literary societies have been organized among the young women of the Plainfield High School and hold their meetings every Friday. They did not meet Friday on account of the holiday. The societies were formed under the auspices of the faculty and were intended to occupy the time of the young women during the last period when the young men are all absent for drill.

The members of the Senior and Junior classes have united to form one society which is under the charge of the principal, Ira Winthrop Travell and Miss Ellen E. Niles. New presiding and recording officers are elected at each meeting to give the young women an opportunity to learn something of the methods employed in conducting a meeting. Then there is a drill in parliamentary law and a programme which includes readings, recitations, debates and charades.

The Third class forms the second of the literary societies and is in charge of Miss S. Lena Bass and Ralph Campbell, of the faculty. This organization has a permanent chairman and secretary, but otherwise is conducted on a similar plan to that of the Seniors and Juniors.

The young women from the Fourth class form another organization which is looked after by Miss Alice M. Whitney and George Weeks Sandford, of the faculty. It is conducted as the others. The fourth society is formed from the High School preparatory classes and is directed by Miss Benedict and Mrs. Buck, the instructors of those classes.

The societies have been found a decided success during the few weeks that they have been tried. Before their organization the objection was decided to study and recitation. Classes with all the young men absent did not prove satisfactory and so it was decided to adopt some plan to look after the young women.

LARGE STORAGE VAULTS.

EXTENSIVE IMPROVEMENTS AT THE CITY NATIONAL BANK.

New Vault is to be 10x23 Feet in Size With a Wall 30 Inches Thick—It Will be Burglar-Proof.

Extensive improvements are about to be made to the City National Bank in the way of enlarging the storage vaults. In fact the work has already been commenced. The present vault having become altogether too small to accommodate the increasing business that the bank people have secured from the many who have confidence in them, that it has been decided to greatly increase the size of the vaults by the construction of a new vault in the centre of the basement, sufficiently large to accommodate packages of all sizes, even if necessary to care for a Saratoga trunk.

The new vault is to be 10x23 feet in size, with a wall 30 inches in thickness. It will be seven feet in height. The doors of the new vault will be of steel 5½ inches thick and will weigh half a ton.

Heretofore, owning to the limited space available in the bank's storage vaults, the officials of that institution have been unable to accommodate many of the wealthy class of citizens who desire to store valuables during their absence from home in the summer months. Therefore, it has been necessary for them to take their valuables to New York for safe keeping during their sojourn at summer resorts, and while their residences were closed.

The new vaults will fill a desire for the storage of large boxes, trunks and valuables of bulk that it has been impossible to safely care for owning to lack of cramped facilities.

Stonewalls From South Orange.

About twenty young people from South Orange enjoyed a straw ride to Scotch Plains Friday evening and stopped at the Hotel Kenzington, where they had supper. It was nearly 11 o'clock when the party arrived and it was quite late when they departed for home. All had a good time and enjoyed the excellent supper served. Among those in the party were the Misses Cort, Salisbury, Christian, Prior, Smith, Wheeler, Tracy, Griffin and Messrs. Burghardt, Kimball, Kilburn, Bradford, Cort, Prior, Gardener, Dean and VanDerentine.

Those Times They Met.

Dr. Charles Lasscher, of Dunr street, enjoyed a complete surprise last week, when his granddaughter, Mrs. Sawyer Raymond Masters, and her young son, Harold, of Oakland, California, came to visit him. It is the first time that he has seen either of them, although a correspondence has been continued for years. Mrs. Masters and her son expect to visit the Paris Exposition and they will sail abroad this week.

A TARHEEL WEDDING.

Showed Southern Hospitality While Did Business on a Strictly Cash Basis.

When Capt. Shaw was a justice of the peace in a country place not far from Raleigh, N. C., while riding home late one afternoon he met a young woman and a young man who wished to be married at once. Now, the captain had never witnessed a marriage. He remembered having seen a book about the house years before with a form of marriage in it, but where it was he did not remember. A less learned man would have been sorely perplexed, but not he. He lost no time in removing his hat, and, ascending the split-bottomed seat of justice, remarked: "Hats off in the presence of the court." All being uncovered, he said: "I'll swear you in first. Hold up yer right hands."

"Me, too?" asked the friend of the groom.

"Of course," said the wise captain. "All witnesses must be sworn. You and each of you solemnly swear that the evidence you shall give in this case shall be the truth, the hull truth, an' nothin' but the truth. You, John Marvin, do solemnly swear that to the best of yer knowledge an' belief you take this yer woman ter have and ter hold for yerself, yer heirs, exekyerters, administrators and assigns, for your an' their use an' behoof forever?"

"I do," answered the groom.

"You, Emmy Ewell, take this yer man for your husband, ter hev' an' ter hold forever, and you do further swear that you are lawfully seized in fee-simple, are free from all incumbrance and hev good right to sell, bargain and convey the same to said John Marvin, yer heirs, administrators and assignes?"

"I do," said the bride, somewhat doubtfully.

"Well, John," said the captain, "that 'll be about a dollar 'n' fifty cents."

"Are we married?" asked the other.

"Not yet, ye ain't," quoth the captain, with emphasis, "but the fee comes in here."

After some fumbling it was produced and handed over to the "court," who examined it to make sure it was all right, and then pocketed it and continued:

"Know all men by these presents that I, Capt. Shaw, of Raleigh, North Carolina, being in good health of sound and disposin' mind, in consideration of a dollar 'n' fifty cents to me in hand paid, the receipt whereof is hereby acknowledged, do and by these presents have declared you man and wife according to law, and till otherwise ordered by the court."—Utica (N. TERRIBLE PESTS.

Hungry Leeches That Are Numerous in the Damp Forest of Tocster Valley.

Traveling has its advantages and its disadvantages. Maj. Waddell, in his new book, relates some experiences which are not to be had in office chairs, or anywhere else, would care to duplicate. Foremost among these is the encounter with leeches in the damp forest of the Tocster valley.

A leech that is fastidious, Maj. Waddell explains, is rather rarer than a knitting-needle. In such a condition, he is a dangerous enemy to every two or four-legged creature that crosses its path.

In the forest, hungry leeches stood alert on every twig of the brushwood that overhung the track, and on every dead leaf in the path. As the travelers approached, they lashed themselves vigorously two and five inches in length, at one or the other of the party. The instant they touched their victim, they fixed themselves firmly, and then, by a series of rapid movements, reached a vulnerable point, and once there, lost no time in beginning its surgical operations.

The servants and coolies, who walked barefoot, were badly bitten. From their ankles and legs little streams of blood trickled all day, and at almost every step they had to stop and pick off the pests. It was often hard to dislodge them.

Maj. Waddell and some of his friends took precautions to dust their stockings with tobacco snuff, and bind their legs from ankle to knee with "putties." But the leeches were not to be kept out. They crawled through the eyelets of the travelers' boots, and caused them much discomfort.

It was upon the poor cattle and goats and ponies, however, that the leeches made the most determined attack. Their bare hides were always bleeding, and the little pests would lodge in their nostrils and hang from their eyelids, and from every vulnerable part of the body. Maj. Waddell attributes the remarkable absence of disease among the cattle to the fact that the prevalence of these tormenting creatures.—Youth's Companion.

A Naval Plum.

The command of a receiving ship is proximately that of a married man, and he and his family always live on board the vessel, which is frightful jail. There are but six receiving ships in the service—the Franklin, at Norfolk, Va.; the Independence and Pensacola, at Mare Island, Cal.; the Richmond, at League Island, Pa.; the Vermont, at the Brooklyn yard, and the Wabash, at Charleston, Mass. There is no house rent to pay; the captain is allowed two stewards by the government; so it is looked upon as one of the very few chances offered in the naval officer's career to save money.—Anna A. SIDEWALKS WILL BE LAID IN THE BOROUGH.

After Giving a Hearing on the Ordinance, the Council Decides to Adopt It.

DOZEN PROTESTS, THOUGH.

A REASONABLE TIME WILL BE ALLOWED TO COMPLY WITH LAW.

The Ordinance Explained by Senator Reed, Who Said That It Would Not Work Hardships—To Take Effect May 15 h.

An adjourned meeting of the Borough Council was held Friday evening chiefly for the purpose of discussing the new sidewalk ordinance, which was adopted on its first reading at the regular meeting this month. All of the members were present and there were about a dozen taxpayers on hand to be heard against the ordinance.

The first business taken up was the reading of the written protests to the ordinance. Mrs. Fred VanEmburgh, occupying the property on Westervelt avenue owned by Mrs. Curry, entered a protest for the owner. Dr. H. K. Carroll protested on behalf of himself and then again in a petition against the laying of flagging on Westervelt avenue. L. M. Codington protested on behalf of Somerset street, Watchung avenue and Codington avenue. J. F. Wilson protested against the enforcement of the ordinance on Greenbrook road between Somerset street and Grove street. M. M. French and Mrs. Dr. French also protested on behalf of the same street. The latter represented the Haviland property, and altogether presented protests for 2,435 feet, which is two-thirds of the property owned on the street. All of the protests were in writing.

The ordinance was then ordered read for the second time, after which at the suggestion of Mayor Smalley, Borough Counsel Reed stated the reasons for adopting such an ordinance. He cited the fact that the courts had decided that a walk is a benefit to the extent of the cost of laying and they have given boroughs power to lay such walks. He not says that a thirty day notice shall be given each property-owner before the borough can lay a walk in front of his property and charge him for it. The present ordinance does not provide for that, hence its illegality. Mr. Reed stated that where fifty per cent of property-owners on a street object to the ordinance being enforced that street can be omitted. The ordinance, he said, is practically the same as the old one except for the thirty day notice provision.

The meeting was then thrown open for a hearing, and L. B. Woolston, who was one of those who signed the petition asking for the adoption of the ordinance, admitted that when he signed he did not realize what he was doing. Later in the evening, after Mr. Woolston heard the other arguments and the explanation of the ordinance, he changed his mind and favored the adoption of the ordinance.

George F. Dupee had the impression that as soon as the ordinance was adopted walks would be laid under compulsion at once. After it was explained that such was not the case, he favored the ordinance. Mr. Reed assured him that plenty of time would be given all owners to lay walks.

Elston M. French at this time objected to the ordinance so far as it included Greenbrook road. He maintained that stone walks are not a necessity and inasmuch as no walks had been laid there during the past few years under the old ordinance and that the officials have no intention of enforcing the new ordinance on that street, it would be useless to include Greenbrook road in it.

Martin I. Cooley came to the meeting prejudiced, but finally said that he did not believe it was necessary to flag Greenbrook road, but if it was necessary to include that street to insure the adoption of the ordinance he would favor the adoption rather than defeat the project.

Harry Webb, editor of The Weekly Review, spoke rather in favor of the ordinance. He was followed by Mayor Smalley who made some stirring remarks about the laying of sidewalks on Somerset street from Codington avenue to Johnston's Drive, and thought the time would come when there would be demand for a walk on one side of Greenbrook road.

Councilman Clark favored the ordinance, and stated that it was not the intention or purpose of the Council to do anyone an injustice. He considered it only right and business like that such an ordinance should be in force so that the Council could have a proper basis to work on.

A. R. Faber had a few words to say in protest of the ordinance, and his son, Charles Faber, wanted to know that if a walk should be laid on Greenbrook road which side would be selected for it. He was informed that the side travelled mostly would be chosen.

J. S. Lunger and his son, W. H. Lunger, of Westervelt avenue, made a few remarks. They were not opposed to the ordinance, for J. S Lunger had signed the petition, but he advised that the Council go slow in enforcing it.

This concluded the hearing and Mr. Valiant offered a resolution to the effect that inasmuch as not fifty per cent. of the property owners of anyone street had objected to the ordinance the petition, asking that such an ordinance be granted, be adopted. This was adopted by a unanimous vote.

Mr. French still objected to the ordinance as it affected Greenbrook road, claiming that he had presented more than fifty per cent. of objections on that street. Mayor Smalley asked him to produce the figures, which he did. Mr. Reed figured the frontage and decided that there was not fifty per cent. as Mr. Faber had not entered a written protest, which Mr. French said he did not understand was necessary. He claimed that he could get Mr. Faber's written protest if necessary.

Councilmen Clark, Rogers and Valiant, as well as Mayor Smalley, could not be persuaded to believe that there are fifty per cent. of the property owners who object, and they did not believe that John F. Wilson would object when he fully understood the question. On this basis the ordinance was adopted on its second reading. The third reading will take place at the next regular meeting, and it is provided that it shall take effect May 15th.

There was another objectionable feature to the ordinance cited by Mr. French and that was regarding the walks included Harrison avenue where it extends up on the mountain. His point was that the ordinance should not include every inch of ground in the borough and on the mountain as well, where it would work a harpship on persons who cannot afford to lay walks and where they are not needed.

COULDN'T BEAT LEAL'S.

HIGH SCHOOL BOYS LOST TO THE CRACK SCHOOL NINE.

Didn't Score for Seven Innings and Then Were Able to Secure Four Runs to Leal's Fifteen.

For seven innings the Plainfield High School boys failed to score at all against the crack baseball nine of Leal's School, in the first game of the series played on the Washington avenue ground Thursday afternoon. Then they managed to get in four runs. The Leal School boys won easily by a score of 15 to 4.

After the drubbing the North Plainfield boys received at the hands of the Leal School team, it was expected that the city High School team would be completely lost. They really made a better showing, however, than the borough boys.

Dupee pitched an excellent game for Leal's. The High School boys made eight hits but they were badly scattered and the base running was also poor. The Mason brothers carried off the honors at batting.

The Leal boys hit the ball hard and often, batting Denton safely seventeen times. It was Denton's first game, however, and he did very well, steadying up as the game progressed. At times the Plainfield infielders went up into the air and the Leal's school men ran around the bases unhindered. A few of these little experiences proved very costly for the High School team.

The winners made errors, too, but none of them happened to be at all costly. It was a fair game, however, and showed that the High School boys were able to play better ball than they did at their opening game. When those aggravating intervals are overcome, they will make a fair showing against the other local teams.

The teams batted as follows:

Prohibitionists to Organize.

For the purpose of stimulating an interest in the cause of prohibition a movement is now on foot to organize a Prohibition League in the borough, and if possible extend it throughout Somerset county. Efforts will be made to get the league in operation before the next election so that effective work may be accomplished. William Lunger is at the head of the movement in the borough, and a meeting will be held at an early date to take steps toward the formation of such an organization.

RESCUED JUDAS ISCARIOT.

Death of an Inexperienced American Army Officer Into an Excited Cuban Mob.

Down in Cuba when a fellow gets religion he gets it mighty bad. On no day in the year does militant Christianity crop out more strongly than on that set apart as a reminder of the betrayal of Jesus Christ by Judas Iscariot. What they do to Judas on this occasion is a sad tale. They bring him into being in the shape of a tough, old rag dummy, and men with an ecstatic enthusiasm, which, if properly applied, would go a long way toward rehabilitating the island, proceed to hack the stuffing out of him. Everybody takes a hack at him and the whole proceeding, being of the nature of a tiny revolution, immense enjoyment is thereby obtained together with the soothing balm of Gilead for their religiously outraged souls.
